12 Were they ^a ashamed when they ^b had committed abomination? nay, they were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush: therefore shall they fall among them that fall: in the time of their visitation they shall be cast down, saith the LORD.

13 ¶ ⁴ I will surely consume them, saith the LORD: there shall be no grapes ^c on the vine, nor figs on the ^d fig-tree, and the leaf shall fade; and the things that I have given them shall pass away from them.

14 Why do we sit still? ^e assemble yourselves, and let us enter into the defenced cities, and let us be silent there: for the LORD our God hath put us to silence, and given us ^f water of ^g gall to drink, because we have sinned against the LORD.

^a Chap. vi. 14.—^b Ezek. xiii. 10.—^c Chap. iii. 3; vi. 15.
^d Or, in gathering I will consume.—^e Isa. v. 1, &c.; Joel i. 7.
^f Matt. xxi. 19; Luke xlii. 6, &c.—^g Chap. iv. 5.—^h Chap. ix. 15; xxiii. 15.—ⁱ Or, poison.

would not act as it directed them, nor comply with their duty as there set forth; and what wisdom is in them?—None to any purpose: none that will yield them comfort in life, support in death, or boldness at the day of final accounts: none that will be found to their praise when God shall bring every work into judgment, how much soever it may exalt them in their own opinion in the present world.

Verses 10–12. Therefore will I give their wives unto others—See on chap. vi. 12; and their fields to them that shall inherit, or possess, them—For the word inherit is sometimes taken for any sort of possession. See Ps. xxxii. 8. So Israel is called the Lord's inheritance, chap. x. 16, and elsewhere. The expression, however, implies that their fields should not only be taken possession of by the victorious Chaldeans, should be ravaged and stripped of their crops and cattle, but that these their enemies should possess their fields as their own, and acquire a property in them which they should transmit to their posterity. For every one is given to covetousness, &c.—For the elucidation of this and the two following verses, see notes on chap. vi. 13–15.

Verse 13. There shall be no grapes on the vine—A figurative expression, to signify that there should be none of them left. And the leaf shall fade, &c.—As both leaves and fruit wither and fade when a tree is blasted or killed, so will I utterly deprive this people of all the blessings I had given them, of those which are for use, as well as those which are for ornament.

Verses 14, 15. Let us enter into the defenced cities—In these verses the prophet seems to turn to and address his countrymen by way of apostrophe; and, as one of the people that dwelt in the open towns, advises those that were in the like situation to retire with him into some of the fortified cities, and there wait the event with patience; since there was nothing but terror abroad, and the noise of the enemy

A. M. 3404. 15 We ^a looked for peace, but no
B. C. 600. good came; and for a time of health, and behold, trouble!

16 The snorting of his horses was heard from ^a Dan; the whole land trembled at the sound of the neighing of his ^b strong ones: for they are come, and have devoured the land, and ^c all that is in it; the city, and those that dwell therein.

17 For behold, I will send serpents, cocka-

^a Chap. xiv. 19. — ^a Chap. iv. 15. — ^b Judg. v. 22; Ch. xlvii. 3.
^c Heb. the fulness thereof. — ^c Psa. lviii. 4, 5; Eccles. x. 11.

who had already begun to ravage the country. By this the prophet signifies, that when the Chaldeans should come, there would be no hope of safety left but in fleeing to fortified places, and that none would dare to stay in the open country. He speaks of the thing as already present, because it was soon to happen, and it was represented to him, in his vision, as already present. Let us be silent there, for the Lord hath put us to silence—This may mean, that God had suffered the forces of the king of Judah to be so diminished that they were not able to defend the country and open towns, but must of necessity keep themselves cooped up in their fortified cities, and leave the country to be ravaged everywhere by the Chaldeans. And given us water of gall to drink— Hath brought us into grievous calamities for the punishment of our sins. We looked for peace—We were willing to believe the false prophets, who foretold prosperous times. For a time of health—Or,
for a time in which we should be cured; that is, for a time of peace, in which we might recover our strength.

Verse 16. The snorting of his horses was heard from Dan—Dan was situated in the northern extremity of Palestine, on the side whence the Chal-deans were to come against Jerusalem. Accordingly, Grotius observes, after Jerome, that Nebuchadnezzar, having subdued Phenicia, passed through the tribe of Dan in his way to Judea: When the enemy therefore was advanced so near, it was time for the people of Judah to take the alarm, and to provide for their own safety. The whole land trembled at the neighing of his strong ones—The word אֲבִירֵי, here rendered strong ones, signifies horses in several places, and is so rendered here by Dr. Waterland, (see Judges v. 22; chap. xlvii. 3,) and is so understood by the LXX. By the whole land trembling is meant the inhabitants, being terrified at the vast number of horses that were in the Chaldean army, the neighing of which they heard; which struck them with great dread, as they had few or no horses in Judea to oppose to them. For they have devoured the land, and all that is in it—All the fruits, and all the forage, they have devoured or taken away.
It is to be observed, that the prophet speaks of it as already done, because it was so represented to him in his vision. The city, and those that dwell therein
—Both town and country are laid waste before them, and not only the wealth, but the inhabitants of both trices, among you, which will not be A. M. 3404.

^c charmed, and they shall bite you, B. C. 600.
saith the Lord.

18 ¶ When I would comfort myself against sorrow, my heart is faint ⁷ in me.

19 Behold the voice of the cry of the daughter of my people, ⁸ because of them that dwell in ^d a far country: is not the Lord in Zion?
is not her King in her? Why have they ^e pro-

⁷ Heb. upon. — ⁸ Heb. because of the country of them that are far off. — ^d Isa. xxxix. 3. — ^e Deut. xxxii. 21; Isa. i. 4.

are taken or destroyed. Jerusalem is here chiefly meant by the city, for, though the taking of other cities was attended with a slaughter of the inhabitants, the sacking of Jerusalem was the greatest of all their calamities, as being the metropolis, and the richest and most populous of all their cities.

Verse 17. For behold, I send serpents, &c., which shall not be charmed—Such enemies as you shall not be able to soften by any entreaties you can use.
That some persons possessed the faculty of rendering serpents harmless, is a fact too well attested by historians and travellers to admit of contradiction:
but by what means this effect was produced is not quite so clear. Pliny speaks of certain herbs which,
being carried about, prevented the bite of serpents, Nat. Hist., lib. xx. sec. 16, lib. xxii. sec. 25. Others tell surprising, but not altogether incredible stories, of the influence of musical sounds. See Shaw's Travels, p. 429; and Sir John Chardin's MS., cited by Harmer, chap. viii. 14. In this same MS. the author remarks, that "those who know how to tame serpents by their charms are wont commonly to break out their teeth; and supposes this to be alluded to, Psa. lviii. 6, Break their teeth, O God, in their mouths." But whatever were the methods commonly practised to charm serpents, the enemies of the Jews are here compared to such serpents as were not to be mollified nor disarmed by any of those means. They shall bite you, saith the Lord—See Blaney, and note on Psa. lviii. 5.

Verses 18, 19. When I would comfort myself, &c.
—"When I would apply comfort to myself, my heart misgives me: I find great reason for my fears, and none for my hopes." Blaney translates the verse, sorrow is upon me past my remedying; my heart within me is faint. They seem to be the words of the prophet, who had endeavoured to comfort himself in his trouble by acquiescing in the will of God; but the miseries coming on his countrymen continually occurring to his mind in all their horrors and aggravations, deprived him of all comfort, and rendered him inconsolable. Behold the voice of the cry—The bitter cries and lamentations, which methinks I hear; of the daughter of my people—To whose welfare I cannot be indifferent; because of them that dwell in a far country—Namely, their enemies the Chaldeans, who were coming against them. But the words may be rendered more agreeably to the Hebrew thus, The voice of the cry of the

A. M. 3404. voked me to anger with their graven
B. C. 600. images, and with strange vanities?

20 The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved.

21 ⁱ For the hurt of the daughter of my peo-

ⁱ Chap. iv. 19; ix. 1; xiv. 17.—^s Joel ii. 6; Nah. ii. 10.

daughter of my people from a land afar off. Compare Isa. xxxiii. 17, where the phrase in the original, ארץ כרוקיס, is the same. Thus interpreted, the words express the doleful complaints of the Jews in their state of captivity, as if God had quite forsaken and disowned them. In this light many commentators understand the prophet. He "anticipates," says Blaney, "in his imagination, the captivity of his countrymen in Babylon, a far country; and represents them there as asking, with a mixture of grief and astonishment, if there was no such being as JEHOVAH, who presided in Zion, that he so neglected his people, and suffered them to continue in such a wretched plight. Upon this complaint of theirs, God justly breaks in with a question on his part, and demands why, if they acknowledged such a protector as himself, they had deserted his service, and by going over to idols, with which they had no natural connection, had forfeited all title to his favour."

Why have they provoked me to anger?—Some translators, to render the sense more evident, supply here the words, saith God; for it is evident that it is God, and not the prophet, who speaks here, telling them that their sins were the cause of his forsaking them; and that as they provoked him to anger by their idolatries, so he would no longer defend them.

Verse 20. The harvest is past, &c.—Here the prophet speaks again in the name of the people, or, rather, represents the people besieged in Jerusalem complaining on account of the length of the siege. Their false prophets had amused them with vain hopes of deliverance, and they had expected the Egyptians to come to their relief; but now the harvest and the summer were past, and yet there was no appearance of succour or deliverance coming to them. Jerusalem began to be besieged in the winter of the year, but was not taken till the end of the summer of the following year.

Verses 21, 22. For the hurt of the daughter of my people am I hurt, &c.—These are the words of the prophet, lamenting the miserable condition of his country. The Hebrew is more literally rendered, For the breach of the daughter of my people am I broken, that is, heart-broken: or, as Houbigant renders it, I am wounded with the wound of my people. I am black—I looked ghastly, as those who are dying. Astonishment hath taken hold on me—I am so stupified that I know not what to do, or which way to ple am I hurt; I am ^s black; astonishment hath taken hold on me. A. M. 3404. B. C. 600.

22 Is there no ^b balm in Gilead; is there no physician there? why then is not the health of the daughter of my people ^a recovered?

^b Gen. xxxvii. 25; xliii. 11; Ch. xlv. 11; li. 8.—^a Heb. gone up.

turn. Is there no balm in Gilead—Balm, or bal-sam, is used with us as a common name for many of those oily, resinous substances, which flow spontaneously, or by incision, from certain trees or plants, and are of considerable use in medicine and surgery, being good, as physicians inform us, to soften, assuage, warm, dissolve, cleanse, dry up, and purge. The Hebrew word here used, רֶצֶף, is rendered by the LXX., ρητινη, and interpreted resin by the ancients in general. For this balm, resin, or turpentine, as the word might be rendered, Gilead was famous from very ancient times. See Gen. xxxvii. 25, where we find Joseph was sold to Ishmaelite merchants, who came from Gilead, and carried it, with sweet spices, into Egypt. This made many physicians and surgeons to resort to Gilead. The prophet applies this metaphorically to the state of the Jews, which was all over corrupted, (compare Isa. i. 6,) and represents God as asking whether there have been no methods used to heal these mortal wounds and distempers? or, if there have, how it comes to pass they should have so little success? As if he had said, Whence comes it that the wounds of my people have not been healed and closed? Have means of healing been wanting? Spiritual medicines or physicians? Have I not sent you prophets, who have admonished; warned, and instructed you? Have I not given you time, and furnished you with helps sufficient to enable you to return to your duty? Why then are not your spiritual disorders cured? Doubtless it is your own fault: it is because you would not make use of the remedies provided, nor follow the prescriptions of the physicians. Thus we may apply the words spoken concerning Babylon, chap. li. 9, to the present case: we would have healed Babylon, but she is not, or rather, she would not, be healed. The words may likewise be understood of a temporal deliverance. As if he had said, Is this people so forsaken both of God and men, that there is no remedy left to effect their deliverance? Are there no salutary means within reach, or no persons that know how to apply them, for the relief of my country from those miseries with which it is afflicted? Observe, reader, if sinners die of their wounds, their blood is upon their own heads. The blood of Christ is balm in Gilead, his Spirit is the physician there: both are sufficient, all-sufficient, to effect a perfect cure; so that they might have been healed, but would not.

CHAPTER IX.

Jeremiah continues his lamentation over the Jews; and, (1,) Expresses his great grief for the miseries impending over them, and his detestation of the sins which brought these miseries upon them, 1-11. (2,) He justifies God in the greatness of their approaching destruction, 9-16. (3,) He calls upon others to lament their miserable condition, 17-22. (4,) He shows them the folly and vanity of trusting in their own strength or wisdom, or the privileges of their circumcision, or any thing but God only, 23-26.

A. M. 3404. B. C. 600. O ¹ THAT ^a my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people!

2 O that I had in the wilderness a lodging-place of wayfaring men; that I might leave my people, and go from them! for ^b they be all adulterers, an assembly of treacherous men. A. M. 3404. B. C. 600.

3 And ^c they bend their tongues like their bow for lies: but they are not valiant for the truth upon the earth; for they proceed from evil to evil, and they ^d know not me, saith the LORD.

¹ Heb. Who will give my head, &c.—^a Isa. xxii. 4; Chap. iv. 19; xiii. 17; xiv. 17; Lam. ii. 11; iii. 48.

^b Chap. v. 7, 8.—^c Psa. lxxiv. 3; Isa. lix. 4, 13, 15.—^d 1 Sam. ii. 12; Hos. iv. 1.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IX.

Verse 1. O that my head, &c.—The prophet sympathizes with the calamities of his people, as before, chap. i. 19; viii. 21; and thereby excites them to a sense of their own misfortunes, that they might humble themselves under the mighty hand of God. The passage is a fine instance of the pathetic, wherein Jeremiah so much excels. That I might weep day and night for the slain, &c.—For the multitudes of his countrymen that he foresaw would fall by the sword of the Babylonians. When we hear of great numbers slain in battles and sieges, we ought not to make a light matter of it, but to be much affected with it; yea, though they be not of the daughter of our people—For of whatever people they are, they are of the same human nature with us; and there are so many precious lives lost, as dear to them as ours to us, and so many precious souls gone into eternity.

Verse 2. O that I had in the wilderness, &c.—The prophet here wishes that he had a lodging-place, or tent, such as travellers in this country were wont to lodge in when they travelled over the deserts, professing that he would rather pass his days in such a habitation in some desert place, than at Jerusalem, which was filled with wicked men. That I may leave my people and go from them—Not chiefly because of the ill usage he met with among them, but rather because his righteous soul was vexed from day to day, as Lot's was in Sodom, with the wickedness of their conversation, 2 Pet. iii. 7, 8. It made him even weary of his life to see them dishonouring God and destroying themselves. Time was when the place where God had chosen to put his name, there were the desire and delight of good men. David, in the wilderness, longed to be again in the courts of God's house; but now Jeremiah, in the courts of God's house, (for there he was when he said this,) wishes himself in a wilderness! Those have made themselves very vile and very miserable, that have made God's people and ministers weary of them, and desirous to get from among them. It may not be improper to observe here, that "travelers in the East are not, nor ever were, accommodated at inns on the road, after the manner of the European nations. In some places indeed there are large public buildings provided for their reception, which they call caravansaries; but these afford merely a covering, being absolutely without furniture; and the traveller must carry his own provisions and necessaries along with him, or he will not find any. Nor are even these empty mansions always to be met with; so that if the weary traveller at night comes into a town where there is no caravansary, or πανδοχείον, as it is called Luke x. 34, he must take up his lodging in the street, unless some charitable inhabitant will be pleased to receive him into his house, as we find Judg. xix. 15. And if he passes through the desert, it is well for him if he can light upon a cave, or a hut, which some one before him may have erected for a temporary shelter. And this last is what I conceive to be here meant by כלו ארחי, a solitary and not very comfortable situation, but yet preferable to the chagrin of living continually in the society of men of profligate manners."—Blaney. For they be all adulterers—The expression seems here to be metaphorical, implying that they were apostates from God, to whose service they were engaged by the most solemn covenant, like that which obliges a wife to be faithful to her husband. See note on chap. ii. 2; and compare Matt. xvi. 4; James iv. 4.

Verse 3. They bend their tongues like their bow—With a great deal of craft, their tongues are fitted for lying, as a bow which is bent is for shooting. Thus the psalmist compares the tongue to a bow and words of calumny and falsehood to arrows, Psa. xiv. 3, 4. But they are not valiant for the truth—They use their tongues in defence of lies rather than of the truths of God; and, in the administration of justice, they have not courage to stand by an honest cause that has truth on its side, if greatness and power be on the other side. Truth is fallen in the land, and they dare not lend a hand to help it up, Isa. lix. 14, 15. They proceed from evil to evil—From one sin to another, and from one degree of sin to another. They every day grow more bold in their wickedness, because they escape punishment.

A. M. 3404. 4 * Take ye heed every one of his
B. C. 600.

² neighbour, and trust ye not in any brother: for every brother will utterly supplant, and every neighbour will ^f walk with slanders.

5 And they will ³ deceive every one his neighbour, and will not speak the truth: they have taught their tongue to speak lies, and weary themselves to commit iniquity.

6 Thy habitation is in the midst of deceit; through deceit they refuse to know me, saith the LORD.

7 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, Behold, ^e I will melt them, and try them; ^h for how shall I do for the daughter of my people?

8 Their tongue is as an arrow shot out; it and they enrich themselves by their evil deeds, and so become formidable, defending and maintaining their wickedness by fresh acts of wickedness. And they know not me, saith the Lord—And where men have not the true knowledge of God, what but evil can be expected from them? Observe, reader, men's ignorance of God is the cause of all their bad conduct one toward another.

^e Chap. xii. 6; Mic. vii. 5, 6.—² Or, friend.—^f Chap. vi. 28.—³ Or, mock.—⁴ Isa. i. 25; Mal. iii. 3.—^h Hos. xi. 8.
¹ Psalm xii. 2; cxx. 3; Verse 3.—^k Psalm xxviii. 3; lv. 21.
⁴ Heb. in the midst of him.—⁵ Or, wait for him.

Verses 4-6. Take ye heed every one of his neighbour—Or, of his friend, as רֵעוֹ rather signifies; of him who pretends friendship to him, or whom he has befriended. And trust ye not in a brother—Against whom you must stand as much upon your guard as if you were dealing with a stranger. For every brother will utterly supplant—Will deceive, overreach, and take all possible advantage of his nearest relation; and every neighbour—Or friend, rather, as before; will walk with slanders—Will not care what ill he says of another, though never so false. The Hebrew, רכיל יהלך, is properly, will go about as a detractor, or calumniator, namely, carrying slanders with him from house to house. This is a strong description of the falsehood and calumny which universally prevailed among them. And weary themselves to commit iniquity—They are so inclined and enslaved to iniquity, that they not only commit it when they can do it easily, but when the commission of it is attended with difficulty; for they take more pains to carry on their ill designs than the practice of truth and integrity would cost them. Thy habitation is in the midst of deceit—That is, all about thee are addicted to it, therefore stand upon thy guard. They are God's words to the prophet. If all around us are false and deceitful, it concerns us to beware of them, and to be wise as serpents. Through deceit they refuse to know me, saith the Lord—"The knowledge of God, which is true religion, is incompatible with the practice of any wickedness. And therefore it is speake^th ⁱ deceit: one speaketh ^k peace—A. M. 3404.

ably to his neighbour with his mouth, B. C. 600.
but ⁴ in heart, he layeth ⁵ his wait.

9 ¶ ¹ Shall I not visit them for these things? saith the LORD: shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?

10 For the mountains will I take up a weeping and wailing, and ^m for the ⁶ habitations of the wilderness a lamentation, because they are ⁷ burned up, so that none can pass through them; neither can men hear the voice of the cattle: ⁸ both ⁿ the fowl of the heavens and the beast are fled; they are gone.

11 And I will make Jerusalem ^o heaps, and ^p a den of dragons; and I will make the cities of Judah ⁹ desolate, without an inhabitant.

¹ Chapter v. 9, 29.—^m Chapter xii. 4; xxiii. 10; Hos. iv. 3.
⁶ Or, pastures.—⁷ Or, desolate.—⁸ Heb. from the fowl even to, &c.—ⁿ Chap. iv. 25.—⁹ Isaiah xxv. 2.—^p Isaiah xlii. 22; xxxiv. 13; Chap. x. 22.—⁹ Heb. desolation.

natural enough for those that are resolved at all events to abide in their evil courses, to endeavour, if possible, to divest themselves of all religious principles, which, if insufficient to restrain, will be sure at least to be very troublesome to them."

Verses 7, 8. Behold, I will melt them and try them—I will cast them into the furnace of affliction, that I may purify them from their dross. See note on chap. vi. 29, 30, and on Isa. i. 25. For how shall I do, &c.—I have tried all other means, and they have proved ineffectual. Their tongue is as an arrow, &c.—It was compared to a bow bent, verse 3, plotting and preparing mischief; here it is an arrow shot out, putting in execution what they had projected. Dr. Waterland renders the words, as a sharp, or killing arrow; it speaketh deceit—They speak what they do not mean, that they may more easily deceive the credulous: they speak fair when they mean to destroy, as the next words explain it.

Verses 10, 11. For the mountains will I take up a weeping—"These words," says Houbigant, "as they now lie, must belong either to Jeremiah or the daughter of Zion; and yet it follows in the next verse, And I will make, which are the words of God: therefore this verse should be rendered, by a slight alteration of the text, 'Take ye up a weeping and wailing on the mountains, a lamentation in the dwellings of the wilderness; for they are desolate, because there is no traveller; nor is the voice of cattle heard in them; both the fowl of the heavens and the beast are fled.'" The prophet laments that general desolation which he sees coming upon the whole land, and which would involve all the parts of it, both high and low, in one common destruction. I will make Jerusalem heaps—Of rubbish, and lay it in such ruins that it shall be fit for nothing but to be a den of dragons—Or serpents, as the word נָחָשׁ frequently signifies, or such creatures as are usually found in ruins or desolate places.

A. M. 3404. 12 ¶ ¹Who is the wise man, that
B. C. 600. may understand this? and who is he to whom the mouth of the LORD hath spoken, that he may declare it, for what the land perisheth and is burned up like a wilderness, that none passeth through?

13 And the LORD saith, Because they have forsaken my law which I set before them, and have not obeyed my voice, neither walked therein;

14 But have ²walked after the ¹⁰imagination of their own heart, and after Baalim, ³which their fathers taught them:

¹ Psalm cvii. 43; Hosea xiv. 9.—² Chapter iii. 17; vii. 24.
³ Or, stubbornness.—Gal. i. 14.—¹⁰ Psa. lxxx. 5.—¹¹ Chap.
xiii. 14; xiii. 15; Lam. iii. 15, 19.

Verses 12, 13. Who is the wise man—Or, Is there not a wise man, who understands this?—Is there none of you so well acquainted with the will of God and the methods of his providence, as to be able to declare the reasons why he has given such severe instances of his anger against this land? The question implies, that there are none, or very few, that consider common calamities in the cause of them, but rather impute the divine chastisements to chance, not seeing the hand of God in them. And the Lord saith, Because they have forsaken my law, &c.—Here God himself declares the reasons of his judgments by the mouth of his prophet.

Verses 15, 16. I will feed them, &c., with wormwood—See on Deut. xxix. 18. The word rendered wormwood here, it seems, had better be rendered wolfsbane, as signifying an herb which is not only bitter and nauseous, but also noxious. And give them water of gall to drink—Or juice of hemlock, as some read it; some other herb that is poisonous as well as distasteful. By these expressions is signified not only a scarcity of meat and drink, but the most grievous calamities. I will scatter them also among the heathen—They have been corrupted by their intimacy with heathen idolaters, with whom they mingled themselves, and whose works they learned, and now they shall lose themselves among those through whom they lost their virtue. Whom neither they nor their fathers have known—They set up gods to worship, which they had not known, strange gods, new gods, Deut. xxxii. 17; and now God will scatter them among those people whom they had not known, those with whom they can claim no acquaintance, and from whom therefore they can expect no favour. The nations to the east, beyond the Euphrates and Tigris, seem to be chiefly meant here, whom the Jews knew little or nothing of before they were carried into captivity among them. And from that time to this the Jews have been scattered among those people. They are now also scattered through almost all the nations of the earth; so that this prophecy has received its full accomplishment in the most literal sense; for they have indeed been scattered among

15 Therefore thus saith the LORD A. M. 3404
of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, B. C. 600.
I will ¹feed them, even this people, ²with wormwood, and give them water of gall to drink.

16 I will ³scatter them also among the heathen, whom neither they nor their fathers have known: ⁴and I will send a sword after them, till I have consumed them.

17 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Consider ye, and call for ⁵the mourning women, that they may come; and send for cunning women, that they may come:

¹ Lev. xxvi. 33; Deut. xxviii. 64.—² Lev. xxvi. 33; Chap.
xlv. 27; Ezekiel v. 2, 12.—³ 2 Chron. xxxv. 25; Job iii. 8; Eccles. xii. 5; Amos v. 16; Matt. ix. 23.

those whom neither they nor their fathers had known. And what deserves highly to be remarked is, that among none of these nations have they attained to any share of supreme power, but have always lived among them upon courtesy or sufferance. And I will send a sword after them, &c.—A judgment threatened by Moses in case of their disobedience, Lev. xxvi. 23, and fulfilled upon several of the Jewish captives in Egypt and elsewhere.

Verse 17. Consider ye, and call for the mourning women—Consider the evil circumstances you are in, which call for mourning and lamentation: and since you yourselves are not sufficiently affected with the dangers that threaten you, send for those women whose profession it is to mourn at funerals, and upon other sorrowful occasions, and let their lamentations excite true sorrow in you. The prophet seems here to compare the Jewish state to a person dead, and going to be buried, and therefore calls upon the people to send for those who used to be hired to make lamentations and wailings at funerals. The reader will observe, “it was an ancient custom of the Hebrews, at funerals, and on other like occasions, to make use of hired mourners, whose profession it was to exhibit in public all the signs and gestures of immoderate and frantic grief, and by their loud outcries and doleful songs to excite a real passion of sorrow in others. Women were generally employed in this office, either because it was an office more suitable to the softness of a female mind, or because the more tender passions being predominant in that sex, they succeeded better in their parts; nor were there ever wanting those artists well instructed in the discipline of mourning, and ready to hire out their lamentations and tears on any emergency. It was the chief excellence of other arts to imitate nature; it was likewise esteemed so in this; their funeral dirges, therefore, were composed in imitation of those which had been poured forth by genuine and sincere grief. Their sentences were short, querulous, pathetic, simple, and unadorned; somewhat laboured indeed, because they were composed in metre, and to be sung to the pipe, as we learn from

A. M. 3404. 18 And let them make haste, and
B. C. 600. take up a wailing for us, that ^aour eyes may run down with tears, and our eyelids gush out with waters.

19 For a voice of wailing is heard out of Zion, How are we spoiled! we are greatly confounded, because we have forsaken the land, because ^bour dwellings have cast us out.

20 Yet hear the word of the LORD, O ye women, and let your ear receive the word of his mouth, and teach your daughters wailing, and every one her neighbour lamentation.

21 For death is come up into our windows, and is entered into our palaces, to cut off ^cthe children from without, and the young men from the streets.

^a Chap. xiv. 17.—^b Lev. xviii. 28; xx. 22.—^c Chap. vi. 11.
^d Chap. viii. 2; xvi. 4.—^e Eccles. ix. 11.

Matt. ix. 23; and from Homer," where, speaking of Hector's funeral, he says,

—Παρα δ' εἰσαν αἰοίδες, Θρηνων ἔξαρχες, οὔτε συνοῦσαν αἰοῖδην,
Οἱ μὲν ἀρ' ἐθρηνεον, ἐπὶ δὲ στυγαχόντ' ἄντακες.

ILIAD, Ω. 720.

A melancholy choir attend around,
With plaintive sighs, and music's solemn sound;
Alternately they sing, alternate flow
Th' obedient tears, melodious in their wo.

See POPE'S IL., book xxiv. verse 900.

Jerome tells us, in his comment on this verse, that the practice was continued in Judea down to his days; "That women, at funerals, with dishevelled hair, and naked breasts, endeavoured, in a modulated voice, to unite others in lamentation with them." Frequent allusions to this custom are to be met with in Scripture, particularly 2 Chron. xxxv. 25, where the singing men and singing women are said to have made it a constant rule, after King Josiah's death, to commemorate that excellent prince in all their future dirges or lamentations, as one in whom the public in general had sustained an irreparable loss. Such were the mourners, mentioned Eccles.
xii. 5, and said to go about the streets; and those whom Amos calls, יְדֻעֵי נֶחֱם, skilful of lamentation; Amos v. 16. And such no doubt were the minstrels and the people making a noise, οἶλον θορυβημενον, whom our Saviour found in the house of the ruler of the synagogue, whose daughter was just dead; who,
St. Mark says, wept and wailed greatly, κλαίοντες καὶ ἀλαλῶντες πολλά, Mark v. 38. There are especially several traces of this custom to be met with in the prophets, who frequently delivered their predictions of approaching calamities in the form of funeral dirges. The poem before us, from verse 19 to 22, is both an illustration and confirmation of this,
and worthy of the reader's frequent perusal, on ac-

22 Speak, Thus saith the LORD, A. M. 3404.
Even the carcasses of men shall fall B. C. 600.

^d as dung upon the open field, and as the handful after the harvest-man, and none shall gather them.

23 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, ^eLet not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might, let not the rich man glory in his riches:

24 But ^flet him that glorieth, glory in this,
that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the LORD which exercise loving-kindness, judgment, and righteousness, in the earth:
^gfor in these things I delight, saith the LORD.

25 ¶ Behold, the days come, saith the LORD,
that ^hI will ⁱpunish all them which are cir-

^f 1 Cor. i. 31; 2 Cor. x. 17.—^g Mic. vi. 8; vii. 18.—^h Rom.
ii. 8, 9.—ⁱ Heb. visit upon.

count of its affecting pathos, moral sentiments, and fine images; particularly in verse 21, where death is described in as animated a prosopopœia as can be conceived. See Lowth's Prelec., Calmet, and Blaney.

Verses 23, 24. Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom—Let not men value themselves on account of their wisdom, strength, or riches, which are things in themselves of a very uncertain continuance, and such calamities are coming, (see verses 25, 26,) in which they will stand the owners of them in very little stead. The only true, valuable endowment is the knowledge of God, not as he is in himself, which is too high an attainment for poor mortals to pretend to, but with respect to his dealings with men; to have a serious sense of his mercies to the penitent, of his judgments to the obstinate, and of his truth and integrity, in making good his promises and threatenings to both. It is in the exercise of these attributes God chiefly delights; and it is by these he desires to make himself known to the world; and he that forms a just and lively apprehension of God, chiefly with regard to these his perfections, will always demean himself suitably toward him. Judg- ment and righteousness are often equivalent terms, but here the former seems to denote God's severity against the wicked, and the latter his truth, justice, or holiness. See Lowth. Upon the whole, all other wisdom is vain and dangerous, except that which has God himself for its object, and teaches us to despise ourselves, to be humbled beneath his mighty hand, and to glory in him alone.

Verses 25, 26. Behold the days come, &c.—Blaney translates these two verses, "Behold, the days are coming, saith Jehovah, that I will punish all the circumcision with the uncircumcision; Egypt, &c., and all those that have their coast insulated, those that dwell in the wilderness: for all the nations are uncircumcised, and all the house of Israel is uncircumcised in heart." The Greek word ἀκροβυστία, which properly means uncircumcision, is several

A. M. 3404. circumcised with the uncircumcised; B. C. 600. 26 Egypt, and Judah, and Edom, and the children of Ammon, and Moab, and all that are ¹² in the ^k utmost corners, that dwelt in the wilderness: for all these A. M. 3404. nations are uncircumcised, and all B. C. 600. the house of Israel are ¹ uncircumcised in the heart.

¹² Heb. cut off into corners; or, having the corners of their hair polled.

^k Chapter xxv, 23; xlix. 32.—¹ Lev. xxvii. 41; Ezek. xlv. 7; Rom. ii. 28, 29.

times used by St. Paul for the persons who are uncircumcised, as περιτομή, circumcision, is put for persons circumcised. See Rom. ii. 26, 27, and iii. 30. Because the Jews valued themselves so much upon their circumcision, God here tells them that, when he should send his judgments abroad into the world, they should find no more favour than those that were not circumcised; and, accordingly, in mentioning the heathen nations whom he would punish, he places Judah among them, because they were, in effect, uncircumcised as well as the heathen, contenting themselves with the outward sign of circumcision in the flesh, without seeking that internal circumcision, which is of the heart and spirit, and the purification and holiness signified thereby. By those that have their coast insulated, as Blaney renders one of the clauses of verse 26, he supposes the Arabians are designed, which he thinks may be fairly concluded from the connection in which the same words, קְצוּצֵי פְתָח, stand with the context, in chap. xlix. 32. Concerning the precise meaning, however, of these words, he justly observes, “interpreters differ very greatly. Some represent them as signifying persons cut off from other people, by being thrust into a remote corner; in which light the translators of our Bible appear to have considered them, when they rendered them in the text, All that are in the utmost corners, and in the margin, cut off into corners. But all the ancient versions understand them as expressing the peculiar manner in which the Arabians cut the hair of their heads or beards,” expressed also in our marginal reading; which reading, Dr. Durel says, ought doubtless to be received into the text; the Arabs, who are meant, he thinks, by this periphrasis, being accustomed to cut their hair short, particularly about the crown of the head; and in respect to their beards, leaving only a tuft of hair growing about their chins; a practice which was forbidden to the Jews, Lev. xix. 27. But it seems much more probable that the words have a respect to the peninsular form of the country, surrounded on all sides by the sea, excepting only the isthmus to the north; and thus almost insulated, or cut off, from any other land.

CHAPTER X.

The former part of this chapter contains an earnest dissuasive from the practice of heathen idolatry, setting forth the vanity of idols in comparison with the true God, 1–16. And this doubtless was designed by way of precaution to the Jews, against the time of their removal out of their own land, to dwell among idolaters, as predicted, 17, 18. The prophet, in the name of Jerusalem, laments the completion of her ruin, and humbly supplicates the intercession of God's mercy, 19–26.

A. M. 3404. H^EAR ye the word which the LORD B. C. 600. speaketh unto you, O house of Israel:

^a Leviticus

NOTES ON CHAPTER X.

Verses 1, 2. Hear ye the word, &c.—The prophet continues his remonstrances and exhortations to Judah. He said, at the conclusion of the preceding chapter, that the Lord would punish, without distinction, all the ungodly and unrighteous Jews, as well as Gentiles. He here informs them that if they would avoid this vengeance of the Lord they must quit their idolatries and other impieties, and have nothing to do with the superstitious practices of the Gentile nations. Learn not the way of the heathen—Their manner of life or customs. And be not dismayed at the signs of heaven—“The Chaldeans, among whom the Jews were destined to live in cap-

2 Thus saith the LORD, ^a Learn A. M. 3404. not the way of the heathen, and B. C. 600. be not dismayed at the signs of heaven; for xviii. 3; xx. 23.

tivity, were particularly addicted to astrology, and attributed to the heavenly bodies a considerable influence over human affairs. This naturally tended to beget a religious dread and awe of those objects, from whence so much good or evil was supposed to be derived. The sun, moon, and planets are said indeed to have been set in the firmament for signs, Gen. i. 14. But hereby is meant, that they should serve, as natural marks, to distinguish, by their periodical revolutions and appearances, the various times and seasons; which, however, is a very different use from that of prognosticating future events, or causing an alteration in the fortunes of men.”—Blaney,

A. M. 3404. the heathen are dismayed at them.
B. C. 600.

3 For the ¹customs of the people are vain: for ^bone cutteth a tree out of the forest, the work of the hands of the workman, with the axe.

4 They deck it with silver and with gold; they ^cfasten it with nails and with hammers, that it move not.

5 They are upright as the palm-tree, ^dbut speak not: they must needs be ^eborne, because they cannot go. Be not afraid of them; for

¹ Heb. statutes, or, ordinances are vanity.—^b Isa. xli. 19, 20; xlv. 9, 10, &c.; xlv. 20.—^c Isa. xli. 7; xlv. 7.—^d Psalm cxv. 5; cxv. 16; Hab. ii. 19; 1 Cor. xii. 2.—^e Psa. cxv. 7; Isa. xlv. 1, 7.

Verses 3-5. One cutteth down a tree, &c.—The prophet here exposes the folly of men's worshipping the work of their own hands, by arguments similar to those which are used by Isaiah, chap. xlv. 10-20; where see the notes. They are upright, &c.—They are like the trunk of the palm-tree—Houb. "They are inflexible, immovable, fixed, without action or motion, like the trunk of a tree: a comparison which admirably suits the ancient statues seen in Egypt and elsewhere, before the art of sculpture attained the perfection which it afterward did in Greece."—Calmet. Dr. Waterland's translation of this verse is, They are of just proportion, as a pillar, but they speak not; carried they must be, for go they cannot. Be not afraid of them—They can do you no more harm than the signs of heaven could do. The heathen worshipped some idols in order that they might do them good, and others, that they might do them no harm; but God tells them here, that as they cannot do evil, so neither is it in them to do good.—See note on Isa. xli. 23. They can neither punish nor reward; they can neither hurt their enemies nor help their friends. By this the true God will be distinguished from idols, in that he alone can foretel things to come, and he alone can reward or punish.

Verses 6, 7. Forasmuch as there is none like unto thee—This verse would be better rendered, O Lord, thou art great, so that there is none like unto thee, and thy name is great, because of thy might. Who would not fear thee?—Rather, who would not reverence, or stand in awe of thee? For to thee doth it appertain—That is, as some interpret the phrase, To thee doth it appertain to be feared and revered; to thee fear and reverence are due. The Hebrew, however, may be rendered, Who would not fear thee when he shall come, or draw near to thee? accordingly Blaney translates the verse thus: Who will not fear thee, O king of nations, when he shall approach unto thee? Forasmuch as among all the wisest of the nations, and in all their kingdoms, there is none like unto thee—On the clause, among the wisest of the nations, he observes, "These words may signify, either all those nations which were most distinguished for the cultivation and improvement of their rational faculties; or else those sage ^f they cannot do evil, neither also is ^g it in them to do good. A. M. 3404. B. C. 600.

6 Forasmuch as there is none ^hlike unto thee, O LORD; thou art great, and thy name is great in might.

7 ^hWho would not fear thee, O King of nations? for ⁱto thee doth it appertain: forasmuch as ^jamong all the wise men of the nations, and in all their kingdoms, there is none like unto thee.

8 But they are ^kaltogether ^lbrutish and

^f Isaiah xli. 23.—^g Exodus xv. 11; Psalm lxxxvi. 8, 10. ^h Revelation xv. 4.—ⁱ Or, it liketh thee.—^j Psalm lxxxix. 6. ^k Heb. in one, or, at once.—^l Psalm cxv. 8; Isa. xli. 29; Hab. ii. 18; Zech. x. 2; Rom. i. 21, 22.

individuals among them, from whose learning and philosophy some better notions of God and religion might have been expected than from the rude and illiterate vulgar. And yet the fact was, that all their boasted wisdom and knowledge had failed of leading them to an object of worship, in any degree corresponding with the infinite perfections and majesty of the divine nature."

Verse 8. But they are altogether brutish—Or, all alike brutish. They that make images, saith the psalmist, Psa. cxv. 8, are like unto them, equally stupid and insensible. The stock is a doctrine of vanities—Or lies. The use of images in worship is grounded on a false and foolish opinion, that God is like the work of men's hands, and that images have some divine power lodged within them, and in this opinion it has a direct tendency to confirm the ignorant. Hence an image is called by Habakkuk, A teacher of lies. Instead of the stock, &c., Dr. Waterland reads, Vain institutions! very wood! Blaney, in consistency with his interpretation of the 7th verse, given above, renders this, But they, when they approach, (namely, to worship,) are stupid and foolish, the very wood itself being a rebuker of vanities. On which he observes, "The contrast is thus strongly marked between the true God; and the objects of heathen superstition. The servants of the former, when they approached him in their devotions, could not but be impressed with a reverential awe of a being so transcendently glorious. But those who drew near to worship the latter, manifested the greatest stupidity, in not discovering what was so obvious to common apprehension, the gross unworthiness of the objects to which their adorations were addressed." On the latter clause, The very wood itself, &c., he remarks, "The true meaning and force of this passage seem to have escaped the notice of all the commentators. מוסר, (which our translators render doctrine,) properly signifies rectifying, or correcting, a false notion by just reproof; and by vanities are meant idols, so called from their being of no real use or advantage to those who had recourse to their assistance. And this unprofitableness of the idol, the very dull and senseless matter, says the prophet, out of which it was formed, is ca-

A. M. 3404. foolish: the stock is a doctrine of
B. C. 600. vanities.

9 Silver spread into plates is brought from Tarshish, and ¹gold from Uphaz, the work of the workman, and of the hands of the founder: blue and purple is their clothing: they are all ²the work of cunning men.

10 But the LORD is the ⁴true God, he is ^othe living God, and an ⁵everlasting ^pKing: at his pable of demonstrating. But the rebuke, strictly speaking, is not directed to the idol, but to those who had not sense to perceive, that all the efforts of human art could never change an inanimate log of wood into an animated being, possessed of power and intelligence far surpassing those of the person from whom its origin was derived. There are, therefore, an energy and pointedness in this short sentence, at least equal to whatever has been said on the same subject by the most spirited writer, whether sacred or profane. Not even the keen raillery of the Roman satirist in those celebrated lines, olim truncus eram, &c., cuts with greater severity." See note on Isa. xlv. 12, &c.

¹ Dan. x. 5.—² Psalm cxv. 4.—⁴ Heb. God of truth, Psalm xxxi. 5.—^o 1 Timothy vi. 17.—⁵ Hebrew, King of eternity. ^p Psalm x. 16.

Verse 9. Silver spread into plates—To cover the images, and make them appear as if made of massy silver; is brought from Tarshish—A port of Spain, to which the merchants of Tyre and Sidon traded; of which place see note on Isa. ii. 16. And gold from Uphaz—The Syriac, Chaldee, and Theodotus read, from Ophir, which Bochart supposes to be here meant; namely, Ophir in India, near Zeilan; a place famous for gold. Blue and purple are their clothing—"The splendour and magnificence of dress seem, among the ancients, to have consisted very much in the richness of the colours; the art of dying which to perfection, was esteemed a matter of great skill, being known and practised by very few. The excellence of the Tyrian purple is celebrated by both sacred and profane authors. And the blue, which from many passages of Scripture we find to have been in great request, was also imported from remote countries as an article of elegant and expensive luxury." They are all the work of cunning men—"If, in the preceding verse, the insignificance of the idols was argued from the vile and perishable matter out of which they were composed; the same is inferred in this from their being indebted to the art and labour of man for all their costly ornaments, their splendid outward show. In short, the whole of them, says the prophet, internal and external, is the work of skilful men. Upon what ground then could the thing formed pretend to a nature more excellent than its former?"—Blaney.

Verse 10. But the Lord—Hebrew, Jehovah, is the true God—A very different being from these idols: He is the living God—Images are dead and senseless things; but Jehovah is life itself, and the author wrath the earth shall tremble, and A. M. 3404.

the nations shall not be able to abide B. C. 600.
his indignation.

11 ⁶Thus shall ye say unto them, ^aThe gods that have not made the heavens and the earth, even ²they shall perish from the earth, and from under these heavens.

12 He ³hath made the earth by his power, he hath ⁴established the world by his wisdom, and fountain of life and understanding; and all creatures that live, live in and by him. And an everlasting King—The absolute monarch over all creatures, their owner and ruler, having an incontestable right both to command and to dispose of them. And the counsels of his kingdom were from everlasting, and the continuance of it will be to everlasting. He is the king of eternity. The idols whom they call their kings are but of yesterday, and will soon be abolished; and the kings of the earth, that set them up to be worshipped, will themselves be in the dust shortly; but the Lord shall reign for ever, thy God, O Zion, unto all generations. At his wrath the earth shall tremble—Even the strongest and stoutest of the kings of the earth, nay, the earth itself, as firmly as it is fixed, when he pleases, is made to quake, and the rocks to tremble. And the nations, though they join together to contend with him, and unite their force against him, shall be found utterly unable, not only to resist, but even to abide his indignation.

⁶ In the Chaldean language.—^a Psa. xvi. 5.—² Verse 15; Isa. ii. 18; Zech. xiii. 2.—³ Gen. i. 1, 6, 9; Psalm cxxxvi. 5, 6; Chap. li. 15.—⁴ Psa. xciii. 1.

Verse 11. Thus shall ye say unto them—"This verse is in the Chaldee language, and it appears here as a kind of parenthesis. Houbigant thinks that the most probable reason why it is here inserted in the Chaldee, and not in the Hebrew, is, that Jeremiah prescribes to the Jews what they shall answer in living among idolaters, and using the Chaldee language; hereby prescribing that they should be the captives of the Chaldees."—Dodd. The gods that have not made the heavens and the earth—And therefore they are no gods, but the usurpers of the honour due to him only who did make them; shall perish from the earth, &c.—Shall perish of course, because they are vanity, formed of perishing materials; and shall perish by his righteous sentence, because they are rivals with him who made all things. Here the prophet foretels that there shall be a final period put to idolatry. God hath already blotted out the names of many of the heathen idols, as an earnest of the utter destruction of the rest in his due time.

Verses 12, 13. He hath made the earth, &c.—Here follows a noble and lofty description of God's power and providence, whereby he sets forth his infinite pre-eminence above all the dead and senseless idols of the world. When he uttereth his voice, &c.—When he gives the word of command, and signifies

A. M. 3404. and ^u hath stretched out the heavens
B. C. 600. by his discretion.

13 * When he uttereth his voice, there is a ⁷ multitude of waters in the heavens, and ⁷ he causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth; he maketh lightnings ⁸ with rain, and bringeth forth the wind out of his treasures.

14 * Every man ⁹ is ^a brutish in his knowledge: ^b every founder is confounded by the graven image: ^c for his molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them.

15 They are vanity, and the work of errors:
in the time of their visitation ^d they shall perish.

^a Job ix. 8; Psalm civ. 2; Isaiah xl. 22. — ^x Job xxxviii. 34.
⁷ Or, noise. — ^y Psa. cxxxiv. 7. — ⁸ Or, for rain. — ⁹ Chap. li.
17, 18. — ⁹ Or, is more brutish than to know. — ^a Prov. xxx. 2.
^b Isa. xlii. 17; xlv. 11; xlv. 16. — ^c Hab. ii. 18. — ^d Verse 11.
^e Psa. xvi. 5; lxxiii. 26; cxix. 57; Chap. li. 19; Lam. iii. 24.

his will and pleasure: see Job xxxviii. 34. Or, when he sends forth his thunder, called in Scripture the voice of God, the clouds immediately precipitate in torrents of rain, which, coming upon the ground that was scorched with heat before, not only cools and refreshes it, but renders it fruitful in all kinds of vegetable productions. He maketh lightnings with rain—And as he causes the vapours to ascend up in clouds from every quarter of the earth, so he joins two contrary things together, ordaining great flashes of lightning to break forth with the rain; the latter, by its moisture, preventing the ill effects that might otherwise proceed from the heat of the former. And bringeth forth the winds out of his treasures—As there is occasion for them, directing them all in such measures, and for such uses, as he, thinks fit. In other words, “He makes great and mighty winds to come from unknown places and causes, as if he brought them out of a hidden treasure, or repository, where they had been laid up till he had occasion for them.”—Lowth.

Verses 14, 15. Every man is brutish in his knowledge—This is spoken of the makers of idols, whose skilfulness as workmen made them foolish enough to attempt to make gods, and who afterward acted still more foolishly in worshipping them, when they knew they were but the work of their own hands. The founder is confounded by the graven image—Or, ashamed, as חֲשִׁיב signifies. For it can afford no help, nor do any good, to those who worship it; and therefore is a disgrace to the workman who pretends to make it a god, that could hear the prayers offered to it, and send help to its worshippers. His molten image is falsehood—That is, those are no less deceived who expect help from a molten image, than they who expect it from a false, lying man. They are the work of errors—The making of them is owing to men’s erroneous notions of the nature of God. In the time of their visitation

16 * The portion of Jacob is not A. M. 3404.
like them: for he is the former of all B. C. 600.
things; and ^f Israel is the rod of his inheritance: ^g The LORD of hosts is his name.

17 ¶ ^h Gather up thy wares out of the land,
O ⁱ inhabitant of the fortress.

18 For thus saith the LORD; Behold, I will ^j sling out the inhabitants of the land at this once, and will distress them ^k that they may find it so.

19 ¶ ^l Wo is me for my hurt! my wound is grievous: but I said, ^m Truly this is a grief, and ⁿ I must bear it.

20 * My tabernacle is spoiled, and all my cords are broken: my children are gone forth

^f Deut. xxxii. 9; Psa. lxxiv. 2. — ^g Isa. xlvii. 4; li. 15; liv. 5; Chap. xxxi. 35; xxxii. 18; i. 34. — ^h Chap. vi. 1; Ezek. xii. 3. — ⁱ Heb. inhabitant. — ^j I Sam. xxv. 29; Ch. xvi. 13. — ^k Ezek. vi. 10. — ^l Chap. iv. 19; viii. 21; ix. 1. — ^m Psalm lxxvii. 10. — ⁿ Mic. vii. 9. — ^o Chap. iv. 20.

they shall perish—The time will come when God will execute vengeance upon idolaters, and utterly destroy their idols.

Verse 16. The portion of Jacob is not like them—There is no comparison between senseless idols and the great Creator of all things, who has chosen the posterity of Jacob for his peculiar people, and has promised to be their God, and that they should always have an especial interest in his favour, if they continued steadfast in their worship of, and obedience to, him. The rod of his inheritance—Is an expression taken from the first division of the land of Canaan, when the inheritance of each tribe and family was meted out with a line or rod.

Verses 17, 18. Gather up thy wares, &c.—That is, as some explain it, “Collect to Jerusalem all that you have valuable in the country; flee thither for refuge with your best effects; for the enemy will soon extend himself over all your land, and render it desolate.” Or, rather, the prophet, returning to his former denunciations against Jerusalem, warns her to move her effects, and prepare for going into captivity; for, though she thought herself secure, as dwelling in a place of great strength and well fortified, yet her enemies should prevail and take it: compare Ezek. xii. 3. Behold, I will sling out the inhabitants at this once—I will, at one stroke, remove the whole body of this people out of their native country: see I Sam. xxv. 29. And I will distress them that they may find it so—Or, that they may find my threatenings to be true. This implies, that though they had been often saved by God’s providence from hostile attacks, they would, however, on this occasion, find it otherwise.

Verses 19, 20. Wo is me for my hurt—The prophet here again pathetically laments the overthrow of his country, and, either in his own person or in that of his country, bewails the plundering and desolation of the cities and houses, as if they were so

A. M. 3404. of me, and they are not: there is
B. C. 600. none to stretch forth my tent any more, and to set up my curtains.

21 For the pastors are become brutish, and have not sought the LORD: therefore they shall not prosper, and all their flocks shall be scattered.

¶ Chap. i. 15; iv. 6; v. 15; vi. 22.

many shepherds' tents, to which he compares them, verse 20. But I said, This is a grief, and I must bear it—Blaney thinks the prophet here suggests motives of patience and consolation to his country, in regard to the evils that were coming upon her, putting the words of this and the following verses into her mouth, and making her observe, first, That her affliction, though great, would yet be found tolerable; secondly, That she had less reason to complain of what she suffered, as it was no other than might have been expected from the misconduct of those who had the direction of her affairs, verse 21; and, lastly, That she was not without hope in the mercy of God, who, upon the humble supplication of his people, might be moved to mitigate their chastisement, and to turn his hand against the heathen that oppressed them, verse 24. My children are gone from me, and are not, &c.—My inhabitants are gone into captivity, and will return hither no more, so that they are the same to me as if they were dead. There is none to set up my curtains—They will never be able to contribute anything to the restoration of my former state.

Verses 21, 22. For the pastors are become brutish—The prophet pursues the foregoing metaphor, and says, that the reason why the tents are destroyed, is because the shepherds, meaning the governors, both civil and ecclesiastical, had, like so many brute creatures, forgotten God and their duty to him, and thereby engaged the people committed to their charge in idolatry, and in all manner of wickedness, which had ended in ruin to themselves and their flocks. And have not sought the Lord—Have neither made their peace with him nor addressed their prayers to him; they have had no eye to him and his providence in their management of affairs, have neither acknowledged the judgment nor expected the deliverance to come from his hand. Observe well, reader, those are brutish people that do not seek the Lord, that live without prayer and without God in the world: they are unworthy of the name of rational beings. But the state of a people is indeed deplorable when their pastors, that should feed them with knowledge and understanding, are themselves thus brutish. And what is the consequence? Therefore they shall not prosper—None of their attempts for the public safety shall succeed. How, indeed, can those expect to prosper who do not take God along with them in their ways? And when the pastors are brutish, what else can be expected but that all their flocks should be scattered? for if the blind lead the blind both will fall into the ditch. Behold, the noise of the bruit is come—The word 22 Behold, the noise of the bruit is A. M. 3404.

come, and a great commotion out of B. C. 600 the north country, to make the cities of Judah desolate, and a den of dragons.

23 ¶ O LORD, I know that the way of man is not in himself: it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps.

¶ Chap. ix. 11.—Prov. xvi. 1; xx. 24.

bruit here signifies noise, or rumour, which is the meaning of the Hebrew, שמועה. This is explained in the following clause to be that of the tumultuary invasion of the country by the Chaldeans from the north, of which notice had been repeatedly given. Blaney translates the verse, Hark! a noise! Behold, it advanceth, even a great commotion from the north country. To make the cities of Judah a desolation, a dwelling-place for dragons.

Verse 23. O Lord, I know, &c.—The prophet now turns to God, and addresses himself to him, finding it to little purpose to speak to the people. It is some comfort to poor ministers, that, if men will not hear them, God will; and to him they have liberty of access at all times. Let them close their preaching with prayer, as the prophet here does, and then they will have no reason to complain that they have laboured in vain. That the way of man is not in himself—The prophet must here be considered as acknowledging the superintendence and dominion of the divine providence; that by it, and not by their own will and wisdom, the affairs both of nations and particular persons are directed and governed. His words in this verse, taken in connection with the following, may be thus paraphrased: Thy providence, O Lord, superintends all events; all that happens comes to pass through thy permission or appointment. It is not in man to hinder that which has been once resolved on in thy decrees. We know, therefore, that it is not in our power to divert those judgments which are coming upon us, but thou canst moderate and limit them as thou plearest. If, then, it be thy will that we should feel the awful effects of thy justice, chastise us, but spare our weakness; correct us, but with judgment, not in thine anger, &c. Theodore applies this to Nebuchadnezzar, and explains the passage thus: "We know, O Lord, that the prince whom thou sendest against us comes not without thy orders; that the success of his arms, and the good fortune of his enterprise, proceed only from thee: but deliver us, O Lord, from this terrible enemy; and if we have merited chastisement, may we receive it at thy hand. Punish us as a father, and not as a judge." The words, however, are applicable to us all, as well as to Nebuchadnezzar and the Jews. We are not at our own disposal, nor able to direct our own way by our own wisdom, either in matters temporal or spiritual. Nor are we at liberty to choose what line of life we please, or to ensure to ourselves the success and prosperity we may desire. We are under God's government, and at his disposal, and have continual need of his direction, and of the influence of

A. M. 3404. 24 O LORD, * correct me, but with
B. C. 600. judgment; not in thine anger, lest thou bring me to nothing.

25 * Pour out thy fury upon the heathen * that

Psa. vi. 1; xxxviii. 1; Chap. xxx. 11.—¹¹ Heb. diminish me.
Psa. lxxix. 6.

his grace, without which we shall certainly err from the right way, and shall neither choose nor perform what is truly and lastingly good, and for our happiness.

Verse 24. O Lord, correct me—I do not entirely deprecate all chastisement; I know we deserve correction, and am willing to accept it; persuaded that it is necessary for our purification and amendment; but let it be with judgment—That is, in measure, with moderation, and in wisdom; not more than is necessary; not in thine anger—How severe soever the correction be, let it come from thy love, and be designed for our good, and made to work for good; not to bring us to nothing, but to bring us to thyself. Let it not be according to the desert of our sins, but according to the designs of thy grace. Blaney justly observes here, that the word משפט, translated judgment, “properly signifies, that calm and dispassionate judgment, which stands opposed to the hasty sallies of anger and furious revenge. And, though the latter cannot actually exist in God, it is sometimes, however, nominally attributed to him, whenever the effects of his displeasure are so violent as to stop nothing short of utter ruin; although such a proceeding may be justifiable upon the most solid know thee not, and upon the families that call not on thy name: for they have eaten up Jacob, and * devoured him, and consumed him, and have made his habitation desolate.

^a Job xviii. 21; 1 Thess. iv. 5; 2 Thess. i. 8.—^x Chap. viii. 16.

principles of reason and equity. As, therefore, to punish with anger, implies an unrelenting rigour and severity; so, to correct with judgment, admits the use of such moderation as is consistent with the sinner's personal safety, while it promotes his reformation.”

Verse 25. Pour out thine indignation upon the heathen, &c.—Let thy justice be made known, by bringing an exemplary punishment upon the Chaldeans and their allies, (see chap. i. 15,) who do not acknowledge thy providence, but ascribe all their successes to their idols: for they have eaten up Jacob, &c.—See note on chap. vi. 3. This prayer, it must be observed, did not proceed from a spirit of malice or revenge in the prophet, nor was it intended to prescribe to God on whom he should execute his judgments, or in what order; but, 1st, It is an appeal to his justice; as if he had said, Lord, we are a provoking people, but are there not other nations that are more so? And shall we only be punished? 2d, It is a prediction of God's judgments upon all the impenitent enemies of his church and kingdom. If judgment begin thus at the house of God, what shall be the end of those that obey not his gospel? 1 Pet. iv. 17.

CHAPTER XI.

In this chapter God, (1.) Reminds the Jews of the covenant which he had made with their fathers, and in which obedience to his laws had been enjoined under a curse, and enforced as the evidence of their peculiar relation to him, and the ground of his giving them possession of Canaan, 1-7. (2.) He charges it upon them that, in succession to their fathers, and in confederacy among themselves, they had obstinately refused to obey him, 8-10. (3.) He threatens to punish them with utter ruin for their disobedience, especially for their idolatry, assuring them that their idols should not save them, nor their prophets pray for them, 11-14. (4.) He justifies his proceedings herein, they having brought all this mischief upon themselves by their own folly and obstinacy, 15-17. (5.) He discovers to Jeremiah a plot against his life, laid by his fellow-citizens of Anathoth, on account of which he prays against them, and predicts their ruin, 18-23.

A. M. 3396. THE word that came to Jeremiah
B. C. 608. from the LORD, saying,

2 Hear ye the words of this covenant, and speaking unto the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem;

3 And say thou unto them, Thus saith the

NOTES ON CHAPTER XI.

Verse 1. The word that came to Jeremiah, &c.—At what time the prophecy, contained in this and the following chapter, was communicated to the prophet, is not expressed; but Blaney and many others assign it to the latter part of the reign of Josiah, “when the people, who, in the eighteenth year of that prince, had solemnly engaged to perform the obligations of the divine covenant, may be supposed to have relapsed, in course of time, into their former disregard and neglect. The prophet, therefore, is sent to recall them to their duty, by proclaiming the terms of the covenant, and rebuking them sharply for their hereditary disobedience.”

Verses 2-5. Hear ye the words of this covenant—God speaks here chiefly to Jeremiah, but seems, at the same time, to address, together with him, all those pious persons who were like-minded with him, and who reprobated the wicked manners of the people. The covenant here spoken of was the covenant of the law of God, delivered by Moses, to which the people had frequently promised obedience. And

A. M. 3396. LORD God of Israel; ^a Cursed be the
B. C. 608. man that obeyeth not the words of this covenant,

4 Which I commanded your fathers in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, ^b from the iron furnace, saying, ^c Obey my voice, and do them, according to all which I command you: so shall ye be my people, and I will be your God:

5 That I may perform the ^d oath which I have sworn unto your fathers, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey, as it is this day. Then answered I, and said, ^e So be it, O LORD:

6 Then the LORD said unto me, Proclaim all these words in the cities of Judah, and in the

^a Deut. xxvii. 26; Gal. iii. 10.—^b Deut. iv. 20; 1 Kings viii. 51.—^c Lev. xxvi. 3, 12; Chap. vii. 23.—^d Deut. vii. 12, 13; Psa. cv. 9, 10.—^e Heb. Amen, Deut. xxvii. 15-26.

speak unto the men of Judah, &c.—Lay the tenor of the covenant before them; and say, Cursed be the man that obeyeth not, &c.—Deut. xxvii. 26, it is,
Cursed be he that confirmeth not all the words of this law to do them: and all the people shall say, Amen. The people's saying Amen, testified their assent, and made the law a covenant; but they had, besides this, formally and explicitly covenanted with God, Exod. xxiv. 3-7, with religious rites and ceremonies, used in stipulations, and afterward consented that God should punish those that violated that covenant, Deut. xxvii. 26. Which I commanded, &c.
—Which law, (that you by your restipulation made a formal covenant,) I, who am the Lord, and so have a sovereign power to lay laws upon my creatures, commanded your fathers; in the day that I brought them from the iron furnace—And thus obliged them to obedience before I laid my law upon them.
The use of the iron furnace being to melt and purify metals, it was a proper representation of that state of sore affliction in which the people of God were for many ages in Egypt. Saying, Obey my voice, &c.
—For which kindness I required no more of them but a gentle service to me, in obeying my voice, as to the things of this law which I gave them in charge; so shall ye be my people, &c.—Nor did I only lay my commands upon them, but also encouraged them to obedience, by my gracious promise, that if they would obey they should be a people whom I would peculiarly protect and bless. That I may, or, rather, might (for he refers to the time past) perform the oath, &c.—As if he had said, I required their obedience for their own good: for I had sworn to their fathers, that I would give their posterity a land abounding with plenty of all good things, upon condition of their obedience. I have performed that oath; I have brought them into such a land, and showed myself faithful to them. Then answered I, So be it, O Lord—God having ended his speech, the prophet says, Amen, as God had commanded, Deut.

streets of Jerusalem, saying, Hear ye ^{A. M. 3396.} the words of this covenant, ^{B. C. 608.} and do them:

7 For I earnestly protested unto your fathers in the day that I brought them up out of the land of Egypt, even unto this day, ^f rising early and protesting, saying, Obey my voice.

8 ^g Yet they obeyed not, nor inclined their ear.
but ^h walked every one in the ⁱ imagination of their evil heart: therefore I will bring upon them all the words of this covenant, which I commanded them to do; but they did them not.

9 And the LORD said unto me, ^j A conspiracy is found among the men of Judah, and among the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

^e Rom. ii. 13; James i. 22.—^f Chap. vii. 13, 25; xxxv. 15.
^g Chap. vii. 26.—^h Chap. iii. 17; vii. 24; ix. 14.—ⁱ Or, stubbornness.—^j Ezek. xxii. 25; Hos. vi. 9.

xxvii. 26; either asserting the truth of what God had said, or expressing his desire that the people would do according to their covenant, or even assenting to the curse as just and reasonable.

Verses 6-8. Proclaim all these words in the cities of Judah, &c.—That all may hear, for all are concerned; saying, Hear ye the words, &c., and do them—Let it be thy work to call upon this people, not only to hear, but to do the things which I have commanded them, and which they have engaged to do. For I earnestly protested—Hebrew, in protesting I protested; a way of speaking by which the Hebrews expressed the seriousness and earnestness wherewith any thing was done: by protesting, he means the same with charging and solemnly enjoining, with promises annexed to obedience, and threatenings denounced in case of disobedience. This, God says, he had done with a great deal of patience and diligence, even from the time that this people were brought by him out of the land of Egypt to the present period. Yet they obeyed not—And, because they were resolved not to be subject to God's commandments, they would not so much as incline their ears to them, but walked every one in the imagination of his evil heart, following their own inventions;
and each one acting as his fancy or humour led him,
both in their devotions and in their conversations.
Therefore I will bring upon them all the words of this covenant—That is, all the threatenings contained in it. Observe, reader, the words of God's covenant shall not fall to the ground. If we do not by our obedience qualify ourselves for the blessings of it, we shall, by our disobedience, bring ourselves under the curses of it.

Verses 9-11. And the Lord said, A conspiracy is found, &c.—Namely, by him whose eye is upon the hidden works of darkness. There is a combination formed among them against God and religion, a dangerous design to overthrow the government of Jehovah, and to bring in counterfeit deities. In other words,

A. M. 3396. B. C. 608. 10 They are turned back to ^k the iniquities of their forefathers, which refused to hear my words; and they went after other gods to serve them: the house of Israel and the house of Judah have broken my covenant which I made with their fathers.

11 ¶ Therefore thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will bring evil upon them which they shall not be able ³ to escape; and ¹ though they shall cry unto me, I will not hearken unto them.

12 Then shall the cities of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem go, and ^m cry unto the gods unto whom they offer incense: but they shall not save them at all in the time of their ⁴ trouble.

13 For according to the number of thy ⁿ cities were thy gods, O Judah; and according to the number of the streets of Jerusalem have ye set up altars, to that ⁵ shameful thing, A. M. 3396. B. C. 608. even altars to burn incense unto Baal.

14 Therefore ^o pray not thou for this people, neither lift up a cry or prayer for them: for I will not hear them in the time that they cry unto me for their ⁶ trouble.

15 ^p What ⁷ hath my beloved to do in my house, seeing she hath ^a wrought lewdness with many, and ^r the holy flesh is passed from thee? ⁸ when thou doest evil, then thou ^r rejoicest.

16 The LORD called thy name, ^t A green olive-tree, fair, and of goodly fruit: with the noise of a great tumult he hath kindled fire upon it, and the branches of it are broken.

17 For the LORD of hosts, ^u that planted thee, hath pronounced evil against thee, for the evil of the house of Israel and of the house of ^k Ezek. xx. 18.—³ Heb. to go forth of.—¹ Psa. xviii. 41; Prov. i. 28; Isa. i. 15; Chap. xiv. 12; Ezek. viii. 18; Micah iii. 4; Zech. vii. 13.—^m Deut. xxxii. 37, 38.—⁴ Heb. evil. ⁿ Chapter ii. 28.—⁵ Heb. shame, Chapter iii. 24; Hos. ix. 10. ^o Exod. xxxii. 10; Chap. vii. 16; xiv. 11; 3 John v. 16.

⁶ Heb. evil.—^p Psa. l. 16; Isa. i. 11, &c.—⁷ Heb. What is to my beloved in my house.—^a Ezekiel xvi. 25.—^r Haggai ii. 12, 13, 14; Titus i. 15.—⁸ Or, when thy evil is.—^u Prov. ii. 14.—^t Psalm lii. 8; Romans xi. 17.—^s Isaiah v. 2; Chap. ii. 21.

All sorts of people have been alike disobedient, as if they had conspired together to break my law. They are turned back to the iniquities of their forefathers—They made some steps toward a reformation in the former part of the reign of Josiah, but now they have agreed to turn back to their former idolatries. Therefore behold, I will bring evil upon them, &c.—The evil of punishment for the evil of sin, which they shall not be able to escape by any evasion whatsoever. Let us remember, those who will not submit to God's government, shall not be able to escape his wrath. Evil pursues sinners, and entangles them in shares, out of which they cannot extricate themselves. And though they shall cry unto me, I will not hearken—God will not hear them crying to him in their adversity, who refuse to hear him speaking to them in their prosperity.

Verses 12–14. Then shall the cities of Judah cry unto the gods, &c.—“When great calamities threaten men, their fears suggest all possible ways of seeking for succour. Thus, when the Jews found themselves forsaken of God, they betook themselves to idols, but found all such applications vain, and to no purpose: see 2 Chron. xxviii. 23. For according to the number of thy cities were thy gods, &c.—See note on chap. ii. 28. Ye have set up altars to that shameful thing—Hebrew, בֹּשֶׁת, bosheth, shame, so called, because it was what they had cause to be ashamed of, and what would certainly bring them to shame and confusion. See note on chap. iii. 24. Therefore pray not thou for this people—See note on chap. vii. 16.

Verse 15: What hath my beloved to do in my house, &c.—“Why doth this, my chosen and peculiar people, as they love to call themselves, make their appearance before me in my house, since they have gone a whoring after several idols of the nations round about them, and thereby have disowned me, and broken the marriage contract that was between us? See note on chap. ii. 2. God calls the Jews his beloved people, because they called themselves so, and because they were still beloved for their fathers' sake, Rom. xi. 18; and he would not cast them off utterly, for the sake of the covenant he had made with their progenitors.”—Lowth. And the holy flesh is passed from thee—“The flesh of thy sacrifices, which thou offerest up to me as an atonement for thy sins, does not at all profit thee, being rendered unacceptable to me through thy many and great provocations, in the commission of which thou continuest without remorse.”—Lowth. But the words are rendered by some, The flesh of my sanctuary shall pass from thee, and may mean, that the parts of the victims, which by the Mosaic law were the portion of the priests, should not be given to them, since the temple would be destroyed. According to this interpretation the prophet must be considered as addressing the priests, of whom there were, without doubt, many in Jerusalem. When thou doest evil, thou rejoicest—Thou gloriest in thy wickedness. Or, at a time when thou offendest most against my laws, thou exultest, and behavest as if thou didst every thing that is right.

Verses 16, 17. The Lord hath called thy name, A green olive-tree—Perhaps Jeremiah here alludes to Hos. xi. 7, where Israel is compared to an olive-tree. The Jewish nation, which, in its flourishing state, is often compared by the sacred writers to a vine, is also sometimes compared to an olive-tree, chiefly because of the fruits of holiness and righteousness which God might justly have expected from them, after all the care and pains he had bestowed upon

A. M. 3396. Judah, which they have done against
B. C. 608. themselves to provoke me to anger in offering incense unto Baal.

18 ¶ And the LORD hath given me knowledge of it, and I know it: then thou showedst me their doings.

19 But I was like a lamb or an ox that is brought to the slaughter; and I knew not that they had devised devices against me, saying,

* Chap. xviii. 18.—^b Heb. the stalk with his bread.—^c Psalm lxxiii. 4.—^d Psa. xxvii. 18; cxvi. 9; cxlii. 5.

them to make them fruitful. Fair, and of a goodly fruit—Amiable and serviceable, pleasant to the eye, and good for yielding food. With the noise of a great tumult he hath kindled a fire upon it, &c.—
The words קול המולה, here rendered the noise of a great tumult, occur Ezek. i. 24, and are there explained to be קול מרונה, like the voice of a host.
Here they undoubtedly signify the confused murmur, noise, and tumult of the Chaldean army, coming to desolate Jerusalem and its dependances with fire and sword, described under the image of an olive-tree, whose branches are cut down that they may be burned, or which is burned as it stands; its branches, or lofty boughs, as רליתיו more properly signifies, meaning the priests and princes. For the Lord that planted thee—And expected fruit from thee in vain; hath pronounced evil against thee—Hath passed a condemnatory sentence upon thee, and marked thee out for destruction. For the evil of the house of Israel and the house of Judah—The evil of whose heinous sins shall now be followed with the evil of most dreadful punishments:

Verses 18, 19. And the Lord hath given me knowledge of it, &c.—This relates to the ill designs which the men of Anathoth had contrived against the prophet, which he here saith God had revealed to him.
See the following verses. But I was like a lamb or an ox, &c.—A proverbial speech, expressing a false security, or insensibility of danger. Dr. Waterland, in agreement with the Vulgate, Bochart, and Houbigant, reads this clause, But I was like a gentle lamb; and Blaney, For I was like a tame lamb that is led to the slaughter. But Lowth justly observes, we may very well admit of the common translation. For the word אלוך here used, certainly frequently signifies an ox, and the disjunctive particle, supplied by or, is elsewhere often understood, though not expressed. The meaning here is, that the prophet would have met with a fate similar to that of a slaughtered lamb or ox, if God had not revealed to him the designs of his enemies. Many commentators suppose that Jeremiah here speaks of his own sufferings as figurative of those of the Messiah. "All the churches agree," says St. Jerome,
"that these and the following words respect Jesus Christ and his passion. It was against his life that they formed their designs: he was the true lamb, meek and innocent. Jeremiah is here a figure of the divine Saviour; he here suffers from his bre-

Let us destroy ^a the tree with the fruit ^{A. M. 3396.} thereof, ^{B. C. 608.} and let us cut him off from ² the land of the living, that his name may be no more remembered.

20 But, O LORD of hosts, that judgest righteously, that ^a triest the reins and the heart, let me see thy vengeance on them: for unto thee have I revealed my cause.

21 Therefore thus saith the LORD of the men

^a 1 Sam. xvi. 7; 1 Chron. xxviii. 9; Psa. vii. 9; Chap. xvii. 10;
xx. 12; Rev. ii. 23.

thren, and represents, in his person, him who was a man of grief, and tried by all sorts of afflictions." Let us destroy the tree with the fruit thereof—Let us not only put an end to his prophesying, but to his life. The Hebrew is literally, Let us destroy the tree (or the stock) with the bread thereof; and bread, it must be observed, is sometimes used for the corn of which bread is made, as chap. v. 17.
The meaning then is, Let us destroy the prophet and his doctrine. We have no other mention of this conspiracy but this here. It is, however, very plain, both from this verse and what follows, that the men of Anathoth (which was Jeremiah's own town) were offended at his prophesying, and had conspired to kill him.

Verse 20. But, O Lord, thou judgest righteously
—It is matter of comfort to us, when men deal unjustly with us, that we have a God to go to, who doth and will plead the cause of injured innocence, and appear against the injurious. God's justice, which is a terror to the wicked, is a comfort to the godly. That triest the reins and the heart—That perfectly knowest what is in man, that discernest his most secret thoughts, desires, and designs. Let me see thy vengeance on them—That is, do justice between me and them in such a way as thou pleassest.
"When men continue implacable in their malice," says Lowth, "we may lawfully expect and desire that God will plead our cause, and judge us according to our righteousness. For the bringing wicked men to condign punishment tends both to the manifestation of God's glory and the good government of the world. And to pray against our enemies in this sense, namely, not for the satisfying our private resentments, but the setting forth of God's justice, is not contrary to the spirit of Christianity. So St.
Paul prayed against Alexander the copper-smith, 2 Tim. iv. 14." It must be observed, however, that, according to the Hebrew text here, the words are merely a prediction; אראה נקמתך מהם, being literally, I shall see thy vengeance on them; that is, I foresee it, and predict it, though I lament they should have given occasion for it.

Verse 21. Thus saith the Lord of the men that seek thy life—That are combined to kill thee; saying, Prophecy not in the name of the Lord—The meaning is, that those men of Anathoth threatened that they would kill him if he did not cease to prophesy such things as he did in the name of the Lord,

A. M. 3396. of Anathoth, ^b that seek thy life, say-B. C. 608. ing, ^c Prophecy not in the name of the LORD, that thou die not by our hand:

22 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts,
Behold, I will ^a punish them: the young men

^b Chap. xii. 5, 6. — ^c Isaiah xxx. 10; Amos ii. 12; vii. 13, 16; Micah ii. 6.

namely, concerning the destruction of Jerusalem, the desolation of Judea, and the carrying away of the people into captivity. For if he had spoken falsely in the name of the Lord, and promised them peace and prosperity, they would have heard him prophesy gladly: they were thus exasperated at him, and opposed his prophesying, because he told them those truths which they had no mind to hear. This passage sufficiently shows that Jeremiah is to be understood in the literal sense here, which, however, does not by any means forbid our considering him in this instance as a type of Christ, and prefiguring, by his sufferings, those of the Redeemer of mankind. It manifests also the usage which the prophets generally met with from their own countrymen, who became their enemies because they told them the truth. The people of their own towns, even their friends and relations, could not bear to hear the solemn warnings which they gave them, and the prediction of those judgments which were coming upon them for their sins.

Verses 22, 23: Therefore thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will punish them—Hebrew, נקד עליהם, shall die by the sword; their sons and A. M. 3396.

their daughters shall die by famine: B. C. 608.

23 And there shall be no remnant of them: for I will bring evil upon the men of Anathoth, even ^d the year of their visitation.

^a Heb. visit upon. — ^d Chapter xxiii. 12; xlv. 21; xlviii. 44;
1. 27; Luke xix. 44.

I will visit, namely, this their wicked conduct, upon them; I will inquire into it, and reckon with them for it. The young men shall die by the sword—Though they be young priests, not men of war, their sacred office shall be no protection to them. Their sons and their daughters shall die by famine—Which is a more grievous death than that by the sword, Lam. iv. 9. Thus two of God's four sore judgments would overwhelm their town in destruction, which should be so entire that there should be no remnant of them—None to be the seed of another generation: they sought Jeremiah's life, and therefore their lives shall be taken: they wished to destroy him, root and branch, that his name might be no more remembered, and therefore there shall be no remnant of them: and herein the Lord is righteous. Thus evil would be brought upon them, even the year of their visitation—And that would be evil sufficient, a recompense according to their deserts. Such is the consequence of opposing the truth and cause of God, and his servants in the execution of their office! Such is the deplorable condition of those that have the prayers of good ministers and good people against them!

CHAPTER XII.

In this chapter we have, (1.) The prophet's humble complaint to God, of the success that the ungodly had in their wicked practices, 1, 2; and his appeal to God concerning his own integrity, with a prayer that God would, for the sake of the public, bring the wickedness of the wicked to an end, 3, 4. (2.) God's rebuke to the prophet for his uneasiness at the present troubles, warning him to prepare for greater, 5, 6. (3.) A sad lamentation over the deplorable, desolate, and disappointed condition to which the sins of the Jews would quickly reduce them, 7-13. (4.) An intimation of mercy to God's people in a denunciation of wrath against their enemies, who helped forward their affliction; but with a promise that, if they would at last join themselves with the people of God, they should have a share with them in their privileges, 14-17.

A. M. 3396. RIGHTEOUS ^a art thou, O LORD, B. C. 608. when I plead with thee: yet ^b let me talk with thee of thy judgments: ^b Where-

^a Psa. li. 4. — ^b Or, let me reason the case with thee.

fore doth the way of the wicked pros- A. M. 3396. per? wherefore are all they happy B. C. 608.
that deal very treacherously?

^b Job xii. 6; xxi. 7; Psa. xxxvii. 1, 35; lxxviii. 3, &c.; Chap. v.
28; Hab. i. 4; Mal. iii. 15.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XII.

Verses 1. Righteous art thou, O Lord—The prophet, being about to inquire into the reasons and meaning of some of the divine dispensations, first recognises a truth of unquestionable certainty, namely, that God is righteous, that is, just and holy in all his ways. Thus he arms himself against the temptations wherewith he was assaulted, to envy the prosperity of the wicked, before he begins to plead with God concerning it. And, in imitation of him, when we are least able to understand the intent of the divine counsels and proceedings, we must still resolve to retain just thoughts of God, and must be confident of this, that he never did and never will do the least wrong to any of his creatures; that even when his judgments are unsearchable as a great deep, and altogether unaccountable, yet his righteousness is as conspicuous and immoveable as the great

A. M. 3396. B. C. 608. 2 Thou hast planted them, yea, they have taken root: ² they grow, yea, they bring forth fruit: ³ thou art near in their mouth, and far from their reins.

3 But thou, O LORD, ⁴ knowest me: thou hast seen me, and ⁵ tried my heart ⁶ toward thee: pull them out like sheep for the slaughter, and prepare them for ⁷ the day of slaughter.

4 How long shall ⁸ the land mourn, and the herbs of every field wither, ⁹ for the wickedness of them that dwell therein? ¹⁰ the beasts are con-

² Heb. they go on.—³ Isa. xxix. 13; Matt. xv. 8; Mark vii. 6. ⁴ Psa. xvii. 3; cxxxix. 1.—⁵ Chap. xi. 20.—⁶ Heb. with thee. ⁷ James v. 5.—⁸ Chap. xxiii. 10; Hos. iv. 3.—⁹ Psa. cvii. 34.

mountains, Psa. xxxvi. 6. Yet let me talk with thee of thy judgments—Not by way of accusing thee, but for my own satisfaction concerning thy dispensations in the government of the world. Wherefore doth the way of the wicked prosper?—Why are their designs and projects successful? Why are all they happy that deal very treacherously?—Why are the affairs and families of the perfidious and unjust in a prosperous state? Why dost thou permit this? What end of thy righteous government is to be answered by it? By all they, he means many of them, and is thought to have spoken thus with a special reference to the priests at Anathoth, who had conspired against his life. The prosperity of the wicked hath, in all ages, been a mystery, and hath served to furnish infidels with an objection against the providence of God, and, upon that account, hath been a source of temptation to many of God's people.

Verses 2, 3. Thou hast planted them—In a rich soil, by thy power: they have taken root; they grow—Their prosperity seems to be confirmed and settled by thy providence. Thou art near in their mouth, and far from their reins—They talk of thee, and profess piety, but do not believe in and obey thee from their hearts; the true character this of hypocrites, who, according to Isaiah, honour God with their mouths, but their hearts are far from him, Isa. xxix. 13. But thou, O Lord, knowest me—As if he had said, Thou knowest, O Lord, it is otherwise with me: I am maligned; and my life is hunted after, though my heart is upright before thee, and I have been faithful in declaring to the people that, and only that, which thou didst reveal to me: yet it is for this they seek my life. Pull them out like sheep, &c.—Or rather, as Dr. Waterland and Houbigant translate the clause, "Thou wilt separate them as sheep to be sacrificed, and set them apart for the day of slaughter."

Verse 4. How long shall the land mourn?—As it doth under thy judgments inflicted upon it; for the wickedness of them that dwell therein—Lord, shall they themselves prosper, who ruin all about them? The wickedness of the people is here represented as having brought a great calamity upon the land, under which all living creatures, even the beasts of the earth, and the fowls of heaven, as well as the human sumed, and the birds; because they said, He shall not see our last end. A. M. 3396. B. C. 608.

5 ¶ If thou hast run with the footmen, and they have wearied thee, then how canst thou contend with horses? and if in the land of peace, wherein thou trustedst, they wearied thee, then how wilt thou do in ^k the swelling of Jordan?

6 For even ^l thy brethren, and the house of thy father, even they have dealt treacherously with thee; yea, ^m they have called a multitude race, were now suffering grievously. This calamity was a long drought, or want of rain, which happened, it seems, in the latter end of Josiah's, and the beginning of Jehoiakim's reign. It is mentioned chap. iii. 3; and viii. 13; and ix. 10, 12; and more fully afterward, chap. xiv. Some of its effects are here noticed; namely, that the herbs of every field were withered, and the beasts and birds consumed. If they would have been brought to repentance by this lesser judgment, the greater would have been prevented. Because they—The wicked men; said, He shall not see our last end—Namely, Jeremiah, whom these abandoned Jews threatened to kill, as if they were not willing he should see the fulfilling of his prophecies concerning the calamities to come on Judea. Not that they believed what he predicted would really come to pass, but they spake thus in a sarcastical manner, as much as to say, Be it so, that the calamities which thou denouncest against us shall come upon us, yet we will take care that thou shalt not have the pleasure of seeing them fulfilled upon us.

¹ Chap. iv. 35; vii. 20; ix. 10; Hos. iv. 3.—^k Josh. iii. 15; 1 Chron. xii. 15; Chap. xlix. 19; 1. 44.—^l Chapter ix. 4; xi. 19, 21.—^m Or, they cried after thee fully.

Verses 5, 6. If thou hast run with the footmen—Here God speaks, and applies a proverbial expression to the prophet's circumstances, the import of which is, that if men find themselves unable to contend with a less power, it is in vain for them to strive with a greater. This sentence, being applied to the prophet's case, implies that, if he was so impatient that he could not bear the ill usage of his neighbours at Anathoth, how would he be able to undergo the hardships he must expect to meet with from the great men at Jerusalem, who would unanimously set themselves against him. And if in the land of peace—Where there is little noise or peril; then how wilt thou do in the swelling of Jordan—The sense may be the same as in the foregoing sentence, though differently expressed. As if he had said, If thou art exposed to such persecutions in thy own country, and among thy own kindred, who are more peaceable, what must thou expect when those in power at Jerusalem shall combine against thee? whose rage shall be as great and terrible as when Jordan suddenly overflows the neighbouring fields with violence; and obliges all to seek their safety by flight, there being no way of standing against the impetuous torrent. Or, by the swellings of Jordan,

A. M. 3396. after thee: ^m believe them not, though
B. C. 608. they speak ⁵ fair words unto thee.

7 ¶ I have forsaken my house, I have left my heritage; I have given ⁶ the dearly beloved of my soul into the hand of her enemies.

8 My heritage is unto me as a lion in the forest; it ⁷ crieth ⁸ out against me: therefore have I hated it.

^m Proverbs xxvi. 25.—⁵ Hebrew, good things.—⁶ Hebrew, the love.—⁷ Or, yelleth.—⁸ Heb. giveth out his voice.—⁹ Or, having talons.

may be meant the invasion of the country by the Chaldeans. Thus the words are understood by Blaney, who observes upon them as follows: "The ravages of war and hostile invasions are often represented in Scripture under the image of a river rising rapidly above its banks, and carrying all before it. To these inundations Jordan was very subject; and on such occasions, as we are told, (Maunderell's Travels, p. 81,) several sorts of wild beasts, which are wont to harbour among the trees and bushes by the river side, are forced out of their coverts, and infest the neighbouring plains. This circumstance is particularly alluded to by the prophet, (chap. xlix. 19,) and seems to have been here in his view. For among all the dire effects incident to a country from the approach of a foreign enemy, this is not one of the least formidable, that evil-minded persons, within the state, are emboldened to throw off all legal restraints, and, taking advantage of the general confusion, openly commit the most daring outrages on their fellow-citizens, not only with impunity, but, often under a pretence of zeal for the public welfare. Silent leges inter arma, is a well-known adage; and the prophet found it verified to his cost, when even the authority of the king himself, as we learn from the following history, (chap. xxxviii. 4, 5,) was insufficient to protect him from the malice of his persecutors." Even thy brethren—The priests of Anathoth; and the house of thy father—Who ought to have protected thee, and pretended to do so; even they have dealt treacherously with thee—Have been false to thee, and, while they pretended friendship, have secretly conspired and devised evil against thee. Yea, they have called a multitude after thee—Have endeavoured to bring thee under popular odium, to incense the common people against thee, and, raising a mob upon thee, to expose thee to their rage. Or, as the words may be rendered, They have pursued thee with a great cry, as a common malefactor. The sense is, Their former behaviour plainly shows that thou canst not reasonably depend on them for that countenance and support which a man naturally looks for from his friends and relations against the hostilities of strangers.

Verse 7. I have forsaken my house—My temple, where I had placed my name. I have already withdrawn my favourable regard and presence from it, and shall withhold those manifestations of my power and goodness, which I have been wont to make to the people who come thither to worship me, and I

9 My heritage is unto me as a ^{A. M. 3396.} speckled bird, the birds round about ^{B. C. 608.} are against her; come ye, assemble all the beasts of the field, ¹⁰ comeⁿ to devour.

10 Many ^o pastures have destroyed ^p my vineyard, they have ^q trodden my portion under foot, they have made my ¹¹ pleasant portion a desolate wilderness.

¹⁰ Or, cause them to come.—ⁿ Isaiah lvi. 9; Chapter vii. 33. ^o Chapter vi. 3.—^p Isa. v. 1, 5.—^q Isa. lxiii. 18.—¹¹ Heb. portion of desire.

will shortly give it up to utter desolation. I have left my heritage—The whole body of my people, with respect to my special providence over them and care of them, which have been such that, in comparison with them, I might seem to neglect all other countries. I have given the dearly beloved of my soul, &c.—That is, that nation, which was once my dearly beloved, precious in my sight, and honourable above any people; into the hands of her enemies—I have determined to deliver her into their power, and they shall tyrannise over, oppress, and enslave her at their pleasure. God terms the Jewish nation his dearly beloved here, to aggravate their sin in returning him hatred for his love, and their folly and misery in throwing themselves out of the favour of one who had such a kindness for them, and was mighty to protect and save them.

Verses 8, 9. My heritage is unto me as a lion in the forest—Those that were my lambs and sheep, following me, their chief shepherd, and the guidance of those prophets and pastors whom I set over them, are become like lions in the forest roaring against me, and rending and tearing the prophets whom I send unto them, and who speak to them in my name. It—My heritage; crieth out against me—They blaspheme my name, oppose my authority, and bid defiance to my justice. Therefore have I hated it—My disposition and conduct are changed toward them, and my heart is alienated from them, because their temper and behaviour are altered, and their hearts and ways alienated from me. My heritage is unto me as a speckled bird—Colorata, id est, fedata sanguine, died or sprinkled with the blood of her prey. So R. Salomon interprets the words עֵיט צִבּוֹי, here used. Or, as some read it, Avis digitata, a bird with talons: so the margin; that is, a ravenous bird, uncis unguibus in prædam volans, says Buxtorf, flying on its prey with crooked claws. The meaning is, My people are become wild and savage, and, like a speckled, rapacious bird, are only fit for prey and deeds of violence. And as all the rest of the birds flock about such a one, and are ready to pull it in pieces; so have I stirred up all the enemies of my people to annoy them on every side; compared, in the next clause, to so many beasts of prey. See chap. ii. 15; Isa. lvi. 9.

Verses 10, 11. Many pastures have destroyed my vineyard—Many eaters, or devourers, as Dr. Waterland translates רָעִים רִיבִים, by which the Chaldee Paraphrast understands the generals of the Chaldee

A. M. 3396. 11 They have made it desolate, and
B. C. 608. being desolate: it mourneth unto me; the whole land is made desolate, because ^a no man layeth it to heart.

12 The spoilers are come upon all high places through the wilderness: for the sword of the LORD shall devour from the one end of the land even to the other end of the land: no flesh shall have peace.

13 ^b They have sown wheat, but shall reap thorns: they have put themselves to pain, but

^a Verse 4.—^a Isa. xlii. 25.—^a Levit. xxvi. 16; Deut. xxviii.
38; Mic. vi. 15; Hag. i. 6.

army, an interpretation which seems to be justified by the two following verses: though some explain it of the rulers of the Jews, who, by their wicked government, and equally wicked example, had ruined their country. God calls Judea his vineyard and pleasant portion, because of the care he took to cultivate and improve it, and of the fruit he might justly have expected from it: see note on chap. xi.
16. Being desolate, it mourneth unto me—Unto God; that is, lying in a neglected and doleful condition, it becomes a sad spectacle to me, and makes a sort of silent complaint, begging to be restored to its former prosperity. Because no man layeth it to heart—The principal cause of this great judgment is, that the people do not see and acknowledge my hand in the calamities they feel, nor humble themselves under them, but remain in general unaffected, stupid, and obstinate.

Verses 12, 13. The spoilers—The Chaldean soldiers, described by the metaphor of a full wind of the high places, chap. iv. 11, are come upon all high places—Have made themselves masters of all the natural fastnesses and artificial fortresses in the country. The prophet, as usual, speaks of a thing as already done, which was very shortly to be done.
For the sword of the Lord shall devour—Thus those people are called, whom God excited to invade Judea, as a punishment of the Jews for their sins:
they were the Lord's sword: from one end of the land even to the other—The numerous army of the invaders shall disperse themselves through the whole country, penetrating into every corner of it. No flesh shall have peace—No rank or order of men shall be exempt from the calamity, or able to enjoy any tranquillity. They—Namely, the inhabitants of the land; have sown wheat, but shall reap thorns—Have taken much pains, and been at much charge, but all shall turn to their prejudice. It is a proverbial expression, signifying men's loss of time and labour;
or rather, their receiving only vexation and injury
as the fruit of those efforts from which they expected great advantage. It is here applied to the fruitless and destructive endeavours of the Jews to save themselves from the evils that threatened them, by courting the assistance and alliance of idolaters.
They shall be ashamed of your revenues—Or, in-shall not profit; and ¹² they shall be A. M. 3396. ashamed of your revenues because of B. C. 608.

the fierce anger of the LORD.

14 ¶ Thus saith the LORD against all mine evil neighbours, ^a that ^a touch the inheritance which I have caused my people Israel to inherit; Behold, I will ^a pluck them out of their land, and pluck out the house of Judah from among
them.

15 ^a And it shall come to pass, after that I have plucked them out I will return, and have ¹² Or, ye.—^a Zech. ii. 8.—^a Deut. xxx. 3; Chap. xxxii. 37.

^a Ezek. xxviii. 25.

crease, as תְּנוּאֹתֶיךָ should rather be rendered: it alludes to the reaping of thorns, mentioned in the former part of the verse, as if he had said, You shall be ashamed of the small and inconsiderable returns you make of all your pains and labours: because of the fierce anger of the Lord—Which shall make all your designs abortive.

Verses 14, 15. Thus saith the Lord, against, or concerning, all mine evil neighbours—By these are meant the Moabites, Ammonites, Idumeans, and Philistines; against whom Jeremiah prophesies, chap. xlvii., xlviii., xlix.; and Ezekiel, chap. xxv.
These are called evil neighbours, because of the spite and ill-will which they showed toward the Jews on all occasions: that touch the inheritance, &c.—Who lie near to, and border upon, Judea:
Behold, I will pluck them out, &c.—These people were accordingly wasted and spoiled, and part of them carried into captivity by the Babylonians.
And pluck out the house of Judah, &c.—Many of the Jews were carried captive, or went for safety into those neighbouring countries, before the general Babylonish captivity, chap. xv. 4, and xi. 11. Of these Jews some were carried captive, together with the natives of those countries, by the Chaldeans afterward: others went down into Egypt. See chap. xliii., xlv. Here is foretold the restoration of the Jews from their several dispersions. Compare chap. xxxii. 37; Ezek. xxviii. 25, 26. This promise was partly fulfilled in the time succeeding the Babylonish captivity, Psa. cxlvii. 2; but will be more fully accomplished at the final restoration of that nation, when the fulness of the Gentiles will likewise be brought into the church, which is foretold in the words of the next verse. And after that I have plucked them out—In justice for the punishment of their sins, and in jealousy for the honour of Israel; I will return—Will change my way, and have compassion on them—Though, as being heathen, they can lay no claim to the mercies of the covenant made with Abraham and his seed, yet they shall have benefit by the compassions of the Creator, who will look upon them as the work of his hands. And will bring them again every man to his heritage—Thus, after Jeremiah had threatened severe judgments upon several countries, he concludes with a general

A. M. 3396. compassion on them, ^a and will bring
B. C. 608. them again, every man to his heritage, and every man to his land.

16 And it shall come to pass, if they will diligently learn the ways of my^a people, ^a to swear by my name, The Lord liveth; as they taught promise of their return from their captivity in the latter days; which promise probably relates chiefly to their conversion under the gospel.

^a Amos ix. 14.—^a Chap. iv. 2.

Verses 16, 17. If they will diligently learn the ways of my people—If they will leave their idolatries, and learn of my people who lived among them to be worshippers of me the true God, and to swear by my name, The Lord liveth—That is, pay that homage, which they owe to the Divine Being, to me, the living and true God: as they taught my people to swear by Baal—As they drew in my backsliding people to join with them in the service of idols. Then shall they be built, in the midst of my people—They shall have a portion among my people. The acceptance of the believing Gentiles is here clearly intimated, and their union with the church my people to swear by Baal; then A. M. 3396. shall they be ^b built in the midst of B. C. 608.

my people.

17 But if they will not ^c obey, I will utterly pluck up and destroy that nation, saith the Lord.

^b Eph. ii. 20, 21; 1 Pet. ii. 5.—^c Isa. lx. 12.

of God, the middle wall of partition being thrown down. Concerning the actual accomplishment of this prophecy, see Eph. ii. 13-22. But if they will not obey, I will utterly pluck up, &c.—But as for those, whether they be Jews or Gentiles, that shall continue in their idolatrous and superstitious practices, or that shall reject the Messiah, and continue in unbelief and disobedience, I will, utterly destroy that people. Thus Isa. lx. 12, The nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish: yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted. Those that will not be ruled by the grace of God, shall be ruled by the justice of God. And if disobedient nations shall be destroyed, much more shall disobedient churches, from which better things are expected.

CHAPTER XIII.

This chapter contains a single and distinct prophecy, which, under two symbols, a linen girdle left to rot, and all vessels being filled with wine, foretels the utter destruction that was destined to fall upon the whole Jewish nation, including the individuals of every rank and denomination, 1-14. An exhortation to humiliation and repentance is subjoined, 15-21. And the cause of all the evils is assigned in the general corruption and profligacy of manners that prevailed without prospect of amendment, 22-27. The particular mention of the joint downfall of the king and queen, 28, seems to justify the opinion which ascribes this prophecy to the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim, whose fate, and that of his queen, is in like manner noticed together, chap. xxii. 18.

A. M. 3402. THUS saith the LORD unto me, Go B. C. 602. and get thee a linen girdle, and put it upon thy loins, and put it not in water.

2 So I got a girdle, according to the word of the LORD, and put it on my loins.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XIII.

Verses 1, 2. Thus saith the Lord unto me—The prophet here begins a new discourse. Go and get thee a girdle, &c.—“God explains, at verse 11, what was meant by the symbol of the girdle, or sash, worn about the loins, namely, his people Israel, whom he redeemed of old, and attached to himself by a special covenant; that as a girdle served for an ornament to the wearer, so they should be subservient to the honour and glory of his name. But it is added, They would not hear; or conform to his intentions; therefore, being polluted with the guilt of their disobedience, they were, in that state, and on that very account, to be carried into captivity; conformably to which the prophet was commanded not to put the girdle in water, that is, not to wash it, but

3 And the word of the LORD came A. M. 3402.
unto me the second time, saying, B. C. 602.

4 Take the girdle that thou hast got, which is upon thy loins, and arise, go to Euphrates, and hide it there in a hole of the rock.

to leave it in that state of filthiness which it had contracted in wearing.” So I got the girdle, according to the word of the Lord—That is, according to God's command. And put it on my loins—Used it as God directed me, not disputing the reason why God commanded me to do such a thing.

Verses 4. Arise, go to Euphrates—God commanded the prophet to go and hide the girdle on the bank of the Euphrates, to signify that the Jews should be carried captive over that river, called the waters of Babylon, Psa. cxxxvii. 1. In the margin of our ancient English Bibles, it is observed, that, “because this river Perath, or Euphrates, was far from Jerusalem, it is evident that this was done in a vision.” And the generality of the best commentators have been of this opinion; it not being probable that the

A. M. 3402. 5 So I went, and hid it by Euphrates, as the LORD commanded me. B. C. 602.

6 And it came to pass after many days, that the LORD said unto me, Arise, go to Euphrates, and take the girdle from thence, which I commanded thee to hide there.

7 Then I went to Euphrates, and digged, and took the girdle from the place where I had hid it: and behold, the girdle was marred, it was profitable for nothing.

8 Then the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

9 Thus saith the LORD, After this manner ^a will I mar the pride of Judah, and the great pride of Jerusalem.

10 This evil people, which refuse to hear my words, which ^b walk in the ¹ imagination of prophet should have been sent twice upon a journey of such considerable length and difficulty, to the very great loss of his time, merely upon the errands here mentioned, namely, to carry the girdle to the Euphrates, and to fetch it back, when, it seems, every purpose would have been answered altogether as well if the transaction had been represented in vision. Several things, it must be observed, are related in Scripture as actually done, which yet were certainly only performed in visions. One instance we have chap. xxv. 15–29, where Jeremiah is commanded to take a cup of wine in his hand, and to cause several kings and nations, there enumerated, to drink of it: for it would be a perfect absurdity to believe that he actually went round to all those kings and nations, and made them drink of the contents of his cup. And yet he makes no more distinction in this latter case, than in that now before us, between mental and bodily action. Another remarkable instance we have Gen. xv. 5, where the text says, that God brought Abraham forth abroad, and bid him tell the stars; and yet it appears, by a subsequent verse, that the sun was not then gone down. Indeed, in all these cases, and in many more that might be mentioned of a similar kind, it made no difference as to the end God had in view, whether the transactions related were visionary or real; for either way they served equally to represent the events which it was God's pleasure to make known. See Lowth and Blaney.

^a Lev. xxvi. 19.—^c Chap. ix. 14; xi. 8; xvi. 12.

Verse 9. After this manner will I mar the pride of Judah, &c.—Or, as some translate the verse, “Will I mar the glory of Judah, and the great honour of Jerusalem.” I will bring down their pride and stubbornness; by making them slaves and vassals to strangers, Lam. v. 8, 13. Or, alluding to the transaction about the girdle, “I will transport them beyond the Euphrates; I will hide them in Babylon, as in the hole of a rock, whence they cannot come out. They shall be marred in the midst of the nations, their heart, and walk after other gods, to serve them, and to worship them, shall even be as this girdle, which is good for nothing. A. M. 3402. B. C. 602.

11 For as the girdle cleaveth to the loins of a man, so have I caused to cleave unto me the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Judah, saith the LORD: that ^c they might be unto me for a people, and ^d for a name, and for a praise, and for a glory; but they would not hear.

12 ¶ Therefore thou shalt speak unto them this word; Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Every bottle shall be filled with wine: and they shall say unto thee, Do we not certainly know that every bottle shall be filled with wine?

¹ Or, stubbornness.—^c Exod. xix. 5.—^d Chap. xxxiii. 9.

without temple, without sacrifice, without priests, without external worship. I will humble their presumption, and teach them to acknowledge and adore my mercy.”

Verse 11. For as the girdle cleaveth to the loins of a man—Here God shows the prophet why he commanded him to put the girdle about his loins. So have I caused—Rather, had I caused; to cleave unto me the house of Israel—I had betrothed them to myself in righteousness, and entered into a marriage covenant with them, that they might cleave to me as a wife cleaveth to her husband. By the laws I gave them, the prophets I sent among them, and the favours which, in my providence, I showed them, I brought them near to myself, and allowed them access to me, and intercourse with me, above every other nation. That they might be unto me for a people—A peculiar people; that they might have the honour of being called by my name; and for a praise and a glory—That I might be glorified by their showing forth my power, goodness, and faithfulness, and all my other glorious perfections to the world, so that I might be honoured and praised through them.

Verse 12. Therefore—Because the end intended by my goodness has not been answered upon them; thou shalt speak unto them this word—Thou shalt show them the destruction coming upon them by another emblem. Thus saith the Lord, Every bottle shall be filled with wine—God's judgments are often represented under the figure of a cup full of intoxicating liquor: see this metaphor pursued at large, chap. xxv. 15, &c. To the same purpose God tells them here that as they have all sinned, so should every one have his share in the punishment. And they shall say unto thee, &c.—“God, who knew the profaneness of their hearts, foretels the reply they would make to this threatening, that, taking it in a literal sense, they would make a jest of it, as if the words were intended to encourage intemperance.

A. M. 3402. 13 Then shalt thou say unto them, B. C. 602. Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will fill all the inhabitants of this land, even the kings that sit upon David's throne, and the priests, and the prophets, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, ^e with drunkenness.

14 And ^f I will dash them ² one against another, even the fathers and the sons together, saith the LORD: I will not pity, nor spare, nor have mercy, ³ but destroy them.

15 ¶ Hear ye, and give ear; be not proud: for the LORD hath spoken.

^e Isa. li. 17, 21; lxiii. 6; Chap. xxv. 27; li. 7.—^f Psa. ii. 9.
² Heb. a man against his brother.—³ Heb. from destroying them.
^g Josh. vii. 19.

for either they did not or would not understand the drift of them." Thus Lowth. But Blaney thinks their answer, Do we not know, &c., implies that, by a wilful mistake, they construed his words as "meant to tell them of a plentiful vintage that was coming on, which would fill all their wine-vessels; and of this they claimed to be as good judges as he, from the promising appearance of the vineyards. As if they said, Do you tell us this as a piece of news, or a supernatural discovery? Is it not evident to us as well as to you? The prophet is therefore directed to deal more plainly with them, and to tell them that the wine he meant was not such as would exhilarate, but such as would intoxicate; being no other than what would be poured out of the wine-cup of God's fury, to the subversion of all ranks and orders of men among them."

Verses 13, 14. Behold, I will fill all the inhabitants with drunkenness—There is a wine of astonishment and confusion, Psa. lx. 3. With that wine, saith God, I will fill all orders of persons, kings, priests, prophets, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem. And I will dash them one against another—I will permit an evil spirit of strife and division to arise among them, as Judges ix. 23, so that they shall be set one against another, fathers against their sons, and sons against their fathers, and family against family; so that, having no union among themselves, or friendly co-operation, they shall become an easy prey to their enemies. Thus I will confound and destroy them, as earthen vessels are broken to pieces when they are dashed one against another. The words allude to the earthen bottles which were to be filled with wine, verse 12. I will not pity nor spare, but destroy, &c.—For they will not pity, nor spare, nor have mercy, but destroy one another: see Hab. ii. 15, 16. Therefore let them not presume upon my mercy, for I am resolved to show them no mercy, but to bring them to utter ruin, unless a thorough reformation take place.

Verses 15-17. Hear ye, &c.—The prophet proceeds to give them good counsel, which, if it had been taken, the desolation and destruction threatened would have been prevented. Be not proud—

16 ^g Give glory to the LORD your God, before he cause ^h darkness, and before your feet stumble upon the dark mountains, and while ye ⁱ look for light, he turn it into ^k the shadow of death, and make it gross darkness.

17 But if ye will not hear it, my soul shall weep in secret places for your pride; and ^l mine eye shall weep sore, and run down with tears, because the LORD's flock is carried away captive.

18 Say unto, ^m the king and to the queen

^h Isa. v. 30; viii. 22; Amos viii. 9.—ⁱ Isa. lix. 9.—^k Psa. xlv. 19.—^l Chapter ix. 1; xiv. 17; Lament. i. 2, 16; ii. 18.
^m 2 Kings xxiv. 12; Chap. xxii. 26.

Pride was one of the sins for which God had a controversy with them, verse 9. Let them mortify and forsake this and their other sins, and God will let fall his controversy with them. Give glory to the Lord your God—Glorify God by an humble confession of your sins, by submitting yourselves to him, humbling yourselves under his word, and under his mighty hand; before he cause darkness—Before he bring upon you the night of affliction, even his great and heavy judgments. Light is the emblem of joy, and happy times are expressed by bright and pleasant days. On the contrary, calamities and troubles are represented by night and darkness, when every thing looks melancholy and dismal. And before your feet stumble, &c.—Before the time come when ye shall be forced to flee by night unto the mountains for fear of your enemies. Or, more generally, before you find yourselves overtaken by the pursuing judgments of God, notwithstanding all your endeavours to outrun and escape from them. And while ye look for light—That is, for relief and comfort; he turn it into the shadow of death—Involve you in most dismal and terrible calamities, out of which you shall be utterly unable to extricate yourselves. But if ye will not hear—Will not submit to and obey the word, but continue to be refractory; my soul shall weep in secret places for your pride—Your haughtiness, stubbornness, and vain confidence; and mine eye shall weep sore, &c.—Not chiefly, nor so much, because my relations, friends, and neighbours are involved in trouble and distress, but because the Lord's flock—His people, and the sheep of his pasture; are carried away captive—Observe, reader, that should always grieve us most by which God's honour suffers, and the interest of his kingdom is weakened.

Verse 18. Say unto the king and queen—That is, to Jehoiachin, called also Coniah, and his mother, who were carried captives to Babylon at the first coming of Nebuchadnezzar; see chap. xxii. 26; 2 Kings xxiv. 12. Some indeed suppose that Zedekiah and his mother are intended, which does not appear so probable. Humble yourselves—By true repentance, and so both give glory to God, and set a good

A. M. 3402. Humble yourselves, sit down: for
B. C. 602. your ⁴ principalities shall come down, even the crown of your glory.

19 The cities of the south shall be shut up, and none shall open them: Judah shall be carried away captive all of it, it shall be wholly carried away captive.

20 Lift up your eyes, and behold them ² that come from the north: where is the flock that was given thee, thy beautiful flock?

21 What wilt thou say when he shall ⁵ punish

⁴ Or, head-tires.—ⁿ Ch. vi. 22.—⁵ Heb. visit upon.—^o Chap.
vi. 24.—^p Chap. v. 19; xvi. 10.

example to your subjects; and sit down—Sit down and consider what is coming; sit down and lament your condition. For your principalities shall come down—The honour and power by which you value yourselves, and in which you confide, even the crown of your glory—For when you are led away captive, where will the badges of your power and pre-eminence be then? Blessed be God, there is a crown of glory which shall never come down, and which they who humble themselves before God, in true repentance, shall in due time inherit.

Verses 19–21. The cities of the south, &c.—The cities of Judah, which lay in the southern part of Canaan, shall be straitly besieged by the enemy, so that there shall be no going in and out; or shall be deserted by the inhabitants. Or, as some think, the cities of Egypt are intended, from whence the Jews expected succour. These should fail them, and they should find no access to them. Lift up your eyes, &c.—He speaks as if their enemies were even then upon their march, nay, so near, that if they did but lift up their eyes and look, they might see them coming. Where is the flock that was given thee?—He speaks to the king, representing him under the idea of a shepherd, and the people under that of a flock.
Or rather, as the pronouns are feminine, he addresses the daughter of Judah, that is, the city or state.
“What wilt thou say, when the Lord shall demand of thee an account of the people committed to thy trust? What wilt thou answer when the sovereign monarch shall see dissipated, diminished, weakened, destroyed, thy beautiful flock,” or, as תפארתך rather signifies, the flock of thy glory. In the multitude of people, says Solomon, is the king's honour.
What wilt thou say when he shall punish thee?— Thou wilt have nothing to say, but be wholly confounded, when God shall visit thee by this sore judgment. Or, when Nebuchadnezzar's army, sent by God, shall visit thee. For thou hast taught them to be captains, &c.—Houbigant renders it, “Since thou hast made them expert against thee, and hast drawn them upon thine own head;” and Blaney, more literally, “Seeing it is thou that teachest them to be rulers in chief over thee.” “Thou hast frequently called them to thy succour, and taught them the way to thy country, whereof they dreamed not thee? for thou hast taught them to ⁴ be captains, and as chief over thee: shall not ^o sorrows take thee,

as a woman in travail?

22 ¶ And if thou say in thy heart, ^p Wherefore come these things upon me? For the greatness of thine iniquity are ^a thy skirts discovered, and thy heels ⁶ made bare.

23 Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? then may ye also do good, that are ⁷ accustomed to do evil.

^q Isa. iii. 17; xlvii. 2, 3; Jer. 26; Ezek. xvi. 37, 38, 39; Nah.
iii. 5.—⁸ Or, shall be violently taken away.—⁷ Heb. taught.

before; and not only thus, but by accumulating crimes upon crimes, and filling up the measure of thine iniquity, thou hast drawn down the vengeance of heaven, and put thyself in the power of the Chal-deans.” See Calmet. Some have understood the alliances, contracted heretofore with the Assyrians by Ahaz, and the conduct of Hezekiah toward the ambassadors of the king of Babylon, to be here alluded to. “But I rather think,” says Blaney, “that the wicked manners of the people are principally designed; which put them out of the protection of Almighty God, and rendered them an easy conquest to any enemy that came against them. Thus they taught their enemies to oppress, and to be lords over them; against whom, but for their own faults, they might have maintained their security and independence.”

Verse 22. If thou say, Wherefore come these things upon me?—Hypocrites will rarely confess their own shame and God's righteousness, but are ready to expostulate with him, and to inquire why he hath dealt so with them, as if he had treated them unjustly. But, saith God, For the greatness of thine iniquity are thy skirts discovered, &c.—That is,
thou art carried into captivity, stripped and bare,
without covering to thy nakedness; it being the barbarous custom of conquerors, in ancient times, to treat their captives with such indignities in conducting them to the place of their intended residence:
see note on Isa. iii. 17; and Nahum iii. 5. Lowth thinks the words may also allude to the punishment that used to be inflicted upon common harlots and adulteresses, which was to strip them naked, and expose them to the eyes of the world: and thus God threatened he would deal with Jerusalem, upon account of her spiritual fornication.

Verse 23. Can the Ethiopian change his skin, &c.
—The word Cushi, here rendered Ethiopian, often signifies Arabian, in the Scriptures; Ethiopia being, by ancient writers, distinguished into Eastern (the same with Arabia) and Western Ethiopia. But here an inhabitant of the latter, that is, of Ethiopia properly so called, seems evidently to be meant, the people of that country, which lay south of Egypt, being much more remarkable than the Arabians for their black colour. It seems hardly necessary to observe

A. M. 3402. 24 Therefore will I scatter them
B. C. 602. ^r as the stubble that passeth away by the wind of the wilderness.

25 ^s This is thy lot, the portion of thy measures from me, saith the LORD; because thou hast forgotten me, and trusted in ^t falsehood.

26 Therefore ^u will I discover thy skirts upon

^r Psa. i. 4; Hos. xiii. 3.—^s Job xx. 29; Psa. xi. 6.—^t Ch.
x. 14.—^u Verse 22; Lam. i. 8; Ezekiel xvi. 37; xxiii. 29;

to the reader, that Jeremiah does not intend to express here the absolute impossibility of a change taking place in the principles and practices of the ignorant and wicked. "To suppose this, would be to contradict the whole tenor of his writings, and to render insignificant and absurd all his invitations to repentance. Nay, it appears from the last verse of this chapter that he did not suppose the reformation even of this people to be an absolute impossibility. We are therefore to understand this as a proverbial expression, which, like many others in Scripture, is not to be taken in the strictness of the letter; the prophet designing only to express the extreme difficulty of a moral change in habitual sinners, and particularly in those presumptuous and obstinate sinners of Israel to whom his discourse is directed,"—Dodd.

Verses 24, 25. Therefore will I scatter them—Separate them from one another, and disperse them abroad in that strange and remote country to which they are carried captive; as the stubble, or chaff, rather, that passeth away by the wind—That is dissipated and carried far away by a fierce wind: he adds, of the wilderness, to render the declaration the more emphatical, the chaff being more easily and effectually scattered by the wind in an open place, where there are no houses. This is the portion of thy face, that thy shame may appear. A. M. 3402.

B. C. 602.

27 I have seen thine adulteries, and thy ^x neighings, the lewdness of thy whore-dom, and thine abominations ^y on the hills in the fields. Wo unto thee, O Jerusalem!
wilt thou not be made clean? ^z when shall it once be?

Hos. ii. 10.—^x Chap. v. 8.—^y Isa. lxxv. 7; Chap. ii. 20; iii.
2, 6; Ezek. vi. 13.—^z Heb. after when yet?

thy measures from me—What thou wilt receive of my hand; because thou hast forgotten me—The favours I have bestowed upon thee, and the obligations thou art under to me: of these thou hast no sense, no remembrance; and trusted in falsehood—In idols, in an arm of flesh, in the self-flatteries of a deceitful heart.

Verses 26, 27. Therefore will I discover thy skirts—Lay thee open to shame and disgrace. See on verse 22. I have seen thine adulteries—Thy idolatries; thy inordinate desire after strange gods, which thou hast been impatient to gratify: thy neighings—A metaphorical expression taken from horses neighing to each other; the lewdness of thy whoredoms—Thy impudence and unsatiableness in the worship of idols, on the hills, in the fields, upon the high places. Wo unto thee, O Jerusalem—Miserable art thou, and greater miseries await thee, as the fruit of such practices. Wilt thou not be made clean?—The prophet here expresses, in the strongest manner, his desire for the repentance and reformation of this people. The original, כתי עור, When once? is remarkably emphatical. The aposiopesis, as it is called, or form of speech, by which, through a vehement affection, the prophet suddenly breaks off his discourse, is remarkably beautiful and expressive.

CHAPTER XIV.

It is probable that the prophecy contained in this and the following chapter was delivered not long after the foregoing, namely, in the beginning of Jehoiakim's reign, since the subject matter of it seems to agree well with this season. (1.) The prophet foretels great distress that should be caused in Judah by a long drought, 1-6. (2.) In the name of the people he makes a confession of sins, and supplicates the divine mercy, 7-9. (3.) God will not be entreated, but declares his resolution to punish, 10-12. (4.) Jeremiah complains of false prophets, who amused the people with contrary predictions; but whom God disclaims, threatening both them, and the people who listened to them, with sword and famine, 13-18. The prophet renews his supplications in the people's name and behalf, 19-22.

A. M. 3403. THE word of the LORD that came to
B. C. 601. Jeremiah concerning ¹ the dearth.

¹ Heb. the words of the dearths, or, restraint.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XIV.

Verse 1. The word of the Lord concerning the dearth—Hebrew, על דברי הכצרות, respecting the matters of the restraints, that is, the drought, when the showers were restrained, or, as Moses and Solo-

2 Judah mourneth, and ^a the gates thereof languish; they are ^b black. A. M. 3403.
B. C. 601.

^a Isa. iii. 26.—^b Chap. viii. 21.

mon express it, when the heaven was shut up, and there was no rain. See Deut. xi. 17; 1 Kings vii. 35. Thus the LXX., περι της αποχίας, concerning the want of rain. So also the Chaldee and Syriac versions: and thus our translators understand the (25*)

A. M. 3403. unto the ground; and ^c the cry of
B. C. 601. Jerusalem is gone up.

3 And their nobles have sent their little ones to the waters: they came to the pits, and found no water; they returned with their vessels empty; they were ^dashamed and confounded, ^eand covered their heads.

4 Because the ground is chapt, for there was no rain in the earth, the ploughmen were ashamed, they covered their heads.

5 Yea, the hind also calved in the field, and forsook it, because there was no grass.

^c 1 Sam. v. 12.—^d Psa. xl. 14.—^e 2 Sam. xv. 30.

word, chap. xvii. 8, rendering it; not dearth, as here, but drought: a calamity which, however, produced a dearth or famine, similar, it seems, to that in the time of Elijah. At what precise time this great drought took place, we are not informed in the records of history: nor whether it be the same with that of which an intimation is given chap. iii. 3, where see the note. That it was a calamity very incident to the land of Israel, and applied as a punishment of sin, appears from many parts of the Old Testament. The effects of it are described in the next five verses in very elegant and moving language, and afterward earnestly deprecated.

Verse 2. Judah mourneth—The people of Judah and Jerusalem, here considered collectively, and represented as a mother oppressed with grief for the miseries which have come upon her children. And the gates languish; they are black—"They are in deep mourning:" so Blaney, who observes, "The gates of cities, being places of public resort, where the courts of justice were held, and other common business transacted, seem here to be put for the persons wont to meet there; in like manner as when we say, 'The court is in mourning,' we mean the persons that attend the court. So that by this passage we are to understand, that all the persons who appeared in public were dejected, and put on black, or mourning, on account of the national distress." And the cry of Jerusalem is gone up—Namely, to heaven: That is, the cry of the inhabitants of Jerusalem; of their sin and trouble, but not, as it seems, of their confessions, prayers, and supplications.

Verses 3-6. And their nobles, &c.—This scarcity of water afflicted not poor persons only, who had not such means of supplying their necessities as the rich; but the greatest among them, who sent their little ones, (or inferiors, as צעיריהם, seems here rather to signify, to the places made to receive and retain water; who, finding none, returned with their vessels empty, like persons ashamed, and troubled upon seeing their expectations frustrated. Jerusalem, it must be observed, was supplied with water by two lakes, or pools, termed the upper pool, and the lower pool; Isa. vii. 3; and xxij. 9; from which the water was conveyed by pipes or conduits, for the use of the city. Because the ground is chapt—

6 And ^f the wild asses did stand in ^{A. M. 3403} the high places, they snuffed up the ^{B. C. 601.}
wind like dragons; their eyes did fail, because there was no grass.

7 ¶ O LORD, though our iniquities testify against us, do thou it ^g for thy name's sake: for our backslidings are many; we have sinned against thee.

8 ^h O the hope of Israel, the Saviour thereof in time of trouble, why shouldest thou be as a stranger in the land, and as a wayfaring man that turneth aside to tarry for a night?

^f Chap. ii. 24.—^g Psa. xxv. 11.—^h Chap. xvii. 13.

Hebrew, חרה, broken, bruised, turned into dust. The ploughmen—The husbandmen, as אכרי, properly signifies; were ashamed—Disappointed in their hopes of reaping fruit from their labours. They covered their heads—An expression of great affliction and mourning. The hind also calved and forsook it—The hinds are loving creatures, and as all creatures, by a natural instinct, love their young, so the hinds especially; but their moisture being dried up, they had not milk for them, but were forced to leave them, and to run hither and thither to seek grass to eat. And the wild asses, &c.—The wild asses, wanting water, got upon the high places, or cliffs, where the air was cooler and its current stronger than in lower places, and their sucked in the wind; and this, it is said, they did like dragons, which are reputed to delight in cool places, and are said by Aristotle and Pliny to stand frequently upon high places imbibing the cool air. Their eyes did fail, &c.—They languished, or pined away for want of food; in which case the natural splendour of the eyes, which is very great in wild asses, grows dull or languid.

Verse 7. O Lord, &c.—The prophet, having described their misery both in its cause, the drought, and the effects produced thereby, here applies himself to God, who alone could remove it, confessing that their many and great sins and backslidings had well deserved to be thus severely scourged. Though our iniquities testify against us—That thou art righteous in what thou hast done, and make it evident that we have merited the most dreadful judgments thy wrath can inflict; yet do thou it—Do thou what we stand in need of; give us rain, though not for our sake; we deserve no such kindness from thee, yet for thy name's sake; for the sake of thy word and promise, by which thou engagest to hear the prayers of thy people in their distress, Psa. l. 15, and for thine honour and glory.

Verses 8, 9. O the hope of Israel—That is, the object of Israel's hope; the Being in whom alone thy people Israel have been wont to hope, or in whom they have just reason to hope; the Saviour thereof in time of trouble—Who hast formerly been their Saviour in their distresses, and who alone canst save them in such times of trouble as thou hast now

A. M. 3403. 9 Why shouldest thou be as a man astonished, as a mighty man ¹that cannot save? yet thou, O LORD, ²art in the midst of us, and ³we are called by thy name; leave us not.
B. C. 601.

10 ¶ Thus saith the LORD unto this people, ¹Thus have they loved to wander, they have not refrained their feet, therefore the LORD doth not accept them; ²he will now remember their iniquity, and visit their sins.

11 Then said the LORD unto me, ¹Pray not for this people for their good.

12 ° When they fast, I will not hear their cry; and, ²when they offer burnt-offering and an oblation, I will not accept them; but ³I will consume them by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence.

13 ¶ ¹Then said I, Ah, Lord God! behold, the prophets say unto them, Ye shall not see the sword, neither shall ye have famine; but I will give you ³assured peace in this place.

14 Then the LORD said unto me, ¹The prophets prophesy lies in my name: ²I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, A. M. 3403.

B. C. 601. neither spake unto them: they prophesy unto you a false vision and divination, and a thing of naught, and the deceit of their heart.

15 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning the prophets that prophesy in my name, and I sent them not, ²yet they say, Sword and famine shall not be in this land; By sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed.

16 And the people to whom they prophesy shall be cast out in the streets of Jerusalem, because of the famine, and the sword; ²and they shall have none to bury them, them, their wives, nor their sons, nor their daughters: for I will pour their wickedness upon them.

17 ¶ Therefore thou shalt say this word unto them; ¹Let mine eyes run down with tears night and day, and let them not cease: ²for the virgin daughter of my people is broken with a great breach, with a very grievous blow.

18 If I go forth into ¹the field, then behold the slain with the sword! and if I enter into brought them into; why shouldest thou be as a stranger in the land?—That is, as one who, having no permanent interest in the land, is little concerned for its welfare; and as a wayfaring man, &c.—As a traveller who enters a place to stay only for a night, and never inquires, nor takes any care about the affairs of it. Why shouldest thou be as a man astonished—“As a man void of counsel,” so Houbigant. Or as one in such disorder, through some great emotion of mind, that he is able to do nothing. As a mighty man, &c.—As a mere man, who, though mighty, yet in many cases cannot save; or who, through some fear or surprise, is incapacitated to make use of his strength. Yet thou, O Lord, art in the midst of us—Of the whole land, according to thy declaration, Num. xxxv. 34, I the Lord dwell among the children of Israel.

¹ Isaiah lix. 1.—² Exodus xxix. 45, 46; Levit. xxvi. 11, 12. ³ Heb. thy name is called upon us, Dan. ix. 18, 19.—¹ Chap. ii. 23, 24, 25.—² Hosea viii. 13; ix. 9.—³ Exodus xxxii. 10; Chap. vii. 16; xi. 14.—⁴ Prov. i. 28; Isa. i. 15; lviii. 3; Chap. xi. 11; Ezek. viii. 18; Mic. iii. 4; Zech. vii. 13.

⁵ Chap. vi. 20; vii. 21, 22.—⁶ Chap. ix. 16.—⁷ Chap. iv. 10. ⁸ Heb. peace of truth.—⁹ Chap. xxvii. 10.—¹⁰ Chap. xxiii. 21; xxvii. 16; xxix. 8.—¹¹ Chapter v. 12, 13.—¹² Psalm lxxix. 3. ¹³ Chap. ix. 1; xiii. 17; Lam. i. 16; ii. 18.—¹⁴ Chap. viii. 21. ¹⁵ Ezek. vii. 15.

Verses 10–12. Thus saith the Lord, &c.—Here God returns an answer to the complaints and expostulations of the prophet, contained in the eight preceding verses. They have loved to wander—They have been fond of their idols; and despising the divine succour, have run after that of strangers, and they have persisted in their sinful courses, notwithstanding all counsels. Therefore the Lord doth not accept them—He will not accept their own prayers or humiliations, nor thine intercessions on their behalf, but will punish them according to their deserts. When they fast, I will not hear—It is likely a public fast had been appointed upon occasion of this drought, as there was in a like case in the Prophet Joel's time. But I will consume them by the sword, famine, and pestilence—Thus God threatens to add to the drought three sore judgments, ordinarily accompanying one another, both in God's threatenings and in the execution of them.

Verses 13–16. Ah, Lord God! Behold the prophets, &c.—See note on chap. iv. 10. Thus saith the Lord—And what he saith he will assuredly make good; By the sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed—They shall fall first by those very judgments, with the hopes of an exemption from which they have flattered others. And the people shall be cast out in the streets, &c.—The people contributed to their own delusions, and readily hearkened to such false prophets as confirmed them in their evil ways: God therefore justly threatens to punish them, because they were unwilling to know the truth.

Verses 17, 18. Therefore thou shalt say this word unto them—Either, 1st, The word spoken above; the threatenings denounced in the last two verses against the false prophets and the people, the deceivers and the deceived: or, 2d, As the passage is generally interpreted, and as our translators have understood it, the words following, namely, the prophet's lamentation and prayer. Let mine eyes run down with tears—As if he had said, However insensible you are

A. M. 3403. the city, then behold them that are sick with famine! yea, both the prophet and the priest ⁴go about into a land that they know not.
B. C. 601.

19 ^bHast thou utterly rejected Judah? hath thy soul loathed Zion? Why hast thou smitten us, and ^cthere is no healing for us? ^dwe looked for peace, and there is no good; and for the time of healing, and behold trouble!

20 We acknowledge, O LORD, our wickedness,

^a Or, make merchandise against a land, and men acknowledge it not, Chap. v. 13.—^b Lam. v. 22.—^c Chap. xv. 18.—^d Chap. viii. 15.

of your own condition, yet God commands me to bewail those calamities which I foresee are coming upon you. For the virgin daughter of my people—That is as dear to me as a daughter to her father; is broken with a great breach—Much greater than any she has yet sustained. The dissolution of a government, or body politic, is called a breach, by way of allusion to the breaking or disjoining the limbs of a human body. The prophet speaks as if he already saw the miseries attending the invasion of the country by the Chaldeans. If I go forth into the field, &c.—Multitudes lie dead in the field, slain with the sword; and in the city multitudes lie dying for want of food: doleful spectacle! Yea both the prophet and the priest—Namely, the false prophets, who flattered the people with their lies, and the wicked priests, who persecuted the true prophets, are now expelled their country, and go about into a land they know not—Either as prisoners and captives, whithersoever their conquerors lead them; or, as fugitives and vagabonds, wherever they can find shelter. Some understand it of the true prophets, Ezekiel and Daniel, who were carried to Babylon with the rest. But as the Hebrew word here used, כָּחָר, properly signifies, to go about on account of traffic, or, merchandise, the sense of the clause may be, “The prophet and the priest carry on a trade against the land, and acknowledge it not.” That is, they deceive the people with lying divinations for the sake of gain, and when accused of it, will not own their guilt. Blaney renders it, They go trafficking about the city, meaning, “They go about with their false doctrine and lying predictions, as pedlers do with their wares, seeking their own gain,” and take no knowledge—That is, “pay no regard to the miseries in which their country is involved, but act as if they were totally insensible of them.”

Verses 19–22. Hast thou utterly rejected Judah?—The prophet again returns to God, and expostulates with him, humbly imploring mercy for his people, which shows that he did not understand God's words to him, (verse 11,) as an absolute prohibition to pray for them. Hath thy soul loathed Zion?—Which was formerly thy delight, and the place thou didst choose for thy special residence. Why hast thou smitten, &c.—That is, So smitten that there is and the iniquity of our fathers: for A. M. 3403.

^e we have sinned against thee. B. C. 601.

21 Do not abhor us; for thy name's sake, do not disgrace the throne of thy glory; ^fremember, break not thy covenant with us.

22 ^gAre there any among ^hthe vanities of the Gentiles that can cause rain? or can the heavens give showers? ⁱArt not thou he, O LORD our God? therefore we will wait upon thee: for thou hast made all these things.

^e Psalm cvi. 6; Dan. ix. 8.—^f Psalm lxxiv. 2, 20; cvi. 45.
^g Zech. x. 1, 2.—^h Deut. xxxii. 21.—ⁱ Psa. cxxxv. 7; cxlviii. 8; Isa. xxx. 23; Chap. v. 24; x. 13.

no healing—Wounded us past recovery; none else can, and thou wilt not heal us. We looked for peace, &c.—All our hopes and expectations have been frustrated. We acknowledge our wickedness—The accumulated guilt of our land; and the iniquity of our fathers—Which we have imitated, and therefore are justly punished for it. We do not cover our sin, in which case we know we should not obtain mercy; we confess it, and hope to find thee faithful and just in forgiving it. Do not abhor us—Hebrew, שֶׁל תִּבְזֶה, do not despise, or reject us. What he deprecates is the judgments come already, and further coming on the people, the famine, sword, and pestilence, with the drought, under the sad effects of which they at present laboured; and he prays for their removal or prevention in these words, in which he implies, that the love of God to a people is the source of all the good which they can expect, and his wrath the source of all evil that can befall them. To enforce his petition he pleads, 1st, God's honour: For thy name's sake—That name of thine on which we call, and by which we are called; thy nature and attributes; let not these suffer an eclipse; let it not be said or thought by the heathen that thou art either unable or unwilling to protect and save thy people. Do not disgrace the throne of thy glory—The temple, with the ark in it, the especial symbol of thy presence, termed (chap. xvii. 12,) a glorious high throne from the beginning. Let not the desolations of it give occasion to idolaters to reproach him that used to be worshipped there, as if he wanted power or inclination to protect it; or, as if the gods of Babylon had been too strong for him. 2d, He pleads God's promise and covenant with Israel: Remember, break not thy covenant with us—“Thou hast promised to be our God, and that we should be thy people, chap. xi. 4; that is, That thou wouldst take us under thy protection. We have indeed forfeited all our title to thy promises by our sins, yet we beseech thee still to remember the relation we bear to thee.” Are there any among the vanities of the Gentiles—The vain idols, the imaginary beings, which have no existence save in the fancies of their worshippers, or the gods made by men's hands; that can give rain? or can the heavens give showers?—Without thy providence. Are showers purely owing to natural causes? Dost thou not direct when and where they shall fall? The giving rain in its season is an argument for God's providence, often insisted upon in the Scriptures: see note on chap. v. 24. And the prophet, imploring from God a removal of the drought, argues from the impossibility of obtaining relief in any other way, neither the heathen idols, nor the clouds, without God's will, being able to give rain. *Art not thou he, O Lord our God?—Namely, that givest it. Therefore we will wait upon thee—*For this blessing, and for the supply of all our other wants.

CHAPTER XV.

In this chapter, (1.) God replies to the preceding supplications, by declaring that not even the intercession of his favoured servants, Moses and Samuel, should divert him from executing his purpose of vengeance against Judah; which is denounced in terms of great severity, 1-9. (2.) Jeremiah complains to God of his continued struggle with his persecutors, and is assured of special protection while his enemies should be ruined, 10-14. (3.) He complains that notwithstanding his sincerity, fidelity, and diligence, in the discharge of his prophetic office, and his delight in God's word and will, he had very little comfort in his work, 15-18. (4.) Assurances of protection, security, and aid in the discharge of his office are renewed to him, on condition of obedience and fidelity on his part, 19-21.

A. M. 3403. THEN said the LORD unto me,
B. C. 601.

^a Though ^b Moses and ^c Samuel stood before me, yet my mind could not be toward this people: cast them out of my sight, and let them go forth.

2 And it shall come to pass, if they say unto thee, Whither shall we go forth? then thou shalt tell them, Thus saith the LORD; ^d Such as are for death, to death; and such as are for the sword, to the sword; and such as are for the famine, to the famine; and such as are for the captivity, to the captivity.

^a Ezekiel xiv. 14.—^b Exodus xxxii. 11, 12; Psalm xcix. 6. ^c 1 Samuel vii. 9.—^d Chapter xlii. 11; Ezek. v. 3, 12; Zech. xi. 9.—^e Lev. xxvi. 16.—^f Heb. families.—^g Chap. vii. 33; Deut. xxviii. 26.

3 And I will ^e appoint over them ^{A. M. 3403.} four ¹ kinds, saith the LORD: the ^{B. C. 601.}

sword to slay, and the dogs to tear, and ^f the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the earth, to devour and destroy.

4 And ² I will cause them to be ^g removed into all kingdoms of the earth, because of ^b Manasseh the son of Hezekiah king of Judah, for that which he did in Jerusalem.

5 For ⁱ who shall have pity upon thee, O Jerusalem? or who shall bemoan thee? or who shall go aside ³ to ask how thou doest?

² Heb. I will give them for a removing.—³ Deut. xxviii. 25; Chapter xxiv. 9; Ezekiel xxiii. 46.—⁴ 2 Kings xxi. 11, &c.; xxiii. 26; xxiv. 3, 4.—⁵ Isaiah li. 19.—⁶ Hebrew, to ask of thy peace.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XV.

Verse 1. Then said the Lord unto me, &c.—This is the Lord's answer to the fervent prayers of Jeremiah, contained in the last four verses of the preceding chapter. Though Moses and Samuel stood before me—By prayer or sacrifice to reconcile me to them; yet my mind could not be toward this people—Yet I could not be prevailed with to admit them into favour. "As God had forbidden Jeremiah before to intercede for them, because it would be to no purpose; so here he declares, that he would not admit the prayers of any others, though eminent favourites, in their behalf. Moses obtained pardon for the people after their sin in making the golden calf, Ex. xxxii. 34; and again, after their despising the promised land, Num. xiv. 20. Samuel's intercession prevailed for their deliverance out of the hands of the Philistines, 1 Sam. vii. 9. And these two persons are mentioned together, as remarkably prevalent by their prayers, Psal. xcix. 6, 8. But here God says, that if these very persons were alive, and in that near attendance to him which they formerly enjoyed, (for that is the import of the phrase, To stand before him,) yet even their prayers should not avert his judgments from this people."—Lowth. Cast them out of my sight—Declare that they shall be cast out, as that which is in the highest degree odious and offensive; or tell them to come no more to me with their supplications, but to go out of my sanctuary. A strong declaration of determined displeasure. Thus the Lord dismisses them with a severity whereof we have few examples in Scripture. See Ezek. xiv. 14, 16.

Verses 2-5. If they say unto thee, Whither shall we go forth?—If they ask thee what thou meanest by going forth, and whither they shall go: thou shalt tell them, Such as are for death to death, &c.—In general, You shall go forth, saith God, to ruin and destruction; but shall not be all destroyed in one and the same way, but every one shall perish in that way which God hath appointed: some shall be destroyed by the pestilence, (for that is here to be understood by death, Rev. vi. 8, it being death without visible means,) others shall be destroyed by famine, others by the sword of the enemy, others shall go into captivity; but one way or other the greatest part of you shall be consumed. And I will appoint over them four kinds—Namely, of destroyers. The

A. M. 3403. B. C. 601. 6 ^k Thou hast forsaken me, saith the LORD, thou art ^l gone backward: therefore will I stretch out my hand against thee, and destroy thee; ^m I am weary with repenting.

7 And I will fan them with a fan in the gates of the land; I will bereave them of ⁿ children, ^k Chapter ii. 13.—^l Chap. vii. 24.—^m Hos. xiii. 14.—ⁿ Or, whatsoever is dear.—^o Isa. ix. 13; Chap. v. 3; Amos iv. 10, 11.

sword to slay—And those that are slain by it shall not enjoy the common rites of burial, but their carcasses shall be left a prey to the dogs, the birds, and the wild beasts, which last shall both tear their living bodies and their dead carcasses. And I will cause them to be removed into all kingdoms, &c.—Though the body of the people were removed into Babylon, yet it is more than probable that many of them became voluntary exiles to avoid the miseries which they saw coming upon their country. And, without doubt, the king of Babylon removed them into several kingdoms belonging to his large empire. These, it must be observed, are the very words of Moses, (Deut. xxviii. 25,) where he threatens the Israelites with a general dispersion over the world, which threatening received its completion, in part, by the Babylonish captivity, but more perfectly after the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans. Because of Manasseh—In idolatry and other abominations he exceeded all the kings that preceded him: see 2 Kings xxi. 7–11. In his time the public worship of God was wholly suppressed, and idolatry introduced into the very temple; the law of God was likewise quite laid aside, and, in a manner, forgotten, as appears by the surprise Hilkiah was in when he found the original copy of the law in the house of the Lord. So that his sins filled up the measure of the Jews' iniquities; and therefore, notwithstanding the reformation wrought afterward by Josiah, the Lord turned not from the fierceness of his wrath kindled against Judah: see 2 Kings xxiii. 26, and xxiv. 3, 4. It must be observed, however, that it was not merely for his sins, or the sins of his times, that God so dreadfully punished the Jews in the days of Jehoiakim and Zedekiah; but it was also, and especially because they imitated the wicked example which Manasseh had set them, the reformation effected by Josiah being only partial, and of not long continuance. For who shall, or, who will, have pity upon thee, O Jerusalem—Thy sins render thee unworthy of pity, and all that see the calamities brought upon thee will acknowledge them to be just. Who will go aside, &c.—Who will be so much concerned for thee as to step a little out of his way to inquire after thee; a common instance of respect between persons in any degree acquainted. Rather they that pass by will insult over thy calamities.

Verses 6, 7. Thou hast forsaken me, thou art gone backward—God here, by more expressions of the same import with many that we have before met with, declares his steady resolution to destroy them for their apostacy from him; and represents him-

I will destroy my people, since ^a they return 'not from their ways.

8 Their widows are increased to me above the sand of the seas: I have brought upon them ^b against the mother of the young men a spoiler at noon-day: I have caused him to fall upon it suddenly, and terrors upon the city.

^b Or, against the mother city a young man spoiling, &c., or, against the mother and the young men.

self as an angry prince or parent, that had frequently been provoked by a subject or child whom he had often resolved to punish, but out of his clemency, or upon the mediation of others, had altered his mind, and resolved to spare him; but afterward had met with so many fresh provocations that his patience was quite tired out, and he was determined to bear no longer. I will fan them with a fan—Not a purging fan, to separate the chaff from them, but a scattering fan, to disperse and scatter them to all the winds, as Ezekiel expresses it, Ezek. v. 12. In the gates of the land—He alludes to a man standing in the gate of his thrashing-floor to fan and cleanse his corn. I will deprive them of children—The words, of children, are not in the Hebrew, and are unnecessarily supplied: it may as well be of any, or all their comforts and good things. I will destroy my people—The privilege they claim of being my people shall not protect them while they go on in their sinful courses.

Verse 8. Their widows are increased above the sand of the seas—A hyperbolical expression. The prophet still speaks of things to come as if present. In Jehoiakim's time we read of no great number of widows, but they were exceedingly multiplied when the city was besieged and taken in Zedekiah's time. I have brought upon them against the mother, &c.—Blaney renders this and the next clause, I have brought against their mother a chosen one, spoiling at noon-day; I have caused to fall upon her suddenly an enemy and terrors. By the mother here we are to understand Jerusalem, the mother-city, as she is termed in the margin, against which Nebuchadnezzar, the spoiler, was sent, and who came, not secretly, as a thief by night, but openly, with an army at noon-day. "Nebuchadnezzar might be called a chosen one," says Blaney, "as being selected by God to be the instrument and executioner of his vengeance. In the margin of our Bibles, בחר is rendered a young man; and this also would very properly characterize the same person." For Josephus (Contrà Apion, lib. i.) cites from Berosus, the Chaldean historian, a passage to the following purport: that 'Nabopolassar, king of Babylon, hearing that the provinces of Egypt, Cælo-Syria, and Phœnice had revolted, and being himself infirm through age, sent a part of his forces under his son Nebuchadnezzar, then in the prime of youth, οὐτις ἐτι ἐν ἡλικίᾳ, by whom those provinces were again reduced.' This was the expedition said to have been undertaken by him in the third year of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, in the course of which, after having

A. M. 3403. 9 ° She that hath borne seven lan-B. C. 601. guisheth: she hath given up the ghost; ¹her sun is gone down while it was yet day: she hath been ashamed and confounded: and the residue of them will I deliver to the sword before their enemies, saith
the LORD.

10 ¶ ¹Wo is me, my mother, that thou hast borne me a man of strife and a man of contention to the whole earth! I have neither lent on usury; nor men have lent to me on usury;

° 1 Sam. ii. 5. — ° Amos viii. 9. — ° Job iii. 1, &c.; Chapter xx. 14.

first defeated the Egyptian army at Carchemish, he laid siege to Jerusalem, took and plundered it, carrying away much spoil and many captives to Babylon." See chap. xli. 2; Dan. i. 1-3; 2 Kings xxiv. 1.

Verse 9. She that hath borne seven languisheth—Seven is put for many, (see 1 Sam. ii. 5,) and the multitude of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the mother-city, is here alluded to; the prophet pursuing the metaphor of the former verse, and describing the mother-city under the figure of a woman that had been fruitful, but was now become feeble, and bore no children. He means that the people of Judah, which had been very numerous, were now greatly diminished. Her sun is gone down while it was yet day—In the midst of her prosperity she is reduced to this state of misery, being of a sudden overwhelmed with the greatest calamities, when she might have expected a long continuance of happiness. The expression is extremely strong, and denotes a sudden change from the highest dignity to the lowest abasement. She hath been ashamed and confounded—The judgments of God oppressed and confounded a part of the Jews before their captivity. And the residue of them—The remainder of them, saith God, shall be destroyed by the sword of the enemy.

Verses 10, 11. Wo is me, my mother—The prophet here complains of the opposition he met with from his countrymen for speaking unwelcome truths. Thou hast borne me a man of contention to the whole earth—Or, whole land, rather. I am the object of common hatred; every body takes occasion to quarrel with me, because I speak truths which they do not like to hear. I have neither lent upon usury, &c.—"The Jews were forbidden to take usury of their brethren, (Deut. xxiii. 19,) especially of the poor, (Exod. xxii. 25,) which was thought so great an oppression that it made the man who was guilty of it hated and cursed by every one. The prophet says that he had never done this, and yet every body was his enemy, only for delivering those messages which he had received from God." The Lord said, Verily it shall be well with thy remnant—The latter words of this verse expound the former: for by שְׁאִית, remnant, or residue, is meant the remnant of days that Jeremiah had to live. Verily, yet every one of them doth curse me. A. M. 3403.

B. C. 601. 11 The LORD said, Verily it shall be well with thy remnant; verily ° I will cause the enemy to entreat thee well in the time of evil and in the time of affliction.

12 Shall iron break the northern iron and the steel?

13 Thy substance and thy treasures will I give to the ° spoil without price, and that for all thy sins, even in all thy borders.

14 And I will make thee to pass with thine

° Or, I will entreat the enemy for thee.—° Chap. xxxix. 11, 12; xl. 4, 5. — ° Psa. xlv. 12; Chap. xvii. 3.

I will cause the enemy to entreat thee well—I will by my providence so order it that how cruelly and severely soever the enemy may deal with thy countrymen, yet they shall use thee kindly when they shall take the city. This was accordingly fulfilled: the Chaldeans, when they took Jerusalem, and carried the inhabitants of the land into captivity, treated Jeremiah with great kindness, giving him his choice to go where he pleased, and bestowing gifts upon him, as we read chap. xxxix. 11, and xl. 3, 4.

Verse 12. Shall iron break the northern iron?—The northern iron is the hardest of any. "It is here," says Blaney, "justly supposed to denote, in a primary sense, that species of hardened iron, or steel, called in Greek χαλύβη, from the Chalybes, a people bordering on the Euxine sea, and consequently lying to the north of Judea, by whom the art of tempering steel is said to have been discovered. Strabo speaks of this people as known in former times by the name of Chalybes, but afterward called Chaldæi, and mentions their iron mines, lib. xii. p. 549. These, however, were a different people from the Chaldeans who were united with the Babylonians." "The words, if applied to Jeremiah, import thus much, that, as common iron cannot contend for hardness with the northern iron, or with steel, so the opposition which the Jews made against him should be easily vanquished and disappointed, because the Lord was with him to save him, verse 20. If the words relate to the Jews, as the following verses plainly do, the sense is, that the Chaldeans coming from the north would be as much too hard for them to engage with, as the northern iron was superior in strength to the common metal of that kind."—Lowth. But perhaps the expression is not merely metaphorical: it is not unlikely that the Babylonians had their armour from the Chalybes, and that therefore it was made of iron much harder, and of much better proof, than that of which the armour of the Jews was formed.

Verses 13, 14. Here God turns his speech from the prophet to the people. Thy substance and thy treasures will I give to the spoil—All thy riches and precious things shall be spoiled: there shall be no price taken for the redemption of them. For all thy sins in all thy borders—All parts of the country, even those which lay most remote, had contri-

A. M. 3403. enemies ^t into a land which, thou knowest not: for a ^u fire is kindled in mine anger, which shall burn upon you.
B. C. 601.

15 ¶ O LORD, ^x thou knowest: remember me, and visit me, and ^y revenge me of my persecutors; take me not away in thy long-suffering: know that ^z for thy sake I have suffered rebuke.

^t Chap. xvi. 13; xvii. 4.—^u Deut. xxxii. 22.—^x Chap. xii. 3.—^y Chap. xi. 20; xx. 12.—^z Psa. lxi. 7.—^a Ezek. iii. 1, 3; Rev. x. 9, 10.

buted to the national guilt, and all shall be brought to account. And I will make thee to pass with thine enemies, &c.—They shall stay in their own country till they see their estates and all their property ruined, and then they shall be carried into captivity, to spend the remains of a miserable life in slavery. And all this is the fruit of God's wrath; for a fire, says he, is kindled in mine anger, which shall burn upon you—And, if not extinguished in time, will burn to eternity.

Verses 15, 16. O Lord, thou knowest—Thou knowest my sincerity, how faithfully I have declared thy will: or, thou knowest my sufferings, how wickedly my enemies act toward me. It is matter of comfort to us, that, whatever befalls us, we have a God to go to, before whom we may spread our case, and to whose omniscience we may appeal, as the prophet here does. Remember me, and visit me—Think upon me for good, and visit me with thy love, while this people are visited with thy wrath. Revenge me—Or, rather, Vindicate me, from my persecutors, as the Hebrew, הוֹקֵם לִי מִכָּרְפִי, may be properly rendered: give judgment against them, and let that judgment be executed so far as is necessary for my vindication, and to compel them to acknowledge that they have done me wrong: see note on chap. xi. 20. Take me not away in thy long-suffering—While thou exercise long-suffering toward my persecutors, and forbear to vindicate my cause and defend me, let them not prevail to take away my life. Or, as some understand his words, Though I am a sinner, and deserve to be punished as such among the Jews, yet exercise toward me patience and long-suffering, and let me not be taken away into captivity. Know that for thy sake I have suffered rebuke—Lord, remember that my reproach, and all that I suffer, is for thy sake, because I have faithfully declared thy truth, and defended thy honour and glory. Thy words were found, and I did eat them—The words which, from time to time, thou didst reveal to me, were by me readily received, meditated upon, and inwardly digested. And thy word was unto me the joy, &c., of my heart—That is, either, 1st, Though some of thy words were very dreadful, and foretold the ruin of my country, which is very dear to me, and in the ruin of which I cannot but have a deep share, yet, because they proceeded from thee, I was glad to hear them, and be thy instrument to communicate them to thy peo-

16 Thy words were found, and I did ^a eat them; and ^b thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of my heart: for ^c I am called by thy name, O LORD God of hosts.

17 ^e I sat not in the assembly of the mockers, nor rejoiced; I sat alone because of thy hand: for thou hast filled me with indignation.

18 Why is my ^d pain perpetual, and my wound

^b Job-xxiii. 12; Psalm cxix. 72, 111.—^c Hebrew, thy name is called upon me.—^e Psalm i. 1; xxvi. 4, 5.—^d Chapter xxx. 15.

ple, all my natural affections being swallowed up in zeal for thy glory. Or, 2d, Thy word of commission, by which I was made thy prophet, was at first very grateful and pleasing to me; and I was glad when thou didst, at any time, reveal thy will to me, and authorize and enjoin me to make it known to the people. For though the execution of this office was not attended with any secular advantages, but, on the contrary, exposed me to contempt and persecution; yet, because I was thereby serving and glorifying thee, and doing good, I was glad to be so employed, and it was my meat and drink to do thy will. For I am called by thy name, O Lord God of hosts—I became a prophet by thy authority, and am thy messenger, and thou, the Lord of hosts, art able to protect me.

Verses 17, 18. I sat not in the assembly of the mockers—Or, of those that make merry, as מְשַׁחֲקִים is elsewhere rendered: see chap. xxx. 19, and xxxi. 4. Jeremiah soon found that the joy which he had conceived in being called to the prophetic office, and favoured with extraordinary communications from God, was turned into heaviness, God continually filling his mouth with dreadful messages, and his prophecies containing nothing but terrible denunciations of wrath against a sinful people. Hence his whole prophetic life was to him a time of sorrow and solitude, a time when he sat alone mourning and weeping, in secret, for the indignation of God, revealed to him against his people; nor rejoiced—I did not, with the deriders and scorers of thy word, give a loose to joy and mirth at a time when thy severe judgments were denounced, and when the most dreadful calamities hung over the country. Because of thy hand—God's hand may be understood of his judgments, which, being denounced by the prophet, might be resembled to a hand stretched out, and just ready to strike; or else of the prophetic impulse which was strong upon Jeremiah, and, in a manner, forced him to be the messenger of evil tidings. God's judgments, as they were represented to the prophets, often raised such dreadful ideas in their minds as affected them in an extraordinary manner, especially if their threatenings concerned their own country, or the church of God. Why is my pain perpetual, &c.—These seem evidently to be the words of Jeremiah, complaining of the hard task which God had put upon him, continually filling his mouth with such bitter words of evil against the people as ex-

A. M. 3403. incurable, which refuseth to be healed? wilt thou be altogether unto me ^{as a liar, and ^f as waters that ^s fail?}

19 ¶ Therefore thus saith the LORD, ⁸ If thou return, then will I bring thee again, and thou shalt ^h stand before me: and if thou ⁱ take forth the precious from the vile, thou shalt be as my mouth: let them return unto thee; but return not thou unto them.

^a Chapter i. 18, 19.—^f Job vi. 15, &c.—⁸ Heb. be not sure.
^g Zech. iii. 7.

20 And I will make thee unto this ^{A. M. 3403.} people ^{B. C. 601.} a fenced brazen ^k wall: and they shall fight against thee, but ^l they shall not prevail against thee: for I am with thee to save thee and to deliver thee, saith the LORD.

21 And I will deliver thee out of the hand of the wicked, and I will redeem thee out of the hand of the terrible.

^h Verse l.—ⁱ Ezek. xxii. 26; xlv. 23.—^k Chap. i. 18; vi. 27.
^l Chap. xx. 11, 12.

posed him to their most implacable rage, so that his misery seemed like an incurable wound, attended with excruciating pain, for which there was no remedy but patience. Wilt thou be altogether to me as a liar, and waters that fail?—No, I know thou wilt not. God is not a man that he should lie. The fountain of life will never be to his people as waters that fail. The sense is, “Thou hast promised to be my defence against mine enemies; and wilt thou altogether deceive me? like little brooks, which are dried up in summer, when they are most wanted, and so disappoint the thirsty traveller: see Job vi. 15. The prophet here sets down the perplexities he laboured under, by reason of the opposition he continually met with from ungodly men, in the execution of his office; just as the psalmist relates the misgivings of his mind when he was under great troubles and temptations. But then presently he checks such thoughts, calls to mind God’s gracious promises, and encourages himself to rely upon him. And the like encouragements are recorded in the following verses of this chapter.”—Lowth.

Verses 19–21. Therefore thus saith the Lord—In these verses we have God’s gracious answer to the preceding expostulation. Though the prophet betrayed much human frailty in his address, yet God vouchsafed to answer him with good and comfortable words, for he knows our frame. If thou return—Namely, from thy diffidence and distrust in my providence and promises; then will I bring thee

again, and thou shalt stand before me—I will restore thee to the former favour thou hadst with me, and thou shalt be my prophet; to reveal my mind to the people. And if thou take the precious from the vile—If thou separate the precious truths of God from the vile fancies of men; or rather, if thou preach so as to distinguish good and bad men from each other, encouraging the good, and reproving the wicked, then I will continue thee as my prophet, to speak in my name; and thou wilt answer the character of a true prophet, whose office it is to utter the words that God puts into his mouth, without adding thereto, or diminishing from them. Let them return unto thee, &c.—He here charges the prophet to keep his ground, and not to go over to wicked men; but to use his endeavour to reduce them to that obedience which he yielded to God. And I will make thee unto this people a fenced wall—Which the storm batters and beats violently upon, but cannot shake; and they shall fight against thee—They will still continue their opposition; but they shall not prevail—Namely, to drive thee from off thy work, or to cut thee off from the land of the living. For I am with thee to save thee—And I have wisdom and power enough to deal with the most formidable enemy. I will deliver thee out of the hand of the wicked—The wicked Jews; and out of the hand of the terrible—The power of the terrible Chaldeans, into whose hands thou shalt come, but shalt be preserved from any harm by the workings of my providence in thy favour.

CHAPTER XVI.

The prophecy which begins here is continued to the end of the 18th verse of the next chapter. Nor is there any reason to suspect its being out of its proper place, but that it was delivered, as well as those of the preceding chapters, toward the beginning of Jehoiakim’s evil reign. (1.) The prophet is forbidden to marry or beget children, because of the judgments that were about to fall upon all the inhabitants of the land, both old and young, 1–4. (2.) For the like reasons, he is commanded not to join with any of his neighbours, either in their mourning, or in their convivial mirth, 5–9. (3.) He shows that their calamities were the effect of their apostacy and disobedience, for which God would drive them into exile, and give them no quarter till he had fully requited their wickedness, 10–18. But, (4.) Their future restoration is immediately foretold, 14, 15; as is also the conversion of the Gentiles, 19–21.

A. M. 3403. THE word of the LORD came also
B. C. 601. unto me, saying,

2 Thou shalt not take thee a wife, neither shalt thou have sons nor daughters in this place.

3 For thus saith the LORD concerning the sons and concerning the daughters that are born in this place, and concerning their mothers that bare them, and concerning their fathers that begat them in this land:

4 They shall die of ^a grievous deaths; they shall not be ^b lamented; neither shall they be buried; but they shall be ^c as dung upon the face of the earth: and they shall be consumed by the sword, and by famine; and their ^d car-asses shall be meat for the fowls of heaven, and for the beasts of the earth. A. M. 3403.

B. C. 601.

5 For thus saith the LORD, ^e Enter not into the house of ¹ mourning, neither go to lament nor bemoan them: for I have taken away my peace from this people, saith the LORD, even loving-kindness and mercies.

6 Both the great and the small shall die in this land: they shall not be buried, ^f neither shall men lament for them, nor ^g cut themselves, nor ^h make themselves bald for them:

7 Neither shall men ² tear themselves for them in mourning, to comfort them for the dead; neither shall men give them the cup of con-

^a Chapter xv. 2.—^b Chap. xxii. 18, 19; xxv. 33.—^c Psalm lxxxiii. 10; Chap. viii. 2; ix. 22.—^d Psa. lxxix. 2; Chapter vii. 33; xxxiv. 20.—^e Ezek. xxiv. 17, 22, 23.—^f Or, mourning feast.

^f Chapter xxii. 18.—^g Lev. xix. 28; Deut. xiv. 1; Chapter xli. 5; xlvii. 5.—^h Isa. xxii. 12; Chap. vii. 29.—² Or, break bread for them, as Ezek. xxiv. 17; Hos. ix. 4; Deut. xxvi. 14; Job xlii. 11.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XVI.

Verses 1-4. The word of the Lord came, &c.—Here begins a new discourse, wherein God forbids Jeremiah to marry, principally with a view to show the miseries of parents, and the confused and ruinous state of things in Judea. "Fruitfulness was promised as a blessing under the law, Deut. xxviii. 4, but ceased to be so in such difficult times as were coming upon the Jewish nation. For parents could not promise to themselves any comfort in their children, who must be exposed to the many miseries that attend a hostile invasion and a conquering army."—Lowth. They shall die of grievous deaths—Hebrew כמות תהלאים, mortibus ægritudinum, id est, ægerrimis, Buxtorf. Literally, of deaths of sicknesses, that is, very sorrowful deaths; meaning, Blaney thinks, epidemical disorders, (such as the pestilence,) terminating in death. It, no doubt, however, also includes death by the sword and by famine.

Verses 5, 6. Enter not into the house of mourning—Or, of a mourning feast, according to the reading in the margin, the word כרוז, occurring also Amos vi. 7, and being there rendered a banquet. The sense seems to be, Do not go to comfort such as mourn for any friends or relations dead; their feastings on those occasions being upon a consolatory account: those that die are most happy. For I have taken away my peace from this people—That is, I have put a full period to their prosperity, and deprived them of every thing wherewith they might comfort themselves and one another; even loving-kindness and mercies—These shall be shut up and restrained, which are the springs from whence all the streams of comfort flow to mankind. Both the great and the small shall die in this land—The land of Canaan that used to be called the land of the living. They shall not be buried, &c.—So many of all ranks and ages shall die that men shall have no time to bury them, or there shall not be a sufficient number left alive to bury the dead. Neither shall men lament for them—Nor shall men have leisure, through their own miseries, to lament for the miseries of others. Or their own calamities shall be so great that they will render them insensible to the calamities of others. Nor cut themselves, &c.—The law expressly forbade the Israelites to make any cuttings in their flesh at funeral obsequies, Lev. xix. 28; Deut. xiv. 1. Notwithstanding which prohibition, this practice seems to have been adopted by the Jews, among other heathenish customs. Shaving of the head also was a usual expression of mourning, chap. vii. 29.

Verse 7. Neither shall men tear themselves for them—According to this translation the phrase alludes to another expression of immoderate grief, which consisted in tearing their flesh with their nails. But according to the marginal reading, the sense is, Neither shall men break bread for them; alluding to the mourning-feast, mentioned verse 5. So the LXX., οὐ μὴ κλασθῇ ἄρτος ἐν πένθει αὐτῶν εἰς παρακλησιν ἐπὶ τεθνηκότι, "bread shall by no means be broken in their mourning, for consolation concerning the dead." So also the Vulgate. As to the custom alluded to, Jerome informs us, in his commentary on this place, that "it was usual to carry provisions to mourners, and to make an entertainment, which sort of feasts the Greeks call περιδειπνα, and the Latins parentalia." The origin of which custom undoubtedly was, that the friends of the mourner, who came to comfort him, (which they often did in great numbers, as we learn from John xi. 19,) easily concluding, that a person so far swallowed up of grief, as even to forget his own bread could hardly attend to the entertainment of so many guests, each sent in his proportion of meat and drink, in hopes to prevail upon the mourner, by their example and persuasions, to partake of such refreshment as might tend to recruit both his bodily strength and his spirits. To this custom Tobit is thought to refer when, among other exhortations to his son, he directs him to pour out his bread on the burial of the just. See Blaney. It must be observed, that among the Hebrews all things

A. M. 3403. solation to ¹ drink for their father or
B. C. 601. for their mother.

8 Thou shalt not also go into the house of feasting, to sit with them to eat and to drink.

9 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, ¹ I will cause to cease out of this place in your eyes, and in your days, the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride.

10 ¶ And it shall come to pass, when thou shalt show this people all these words, and they shall say unto thee, ¹ Wherefore hath the LORD pronounced all this great evil against us? or what is our iniquity? or what is our sin that we have committed against the LORD our God?

11 Then shalt thou say unto them, ^m Because your fathers have forsaken me, saith the LORD, and have walked after other gods, and have served them, and have worshipped ^{A. M. 3403.} them, and have forsaken me, and ^{B. C. 601.} have not kept my law;

12 And ye have done ⁿ worse than your fathers; for, behold, ^o ye walk every one after the ³ imagination of his evil heart, that they may not hearken unto me:

13 ^p Therefore will I cast you out of this land ^q into a land that ye know not, neither ye nor your fathers; and there shall ye serve other gods day and night; where I will not show you favour.

14 ¶ Therefore behold, the ^r days come, saith the LORD, that it shall no more be said, The LORD liveth, that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt;

15 But, the LORD liveth, that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither he had driven them: and ^s I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers.

¹ Proverbs xxxi. 6, 7.—^k Isaiah xxiv. 7, 8; Chapter vii. 34; xxv. 10; Ezekiel xxvi. 13; Hosea ii. 11; Revelation xviii. 23. ^l Deut. xxix. 24; Chapter v. 19; xiii. 22; xxii. 8.—^m Deut. xxix. 25; Chap. xxii. 9.

ⁿ Chapter vii. 26.—^o Chapter xiii. 10.—^p Or, stubbornness. ^q Deut. iv. 26, 27, 28; xxviii. 36, 63, 64, 65.—^r Chap. xv. 14. ^s Isaiah xliii. 18; Chap. xxiii. 7, 8.—^t Chap. xxiv. 6; xxx. 3; xxxii. 37.

eaten were called bread. Neither shall men give them the cup of consolation for their father, &c.—They were also wont, on these occasions, to send wine, or some other cheering liquor to drink, that they might forget their sorrows. This is called here the cup of consolation. Sir John Chardin, in one of his MSS. tells us, that “the oriental Christians still make banquets of the same kind, by a custom derived from the Jews; and that the provisions spoken of in this verse were such as were wont to be sent to the house of the deceased, where healths were also drunk to the survivors of the family.” God here tells the Jews by his prophet, that the time should come, when so many should die, and so fast, and the rest should be so much upon the brink of the grave, that they should have neither leisure nor heart for using these ceremonies.

Verses 8, 9. Thou shalt not also go into the house of feasting—God not only forbade his prophet to go into houses of mourning, but forbade him also to go into houses where people were wont to eat and drink on joyful occasions, because it would be unseasonable, and would not agree with the afflictive dispensations of Providence that were coming on the land and nation, God called aloud for weeping, mourning, and fasting, because he was coming forth against them in his judgments, and it was time for them to humble themselves before him. And it well became the prophet, who gave them the warning, to give them an example of taking the warning himself, and complying with it; and so to make it appear that he did himself believe what he declared to them. For, behold I will cause to cease the voice of mirth, &c.—In the approaching time of general desolation, all the solemn seasons of mirth and gladness shall cease, as well public as private. The solemn feasts, which were always observed with great expressions of joy, shall be no more celebrated, nor shall nuptial solemnities and other private occasions of rejoicing be any longer observed.

Verse 13. Therefore shall ye serve other gods day and night—The opportunities of frequenting the public worship of the true God shall be taken from you, as a just judgment upon you for your neglect of his service in your own country; and you shall be exposed to the peril of being seduced by the Chaldeans to the worship of idols: see Deut. iv. 28, and xxviii. 36, where Moses utters a similar prediction. Compare also 1 Sam. xxvi. 19.

Verses 14, 15. Therefore, behold the days come, saith the Lord, &c.—The particle לכן seems to be very improperly rendered therefore here. It evidently sometimes signifies notwithstanding, or nevertheless; see note on Isa. xxx. 18, and sometimes, yet surely, as chap. v. 2, of this prophecy; which sense agrees well with the scope of this place, and connects this verse with the words foregoing. And so it seems it should be rendered, chap. xxx. 16, and xxxii. 36. Blaney, however, thinks that both in this verse and in all these passages, as also chap. xxiii. 7 and Hos. ii. 14, it more properly signifies, after this. Accordingly, he translates this clause, after this, behold the days come, saith Jehovah, &c., observing, “that this notice of a future restoration was here inserted on purpose to guard the people, during their exile, from falling into idolatry through despair, by

A. M. 3403. 16 ¶ Behold, I will send for many
B. C. 601. ¹fishers, saith the LORD, and they shall fish them; and after will I send for many hunters, and they shall hunt them from every mountain, and from every hill, and out of the holes of the rocks.

17 For mine ^ueyes are upon all their ways: they are not hid from my face, neither is their iniquity hid from mine eyes.

18 And first I will recompense their iniquity

¹ Amos iv. 2; Hab. i. 15.—^u Job xxxiv. 21; Proverbs v. 21; xv. 3; Chap. xxxii. 19.—^x Isa. xl. 2; Chap. xvii. 18.

letting them see they had still a prospect of recovering God's wonted favour and protection." To which may be added, that he probably intended also, in thus sweetening the dreadful threatenings preceding with this comfortable promise, to prevent such as were pious among them, or should be brought to repentance by these terrible calamities, from being swallowed up of overmuch sorrow. It shall no more be said, &c.—The bringing of Israel out of the Egyptian bondage shall not be so much spoken of and celebrated as their deliverance from their captivity in Babylon. In fact, the latter was in several respects more remarkable than the former. Their deliverance from the power of the king of Egypt was extorted from him by terrifying miracles, which scarcely brought him to a compliance; but their deliverance from their captivity in Babylon was voluntarily granted them by Cyrus, a far greater king than the king of Egypt, and attended by a decree extremely honourable to them.

Verses 16–18. Behold, I will send, &c.—This may be better rendered, But now I will send, &c.—Because here the prophet returns to denounce threatenings; many fishers, and they shall fish them—"It is common with the sacred writers to represent enemies and oppressors under the metaphors of fishers and hunters, because they use all the methods of open force and secret stratagem to make men their prey." By these two characters the same enemies are probably meant, namely, the Chaldeans, who should take different methods, one after another, to destroy them; besieging them in their cities, and taking them like fish, enclosed in a net; and afterward pursuing the scattered parties from place to place, till they got them into their hands; so that one way or other, few, if any, would be suffered to escape. Compare Isa. xxiv. 17, 18, where it is in like manner foretold, that those who escaped from one danger should fall by another. See Blaney. For mine eyes are upon all their ways—I mark all their sins, though they commit them never so secretly, and palliate them never so artfully. They have not their eyes upon me; have no regard to me, stand in no awe of me: but I have mine eye upon them, and neither they nor any of their ways are hid from me. I will recompense their iniquity double—Not double to what it deserves, but double to what they expect, and to what I have done for-and their sin ^xdouble; because ^ythey have defiled my land, they have filled mine inheritance with the carcasses of their detestable and abominable things.

19 O LORD, ^zmy strength and my fortress, and ^amy refuge in the day of affliction, the Gentiles shall come unto thee from the ends of the earth, and shall say, Surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanity, and things ^bwherein there is no profit.

^y Ezekiel xliii. 7, 9.—^z Psalm xviii. 2.—^a Chapter xvii. 17.
^b Isa. xlii. 10; Chap. ii. 11; x. 5.

merly. Or, I will recompense it abundantly; they shall now pay for their long reprieve and the divine patience they have abused; because they have defiled my land—By their idolatry, blood, cruelty, and other sins; have filled mine inheritance with the carcasses of their detestable things—Their idols, which are elsewhere called carcasses, not only because they were without life, but also because of their filthiness and hatefulness in the sight of God: see Lev. xxvi. 30; Ezek. xliii. 7, 9. Or the words may be explained of the human sacrifices which were offered to idols.

Verses 19, 20. O Lord, my strength—To support and comfort me; my fortress—To protect and shelter me; and my refuge in the day of affliction—To whom I may flee for deliverance and consolation; the Gentiles, the nations, shall come to thee from the ends of the earth—The prophet, shocked at the apostacy of Israel, and concerned for God's honour, here comforts himself by looking forward to the time when even the Gentiles themselves should become sensible of the absurdity of their hereditary idolatry, and be converted to the acknowledgment of the one living and true God: and this remarkable and desirable event he predicts, the more emphatically to demonstrate the unreasonableness and folly of forsaking him for idols. And shall say—That is, the Gentiles shall say, Surely our fathers, our ancestors, have inherited lies, vanity, &c.—And did not receive the satisfaction they promised themselves and their children; we are now sensible of the folly and deception of their idolatrous worship, by which they were cheated to their ruin, and therefore we will entirely and for ever renounce it, and in all our wants address ourselves to the true God as our only refuge and protection. Shall a man make gods unto himself?—Thus the prophet represents the Gentiles, when enlightened by the truth, as reasoning with themselves. Shall a man be so ignorant and foolish; so perfectly void of reason and discernment, as to make gods to himself, the creatures of his own fancy, the work of his own hands, which are really no gods? Can a man be so infatuated, so entirely lost to human understanding, as to expect any divine blessing or favour from that which pretends to no divinity but what it first received from him? Observe, reader, that reformation is likely to be sincere and durable which results from a rational conviction of the gross

A. M. 3403. 20 Shall a man make gods unto
B. C. 601. himself, and ^c they are no gods?

21 Therefore behold, I will this once cause

^c Isa. xxxvii. 19; Chap. ii. 11; Gal. iv. 8.—^d Exodus xv. 3; absurdity which there is in sin, and the service of Satan.

Verse 21. Therefore I will this once—Or, as הוּא עַתָּה may be rendered, at this time, as the same expression is rendered, 2 Sam. xvii. 7. Cause them to know my hand and my might, &c.—"The time alluded to is undoubtedly that when the gospel was to be preached to, and embraced by, the Gen-them to know, I will cause them to A. M. 3403. know my hand and my might; and B. C. 601.

they shall know that ^d my name is ^e The Lord.

Ch. xxxiii. 2; Amos v. 8.—^f Or, JEHOVAH, Psa. lxxxiii. 18.

tiles; when God promises that he would make such a display of his mighty power as should amply convince them of the truth of his existence and divinity. They shall know that my name is JEHOVAH—A name which implies absolute and necessary existence, the real source and origin of all perfection; and they shall know it by the blessings which shall, from my providence, be derived to them."—Blaney.

CHAPTER XVII.

In this chapter, (1,) The prophet describes the attachment of the people of Judah to idolatry, and foretels the fatal consequences, 1-4. (2,) He contrasts the accursed condition of him that rests his trust on man, with the blessedness of one that trusts in God; and illustrates both by apt and lively comparisons, 5-8. (3,) He shows, that, be the human heart ever so false and wicked, God can detect, and will finally punish, its wiles and deceits, 9-11. (4,) He acknowledges that sure salvation comes from God, and from him only, 12-14. And, (5,) Complaining of those that scoffed at his predictions, he prays for the divine countenance and support against them, 15-18. (6,) The prophet, in the name of God, delivers a distinct prophecy relative to the strict observance of the sabbath day, which he was sent to proclaim aloud in all the gates of Jerusalem, as a matter which concerned the conduct of each individual, and the general happiness of the whole, 19-27.

A. M. 3403. THE sin of Judah is written with
B. C. 601. a ^a pen of iron, and with the ^b point of a diamond: it is ^b graven upon the table of their heart, and upon the horns of your altars;

2 Whilst their children remember their altars

^a Job xix. 24.—^b Heb. nail.—^c Prov. iii. 3; 2 Corinthians
iii. 3.

and their ^c groves by the green trees A. M. 3403.
upon the high hills. B. C. 601.

3 O my mountain in the field, ^d I will give thy substance and all thy treasures to the spoil, and thy high places for sin, throughout all thy borders.

^e Judg. iii. 7; 2 Chron. xxiv. 18; xxxiii. 3, 19; Isa. i. 29; xvii.
8; Chap. ii. 10.—^f Chap. xv. 13.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XVII.

Verses 1, 2. The sin of Judah is written with a pen of iron—Many of the Jews, though living in the habitual commission of the grossest crimes, were, nevertheless, self-righteous, and thought they did not deserve that God should enter into judgment with them in any such way as Jeremiah foretold he would do. Wherefore, said they, hath the Lord pronounced all this great evil against us? What is our iniquity? What is our sin? chap. xvi. 10. Here the prophet tells them their sin was too plain to be denied, and too bad to be excused: that it was written in indelible characters, not only before God, to whose omniscience it lay continually open, but in their own hearts and consciences; as if written with a pen of iron, or an engraving instrument, or the point of a diamond; instruments employed to make durable inscriptions on hard substances. As if he had said, Their sins are as manifest, and the remembrance of them as durable, as the memorable actions which have been engraven on pillars of stone, or tablets of brass, to give them notoriety, and preserve them from oblivion. The expression, it is graven upon the table of their hearts, may also be intended to signify the rooted affection which they had to sin, especially to the sin of idolatry; that it was woven into their very nature, and was as dear to them as that is to us, of which we say, It is engraven on our hearts. In like manner, their idolatrous altars and other monuments of their heathenish superstitions, were undeniable tokens of the corrupt inclinations of their hearts, which were altogether estranged from God and his true worship. Or their sin might be said to be engraven on the horns of their altars, because the blood of the sacrifices which they offered to their idols was sprinkled there, or because their altars had some inscription upon them, declaring to what idol each altar was consecrated. Whilst their children remember their altars—This shows how inveterate they were in this sin of idolatry, that they taught it to their children.

Verses 3, 4. O my mountain in the field—By this expression the prophet is thought, by many interpreters, to intend the temple, which stood on a moun-

A. M. 3403. 4. And thou, even ²thyself, shalt
B. C. 601. discontinue from thy heritage that I gave thee; and I will cause thee to serve thine enemies in ^othe land which thou knowest not:
for ^fye have kindled a fire in mine anger,
which shall burn for ever.

5 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; ^sCursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh ^hflesh

^a Heb. in thyself. — ^o Chap. xvi. 13. — ^f Chap. xv. 14. — ^s Isa.
xxx. 1, 2; xxxi. 1. — ^h Isa. xxxi. 3. — ⁱ Chap. xlviii. 6.

tain, called elsewhere, the mountain of the Lord's house, (Isa. ii. 2,) and the holy mountain. And this, as being the principal part of Jerusalem, is understood as being put, by way of synecdoche, for the whole city. Michaelis paraphrases it thus: "O Jerusalem, which hast long been situate on my chosen mountain, and surrounded by a most fertile country, the land of Canaan." But Cocceius thinks that the Jewish people are hereby enigmatically compared with the rest of the world, as a mountain situated in the midst of a level plain, and distinguished with a glory which did not belong to the world in general. And it must be acknowledged that nations and princes of great power and eminence are often figuratively called mountains, in regard to their strength and elevation: see chap. li. 25; Isa. xli. 15; Zech. iv. 7. Judah, therefore, in general, as well as Jerusalem in particular, may be here styled God's mountain, as having been chosen by him, and thereby raised to a degree of elevation above all other people: see a confirmation of this interpretation, chap. xxxi. 23. I will give thy substance, and all thy treasures, to the spoil—Both the products of the country, and the stores of the city, shall be seized by the Chaldeans. Justly are men stripped of that with which they have served their idols, and which has been made the food and fuel of their lusts. And thy high places for sin—You have worshipped your idols on the high places, and now they shall be given for a spoil; in all your borders—See note on chap. xv. 13. Observe, reader, what we make an occasion of sin, God will make a matter of spoil; for what comfort can we expect in that wherewith God is dishonoured? And thou, even thyself, shalt discontinue from thy heritage—Shalt intermit the occupation of thy land, as the word שָׁכַח, here used, signifies, Exod. xxiii. 11. The prophet undoubtedly alludes to the seventh year of release, enjoined by Moses, Deut. xv. 1, which law the Jews had a long time neglected out of covetousness, and refused to observe, even after a solemn engagement to the contrary, chap. xxxiv. 8, &c. So here the passage implies, that since they would not release their land nor their servants in the sabbatical years, as God had enjoined them, he would dispossess them of the inheritance which he had given them, and the land shall enjoy her sabbaths, according to the prescription of the law: see Lev. xxvi. 34. And I will cause thee to serve thine enemies in the land which thou knowest not—As a punishment for thy compelling thy ser-

his arm, and whose heart departeth from the LORD. A. M. 3403
B. C. 601.

6 For he shall be ⁱlike the heath in the desert, and ^kshall not see when good cometh; but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, ^lin a salt land and not inhabited.

7 ^mBlessed is the man that trusteth in the LORD, and whose hope the LORD is.

^k Job xx. 17. — ^l Deut. xxix. 23. — ^m Psalm ii. 12; xxxiv. 8; cxv. 1; cxlvi. 5; Prov. xvi. 20; Isa. xxx. 18.

vants to serve thee in thy own land, when I enjoined thee to set them at liberty. For ye have kindled a fire in mine anger, &c.—By your idolatries and other sins you have increased my wrath to such a fire that it shall burn for a long time in terrible judgments upon you in this world, and shall burn all such as remain impenitent for ever, in the world to come.

Verses 5, 6. Cursed be the man that trusteth in man—Who places that confidence in the wisdom or power, the kindness or faithfulness of any man or number of men, which ought to be placed in God only; that is, miserable is the man that doth so, for he leans upon a broken reed, which will not only fail him, but will run into his hand and pierce it. It must be observed, however, that the prophet denounces this curse here chiefly with respect to the confidence which the Jews placed in the assistance of the Egyptians and their other allies, when threatened by the Chaldeans. And maketh flesh his arm—Trusts for support or aid in a mere mortal man, termed flesh, to show his weakness and frailty, in opposition to the power of the almighty and immortal God. And whose heart departeth from the Lord—As the hearts of all do who put their trust in man. They may perhaps draw nigh to God with their mouths, and honour him with their lips, but really their hearts are far from him. For he shall be like the heath in the desert—Hebrew כְּעֵר, like the tamarisk, as some render the word, virgultum tenue, humile, fragile, says Buxtorf, a small, low, and weak shrub. Sapless and useless; he shall be barren of solid comfort for the present, and destitute of well grounded hopes for the future. And shall not see when good cometh—Shall not partake of any good; but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness—From whence he can derive no profit or consolation; in a salt land, &c.—Barren and unfruitful, Deut. xxix. 23; Judges ix. 45. Observe well, reader, they that trust in their own righteousness and strength, and think they can be saved without the merit and grace of Christ, thus make flesh their arm, and their souls cannot prosper either in graces or comforts; they can neither produce the fruits of acceptable obedience to God; nor reap the fruits of saving blessings from him, but dwell in a dry land.

Verses 7, 8. Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord—That lives in continual obedience to him, and relies entirely upon him for every blessing he wants for his body or soul, for himself or others

A. M. 3403. 8 For he shall be ⁿ as a tree planted
B. C. 601. by the waters, and that spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh, but her leaf shall be green; and shall not be careful in the year of ³ drought, neither shall cease from yielding fruit.

9 ¶ The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked: who can know it?

ⁿ Job viii. 16; Psa. i. 3.—³ Or, restraint.—¹ Sam. xvi. 7; 1 Chron. xxviii. 9; Psa. vii. 9; cxxxix. 23, 24; Prov. xvii. 3; Chap. xi. 20; xx. 12; Rom. viii. 27; Rev. ii. 23.

who, under God, are dependant upon him; and whose hope the Lord is—Who makes the Lord's favour the good he hopes for, and his power the strength he hopes in. Trusting aright in the Lord necessarily implies walking closely with him, and not departing from him in heart. For it is naturally impossible that any one should repose confidence in another for any thing which had been promised under a condition, without a consciousness in himself that he had, at least in some good measure, complied with the condition upon which it was promised.
For he shall be like a tree planted, &c.—He shall be prosperous and successful in his counsels and undertakings. He may be compared to a tree planted in a fertile soil, on the bank of a river, to which it extends its roots, and from which it derives abundance of sap and nourishment. And shall not see when heat cometh—Οὐ φοβήθησεται όταν ελθῇ κάρμα, say the LXX., shall not fear when heat cometh.
They follow the reading of the Hebrew text, which is to be preferred before that of the margin. And shall not be careful in the year of drought—Shall not be solicitous for fear it should lack moisture; that is, in a time when the leaves of trees standing on dry mountainous places are parched and withered, it shall retain its verdure, and continue to yield its fruit. Blaney translates the clause, "And it is not sensible when heat cometh; but its leaf is green, and in a year of drought it is without concern; nor doth it decline bearing fruit."

Verses 9, 10. The heart is deceitful above all things—This passage, considered in connection with what precedes, may be understood in two points of view: 1st, As assigning a reason why we should not trust in man; namely, because he is not only weak and frail, and therefore may want power to help us in our necessities and distresses, but is also false and deceitful. Or, 2d, As giving us a caution to take care lest we deceive ourselves in supposing we trust in God when really we do not; this being a thing respecting which our own hearts are very apt to deceive us, as appears by this, that our hopes and fears are wont to rise or fall, according as second causes appear to be favourable or adverse. But it is true in the general, that there is greater wickedness in our hearts, by nature, than we ourselves are aware of, or suspect to be there. Nay, and it is a common mistake among mankind to think their own hearts a great deal better than they really are.
The heart of man, in his corrupt and fallen state, is 10 I the LORD ^o search the heart, A. M. 3403.

I try the reins, ⁿ even to give every B. C. 601.
man according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings.

11 As the partridge ⁴ sitteth on eggs, and hatcheth them not; so he that getteth riches, and not by right, ^a shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be ^a a fool.

^p Psalm lxii. 12; Chapter xxxii. 19; Romans ii. 6.—⁴ Or, gathereth young which she hath not brought forth.—^a Psa. lv. 23.
^r Luke xii. 20.

false and deceitful above all things; deceitful in its apprehensions of things, calling evil good and good evil, putting false colours upon things, crying peace to those to whom peace does not belong, and cheating men to their own ruin; deceitful in the hopes and promises which it excites and nourishes, and in the assurances which it gives. And desperately wicked—Hebrews רָשָׁע וְרָשָׁע, literally, and desperate, or, as Blaney renders it, it is even past all hope; who can know it? That is, "humanly speaking, there is no possibility that any one should trace it through all its windings, and discover what is at the bottom of it." In short, it is unsearchable by others, deceitful with reference to ourselves, and abominably wicked; so that neither can a man know his own heart, nor can any one know that of his neighbour. I the Lord search the heart—I am perfectly acquainted with it, and with all the wickedness that lodges in it: all its thoughts, counsels, and designs, however secret; all its intentions, affections, and determinations lie open to my inspection:
and my piercing eye penetrates into its inmost recesses. I try the reins—To pass a true judgment on what I discern, and to give every thing therein its true character and due weight. I try the heart, as the gold is tried, whether it be standard weight or not; or, as the prisoner is tried, whether he be guilty or not. And this judgment, which I make of the hearts, is in order to my passing a true judgment upon the man, even to give to every man according to his ways—According to the desert and tendency of them; life to those that have walked in the ways of life, and death to those that have persisted in the paths of the destroyer; and according to the fruit of his doings—The effect and influence which his doings have had on others; or according to what is determined by the word of God to be the fruit of men's doings, blessings to the obedient, and curses to the disobedient.

Verse 11. As the partridge sitteth on eggs, and hatcheth them not—Or rather, as the words דָּגַר לֹא may be more literally rendered, hatcheth eggs which she did not lay; so he that getteth riches, and not by right—That is, not in a due, regular manner, by the blessing of God upon honest endeavours, but by arts of knavery and injustice; shall leave them in the midst of his days—Though he may make them his hope, he shall not have joy in them, nor the true and lasting possession of them; but they shall be soon taken from him, or he from

A. M. 3403. 12 ¶ A glorious high throne from B. C. 601. the beginning is the place of our sanctuary.

13 O LORD, "the hope of Israel, "all that forsake thee shall be ashamed, and they that depart from me shall be "written in the earth, because they have forsaken the LORD, the "fountain of living waters.

14 Heal me, O LORD, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved: for "thou art my praise.

* Chap. xiv. 8. —† Psalm lxxiii. 27; Isaiah i. 28. —" Luke x. 20. —x Chapter ii. 13. —y Deuteron. x. 21; Psalm cix. 1; cxlviii. 14.

them. And at his end shall be a fool—That is, he shall evidently appear such. He was indeed a fool all along, and doubtless his conscience often told him so; but at his end his folly will be manifest to all men. Bochart, with a great deal of learning, contends that קרר, here rendered partridge, is not that bird, nor any one known in these parts. Blaney gives it the Hebrew name kore, observing, "that it is a bird which frequents the mountains, and is of no great value, as may be learned from 1 Sam. xxvi. 20. Here it is said to sit upon and hatch the eggs of birds of another species. This want of distinction is common to many sorts of birds; and the partridge is no way remarkable for it. But where it is so done, the young ones, when fledged, are sure to forsake their supposititious dam, and to join with those of their own feather; in which circumstance the point of comparison seems to lie."

Verse 12. A glorious high throne, &c.—"As in the preceding verses was set forth the vain dependence of him who seeks to advance himself by indirect methods; so here we are taught the solid foundation which he builds upon who has recourse to the divine blessing, and seeks to recommend himself to the favour of that Being, to whom Israel was taught to look up for support, and whose kingdom, from all eternity, ruleth over all." The temple at Jerusalem, where God manifested his special presence, where his lively oracles were lodged, where the people paid their homage to their sovereign, and whither they fled for refuge in distress, was the place of their sanctuary, and might properly be termed a glorious high throne. It was a throne of holiness, which made it glorious; it was God's throne, which made it truly high. And it was the honour of Israel that God set up his throne among them. Jeremiah may mention this here partly as a plea with God to show mercy to their land in honour of the throne of his glory; and partly as an aggravation of the sin of the people, in forsaking God, though his throne was among them, and so profaning his crown and the place of his sanctuary.

Verse 13. O Lord, the hope of Israel—That is, He in whom alone thy true Israel can hope; all they that forsake thee shall be ashamed—Those who forsake thy law and that rule which thou hast 15 ¶ Behold, they say unto me; A. M. 3403.

"Where is the word of the LORD? B. C. 601.
let it come now.

16 As for me, "I have not hastened from being a pastor "to follow thee: neither have I desired the woful day; thou knowest: that which came out of my lips was right before thee.

17 Be not a terror unto me: "thou art my hope in the day of evil.

18 "Let them be confounded that persecute

* Isaiah v. 19; Ezekiel xii. 22; Amos v. 18; 2 Peter iii. 4. a Chap. i. 4. —b Heb. after thee. —c Chap. xvi. 19. —d Psa. xxxv. 4; xl. 14; lxx. 2.

given them, whereby to direct their conversation, will sooner or later be ashamed of such their disobedience. Or, as Lowth paraphrases the words, "Thou hast given many gracious promises to thy people, to encourage them to trust in thee; and they that forsake their interest in thy goodness will find all other expectations fail and disappoint them;" and they that depart from me—From my love and service, says God, and their reliance upon me, shall be written in the earth—Shall have no portion beyond the earth, on which they set their affections. Or, their names and memories shall be soon extinct, like words written in the dust: they shall not be registered among my people, nor shall their names be recorded in the book of life. The expression seems to allude to registers kept of the members of cities or corporations, the privileges of which none can pretend to but they who have their names entered in such registers; because they have forsaken the Lord, the fountain of living waters—The only certain relief and comfort of any people, the fountain and origin of all the good they can hope for. See note on chap. ii. 13.

Verse 14. Heal me, O Lord, &c.—Most interpreters understand the prophet as addressing God here in his own behalf. He represents himself as a person wounded, or sick, either with a sense of the dishonour done to God by the sins of the people, or with their reproaches poured upon himself, and he begs of God to heal him, God only having power to do it. Save me, for thou art my praise—It is from thee only that I expect relief and comfort in all my troubles: and as I acknowledge that all the blessings I enjoy come from thee, so it is to thee I return all thanks and praise.

Verses 15–18. Behold, they say unto me—Scoffing at me, as if I had denounced threatenings in thy name, without any order or direction from thee: Where is the word of the Lord?—Like the scoffers, mentioned by St. Peter, 2 Pet. iii. 4, saying, Where is the promise of his coming? This has been the practice of all wicked men, hardened in their sinful courses, and resolved to go on in them: they put the evil day far from them, and scoff at all denunciations of divine wrath. Let it come now—So said these scoffers, daring the vengeance of God, and challenging him to execute the judgments he had

A. M. 3403. me, but ^d let not me be confounded :
B. C. 601.

let them be dismayed, but let not me be dismayed : bring upon them the day of evil, and ^e destroy ^e them with double destruction.

19 ¶ Thus saith the LORD unto me ; Go and stand in the gate of the children of the people, whereby the kings of Judah come in, and by the which they go out, and in all the gates of Jerusalem ;

20 And say unto them, ^f Hear ye the word of the LORD, ye kings of Judah, and all Judah, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, that enter in by these gates :

21 Thus saith the LORD ; ^g Take heed to yourselves, and bear no burden on the sabbath day, nor bring it in by the gates of Jerusalem ;

^d Psalm xxv. 2.—^e Hebrew, break them with a double breach.
^f Chap. xi. 20.—^g Chap. xix. 3 ; xxii. 2.—^h Num. xv. 32 ;

threatened. As for me, I have not hastened, &c.—Dr. Waterland translates this clause, “But as for me, I have not forced or intruded myself upon thee for a pastor.” To the same sense the Geneva translation interprets the words. According to which reading the prophet solemnly appeals to God that he had not intruded himself into the office of a prophet, nor had been desirous of an employment that foreboded so much evil to others, and brought a great deal of trouble upon himself. The words in the Hebrew, however, are literally as our translation expresses them, and may be paraphrased thus, “As I did not seek the office of a prophet, so when thou wast pleased to call me to it I did not decline it.” The LXX, render it, εγω δε εν εκοπιασιν κατακολουθων οπισω σου, I have not been weary of following thee. Neither have I desired the woful day—Namely, the day of the accomplishment of his prophecies. Though, when it came, it would prove him to have been a true prophet, which they had questioned, and would be the avenging of him upon his persecutors, and therefore, on those accounts, he might have been tempted to desire it ; yet, as it would be a woful day to Jerusalem, he deprecated it, and could appeal to God that he wished it might never come. That which came out of my lips was right before thee—That is, it exactly agreed with what I had received from thee. Be not a terror unto me—Amidst all the terrors, with which mine adversaries threaten me, let me still find comfort in thee ; and let not any apprehension of being forsaken by thee be added to my other fears. Let them be confounded, &c.—See notes on chap. xi. 20, and xvi. 18.

Verses 19–24. Thus saith the Lord, Go, &c.—Here we evidently have a distinct prophecy, which the prophet was commanded to deliver most probably soon, if not immediately, after the foregoing. Stand in the gate of the children of the people—By which it seems is meant the gate most frequented by

22 Neither carry forth a burden out of your houses on the sabbath day, neither do ye any work, but hallow ye the sabbath day, as I ^h commanded your fathers.

23 ⁱ But they obeyed not, neither inclined their ear, but made their neck stiff, that they might not hear, nor receive instruction.

24 And it shall come to pass, if ye diligently hearken unto me, saith the LORD, to bring in no burden through the gates of this city on the sabbath day, but hallow the sabbath day, to do no work therein ;

25 ^k Then shall there enter into the gates of this city kings and princes sitting upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on the people ; being that nearest the palace, where the kings of Judah held their most solemn courts of judicature, or by which they ordinarily went out of the city, and returned into it. And say, Hear ye the word of the Lord, ye kings of Judah—The word of the Lord equally concerns the highest and the lowest, the greatest princes as well as the meanest subjects. Thus saith the Lord, Take heed to yourselves—The Hebrew is, Take heed to your souls, intimating that the sanctification of the sabbath is an important thing, wherein the welfare of men's souls is concerned. Neither carry forth a burden, &c.—See notes on Neh. xiii. 15–22. Neither do ye any work—Servile work was forbidden to be done upon their solemn festivals, Lev. xxiii. 8, 35, much more upon the sabbath days. But hallow ye the sabbath day—“The sabbath was instituted as a sign or token of God's covenant with his people, Exod. xxxi. 13, and the observance of it was the distinguishing character of a Jew, whereby he declared himself to be a worshipper of the true God, who made heaven and earth, and ordained the sabbath day as a memorial of the creation. So that for the Jews to profane the sabbath, was in effect to renounce their share in God's covenant.”

Neh. xiii. 19.—^h Exod. xx. 8 ; xxiii. 12 ; xxxi. 13 ; Ezek. xx 12.—ⁱ Chap. vii. 24, 26 ; xi. 10.—^k Chap. xxii. 4.

Verses 25–27. Then shall there enter into the gates of this city, &c.—“From hence it appears,” says Lowth, “that the judgments denounced against Jerusalem, at least as far as they threatened the city with utter destruction, were not irreversible. And from Jeremiah's advice to Zedekiah, chap. xxxviii. 17, it may be concluded, that if the king had hearkened to that counsel, the city would not have been destroyed, and he himself might have continued a tributary king under Nebuchadnezzar. It is true, that in several other chapters of this prophecy, God, upon foresight of the Jews' impenitence, pronounces a peremptory sentence upon them. See note on chap. iv. 28.” From the land of Benjamin—See notes on chap. i. 1 ; vi. 1. And from the plain, and

A. M. 3403. horses, they and their princes, the
B. C. 631. men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem: and this city shall remain for ever.

26 And they shall come from the cities of Judah, and from ¹the places about Jerusalem, and from the land of Benjamin, and from ^mthe plain, and from the mountains, and from ⁿthe south, bringing burnt-offerings, and sacrifices, and meat-offerings, and incense, and bringing

¹ Chap. xxxii. 44; xxxiii. 13.—^m Zech. vii. 7.—ⁿ Zech. vii. 7.
^o Psa. cvii. 22; cxvi. 17.

^o sacrifices of praise, unto the house A. M. 3403.
of the LORD. B. C. 601.

27 But if ye will not hearken unto me to hallow the sabbath day, and not to bear a burden, even entering in at the gates of Jerusalem on the sabbath day; then ^pwill I kindle a fire in the gates thereof, ^qand it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem, and it shall not be quenched.

^p Chap. xxi. 14; xlix. 27; Lam. iv. 11; Amos i. 4, 7, 10, 12; ii. 2, 5.—^q 2 Kings xxv. 9; Chap. lii. 13.

from the mountain—"These divisions of the country belonging to the tribe of Judah may be found, Josh. xv. 21, 33, 48; and these, together with the tribe of Benjamin, made up the whole kingdom of Judah, when taken separate from the kingdom of Israel, or of the ten tribes. See the same enumeration chap. xxxii. 44." Bringing burnt-offerings and sacrifices, &c.—The sum of these three verses is, that if they would sanctify the Lord's sabbath, observing also all the other parts of God's law, which are doubtless included, they should either continue in, or be restored unto, their ancient, civil, and ecclesiastical state. Their city and temple should be preserved; they should have kings and princes in their former order and splendour, and men should come from all parts of the country bringing their usual sacrifices and offerings to the temple, and those of all sorts. But if you will not hearken unto me—Here the Lord denounces a threatening the reverse of the former promise, which should be executed upon their acting contrary to the duty to which that promise was annexed. God would destroy their city by fire; their highest and noblest structures should be burned down, and though the hand of the enemy should do this, yet God should order them to do it; so that it should be a fire of his kindling, and therefore should not be likely to be quenched till it had effected the purpose for which God appointed it.

CHAPTER XVIII.

In this chapter, (1.) The prophet is shown, under the type of a potter, God's absolute power over nations and kingdoms, to regulate and alter their condition at his own discretion, 1-10. (2.) He is directed to exhort the people to avert the evil threatened them by repentance and reformation; and, upon their refusal, to charge them with the guilt of unprecedented revolt, and to foretel their destruction, 11-17. (3.) They conspire against him, and he protests against their unmerited and ungrateful persecution of him, and calls for justice against them, 18-23.

A. M. 3419. THE word which came to Jeremiah
B. C. 605. from the LORD, saying,

2 Arise, and go down to the potter's house, and there I will cause thee to hear my words.

¹ Or, frames, or, seats.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XVIII.

Verses 1-4. The word which came to Jeremiah, &c.—We have here the beginning of a new discourse of Jeremiah, which, if introduced in its proper place, as we have reason to think it is, was probably also, as well as the foregoing, delivered in some part of the first three years of Jehoiakim's reign. Arise, and go down to the potter's house—Some well-known place where pots were made; and there I will cause thee to hear my words—I will further reveal my mind to thee, that thou mayest make it known to this people. God has frequently condescended to teach us his will by very familiar and striking images. Then I went, &c.—Not being disobedient to 3 Then I went down to the potter's A. M. 3419. house, and behold, he wrought a work B. C. 605.

on the ¹wheels.

4 And the vessel ²that he made of clay was

² Or, that he made was marred, as clay in the hands of the potter.

the heavenly vision. And behold he wrought a work on the wheels—Hebrew, על האבנים, literally, upon the stones. Thus also the LXX., ἐπὶ των λίθων. "There can be no doubt," says Blaney, "that the machine is intended on which the potters formed their earthen vessels; and the appellation, οἱ λίθοι, the stones, will appear very proper, if we consider this machine as consisting of a pair of circular stones placed one upon another like millstones; of which the lower was immovable, but the upper one turned upon the foot of a spindle or axis, and had motion communicated to it by the feet of the potter sitting at his work; as may be learned from Eccus. xxxviii. 29. Upon the top of this upper stone, which was

A. M. 3419. marred in the hand of the potter: so B. C. 605. he ³ made it again another vessel, as seemed good to the potter to make it.

5 Then the word of the LORD came to me, saying,

6 O house of Israel, ^a cannot I do with you as this potter? saith the LORD. Behold, ^b as the clay is in the potter's hand, so are ye in my hand, O house of Israel.

7 At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to ^c pluck up, and to pull down, and to destroy it:

8 ^d If that nation against whom I have pronounced, turn from their evil, ^e I will repent of the evil that I thought to do unto them.

³ Heb. returned and made.—^a Isaiah xlv. 9; Romans ix. 20, 21.
^b Isa. lxiv. 8.—^c Ch. i. 10.—^d Ezek. xviii. 21; xxxiii. 11.

flat, the clay was placed, which the potter, having given the stone the due velocity, formed into shape with his hand." And the vessel that he made of clay—Hebrew, כֹּחֶמֶר, as clay, that is, while it was yet clay, was marred, was spoiled in the potter's hand, so that he did not think fit to go on with his design, as to the form of the vessel, but turned the same clay into a vessel of another form, as he judged best. Nothing can more strongly represent the absolute dominion God has over us than this image of the potter fashioning his clay into what form or vessel he pleased.

Verse 6. Cannot I do with you as this potter?—Have I not as absolute an authority and power over you? Nay, God has an infinitely clearer title to dominion over us than the potter has over the clay, for the potter only gives the clay its form; whereas we have both matter and form from God. As the work of his hands, made and preserved by him, and yet more as sinners redeemed by him, we are entirely in his hands, and at his disposal, and he has an undoubted right to do with us what he pleases. But as a being infinitely holy, just, and gracious, in all his conduct toward his intelligent, free, and immortal offspring, he acts by fixed rules of perfect equity and infinite goodness. He frequently dispenses favours, indeed, to individuals, families, and nations, in a way of sovereignty, but never punishes by arbitrary power. Strong is his hand, and high is his right hand, (Psa. lxxxix. 13,) but, as it there follows, justice and judgment are the habitation of his throne. He asserts his absolute power, and tells us what he might do; but at the same time assures us that he will act as a merciful and righteous judge.

Verses 7, 8. At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, &c.—God speaks thus concerning nations and kingdoms in his word, and by his prophets and ministers. Thus he told Jeremiah, chap. i. 10, that he had set him over the nations, to root out and pull down—That is, to declare they should be rooted out and pulled down, or to make known the divine pur-

9 And at what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to build and to plant it;

10 If it do evil in my sight, that it obey not my voice, then I will repent of the good, where-with I said I would benefit them.

11 ¶ Now therefore go to, speak to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying, Thus saith the LORD; Behold, I frame evil against you, and devise a device against you: ^f return ye now every one from his evil way, and make your ways and your doings good.

12 And they said, ^g There is no hope: but we will walk after our own devices, and we poses concerning them. If that nation, against whom I have pronounced, turn, &c., I will repent, &c.—Repentance in man produces repentance in God. The threatenings of God being conditional, when they are suspended by his long-suffering and mercy, or prevented by the amendment of the persons against whom they are denounced, he is said, in Scripture, to repent; not that the phrase implies that there is any change in him, but that there is a change in us; and that his conduct toward us, provided his denunciations were not conditional, is the same as if he repented or changed his mind. But the reader is desired to see what is said on this subject, Gen. vi. 6.

^f Chap. xxvi. 3; Jonah iii. 10.—^g 2 Kings xxvii. 13; Chapter vii. 3; xxv. 5; xxvi. 13; xxxv. 15.—^h Chap. ii. 25.

Verses 9, 10. If I shall speak concerning a nation to build and to plant—That is, To advance and establish all the true interests of it; if it do evil in my sight, &c.—If it lose its piety and virtue, and become profane and vicious; then will I repent of the good, &c.—I will not proceed with the good work which I was performing in its behalf, but it shall be intermitted; and what favours were further designed it shall be withheld. Thus God changed his purpose concerning Eli's house, 1 Sam. ii. 30; and hurried Israel back into the wilderness, when he had brought them within sight of Canaan; and thus he rejected those lost sheep of the house of Israel who refused to embrace the gospel, notwithstanding the general promises he had made to that people, and even after he had sent his Son to seek and save them. In like manner neither can any particular Christians, nor Christian churches, lay any claim to God's general promise of preserving and finally saving them, any further than they keep close to that rule of faith and manners which he hath prescribed to them in the New Testament.

Verses 11, 12. Now therefore speak to the men of Judah—The Lord now commands his prophet to make a particular application of the more general doctrine which he had before delivered. Thus saith the Lord, Behold, I frame evil against you—I have a work upon the wheel, which, when finished, will effect your ruin; it is therefore your wisdom now to

A. M. 3419. will every one do the imagination of
B. C. 605. his evil heart.

13 Therefore thus saith the LORD; ^h Ask ye now among the heathen, who hath heard such things: the virgin of Israel hath done ⁱ a very horrible thing.

14 Will a man leave ⁴ the snow of Lebanon which cometh from the rock of the field? or shall the cold flowing waters that come from another place be forsaken?

15 Because my people hath forgotten ^k me, return from your evil ways, and make your doings good. And they said, There is no hope.—Thou dost but labour in vain in talking to us. We will walk after our own devices.—We will proceed forward in our old course; and we will every one do the imagination of his evil heart.—It cannot be supposed that they would call the imaginations of their hearts evil; nor does the prophet mean that they actually expressed themselves in these words; but this was the language of their conduct. They gave evident proof that they were determined to continue in their sins.

^h Chapter ii. 10; 1 Cor. v. 1. — ⁱ Chapter v. 30. — ⁴ Or, my fathers for a rock, or, for the snow of Lebanon? shall the running waters be forsaken for the strange cold waters? — ^k Chap. ii. 13, 32; iii. 21; xiii. 25; xvii. 13.

Verses 13, 14. Ask ye now among the heathen.—Such an apostacy as you are guilty of (see verse 15) is not to be paralleled among the heathen. Compare chap. ii. 10. Who hath heard such things.—When did people ever behave toward their idols, which yet were no gods, as my people have behaved toward me? The virgin of Israel.—That people who were dedicated to me as a chaste virgin, have since corrupted themselves, and gone a whoring after idols.

Will a man leave the snow of Lebanon, &c.—“The two similitudes in this verse are evidently designed to illustrate the unnatural and absurd conduct of the Jewish nation in deserting their own God, and adopting the superstitions of a strange idolatry, in preference to the good old paths which God had ordained for them to walk in. As to the first, Lebanon, it must be observed, was the highest mountain in Israel, lying to the north of it, and having its summit almost always covered with snow; from the whiteness of which it is supposed to have derived its name.” See Ancient Univ. Hist. vol. i. book i. p. 570, fol. The same circumstance is also recorded by Tacitus, Hist. lib. v. c. 6. “Præcipuum montium Libanum erigit, mirum dictu, tantos inter ardores opacum fidumque nivibus.” If we follow the translation in our text, the sense is, It is as strange and unreasonable for men to forsake the true God for idols, as it would be for a thirsty traveller to forego the cold refreshing streams that come in his way, flowing from the melting snows of Lebanon, or the clear waters issuing from a pure spring, in order that he might drink of the stagnant waters of some muddy pool. But, it is to be observed, the words a man, and which they have burned incense to ¹ vanity, A. M. 3419. and they have caused them to stumble B. C. 605. in their ways from the ^m ancient paths, to walk in paths, in a way not cast up;

16 To make their land ⁿ desolate, and a perpetual ^o hissing; every one that passeth thereby shall be astonished, and wag his head.

17 ^p I will scatter them ^q as with an east wind before the enemy; ^r I will show them the back, and not the face, in the day of their calamity.

¹ Chapter x. 15; xvi. 19. — ^m Chapter vi. 16. — ⁿ Chapter xix. 8; xlix. 13; l. 13. — ^o 1 Kings ix. 8; Lamentation ii. 15. Micah vi. 16. — ^p Chap. xiii. 24. — ^q Psa. xlviii. 7. — ^r Chap. ii. 27.

cometh, are not in the Hebrew, but supplied by our translators, and considerably alter the sense, which literally is, Will the snow of Lebanon cease from the rock of the field? That is, Will it cease to flow, &c. And by the rock of the field, may be meant the rocks on the level ground on the very top of Lebanon; from which the snow, being melted, flowed down into the vales at the bottom of the mountain: Or, shall the cold overflowing waters, running down, fail? The Vulgate translates the verse to exactly the same sense, “Nunquid deficiet de petra agri nix Libani; aut evelli possunt aquæ, erumpentes frigidæ, et defluentes?” And the LXX. to nearly that sense, Μη ἐκλείψουσιν ἀπὸ πέτρας μασοί, ἡ χιτῶν ἀπὸ τοῦ Λιβάνου; μη ἐκκλίνη ὕδωρ βιαίως ἀνεμῷ φερομενον; Shall the breasts (that is, the springs) fail from the rock, or snow from Lebanon? Shall water, borne along violently by the wind, turn aside? The sense of the verse seems to be, that the Jews ought no more to have failed in their adherence to the true God, and his service, than the snow on mount Lebanon, or the waters which flow from that mountain into the fields under it, ever fail; in other words, That, as the works of nature preserve their order, and fail not of answering the ends for which they were appointed; so the Jews ought not to have failed of performing their duty to, and showing forth the praises of, Him who chose them to be his peculiar people, and conferred singular privileges upon them in order to these very ends.

Verses 15–17. Because my people have forgotten me.—The fountain of living waters; have forgotten what I am in myself, and what I have been, and am still ready to be to them; have lost their knowledge of me, and their remembrance of what I have done for them; they have burned incense to vanity.—To vain idols, the products of men's vain imaginations, and serving no good purpose whatever; and they have caused them to stumble, &c.—“The worship of idols hath perverted them from following the old, beaten track, plainly set forth in the law of Moses, and in the examples of former ages; (see chap. vi. 16;) and hath engaged them in such new and untried ways of worship as will end in their ruin.”—Lowth. To make their land desolate.—Though the Jews did not practise idolatry and other sins with this view,

A. M. 3419. 18 ¶ Then said they, * Come, and
B. C. 605. let us devise devices against Jeremiah; * for the law shall not perish from the priest, nor counsel from the wise, nor the word from the prophet. Come, and let us smite him with the tongue, and let us not give heed to any of his words.

19 Give heed to me, O LORD, and hearken to the voice of them that contend with me.

20 " Shall evil be recompensed for good? for
* they have digged a pit for my soul. Remember that I stood before thee to speak good for them, and to turn away thy wrath from
them.

21 Therefore † deliver up their children to the famine, and † pour out their blood by the force of the sword; and let their wives be bereaved of their children, and be widows; and let their men be put to death; let their young men be slain by the sword in battle.

22 Let a cry be heard from their houses, when thou shalt bring a troop suddenly upon them:
for * they have digged a pit to take me, and hid snares for my feet.

23 Yet, LORD, thou knowest all their counsel against me † to slay me: * forgive not their iniquity, neither blot out their sin from thy sight, but let them be overthrown before thee; deal thus with them in the time of thine anger.

* Chap. xi. 19.—† Lev. x. 11; Mal. ii. 7; John vii. 48, 49.
* Or, for the tongue.—† Psalm cix. 4, 5.—‡ Psalm xxxv. 7; lvii. 6; Verse 22.

† Psalm cix. 9, 10.—* Heb. pour them out.—‡ Verse 20.
† Heb. for death.—§ Psalm xxxv. 4; cix. 14; Chapter xi. 20;
xv. 15.

for they wished nothing less than the desolation of their country; yet they acted as if they wished it, and God had sufficiently warned them it was an effect which would follow upon their conduct. And a perpetual hissing—To be hissed at perpetually by way of insult and scorn, by those who pass by. I will scatter them as with an east wind, &c.—The east wind, being dry and blasting, is commonly used to express the calamities of war, and such like wasting judgments. But the words may perhaps be more intelligibly rendered, As the east wind the stubble, so will I scatter them before the enemy. And I will show them the back and not the face—I will manifest the same aversion from them which they have shown from me; I will not favour but be against them. The metaphor is taken from the custom of kings and princes, which is, to turn their backs on, or go away from,
those supplicants whose petitions they will not grant.

Verse 18. Then said they, Come, &c.—Namely, after they had heard from Jeremiah what God had ordered him to say to them concerning their destruction; for this seems to be understood. Let us devise devices against Jeremiah—Let us accuse him of being a false prophet; for the law shall not perish from the priest, &c.—For his threatenings plainly contradict God's promises made to his people. "They seem to have been incensed against him on much the same ground as the Jews, in aftertimes, were against our Saviour and his apostles. They had persuaded themselves, that God had intended for them a perpetual establishment; and would accordingly provide them with a constant succession of men, in all departments, to preserve and maintain the general welfare; namely, priests to direct in all matters of law and religion; wise statesmen to manage their civil concerns; and prophets to make known to them the immediate will of God on all important and extraordinary occasions.
Upon this presumption they inferred, that Jeremiah, who foretold the contrary, was a false prophet, and,
as such, they determined to punish him."—Blaney.
Let us smite him with the tongue—Let us calumni-

ate and disparage him, traducing him as an enemy to his country. Let us accuse him of crimes against the state, and by that means take away his life; then all his prophecies will die with him. In the margin we read, for the tongue, which may signify, "Let us punish him for his malignant speeches." "But I rather think," says Blaney, "we should render it, Let us smite him on the tongue, that is, on the offending part; alluding to a very significant mode of inflicting punishment, by directing it to that particular member which had the most immediate share in the offence, although here it may possibly carry this general import only, 'Let us punish him so as effectually to silence him.'"

Verses 19–23. Give heed to me, O Lord—The people had determined not to give heed to any of his words, (verse 18,) nor to admit any of his complaints, nor take the least notice of his grievances;
therefore he appeals to God, as an impartial judge, that would hear both sides, as every judge ought to do. It is a matter of comfort to faithful ministers that, if men will not give heed to their preaching, yet God will give heed to their praying. And hearken to the voice of them that contend with me—Hear what they have to say against me, and for themselves, and then make it appear that thou sittest upon the throne judging right. Shall evil be recompensed for good?—And shall it go unpunished? Wilt not thou recompense me good for that evil? see 2 Sam.
xvi. 12. "To render good for good," says Henry,
"is human, evil for evil is brutish, good for evil is Christian, but evil for good is devilish; it is so very absurd and wicked a thing that we cannot think but God will avenge it." They have digged a pit for my soul—That is, They have laid snares for me as for a wild beast; for pits are digged for wild beasts to fall into, that so they may be taken. Therefore the sense is, They have formed a design against my life, and that not in a generous way, by an open assault, against which I might have had an opportunity of defending myself; but in a base, cowardly, clandestine way. Such was the evil they did or devised against him. But see how great the good was which he had done for them: Remember, he says, that I stood before thee to speak good for them—That is, in the execution of my prophetic office, I always interposed, with my prayers, in their behalf, to avert those judgments which, by thy command, I denounced against them. Therefore deliver up their children, &c.—Since they are thus incorrigible, I shall not any more intercede for them, but let those calamities of famine and sword, with which thou hast threatened them, overtake them. Let a cry be heard from their houses, &c.—When they are unexpectedly assaulted by a troop of their enemies, that come to plunder and destroy them. Yet Lord, or, rather, For Lord, thou knowest all their counsel against me, to slay me; forgive not their iniquity, &c.—Compare chap. xi. 20; xv. 15; Psa. lix. 5; on which passages see the notes. Although it redounds to the glory of God's justice that incorrigible sinners should meet with exemplary punishment; yet these strong imprecations are not to be considered as the effusions of an unholy zeal, but as simple prophecies, in which light, we have shown, in our commentary on the Psalms, many similar expressions occurring there are to be considered.

CHAPTER XIX.

In this chapter, (1.) Under the type of breaking a potter's vessel, Jeremiah, in the presence of the elders, priests, and people, foreshows the ruin and desolation of Judah and Jerusalem, for their sins, 1-13. (2.) He repeats the like denunciations in the court of the temple, 14, 15.

A. M. 3399. B. C. 605. THUS saith the LORD, Go and get a potter's earthen bottle, and take of the ancients of the people, and of the ancients of the priests;

2 And go forth unto ^a the valley of the son of Hinnom, which is by the entry of ¹ the east gate, and proclaim there the words that I shall tell thee.

3 ^b And say, Hear ye the word of the LORD, O kings of Judah, and inhabitants of Jerusalem; Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring evil upon this place, the which whosoever heareth, A. M. 3399. his ears shall ^c tingle. B. C. 605.

4 Because they ^d have forsaken me, and have estranged this place, and have burned incense in it unto other gods, whom neither they nor their fathers have known, nor the kings of Judah, and have filled this place with ^e the blood of innocents;

5 ^f They have built also the high places of Baal, to burn their sons with fire for burnt-offerings unto Baal, ^g which I commanded not, nor spake it, neither came it into my mind:

^a Joshua xv. 8; 2 Kings xxiii. 10; Chapter vii. 31.—¹ Heb. the sun gate.—^b Chap. xvii. 20.—^c 1 Sam. iii. 11; 2 Kings xxi. 12.

^d Deut. xxviii. 20; Isa. lxxv. 11; Chap. ii. 13, 17, 19; xv. 6; xvii. 13.—^e 2 Kings xxi. 16; Chap. ii. 34.—^f Chap. vii. 31, 32; xxxii. 35.—^g Lev. xviii. 21.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XIX.

Verses 1, 2. Go and get a potter's earthen bottle—The meaning of this emblem is fully explained in the subsequent verses; and indeed the whole chapter requires little more comment than a reference to the passages in the margin. And take of the ancients of the people—Or, take with thee some of the ancients, &c. By these, men of reputation and eminence are meant, probably such as were members of the Sanhedrim. And of the ancients of the priests—The heads of the four and twenty courses: see 1 Chron. xxiv. 4. Such were the most proper to be witnesses of those things which the prophet was about to say and do. And go unto the valley of the son of Hinnom—A most noted valley, to the east of Jerusalem; which is by the entry of the east gate—By which men entered into the temple; from whence they had a prospect of the valley of Hinnom, which lay south-east of the temple, Josh. xv. 8. The Hebrew is שַׁעַר הַחֲרִית, the gate Harsith, which some interpret, the dung gate, mentioned Neh. ii. 13; others, the potters' gate; the potters' field being near the temple: see Zech. xi. 13.

Verses 3-5. Say, Hear, &c., O kings of Judah—See note on chap. xvii. 20. Behold, I will bring evil upon this place—That is, upon Judah and Jerusalem, so surprising and so dreadful that whosoever heareth, his ears shall tingle—The very report of it shall astonish the hearers. Because they have estranged this place—From me, should be supplied to make the sense clearer; the meaning, it seems, being that, by their worshipping other gods, and committing all sorts of crimes, they had caused God not to look any longer upon their city and country as his, but quite foreign from him. Or, as some interpret the expression, They had strangely abused, and alienated from their intended purposes both Jerusalem, the holy city, and the temple, God's holy house, which were designed for his honour and the support of his kingdom among men. And have filled this place with the blood of innocents—Of the children sacrificed to Moloch: see note on chap. ii.

A. M. 3399. 6 Therefore, behold, the days come, B. C. 605. saith the LORD, that this place shall no more be called Tophet, nor ^hThe valley of the son of Hinnom, but The valley of Slaughter.

7 And I will make void the counsel of Judah and Jerusalem in this place; ⁱ and I will cause them to fall by the sword before their enemies, and by the hands of them that seek their lives: and their ^kcarcasses will I give to be meat for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth.

8 And I will make this city ^ldesolate, and a hissing: every one that passeth thereby shall be astonished and hiss because of all the plagues thereof.

9 And I will cause them to eat the ^mflesh of their sons and the flesh of their daughters, and they shall eat every one the flesh of his friend in the siege and straitness wherewith their enemies, and they that seek their lives, shall straiten them.

^h Josh. xv. 8.—ⁱ Lev. xxvi. 17; Deut. xxviii. 25.—^k Psa. lxxix. 2; Chap. vii. 33; xvi. 4; xxxiv. 20.—^l Chap. xviii. 16; xlix. 13; i. 13.—^m Levit. xxvi. 29; Deut. xxviii. 53; Isa. ix. 20; Lam. iv. 10.

34; and Isa. xxx. 33. They have built also, rather, they have even built the high places of Baal—For the same sin is here expressed which was mentioned in the latter part of the foregoing verse, and the copulative particle, vau, is sometimes used by way of explication; to burn their sons with fire unto Baal—From this, as well as from some other places, it is plain that they slew and burned human victims to Baal as well as to Moloch, if these two names were not promiscuously given, as some suppose they were, to one and the same idol. Which I commanded not, &c.—It seems from this that there were not wanting some who maintained that human sacrifices were pleasing to God.

Verses 6–9. Therefore, behold, the days come—And are at no great distance; that this place shall no more be called Tophet, &c.—In Joshua's time it was called The valley of the son of Hinnom; in after ages, it had the name of Tophet, from the noise of drums and tabrets sounding there while children were burning. Here it is foretold that it should have a new name and be called, The valley of Slaughter. See note on chap. vii. 32, 33. I will make void the counsel, &c., in this place—They shed innocent blood in this place, and in this place God would discomfit them, and cause their blood to be shed by the hands of the Chaldeans. And I will cause them to eat the flesh of their sons and daughters—A terrible judgment threatened by Moses, Deut. xxviii. 53; and actually fulfilled in the siege of Jerusalem. See Lam. iv. 10.

Verses 10–13. Then shalt thou break the bottle,

10 ⁿThen shalt thou break the A. M. 3399 bottle in the sight of the men that B. C. 605. go with thee, 11 And shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; ^o Even so will I break this people and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot ² be made whole again: and they shall ^p bury them in Tophet, till there be no place to bury.

12 Thus will I do unto this place, saith the LORD, and to the inhabitants thereof, and even make this city as Tophet:

13 And the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of the kings of Judah, shall be defiled ^a as the place of Tophet, because of all the houses upon whose ^r roofs they have burned incense unto all the host of heaven, and ^s have poured out drink-offerings unto other gods.

14 Then came Jeremiah from Tophet, whither the LORD had sent him to prophesy; and he stood in ^t the court of the LORD's house; and said to all the people, ⁿ Chapter li. 63, 64.—^o Psalm ii. 9; Isaiah xxx. 14; Lam. iv. 2.—² Heb. be healed.—^p Chapter vii. 32.—^a 2 Kings xxiii. 10.—^r 2 Kings xxiii. 12; Chapter xxxii. 29; Zeph. i. 5. ^s Chapter vii. 18.—^t 2 Chron. xx. 5.

&c.—This was intended to be a symbolical representation of the ruin threatened against them, used in order to strike the beholders more powerfully than mere words could do. Of such symbolical actions as these there are several instances in the Scriptures. Thus saith the Lord, Even so will I break this people—That is, as Jeremiah breaketh the bottle: That cannot be made whole again—That is, the ruin of Jerusalem shall be an utter ruin: no hand can repair it but his that broke it; and if they return to him, though he has torn, he will heal. In fact, Jerusalem was so utterly destroyed by the Chaldeans that there was little left standing of it. So that after their captivity they were obliged to build a new city in the place of the former. And they shall bury them in Tophet—These words are omitted by the LXX.; till there be no place to bury—Till there is no room to bury more; for the meaning is, that the whole valley of Tophet should be so filled with dead bodies, that there should be no room to lay any more there; by which is expressed the greatness of the slaughter. And even make this city as Tophet—A place of slaughter. And the houses of Jerusalem shall be defiled as Tophet—Namely, polluted with dead bodies. Because of the houses upon whose roofs they have burned incense—The houses of the Jews were built with flat roofs, Deut. xxii. 8, and there they dedicated altars to the host of heaven, where they could have a full view of them.

Verses 14, 15. He stood in the court of the Lord's house—The great court, called the outer court, Ezek. xli. 21, supposed to be the same with the new court,

A. M. 3399. 15 Thus saith the LORD of hosts,
B. C. 605. the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring upon this city and upon all her towns all the evil

^a Chapter vii.

mentioned 2 Chron. xx. 5, as having been built since Solomon's time. And said to all the people—Confirming, and probably repeating to them, who had not heard it, what he had said to the ancients in the valley of Tophet. Thus saith the Lord of hosts—Who is well able to make his words good; I will bring upon this city, and upon all her towns—All the cities of Judah and Benjamin are meant which acknowledged Jerusalem for their metropolis, and were subordinate to her. All the evil that I have pro-

that I have pronounced against it, A. M. 3399. because "they have hardened their B. C. 605.
necks, that they might not hear my words.

26; xvii. 23.

nounced against it—As if he had said, Flatter not yourselves with a conceit that God will be better to you than his word. Whatever you may suppose to the contrary, the execution of the divine threatening will fully answer the prediction, and the former will be found, by experience, to be as terrible as the latter represents it to be; because they have hardened their necks—And would not bend them to the yoke of God's commands; and would not hear his words—Would not heed and yield obedience to them.

CHAPTER XX.

We have in this chapter, which is a continuation of the foregoing, (1.) An account of Jeremiah's being beaten and imprisoned by Pashur, captain of the temple; against whom, on his release, he pronounces a terrible sentence, and also against his friends, foretelling their being carried away captives with all Judah unto Babylon, where Pashur, and all that belonged to him, should die in exile, 1-6. (2.) The prophet complains of the mockery of his enemies, and their malicious attempts to hurt him; but professes his trust, that God would still defeat their purposes and avenge his wrongs; and celebrates his deliverance with a song of praise, 7-13. (3.) He bitterly laments his being born to a life of so much sorrow and disquietude, 14-18.

A. M. 3399. NOW Pashur the son of ^aImmer
B. C. 605. the priest, who was also chief governor in the house of the LORD, heard that ^a 1 Chron.

Jeremiah prophesied these things. A. M. 3399.
2 Then Pashur smote Jeremiah B. C. 605. the prophet and put him in the stocks that xxiv. 14.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XX.

Verse 1. Pashur the son of Immer—Pashur was not the immediate son of Immer, but of Melchiah, as is expressly mentioned 1 Chronicles ix. 12, and hereafter, chapter xxi. 1. Immer was one of his predecessors, and head of the sixteenth sacerdotal class, 1 Chron. xxiv. 14. Pashur was not high-priest, as some of the ancients have thought, but only captain, or overseer of the temple. In this capacity he had power to arrest and put in prison the false prophets, and those who caused any disturbance in the temple. This matter is further explained, by Blaney, thus: "The priests being distributed, by David, into twenty-four courses, under as many heads of families, and each of these courses officiating by turns in the temple service; the heads of each course were governors of the sanctuary; or, according to our translation, of the house of God. The meaning then will be, that these heads of the courses had not only the chief ordering of the service of the sanctuary, but were invested also with authority, at least within the precincts of the temple, to maintain peace and good order there. These persons I consider as being the same with those who in the New Testament are styled apxiepεις, chief priests, being next in dignity and power to the high-priest. Pashur, it seems, was the head of the course of Immer. So that, if the course of Immer was at that time upon duty, Pashur was at the same time the acting ruler or commander in the temple. And this I conceive to be implied in the words here used, גִּיד, implying his authority to command, and נָקִיד, that he was then in the exercise of it; and by virtue of that authority he took upon him to punish Jeremiah as a disturber of the peace. I have given this officer, or magistrate," (namely, in his translation,) "the military title of commanding officer, because it was usual to consider the temple as a kind of garrison, held by high-priests under military subordination. And for this reason, no doubt, we find him called by the name of στρατηγος τοῦ ἱεροῦ, captain of the temple, Acts iv. 1, and v. 24, 26. In Luke xxii. 52, captains, στρατηγοί, are spoken of, in the plural number; which may perhaps be thus accounted for. As on the great festivals, not only the priests of the ordinary course, but the whole body of priests, were called upon to assist in the sacrifices; so on account of the multitudes that flocked to the temple at these times, the guards were also necessarily doubled, and, of course, a greater number of captains were on constant duty; and many, if not all these, came to assist in apprehending Jesus, as on a service which might be esteemed hazardous, on account of the number of his disciples."

Verse 2. Then Pashur smote Jeremiah, &c.—He

A. M. 3399. were in the high gate of Benjamin,
B. C. 605. which was by the house of the LORD.

3 And it came to pass on the morrow, that Pashur brought forth Jeremiah out of the stocks. Then said Jeremiah unto him, The LORD hath not called thy name Pashur, but ¹Magor-missabib.

4 For thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will make thee a terror to thyself, and to all thy friends: and they shall fall by the sword of their enemies, and thine eyes shall behold it: and I will give all Judah into the hand of the king of Babylon; and he shall carry them captive into Babylon, and shall slay them with the sword.

5 Moreover I ^bwill deliver all the strength of this city, and all the labours thereof, and all the thought, no doubt, that Jeremiah's speaking so plainly of the overthrow of Jerusalem; and of the miseries which should befall it, deserved that he should be arrested and put in confinement, to prevent his speaking thus freely: and accordingly he treats him as they treated, or rather, ought to have treated, the false prophets. And put him in the stocks—The word הכבדות, here translated the stocks, is rendered the prison by Houbigant, and the house of correction by Blaney. It occurs twice besides, namely, chap. xxix. 26, and 2 Chron. xvi. 10, in both which places it is rendered simply a prison, and is mentioned as a punishment due to; or inflicted on, one who assumed the character of a prophet, without a proper call, or was presumed to have behaved unbecomingly as such. The word which properly signifies the stocks, is סד: see Job xiii. 27, and xxxiii. 11. It is very natural to understand here that Pashur, having caused Jeremiah to be beaten, or scourged, ordered him into confinement afterward; from whence he released him the next day.

¹ That is, fear round about, Psa. xxxi. 13; Verse 10; Chap. vi. 25; xlv. 5; xlix. 29.—² 2 Kings xx. 17; xxiv. 12–16; xxv. 13, &c.; Chap. iii. 24.

Verses 3–5. Jeremiah said, The Lord hath not called—Rather, doth not call thy name Pashur; but Magor-missabib—That is, Terror on every side, or, Terror to all around, as the name is explained in the next verse. God's giving him this name, signifies his changing the circumstances or condition of the person so named, agreeably to the meaning of the name given him, or that he would render him such as he called him. So when God called Abram by the new name of Abraham, he assigns the reason, "For a father of many nations have I made thee," Gen. xvii. 5. I will deliver all the strength of this city—All its wealth, the word חֵסֶק, here used, being frequently translated treasures: see Prov. xv. 6; Ezek. xxii. 25. It may also include whatever strengthened and defended it, especially the men of war; and all the labours thereof—Or, all the workmanship thereof; that is, all the fruit of the people's labours; all precious things thereof, and all the ^{A. M. 3399.} treasures of the kings of Judah will ^{B. C. 605.}

I give into the hand of their enemies, which shall spoil them, and take them, and carry them to Babylon.

6 And thou, Pashur, and all that dwell in thy house, shall go into captivity: and thou shalt come to Babylon, and there thou shalt die, and shalt be buried there, thou, and all thy friends, to whom thou hast ^oprophesied lies.

7 ¶ O LORD, thou hast deceived me, and I was ²deceived: ^dthou art stronger than I, and hast prevailed: ^eI am in derision daily, every one mocketh me.

8 For since I spake, I cried out, ^fI cried violence and spoil; because the word of the LORD

^o Chapter xiv. 13, 14; xxviii. 15; xxix. 21.—³ Or, enticed.
^d Chapter i. 6, 7.—^e Lamentation iii. 14.—^f Chapter vi. 7.

their fine buildings, or whatever its artificers had erected with labour and cost; and all the precious things thereof—Whatever was valuable in the eyes of the greatest persons among them; will I give into the hands of their enemies—The Babylonians shall spoil and make a prey of them all.

Verse 7. O Lord, thou hast deceived me, &c.—This is a very harsh and improper translation of the prophet's words, פָּתִיתִי וְאִפְתִּי, which properly and literally signify, Thou hast persuaded me, and I was persuaded. Some, to make the sense more clear, supply a few words, and make the whole sentence stand thus; O Lord, thou hast persuaded me to carry thy commands to thy people, and I was persuaded: thou art stronger than I, and hast prevailed—That is, "It was sore against my will, that I undertook the prophetic office, which I would gladly have declined, chap. i. 6. But thy commands and inspiration did, in a manner, constrain me to it." The occasion of the words was this: "The prophet had met with a large share of ill usage, from an ungrateful people, in return for the faithful discharge of his prophetic office. Under these his calamitous circumstances he looks up to God, and appeals to him, the searcher of hearts, as his witness, that it was not through any ambition of his own that he had entered upon that invidious office; nor had he taken upon him, of his own accord, to reprove his countrymen: but he had done all in pure obedience to the divine command. He would gladly have declined the office, but God would not suffer him: wherefore, hereupon he says, speaking to the Almighty, Thou hast persuaded me, &c. The passage carries in it a lively idea of the prophet's great modesty, and profound humility, in not affecting high things or shining offices; but submitting, however, to the burden of them, in obedience to the will of God." See Waterland's Script. Vind., part iii. page 84.

Verses 8, 9. For since I spake, I cried out, I cried

A. M. 3399. was made a reproach unto me, and
B. C. 605. a derision, daily.

9 Then I said, I will not make mention of him, nor speak any more in his name. But his word was in my heart as a ^s burning fire shut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing, and ^h I could not stay.

10 ¶ ⁱ For I heard the defaming of many, fear on every side. Report, say they, and we will report it. ³ All ^k my familiars watched for my halting, saying, Peradventure he will be enticed, and we shall prevail against him, and we shall take our revenge on him.

^s Job xxxii. 18, 19; Psa. xxxix. 3.—^h Job xxxii. 18; Acts xviii. 5.—ⁱ Psalm xxxi. 13.—³ Heb. every man of my peace.
^k Job xix. 19; Psa. xli. 9; lv. 13, 14; Luke xi. 53, 54.

violence and spoil—Or, rather, as Houbigant renders it, For since I spake, and cried against iniquity, and denounced desolation, the word of the Lord, &c.—Blaney's translation is nearly to the same sense: For as often as I speak, whether I cry out against injustice or proclaim devastation, the word of Jehovah is turned against me into matter of reproach and derision continually. The prophet means that, upon account of declaring what God had revealed to him, he was reckoned an enemy to his country, and a false prophet. Then I said—Namely, within myself, for he did not speak this to any one; I will not make mention of him—Or, of it, namely, the word of God, or the message God had appointed him to deliver; nor speak any more in his name—I resolved no more to declare what God had revealed to me concerning the calamities which he was about to bring on Judah and Jerusalem. But his word was in my heart as a burning fire—It glowed inwardly, and must have vent: I found myself so pressed in spirit, felt such a burning ardour within my breast, such an immediate and powerful impulse of the prophetic spirit constraining me to speak, that I could no more be easy without executing God's commands, than if a burning fire had been shut up in my bones. The conviction of his own mind that he ought to speak, his zeal for the glory of God, his indignation at the sins of the people, and his compassion for their souls, would not suffer him to rest, or allow him to forbear declaring God's message.

Verses 10, 11. For I heard the defaming of many—The slanderous, injurious reports that were raised concerning me; fear on every side—Hebrew, magor-missabib; as if he had said, The name given to Pashur would have suited me; fear, or cause for fear, was on every side of me. These words are found verbatim in the original, (Psa. xxxi. 13.) where the sense of them seems to be exactly the same as here, namely, from the slanderous reports raised upon him, he had reason to apprehend some evil design against his life, as well from treacherous friends as from open enemies. Report, say they, &c.—This seems to be spoken of the enemies of the mighty terrible one: therefore my per- B. C. 605.

11 But ¹ the LORD is with me as a A. M. 3399.

secutors shall stumble, and they shall not ^m prevail; they shall be greatly ashamed; for they shall not prosper: their ⁿ everlasting confusion shall never be forgotten.

12 But, O LORD of hosts, that ^o triest the righteous, and seest the reins and the heart, ^p let me see thy vengeance on them: for unto thee have I opened my cause.

13 Sing unto the LORD, praise ye the LORD: for ^q he hath delivered the soul of the poor from the hand of evil-doers.

¹ Chapter i. 8, 19.—^m Chap. xv. 20; xvii. 18.—ⁿ Chapter xxiii. 40.—^o Chap. xi. 20; xvii. 10.—^p Psa. liv. 7; lix. 10.
^q Psa. xxxv. 9, 10; cix. 30, 31.

prophet, exciting one another to accuse him of being in the interest of the Babylonians against his country. Blaney joins this clause with the preceding, thus: Report ye terror all around, and we will report it: all my familiar friends watch for my halting; perhaps, say they, he may be drawn aside, so that we may prevail against him, and we may take our revenge of him. But, &c.—The prophet, having given vent to his painful apprehensions in the preceding gloomy reflections, begins here to rise above his fears, and to encourage himself in his God. The Lord is with me—Is on my side, to take my part against my enemies, and to defend me from their malicious designs upon me; as a mighty and terrible one—Mighty to defend, support, and save me, and terrible to confound and avenge me of them! The Lord had said to him, when he first undertook the prophetic office, (chap. i. 8,) Be not afraid of their faces: for I am with thee to deliver thee. This promise he now recollects, and confiding in the power, love, and faithfulness of God to make it good, he concludes that though he had many enemies who pursued after his life, he should be protected, and they should fail of accomplishing their wicked purpose. Therefore my persecutors shall stumble—In their ways of violence, and not prevail against me. They shall be greatly ashamed—Of what they have done, or shall be brought to shame for it. Their everlasting confusion—That is, their ignominy and disgrace; shall never be forgotten—They shall not forget it themselves, but it shall be to them a constant and lasting vexation whenever they think of it; and others shall not forget it, but it shall leave upon them an indelible reproach.

Verses 12, 13. But, O Lord, that triest the righteous—That triest their faith and patience, in order to the farther purification of their souls, and the increase of these and all their other graces; or, who takest cognizance of them, and of every cause in which they are interested; and who dost not judge in their favour with partiality, but searchest the reins and the heart; let me see thy vengeance on them—See note on chap. xi. 20. For unto thee have I opened my cause—As to a just judge, who wilt not

A. M. 3399. 14 ¶ Cursed be the day wherein
B. C. 605. I was born: let not the day wherein my mother bare me be blessed.

15 Cursed be the man who brought tidings to my father, saying, A man-child is born unto thee; making him very glad.

16 And let that man be as the cities which the LORD overthrew, and repented not: and

^r Job iii. 3; Chap. xv. 10.—^s Gen. xix. 25.—^t Ch. xviii. 22.

fail to do me justice. Sing unto the Lord—The prophet here rises higher, from prayer to praise. The clouds of darkness and doubt which enveloped his mind are dispersed, and his complaints silenced and turned into thanksgivings. He has now an entire confidence in that God whom (verse 7) he was distrusting, and stirs up himself to praise that name which he had almost resolved (verse 9) no more to make mention of. And it was the lively exercise of faith in the word and promise of God that made this happy change in his mind, that scattered the gloom which surrounded it, and turned his sorrow into joy. For he hath delivered the soul of the poor, &c.—He means especially himself, his own poor soul: he hath delivered me formerly when I was in distress, and now of late out of the hand of Pashur; and he will continue to deliver, 2 Cor. i. 10; from the hand of evil-doers—So that they have not yet gained, and will not be able to gain, their ends.

Verse 14. Cursed be the day, &c.—If the reader be surprised at this sudden change of the prophet's discourse, from joyful thanks for deliverance to bitter complaints, he must observe that the order of time is not strictly observed in the prophetic writings, nor does the discourse always go on in a regular series. Therefore, though these complaints are placed immediately following a thanksgiving, it does not follow that they were pronounced immediately after it. In the following chapters of Jeremiah, it is very evident the order of time is not kept; and it is not unlikely that these words of complaint were uttered before the foregoing, which are expressive of confidence in God and gratitude for deliverance; namely, at a time when his sense of present evils, or his prospect of those just at hand, produced in his mind the most pungent grief and the greatest perturbation. They represent, it seems, the melancholy thoughts which oppressed him while he was struggling with the malice of his enemies, and, as Lowth justly observes, are to be considered, not as expressions of indignation and malice, but rather of mourning and sorrow; or, as a lamentation written in a poetical strain, like a Lessus, Nenia, or mournful ditty, such as the mourning women used to sing, (see note on chap. ix. 17,) wherein strong poetical figures were wont to be used, and all the circumstances brought in, which were calculated to raise the passions, but which it would be extremely wrong to interpret in a strict and literal sense. The expressions here used are so similar to those in Job. iii., let him hear the cry in the morning, A. M. 3399 and the shouting at noon-tide; B. C. 605.

17 Because he slew me not from the womb,
or that my mother might have been my grave;
and her womb to be always great with me.

18 Wherefore came I forth out of the womb to see labour and sorrow, that my days should be consumed with shame?

^u Job iii. 10, 11.—^x Job iii. 20.—^y Lam. iii. 1.

that they seem to have been borrowed from thence; and the reader is referred to the notes on that chapter for our views of them. Bishop Lowth has cited other similar instances of grief, discharging itself in invectives and bitter wishes against objects equally blameless and undeserving; with those which our prophet has singled out. Among the rest is the following exclamation in David's celebrated lamentation over Saul and Jonathan, 2 Sam. i. 21, "Ye mountains of Gilboa, let there be no dew, neither rain upon you, nor fields of offering." Upon which the bishop thus descends: "All which if you were to bring to the standard of cool and dispassionate reason, what could appear more absurd? But, if you have an eye to nature, and the ordinary flow of the passions, what more genuine, more exact? The falling upon a wrong cause, instead of the right, though a fault in logic, is sometimes an excellence in poetry; because the leading principle in the former is right reason, in the latter it is passion."—De Sacr. Poes. Heb. Prælect. 23. Let not the day, wherein my mother bare me be blessed—Let it not be celebrated with those good wishes and expressions of joy which are wont to be used on birth-days.

Verses 15–18. Cursed be the man, &c.—As in the forms of rejoicing upon a birth-day they blessed every person and thing concerned in the birth, and said, Blessed be the womb that bare thee, and the like, and he that brought the joyful news was always rewarded, so in the forms of sorrow for the miserable they used quite the contrary expressions. Let that man be as the cities, &c.—Namely, Sodom and Gomorrah; let him be looked upon as a sad spectacle. Let him hear the cry in the morning, &c.—By these expressions he means the cries, shouts, and noises that enemies make when they break in upon a place in a hostile manner. Because he slew me not, &c.—Or, because I was not slain; from the womb. Wherefore came I forth to see—That is, to experience; labour and sorrow?—Seeing being frequently put to express any sensation. As if the prophet had said, "I speak thus in the bitterness of my soul; when I consider how much better it would have been that I had never been born, or that I had given up the ghost immediately on my birth, than to lead a life of continual sorrow and misery." These various expressions show us to what a height the tide of perturbation swelled at this time in this good man's heart, and what need we have to pray to be delivered from the power of our own passions

CHAPTER XXI.

From the first two verses of this chapter we learn that the predictions and warnings contained in it were delivered in answer to a message sent by King Zedekiah, when Nebuchadnezzar was coming to make war against him. By this circumstance, and others of a similar kind, it evidently appears that the prophecies and discourses of this book are not placed therein in the same order in which they were delivered, for there are several chapters after this which concern Jehoahaz, Jehoiakim, and Jeconiah, who all reigned before Zedekiah. We have here, (1.) The message which Zedekiah sent to the prophet, to desire him to inquire of the Lord for them, 1, 2. (2.) In answer to that message, Jeremiah, in the name of God, foretels the certain and inevitable ruin of the city, and the fruitlessness of their attempts for its preservation, 3-7. (3.) He advises the people to make the best they could of their situation, by surrendering themselves to Nebuchadnezzar in due time, 8-10. (4.) He advises the king and his family to repent of their wickedness, and execute just judgment, and not to trust to the strength of Jerusalem, which should certainly be destroyed, 11-14.

A. M. 3414. THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, when King Zedekiah sent unto him ^a Pashur the son of Melchiah, and ^b Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, saying,

2. ^c Inquire, I pray thee, of the LORD for us; for Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon maketh war against us; if so be that the LORD will deal with us according to all his wondrous works, that he may go up from us.

3. ¶ Then said Jeremiah unto them, Thus shall ye say to Zedekiah:

4. Thus saith the LORD God of Israel; Behold, I will turn back the weapons of war that are in your hands, wherewith ye fight against the king of Babylon, and against the Chaldeans, which besiege you without the walls, and ^d I will assemble them into the midst of this city.

5. And I myself will fight against you with an ^e outstretched hand and with a strong arm, even in anger, and in fury, and in great wrath.

6. And I will smite the inhabitants of this city, both man and beast: they shall die of a great pestilence.

7. And afterward, saith the LORD, ^f I will deliver Zedekiah king of Judah, and his servants, and the people, and such as are left in this city

^a Chapter xxxviii. 1.—^b 2 Kings xxv. 18; Chapter xxix. 25; xxxvii. 3.

^c Chapter xxxvii. 3, 7.—^d Isaiah xlii. 4.—^e Exodus vi. 6. ^f Chap. xxxvii. 17; xxxix. 5; lxi. 9.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXI.

Verse 1. The word which came to Jeremiah, when King Zedekiah sent unto him—The occasion of Zedekiah's sending the message here mentioned to Jeremiah, has, by some commentators, been confounded with that in chap. xxxvii. "But I think," says Blaney, "they are clearly and undeniably distinct one from the other. From the reply given to that in chapter xxxvii., it is manifest that the Chaldeans, who had been besieging Jerusalem for some time had already raised the siege, and were gone to meet the Egyptian army, leaving the Jews in great hopes that they would never return again. But the terms of this message seem to imply, that the king of Babylon had but just commenced his hostilities against Judah, of which Zedekiah informs the prophet, as of a matter that might not yet have come to his certain knowledge; and desires him to intercede with God, that he would divert the storm by some such extraordinary interposition as he had been wont to manifest in favour of his people. The answer likewise takes no notice of any siege or operations past; but simply regards the future, which it is declared should end unhappily, because God would take an active part against the inhabitants of Judah, and would deliver both their city, and also the king and his people, into the hands of their merciless enemies. The time of this transaction, therefore, I conceive to be the ninth year of Zedekiah, previous to the siege of Jerusalem, which began in the tenth month of that year."

Verse 2. Inquire, I pray thee, of the Lord for us—As Zedekiah was not one of the best, so he was not one of the worst of the kings of Judah. Having some reverence for God, he sends the prophet to inquire of him. Or, as the word שׁוּא, signifies, to seek or apply to God by prayer and supplication: see Isa. lv. 6. If so be the Lord will deal with us, &c.—If he will show his wonderful power, in giving us a total deliverance from the hands of our enemies, the Chaldeans. If they had attended to the predictions of the prophets they would not have made this inquiry of Jeremiah; for all the things which had happened to them already, had been predicted by the prophets. But perhaps they flattered themselves that all God's threatenings would not be executed; or that they had been executed already, in great numbers of them being carried into captivity, first in the reign of Jehoiakim, and afterward in that of Jehoiachin.

Verses 4-7. Behold, I will turn back the weapons, &c.—Instead of doing execution upon your enemies, they shall hurt yourselves, and be the occasion of your own destruction. God will as visibly appear against you as if a miraculous wind were to drive back your own darts and arrows, and turn them upon yourselves. And I myself will fight against you—By the executioners of my wrath, the sword, the famine, and the pestilence. I will plainly appear on your enemies' side, by the success I will give to their arms. And I will smite the inhabitants of this city—I the Lord will do it, and it shall evidently appear

A. M. 3414. from the pestilence, from the sword, B. C. 590. and from the famine, into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of those that seek their life: and he shall smite them with the edge of the sword; ^s he shall not spare them, neither have pity, nor have mercy.

8 ¶ And unto this people thou shalt say, Thus saith the LORD; Behold, ^h I set before you the way of life, and the way of death.

9 He that ⁱ abideth in this city shall die by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth out, and falleth to the Chaldeans that besiege you, he shall, A. M. 3414. live, and ^k his life shall be unto him B. C. 590. for a prey.

10 For I have ^l set my face against this city for evil, and not for good, saith the LORD: ^m it shall be given into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall ⁿ burn it with fire.

11 ¶ And touching the house of the B. C. 590. king of Judah, say, Hear ye the word of the LORD;

12 O house of David, thus saith the LORD; ^o Execute ^p judgment in the morning, and deliver him that is spoiled out of the hand of the ^s Deuteron. xxviii. 50; 2 Chron. xxvi. 17.—^h Deuteron. xxx. 19.—ⁱ Chap. xxxviii. 2, 17, 18.—^k Chap. xxxix. 18; xlv. 5. Lev. xvii. 10; Chap. xlv. 11; Amos ix. 4.

^m Chapter xxxviii. 3.—ⁿ Chapter xxxiv. 2, 22; xxxvii. 10; xxxviii. 18, 23; lii. 13.—^o Chapter xxii. 3; Zechariah vii. 9. ^p Heb. Judge.—^q Psa. ci. 8.

to be my work; both man and beast—Even the beasts shall perish, both those that are for food, and those that are for service in war. They shall die of a great pestilence—Which shall rage within the walls, while their enemies are encamped about them. Though the walls and gates of Jerusalem may for a time keep out the Chaldeans, they cannot keep out God's judgments. His arrows of pestilence can reach those that think themselves safe from other arrows. And I will deliver Zedekiah, &c.—The king himself, and all the people that escape the sword, famine, and pestilence, shall fall into the hands of Nebuchadnezzar and the Chaldeans. And he shall smite them with the edge of the sword—Zedekiah himself was not put to death, but carried to Babylon, where he died: see chap. xxiv. 5. But his sons and his great men were slain by the command of Nebuchadnezzar, 2 Kings xxv. 7, 8. "It is common in all writers to express that indefinitely which is true of the greater part of the persons concerned."—Lowth. He shall not spare, neither have pity nor mercy—These three synonymous terms are used by way of emphasis, to express the severe revenge the Babylonians would take of them. The inhabitants of Jerusalem must indeed have been sensible at last, that they could expect little or no mercy, since they had rebelled three times against the king of Babylon.

Ver. 8-10. And unto this people thou shalt say, &c.—By the civil message which the king sent to Jeremiah it appeared that both he and the people began to have respect for him; but the reply which God obliged him to make was sufficient to crush that little respect, and to exasperate them against him more than ever. Behold, I set before you the way of life, and the way of death—Both the law and the prophets had often set before them life and death in another sense; life, if they would obey the voice of God; death, if they should persist in disobedience, Deut. xxx. 19. But they had slighted that way of life which would have made them truly happy; to upbraid them with which the prophet here uses similar expressions, which signify, not as those of Moses, a fair proposal, but a melancholy dilemma, advising them, of two evils, to choose the least. And that lesser evil, a shameful and wretched captivity, is all the life now left for them to propose to themselves. He that abideth in this city—And trusts to it to secure him; shall die by the sword—Without the city; or by the famine, or pestilence within it. But he that goeth out, and falleth to the Chaldeans—Giving up his vain hopes of safety in the city, and bringing his spirit down to his condition; shall live—God had declared it to be his purpose to give up Judea and the neighbouring countries to the dominion of the Chaldeans: so they who would comply with his declared will should have their lives spared, the rest should be destroyed as fighting against God. And his life shall be unto him for a prey—That is, he shall save his life with as much difficulty and hazard as a prey is taken from the mighty: he shall escape but very narrowly. Or, he shall think himself a considerable gainer by escaping with his life in so general a destruction. For I have set my face against this city—To lay it waste and not to protect it; for evil—Which shall have no good mixed with it, no mitigation, or merciful allay; and, therefore, you have no way of safety, but begging quarter of the Chaldeans, and surrendering yourselves prisoners of war. In vain did Rabshakeh persuade the Jews to do this, while they had God for them, Isa. xxxvi. 16. But it was the best course they could take now, God being against them.

Verses 11, 12. And touching the house of the king of Judah, &c.—The house of Zedekiah, the court, or those who were magistrates. Hear ye the word of the Lord—These, how great soever, are not excused from the common obligations which lie upon all to listen to and obey the revelations of the divine will. Execute judgment in the morning—Do it diligently, do it quickly, and do not delay to do justice upon appeals made to you, and tire out your poor petitioners as you have done. Those magistrates that would fill their places well, and do their duty, must rise early. This is so expressed because it was usual for kings and judges to sit for the administra-

A. M. 3414. oppressor, lest my fury go out like fire, B. C. 590. and burn that none can quench it, because of the evil of your doings.

13 Behold, ^a I am against thee, O ² inhabitant of the valley, and rock of the plain, saith the LORD; which say, ¹ Who shall come down

^a Ezekiel xiii. 8.—² Heb. inhabitant.—¹ Chapter xlix. 4.
³ Heb. visit upon.

tion of justice in a morning. Lest my fury go out like fire—Many commentators have been of opinion that this prophecy, from the 11th verse, belongs to the same subject with chapter xxii., and relates to the time of Jehoiakim. And from these words, lest my fury, &c., they infer, that it was antecedent to the prophecy at the beginning of the chapter, and to that peremptory decree published against the king's house, mentioned verse 7. of this chapter. "But I cannot help thinking," says Blaney, "that this latter part is but a continuation of the same prophecy with which the chapter begins; for the house of David was still to be visited with more calamities than those which had befallen it in the days of Jehoiakim. And how peremptory soever the decree may sound, (verse 7,) we must remember the rule laid down concerning such decrees, (chap. xviii. 7, 8,) none of which, it seems, are irreversible on the condition of a change of conduct. And, though God may well be supposed to know when no such ground of reversal will take place, yet it is agreeable to the justice of his providence repeatedly to admonish sinners of the means by which his judgments may be avoided, that they may have none to blame but themselves when the threatened vengeance overtakes them." against us? or who shall enter into our habitations? A. M. 3414. B. C. 590.

14 But I will ³ punish you according to the ^a fruit of your doings, saith the LORD; and I will kindle a fire in the forest thereof; and ¹ it shall devour all things round about it.

^a Proverbs i. 31; Isaiah iii. 10, 11.—¹ 2 Chronicles xxxvi. 19; Chap. lii. 13.

Verses 13, 14. Behold, I am against thee, O inhabitant of the valley, and rock of the plain—A description of Jerusalem, which was built in part upon the rocky mountain of Zion, but a great part of it was in the valley; and the higher mountains about mount Zion made that mountain itself, in comparison with them, to appear as a valley. Which say, Who shall come down against us?—They confided in the strength of their situation, as the Jebusites, the ancient inhabitants of the place, had formerly done. "Yet how many times," says Bishop Newton, "was Jerusalem taken, though it was a very strong place and wonderfully fortified, both by nature and art! It was taken by Shishak king of Egypt, by Nebuchadnezzar, by Antiochus Epiphanes, by Pompey, by Socius, and Herod, before its final destruction by Titus." I will kindle a fire in the forest thereof—The word forest is often metaphorically taken for a city in the prophetic writings. See chap. xxii. 7; Ezek. xx. 46; Zech. xi. 1. Or it may mean the forest of Lebanon, or their houses made of wood cut out of that forest, especially those of the royal family, or their idolatrous groves. And it shall devour all things round about it—And this fire shall not end in the destruction of this city, but shall totally destroy all the adjacent country.

CHAPTER XXII.

In this chapter we have, (1.) An address to the king of Judah, his servants and people, recommending an inviolable adherence to right and justice, as the only means of establishing the throne, and preventing the ruin of both prince and people, 1–9. (2.) The captivity of Shallum is declared to be irreversible, 10–12. (3.) Jehoiakim is severely reprov'd for his tyrannical oppressions, and his miserable end foretold, 13–19. (4.) His family is threatened with a continuance of the like calamities; the fall and captivity of his son Jeconiah are explicitly set forth, and the perpetual exclusion of his seed from the throne, 20–30.

A. M. 3395. THUS saith the LORD; Go down to the house of the king of Judah, B. C. 609. and speak there this word, ^a Chap.

2 And say, ^a Hear the word of the LORD, O king of Judah, that sittest upon the throne of David, thou, and thy ser-

xvii. 20.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXII.

Verses 1, 2. Thus saith the Lord—The prophecy which follows to chap. xxiii. 9, was evidently delivered in the reign of Jehoiakim; for it speaks of his immediate predecessor as already gone into captivity, and foretels the death of Jehoiakim himself. Blaney thinks it followed immediately after what is said in the sixth and xxth chapters to have passed in the temple precincts, from whence, as from a higher ground, he supposes the prophet is ordered to go down to the house of the king of Judah. Hear, &c., O king of Judah—Namely, Jehoiakim, (verse 18,) who was established upon the throne by the king of Egypt, in the place of Jehoahaz, in the year of the

A. M. 3395. vants, and thy people that enter in
B. C. 609. by these gates :

3 Thus saith the LORD ; ^b Execute ye judgment and righteousness, and deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor : and ^c do no wrong, do no violence to the stranger, the fatherless, nor the widow, neither shed innocent blood in this place.

4 For if ye do this thing indeed, ^d then shall there enter in by the gates of this house kings sitting ¹ upon the throne of David, riding in chariots, and on horses, he, and his servants, and his people.

5 But if ye will not hear these words, ^e I swear by myself, saith the LORD, that this house shall become a desolation.

^b Chap. xxi. 12.—^c Verse 17.—^d Chap. xvii. 25.—¹ Heb. for David upon his throne.—^e Heb. vi. 13, 17.

world 3394, according to Archbishop Usher. That sittest on the throne of David—Thus the prophet puts him in mind of the promises God had made to David's family, if they would live in obedience to his will, 1 Kings viii. 25. Thou, and thy servants, and thy people—Thy courtiers and other officers, who attend continually on thee, comprehending likewise all the people of the city : all whom this word of the Lord concerned ; that enter in by these gates—Namely, the gates of the palace, whereby they went in to the king. The king was evidently at the gate of his palace, with his principal officers, when Jeremiah presented himself before him.

Verses 3-5. Thus saith the Lord, Execute ye judgment, &c.—That is, administer justice to all your subjects. The stranger, the fatherless, and the widow are particularly named, as persons who have the fewest friends, and therefore are the most exposed to the tyranny, injustice, and oppression of the great. And do no wrong, do no violence, &c.—Compare verse 17, where we find Jehoiakim charged with these sins. For if ye do this thing indeed—If ye will, not in pretence, but reality, do what is just and right to every one, and see that inferior magistrates, acting under you do so too ; then shall there enter, &c.—See the note on chap. xvii. 25, where, instead of the gates of this house, the text reads, the gates of this city. And the context here shows, that the prophecy is directed, not only to the king's court in particular, but likewise to the whole city of Jerusalem, one part of which was called the city of David ; and the whole looked upon as a royal city, and the place of their king's residence. Kings sitting upon the throne of David, &c.—There shall then be a succession of kings, and that uninterrupted, reigning in Judah, of David's line, kings who shall enjoy a perfect tranquillity, and live in great state and dignity. But if ye will not hear these words—That is, if ye will not so hear as to obey them. I swear by myself, saith the Lord—That is, I resolve absolutely upon it ; for God is not in Scripture said to swear,

6 For thus saith the LORD unto the A. M. 3395 king's house of Judah ; Thou art ^{B. C. 609.} Gilead unto me, and the head of Lebanon :
yet surely I will make thee a wilderness, and cities which are not inhabited.

7 And I will prepare destroyers against thee, every one with his weapons : and they shall cut down ^f thy choice cedars, ^g and cast them into the fire.

8 And many nations shall pass by this city, and they shall say every man to his neighbour, ^h Wherefore hath the LORD done thus unto this great city ?

9 Then they shall answer, ⁱ Because they have forsaken the covenant of the LORD their God, and worshipped other gods, and served them.

^f Isa. xxxvii. 24.—^g Chapter xxi. 14.—^h Deut. xxix. 24, 25 ; 1 Kings ix. 8, 9.—ⁱ 2 Kings xxii. 17 ; 2 Chron. xxxiv. 25.

unless as speaking after the manner of men, and according to the actions of men ; so that whenever this expression is employed, it is only to signify, that God would not revoke the thing spoken of, but that it should be immutable. Here, therefore, it implies that the sentence pronounced should certainly be executed, and that nothing could reverse it but the people's sincere repentance, which condition is expressed in the foregoing part of the verse. See Heb. vi. 17. This house shall become a desolation—This palace of the kings of Judah shall fare no better than other habitations in Jerusalem, sin as certainly effecting the ruin of the houses of princes as those of mean men.

Verses 6-9. For thus saith the Lord unto, or, concerning, the king's house : Thou art Gilead unto me, &c. ; yet surely, &c.—“Though thou wert never so precious in my sight, as valuable for riches and plenty as the fat pastures of Gilead, and thy buildings as beautiful for their stateliness as the tall cedars of Lebanon, yet unless thy princes and people reform, thou shalt become nothing but ruin and desolation.” Thus Lowth. But Blaney translates the verse, Gilead art thou through me, O summit of Lebanon ; surely I will make thee a desert, cities not inhabited. Which he interprets as follows. “Lebanon was the highest mountain in Israel, and was therefore an apt emblem of the reigning family advanced to the highest rank of dignity in the state. Gilead was the richest and most fertile part of the country. The meaning then is plainly this, By my providence thou art not only supreme in rank, but hast been rendered exceedingly wealthy and flourishing. But the same power that raised will likewise be exerted in reducing thee to the lowest state of indigence and distress.” And I will prepare—Hebrew, וקדשתי, I will sanctify destroyers against thee—That is, I will solemnly appoint and set them apart for the work of destroying thee. And they shall cut down thy choice cedars—Having compared the king's palace, or the city of Jerusalem, to Leba-

A. M. 3395. 10 ¶ Weep ye not for ^k the dead, B. C. 609, neither bemoan him: but weep sore for him ^l that goeth away: for he shall return no more, nor see his native country.

11 For thus saith the LORD touching ^m Shallum the son of Josiah king of Judah, which reigned instead of Josiah his father, ⁿ which went forth out of this place; He shall not return thither any more:

12 But he shall die in the place whither they have led him captive, and shall see this land no more.

13 ¶ ^o Wo unto him that buildeth his house by unrighteousness, and his chambers by wrong; ^p that useth his neighbour's A. M. 3395. service without wages, and giveth him B. C. 609. not for his work;

14 That saith, I will build me a wide house and ^q large chambers, and cutteth him out ^r windows; and it is ceiled with cedar, and painted with vermilion.

15 Shalt thou reign, because thou closest thyself in cedar? ^s did not thy father eat and drink, and do judgment and justice, and then ^t it was well with him?

16 He judged the cause of the poor and needy; then it was well with him: was not this to know me? saith the LORD.

^k 2 Kings xxii. 20.—^l Verse 11.—^m 1 Chronicles iii. 15; 2 Kings xxiii. 30.—ⁿ 2 Kings xxiii. 34.—^o 2 Kings xxiii. 35; Ver. 18.—^p Lev. xix. 13; Deut. xxiv. 14, 15; Mic. iii. 10; Hab.

ii. 9; James v. 4.—^q Hebrew, through aired.—^r Or, my windows.—^s 2 Kings xxiii. 25.—^t Psalm cxxviii. 2; Isaiah iii. 10.

non, verse 6, pursuing the metaphor, he threatens to destroy them and their most beautiful edifices by the Chaldean army. And many nations—Persons of many nations; shall pass by this city, &c.—Namely, when on their travels; and they shall say, Wherefore hath the Lord done thus unto this great city—They who have heard that this had been a very strong, rich, and populous city, and that it had been called the city of God, and the place of his especial residence, would be astonished to find it, through his judgments, a scene of ruin and desolation, and would inquire how such an effect came to be produced. Thus was fulfilled that threatening of Moses, Deut. xxviii. 37, that God would make the Jews an astonishment to other nations. See likewise 1 Kings ix. 8. Then shall they answer—Some shall answer, or they shall answer one another. The reason is so obvious that it shall be ready in every man's mouth. Because they have forsaken the covenant of Jehovah their God; have revolted from their allegiance to him, and from the duty which they had solemnly covenanted to perform, and worshipped other gods and served them—In contempt of him; and therefore he gave them up to this destruction.

Verse 10. Weep ye not for the dead—This seems to be spoken of King Josiah, killed in battle with the Egyptians: see 2 Kings xxiii. 29, 30, concerning whom the prophet here says that he was rather to be rejoiced over than lamented, since, by being taken soon out of life, he escaped the terrible evils which came upon his country. But weep sore for him that goeth away, for he shall return no more—Namely, Jehoahaz, who was carried captive into Egypt by Pharaoh-necho, and never more returned to his country. He is called Shallum in the next verse, but in all other places Jehoahaz. It seems probable that Shallum was his name before he ascended the throne, and that he changed it for Jehoahaz, as his brothers Eliakim and Mattaniah also assumed the names of Jehoikim and Zedekiah on the like occasion, 2 Kings xxiii. 34; xxiv. 17.

Verses 13–16. Wo unto him that buildeth his house by unrighteousness, &c.—"The prophet proceeds to denounce God's judgments against Jehoikim, (see verse 18,) who, it seems, built himself a stately palace in those calamitous times, and took no care to pay the wages of the workmen; but maintained his own luxury by the oppression of those who were to live by their labour: a crying sin, and too common among the great men of the world, severely prohibited both in the Old and New Testament."—Lowth. See Deut. xxiv. 14, 15; James v. 4. That saith, I will build me a wide house and large chambers—Hebrew, עליית כריות, chambers to the wind; that is, exposed, or open, to wind on every side. They used to enjoy the cool air in these chambers; the windows being so placed that they might receive the wind from whatever quarter it came. Shalt thou reign because thou closest thyself in cedar?—Will a house, finely adorned and furnished, be a fortress and defence to thee against thy enemies, that come to deprive thee of thy kingdom? Did not thy father eat and drink, and do justice, &c.—Did not Josiah live, and enjoy comfort in life as well as thou dost, though he did not indulge himself in such delicacies, and had not such magnificent apartments? Did he not live in sufficient plenty, and in a state suitable to his character, and yet strictly observed justice, both in his private and public capacity, and not betake himself to such sordid methods of injustice and oppression for the support of his grandeur? He did no wrong to any of his subjects, never oppressed them, or put any hardship upon them, but was careful to preserve to all their just rights and properties. Nay, he not only did not abuse his power for the support of wrong, but used it for the maintaining of right; he judged the cause of the poor and needy—Was ready to hear the cause of the meanest of his subjects, and do them justice; and then it was well with him—The blessing of God was upon him as the reward of his justice and integrity. He was comfortable in himself, and was useful to and respected by his subjects, and prospered in all that he put his hand to. Was

A. M. 3395. 17 * But thine eyes and thy heart
B. C. 609. are not but for thy covetousness, and for to shed innocent blood, and for oppression, and for ⁴ violence, to do it.

18 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah ;
* They shall not lament for him, saying, " Ah my brother ! or, Ah sister ! they shall not lament for him, saying, Ah lord ! or, Ah his glory !

* Ezekiel xix. 6. — ⁴ Or, incursion. — ¹ Chapter xvi. 4, 6.
² 1 Kings xiii. 30.

not this to know me, saith the Lord?—Did he not hereby make it appear, that he rightly knew, worshipped, and served me, and consequently was known and owned by me ? Observe, reader, the right knowledge of God implies the doing our duty to our fellow-creatures, as well as to God, particularly that duty which our place and station in the world require us to perform.

Verse 17. But thine eyes and thy heart are not but for thy covetousness—They are for that, and for nothing else. For this cause Jehoiakim is compared to a lion, by the Prophet Ezekiel, chap. xix. 6. Observe, reader, in covetousness the heart walks after the eyes, Job xxxi. 7 ; it is therefore called the lust of the eye, 1 John ii. 15 : and the eyes and the heart are then for covetousness when the aims and affections are set upon the wealth of this world ; and when they are so the temptation is strong to fraud, oppression, and all manner of violence and villany,
even, as it is here said, to shed innocent blood.

Verses 18, 19. They shall not lament for him, saying, Ah my brother ! &c.—"The prophet here repeats part of the funeral ditty or song which the public mourners used to sing at funerals, (see note on chap.
ix. 17, and xx. 14, and compare 1 Kings xiii. 30,) signifying, that neither Jehoiakim, nor his queen or family, should be buried with those solemn lamentations with which the memory of his predecessors, particularly that of his father, had been honoured :
see 2 Chron. xxxv. 25. Saying, Ah Lord ! or, Ah his glory !—That is, how is his glory departed and vanished ! another burden or chorus of the funeral song. He shall be buried with the burial of an ass
—None attending him to his grave, none mourning over him. Or, the meaning is, he shall have no burial : for the carcasses of asses are not buried.
Drawn and cast forth, &c.—The expression seems to be taken from the custom of dogs to draw about a carcass before they tear and devour it. Jehoiakim, having been advanced to the kingdom by Pharaohnecho, king of Egypt, 2 Kings xxiii. 34, followed the fortune of that king, and upon the conquest of Egypt by the Chaldeans, chap. xlv. 2, after three years' reign, was taken prisoner by Nebuchadnezzar, and put into irons, Dan. i. 2 ; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 6. But afterward, it seems, the king of Babylon released him and made him a tributary king. After three 19 * He shall be * buried with the A. M. 3395.

burial of an ass, drawn and cast forth B. C. 609.
beyond the gates of Jerusalem.

20 ¶ Go up to Lebanon, and cry ; and lift up thy voice in Bashan, and cry from the passages :
for all thy lovers are destroyed.

21 I spake unto thee in thy ⁵ prosperity ; but thou saidst, I will not hear. * This hath been thy manner from thy youth, that thou obeyedst not my voice.

* 2 Chron. xxxvi. 6 ; Chap. xxxvi. 30. — * Fulfilled, B. C. 599.
⁵ Heb. prosperities. — ⁷ Chap. ii. 7 ; iii. 25 ; vii. 23.

years' obedience, however, Jehoiakim rebelled, in confidence of assistance from Egypt. Soon after which Nebuchadnezzar's army overran Judea, besieged Jerusalem, and probably took Jehoiakim prisoner in some sally that he made upon them, and killed him, and then cast out his dead body into the highway, denying him the common rites of burial : see 2 Kings xxiv. 1-6. Accordingly, he is said to have slept with his fathers, but not to have been buried with them : see also Joseph. Antiq. lib. x.
cap. 7, 8.

Verse 20. Go up to Lebanon, and cry, &c.—The verbs here being in the feminine gender, the city of Jerusalem, or the land of Judea, seems to be addressed and called upon ironically to go to the tops of the high mountains, and to the frontiers of the country, and cry aloud for help to the neighbouring powers, but in vain, since all those who had any inclination to favour her, the Egyptians in particular were themselves disabled and crushed by the arms of Nebuchadnezzar. Cry from the passages—Hebrew, מַעְבְּרֵי, from the borders, or, rivers, which are the bounds of your country. For the word signifies, not only the fords, or passages of a river, but the parts along each bank, and the confines or extremities of a country. For all thy lovers are destroyed—Or broken, as נִשְׁבְּרוּ signifies : all thy foreign allies, whose friendship and assistance thou hast sought, and whom thou hast courted, by complying with their idolatries, are humbled.

Verse 21. I spake unto thee in thy prosperity— Spake by my servants the prophets, in reproofs, admonitions, counsels ; but thou saidst, I will not hear—Didst manifest by thy conduct that thou wouldest not obey. Such is too often the effect of prosperity. It puffs men up with pride and high-mindedness, and makes them despise the word of God, thinking themselves too wise to stand in need of advice, and therefore they defer attending to it, till they are in extremities, when it becomes of little or no benefit to them. The word שְׁלוֹה, however, which we translate prosperity, properly signifies security, and may be spoken of the false security in which the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem lived in times when they were threatened with the most grievous calamities, and which had been denounced to them by the prophets, from the time of Hezekiah,

A. M. 3395. 22 The wind shall eat up all ^z thy
B. C. 609. pastors, and ^a thy lovers shall go into captivity: surely then shalt thou be ashamed and confounded for all thy wickedness.

23 O ^e inhabitant of Lebanon, that makest thy nest in the cedars, how gracious shalt thou be when pangs come upon thee, ^b the pain as of a woman in travail!

24 As I live, saith the LORD, ^c though Coniah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah ^d were the signet upon my right hand, yet would I pluck thee thence;

25 ^e And I will give thee into the hand of them that seek thy life, and into the hand of them whose face thou fearest, even into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of the Chaldeans.

^z Chapter xxiii. 1.—^a Verse 20.—^e Hebrew, inhabitant.
^b Chap. vi. 24.—^c 2 Kings vi. 8, 24; 1 Chron. iii. 16; Chap.
xxxvii. 1.—^d Hag. ii. 23.—^e Chap. xxxiv. 20.—^f 2 Kings
xxi. 15; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 10.

on account of the idolatries and various other acts of wickedness of their kings and people; who nevertheless continued in their vices without any amendment. This hath been thy manner from thy youth —From thy being first formed into a people. See the margin.

Verse 22. The wind shall eat up all thy pastors —Thy kings, princes, priests, and false prophets, who have presided over thy civil and religious affairs, shall be destroyed by my judgments, as plants are blasted by winds. God's judgments are often compared to a scorching and blasting wind. Thy lovers shall go into captivity—Thy allies shall themselves be made captives by the Chaldeans, and shall not be able to preserve themselves, much less to give any assistance to thee.

Verse 23. O inhabitant of Lebanon—O thou that inhabitest the city which for pleasantness and delight may be compared to Lebanon. Or he alludes to the stately buildings of Jerusalem, elsewhere compared to the tall cedars of a forest: see note on chap. xxi. 14. That makest thy nest in the cedars—Who livest in houses built of cedars.
How gracious shalt thou be—Or rather, how humble, or suppliant, wilt thou be, when pangs come upon thee—Those pangs of affliction which shall suddenly oppress thee, whereas before thou wast too proud to hearken to any advice that was offered. The Hebrew, מה נחמתי, is rendered by Buxtorff, quam gra- tulaberis tibi, How wilt thou gratulate thyself when pangs, &c., understanding it as spoken ironically.

Verses 24–28. As I live, saith the Lord, though Coniah were the signet, or, rather, the ring, upon my right hand—By Coniah he means Jehoiachin, whose name was Jeconiah, 1 Chron. iii. 16, (for all Josiah's sons had two names, and so had his grandchild Jeconiah,) here, in contempt, called Coniah; yet would I pluck thee thence—Though he were 26 ^f And I will cast thee out, and A. M. 3395.

thy mother that bare thee, into an- B. C. 609.
other country, where ye were not born; and there shall ye die.

27 But to the land whereunto they ^g desire to return, thither shall they not return.

28 Is this man Coniah a despised broken idol?
is he ^h a vessel wherein is no pleasure? wherefore are they cast out, he and his seed, and are cast into a land which they know not?

29 ^b O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of
the LORD.

30 Thus saith the LORD, Write ye this man ⁱ childless, a man that shall not prosper in his days: for no man of his seed shall prosper, ^k sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling any more in Judah.

^g Heb. lift up their mind, Chap. xlv. 14.—^h Psa. xxxi. 12;
Chap. xlviii. 38; Hos. viii. 8.—ⁱ Deut. xxxii. 1; Isaiah i. 2, xxxiv. 1; Micah i. 2.—^j 1 Chronicles iii. 16, 17; Matt. i. 12.
^k Chap. xxxvi. 30.

never so near and dear to me, as dear as a signet, or ring, which every man keeps safe, yet his wickedness would make him forfeit all my favour toward him. “The ring was anciently worn as a mark of sovereignty. When Alexander was dying, he gave his ring to Perdicas, thus, as it were, marking him out for his successor.” And I will cast thee out, and thy mother that bare thee—We are informed, (2 Kings xxiv. 15,) that Nebuchadnezzar carried away Jehoiachin, that is, Jeconiah or Coniah, to Babylon, and his mother, and his wives, &c. Is this man Coniah a despised broken idol, &c.—Blaney renders the verse more literally, thus: “A contemptible, broken idol is this man Coniah? Or a vessel in which none delighteth? Wherefore are they cast forth, he and his seed, and thrown upon a land which they knew not?” As if he had said, “Would any one have thought that this man, who was invested with royal dignity, should be rendered no better than a broken image of royalty, a mere potsherd, utterly contemptible and useless?”

Verses 29, 30. O earth, &c.—The word earth, or land rather, as ארץ may be properly rendered; is repeated three times by way of emphasis, to engage the deeper attention. The prophet speaks to the land of Judea, which he commands to write down the following prediction, that it might be remembered by them, and the truth of it be thereby made manifest. Write ye this man childless—Hebrew, יָרֵי, solitary, deprived, destitute. The LXX. render it εκκρηκτον ανδρατον, an ejected, or expelled man; a man that shall not prosper in his days—
This latter clause seems explanatory of the former;
and that again is further explained in the following:
“For no man of his seed shall prosper, sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling any more in Judah.”
That Jeconiah had children appears both from this verse and verse 28; but according to this prophecy, no man of his seed sat upon the throne of David. This seems the true exposition of this passage, which has been considered as attended with considerable difficulty. "I cannot," says Blaney, "agree with the generality of commentators, who suppose that God hereby declares it as a thing certain, and, as it were, orders it to be inserted among the public acts of his government, that Jeconiah should die absolutely childless. Other parts of Scripture positively assert him to have had children, 1 Chron. iii. 17, 18; Matt. i. 12. Both verse 28, and the subsequent part of this verse, imply that he either had, or should have, seed. But the historians and chroniclers of the times are called upon, and directed to set him down childless; not as being literally so, but yet the same to all intents and purposes of public life, for he was to be the last of his race that should sit upon the throne of David; and his descendants were no more to figure as kings, but to be reduced to the rank and obscurity of private persons. And in this sense the prophecy was actually fulfilled; for, allowing Zerubbabel, who is called governor of Judah, (Hag. i. 1,) to have been a lineal descendant of Jeconiah, yet he could not be said to sit upon the throne of David, and reign, or rule, in Judah, seeing he was but a provincial governor, a mere servant of the king of Persia, in whom the sovereignty resided; nor were any of those persons kings who afterward reigned in Judah, even of the family of David, until the time of Christ."

CHAPTER XXIII.

In this chapter we have, (1.) Threatenings of just punishment to careless princes, or pastors of the people, 1, 2. (2.) Promises of future blessings; of the return of the Jews from captivity, and of happier times under better governors and pastors; of the glorious establishment of the Messiah's kingdom; and of the subsequent restoration of all the dispersed Israelites, to dwell once more in their own land, 3-8. (3.) Jeremiah testifies the horror he felt within him on contemplating the wickedness of the priests and prophets of Judah, and the vengeance which God was about to execute upon them, for the corruption which had been diffused through the whole land, by the influence of their evil doctrine and example, 9-15. (4.) He exhorts the people not to listen to the words of the prophets that prophesied of peace, when evil was determined, and would infallibly take place; and charges those prophets with speaking from themselves, and not from the divine commission, 16-22. (5.) God asserts his omnipresence and omniscience; and reproves the audaciousness of the false prophets, who affected to place their own idle dreams on a level with the all-powerful and efficacious word of divine revelation; declaring himself against the several species of those impostors, 23-32. (6.) He requires all sorts of persons to desist from an indecency in common use, of styling his word a burden; and threatens severely to punish those who, in defiance of this command, should continue to cast such a slur upon it, 33-40.

A. M. 3405. WO^a be unto the pastors that destroy and scatter the sheep of my pasture! saith the LORD.

2 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of Israel against the pastors that feed my people; Ye have scattered my flock, and driven them away, and have not visited them: ^bbehold, I will visit upon you the evil of your doings, saith the LORD. A. M. 3405. B. C. 599.

3 And ^cI will gather the remnant of my flock out of all countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to their folds; and they shall be fruitful and increase.

4 And I will set up ^dshepherds over them,

^a Chapter x. 21; xxii. 22; Ezekiel xxxiv. 2.—^b Exodus xxxii. 34.

^c Chap. xxxii. 37; Ezek. xxxiv. 13.—^d Chap. iii. 15; Ezek. xxxiv. 23.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXIII.

Verse 1. Wo be unto the pastors—Or, as הוי is by some rendered, Alas for the pastors! or, Ho the pastors! For it may be a particle of calling, as the LXX. and Syriac represent it, and not of commination, as in our translation. The word pastors comprehends both civil and ecclesiastical governors: see note on chap. ii. 8. This acceptance of the word agrees with the prophet's complaint elsewhere, that their rulers, as well as their priests and prophets, were rather corrupters than reformers of the people's manners. And the Messiah himself, whose coming is foretold, verse 5, for the rectifying of these disorders, was both a king and a priest.

Verses 2-4. Therefore thus saith the Lord against the pastors that feed my people—That undertake the care of my people, though they do not faithfully execute their trust. God calls them his people, his flock, the sheep of his pasture, with respect to the ancient covenant which he had made with their fathers. They are said to have fed this people, because it was their duty to have done so. Ye have scattered my flock—Namely, by acts of violence and oppression, driving them from their places to seek more safe and quiet abodes. Or, instead of looking after them, you have suffered them to be dispersed, and through your ill example they have gone astray to idolatry, and that, with your other sins, has brought upon them their expulsion from their own land and a general dispersion. Behold, I will visit upon you the evil of your doings—Will deal with you as your sins have deserved. They would not visit the flock.

A. M. 3405. which shall feed them : and they shall
B. C. 599. fear no more, nor be dismayed, neither shall they be lacking, saith the LORD.

5 ¶ Behold, * the days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, † and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth.

6 * In his days Judah shall be saved, and in the way of duty, and therefore God will visit them in a way of vengeance. And I will gather the remnant of my flock—Though there be but a remnant of my flock, a little remnant left, that has narrowly escaped destruction, I will gather that remnant; will find them out wherever they are, and will find out ways and means to bring them back out of all countries whither I have driven them. It was the justice of God for the sins of their shepherds that dispersed them, but the mercy of God shall gather them when the shepherds that betrayed them are cut off. And being brought to their former habitations, as sheep to their folds, there they shall be fruitful, and increase in numbers. And I will set up shepherds over them—Who shall make it their business, not only to rule, but also to feed them, namely, with knowledge and understanding. They shall fear no more—As they formerly did, when they were continually exposed to the oppressions of their rulers at home, or the invasions and assaults of their enemies from abroad; but they shall be preserved in peace and safety, and none of them shall be lacking. Though the times may have been long bad with the church, it does not follow that they will be always so. Such pastors as Zerubbabel and Nehemiah, though they did not live in such pomp as Jehoiakim and Jeconiah lived in, nor made such a figure, were as great blessings to the people as the others were plagues to them. The peace and prosperity of the church are not connected with, much less do they depend upon, the pomp of her rulers.

* Isa. iv. 2; xi. 1; xl. 10, 11; Chap. xxxiii. 14, 15, 16; Dan. ix. 24; Zech. iii. 8; vi. 12; John i. 45.—† Psa. lxxii. 2; Isa. xxxii. 1, 18; ix. 7.

Verses 5, 6. I will raise unto David a righteous branch—The house of David seemed to be quite sunk and ruined by the threatening pronounced against Jeconiah, (chap. xxii. 30,) that none of his seed should ever sit upon the throne of David: but here we have a promise which effectually secures the honour of the covenant made with David, notwithstanding that threatening; for by it his house will be raised out of its ruins to a greater lustre than ever, and shine brighter than it did even in the days of Solomon. We have not so many prophecies of Christ in this book as we had in that of the Prophet Isaiah. But here we have a very illustrious one. Of him, doubtless, the prophet here speaks, and of no other person. Even the Jewish doctors, as well as Christian interpreters, understand this as a prophesy of the Messiah, who is called the branch, Isa. iv. 2, and liii. 2; and the man the branch, Zech. iii. 8. And here he is termed the righteous branch, not only because he himself was righteous, but because he makes his people righteous; and a king that shall reign and prosper—Not like kings that now were of the house of David, going backward in all their affairs, but one that shall set up a kingdom in the world, which shall be victorious over all opposition; one to whose hands the good pleasure of the Lord shall be committed, and under whose care and management it shall prosper; one who shall execute judgment and justice in the earth—All the world over, Psa. xvi. 13. The present kings of David's line were unjust and oppressive, and their affairs therefore did not prosper; but this king shall break the usurped power of Satan, institute a perfect rule of holy living, and in due time make all the world righteous. In his days—That is, under his dominion, when his kingdom shall be set up and established upon earth; Judah shall be saved, &c.—The people of God, typified by Judah and Israel, shall be saved with a spiritual and eternal salvation, a salvation from the guilt and power of sin, into the favour and image of God here, and into the kingdom of his glory hereafter. At which kingdom, till they arrive, God will be a special protection to them, their refuge and strength, and very present help in trouble; so that they shall dwell safely—Confiding in the care of their strong helper, and preserved in perfect peace. And this is his name whereby he shall be called—Namely, by his people, and by God; the name whereby he shall be known, and which shall at once be descriptive both of his person and office. THE LORD, Hebrew, JEHOVAH OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS—Though of the seed of David according to the flesh, he shall indeed be JEHOVAH, God in human nature, and OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS; namely, justifying us by his merits, sanctifying us by his Spirit, and directing us in every part of our duty by his doctrine and example; the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth in him with a faith that worketh by love.

Verses 7, 8. Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord—Here the prophet proceeds to foretel one very important, although remote, consequence of God's raising up the righteous branch to David, namely, the great salvation which should thereby

* Deuteron. xxxiii. 28; Zech. xiv. 11.—† Chap. xxxii. 37. † Chapter xxxiii. 10; 1 Cor. i. 30.—† Heb. Jehovah-tsidkenu. * Chap. xvi. 14, 15.

A. M. 3405. which led the seed of the house of B. C. 599. Israel out of the north country; ¹ and from all countries whither I had driven them;
and they shall dwell in their own land.

9 ¶ My heart within me is broken because of the prophets; ^m all my bones shake; I am like a drunken man, and like a man whom wine

¹ Isaiah xliii. 5, 6; Verse 3.—^m Hab. iii. 16.—ⁿ Chapter v.
7, 8; ix. 2.

come to the Jews in the latter days of their state, which should be so illustrious as far to outshine their deliverance out of Egypt. That they shall no more say, The Lord liveth, &c.—These words we had before, chap. xvi. 14, 15, where see the note. But here the passage seems to point more plainly than it did there to the days of the Messiah, and to compare, not so much the two deliverances themselves, giving the preference to the latter, as the two states to which the church should grow after those deliverances. About four hundred and eighty years after they were come out of Egypt, Solomon's temple was built, 1 Kings vi. 1; and at that time that nation, which was so wonderfully brought out of Egypt, was gradually arrived to its height. And four hundred and ninety years (seventy weeks) after they came out of Babylon, Messiah the Prince set up the gospel temple, which was the greatest glory of that nation that was so wonderfully brought out of Babylon: see Dan. ix. 24, 25. Now the spiritual glory of the second period of that nation, especially as transferred to the gospel church, is much more admirable and illustrious than all the temporal glory of the first period of it, in the days of Solomon; for that was no glory, compared with the glory which excelleth. Add to this, the prophet, it seems, also foretels a second gathering of the Jews from their dispersions, namely, one that should take place after the coming of the Messiah, and the ruin of their city and country by the Romans, and therefore yet future. Now this work of God, whenever it shall be effected, including, as it undoubtedly will, their conversion to Christianity, and perhaps, also, their restoration to their own land, will assuredly appear so wonderful as greatly to outshine every former deliverance wrought for that people, and therefore may well put every other out of remembrance. St. Paul calls this restoration of them, life from the dead, (Rom. ix. 25,) meaning that it would be a miracle as surprising as the resurrection of a multitude of dead bodies.

Verse 9. My heart within me is broken—This seems to be the beginning of a new discourse against the false prophets, with whom afterward the priests are joined. The first word of it in the Hebrew, לִנְבִיאִים, is rendered by the Vulgate, Ad prophetas,
To the prophets, as if it were the title of the following prophecy. In this Jeremiah describes the terror and concern which were upon him when he considered the horrible sin of these prophets in pretending a divine mission when they had received none, and hath overcome, because of the LORD, A. M. 3405.

and because of the words of his ho- B. C. 599.
liness.

10 For ⁿ the land is full of adulterers; for ^o because of ² swearing the land mourneth; ^p the pleasant places of the wilderness are dried up, and their ³ course is evil, and their force is not right.

^o Hosea iv. 2, 3.—² Or, cursing.—^p Chapter ix. 10; xii. 4.
³ Or, violence.

in uttering as messages from God what were really their own inventions, and in direct opposition to every thing God had spoken. And he declares that, upon a view of their guilt, and of the evils they were bringing on themselves and their country, he was in trouble and agitation, like that of a man who had lost his reason through intoxication.

Verse 10. For the land is full of adulterers—Under this term, which properly respects those who violate the marriage-bed, persons offending by any species of uncleanness are comprehended, as also such as by fraud and falsehood circumvented others, and tempted them to join in the commission of those illicit actions which implied breach of faith and duty toward God. Because of swearing the land mourneth—By swearing here, it seems, is not only meant false swearing, or perjury, but also profane and idle swearing, or taking the name of God in vain. Compare this verse with Hos. iv. 2. The Hebrew word, אָלַף, signifies indifferently swearing or cursing.
The Jewish forms of adjuration, used in their courts of justice for the discovery of the truth, had usually an imprecation joined to them; and the prophet's words here may import, that men ventured to for-swear themselves, and incur the imprecation implied in an oath, rather than discover the truth in cases wherein they were called upon to be witnesses.
The land is said to mourn when it is afflicted with drought, barrenness, or any other uncommon calamity. And the swearing here spoken of is represented by the prophet as one of those crying sins for which God had visited the nation with these and other severe judgments. And the sins here mentioned, which abounded so much among the people, were in a great measure owing to the bad example and corrupt doctrine of the priests and prophets.
See verses 11–15. The pleasant places, or the pastures, of the wilderness—Or, of the plain, as the words may be properly rendered; are dried up— The wrath of God is extended to all places, whether more or less inhabited. See note on chap. xii. 4.
And their course is evil, &c.—This seems to be intended of the prophets and priests, to whom this discourse is chiefly directed, (see verses 9–11,) and it implies that they not only erred in single acts, but that the whole course of their actions was evil, and particularly their power, rule, and government. For they both made use of ill arts to establish their authority over the people, and they employed it, not for the bettering, but rather for the corrupting of their manners.

A. M. 3405. 11 For ^a both prophet and priest are
B. C. 599. profane; yea, ^r in my house have I found their wickedness, saith the LORD.

12 ^r Wherefore their way shall be unto them as slippery ways in the darkness: they shall be driven on, and fall therein: for I ^t will bring evil upon them, even the year of their visitation,
saith the LORD.

13 And I have seen ⁴ folly ⁵ in the prophets of Samaria; ^u they prophesied in Baal, and ^{*} caused my people Israel to err.

14 I have seen also in the prophets of Jerusalem ^a a horrible thing: ^v they commit adultery, and ^w walk in lies: they ^a strengthen also ^a Chapter vi. 13; viii. 10; Zeph. iii. 4.—^r Chapter vii. 30;

xi. 15; xxxii. 34; Ezek. viii. 11; xxiii. 39.—^s Psa. xxxv. 6; Prov. iv. 19; Chapter xiii. 16.—^t Chapter xi. 23.—^u Or, an absurd thing.—^v Heb. unsavoury.

Verses 11, 12. For both the prophet and the priest are profane—The priests, by their formality and hypocrisy, profaned the ordinances of God which they were appointed to administer; and the prophets, by their lies, false doctrine, and corrupt practice, profaned the word of God, which they pretended to deliver. Yea, in my house have I found their wickedness, saith the Lord—Even in my temple, where they assemble under a pretence to worship and do me honour, they say and do many things contrary to my law, and are guilty of various acts of profaneness and immorality. Such profaners of things sacred were formerly Hophni and Phinehas. Wherefore their way shall be as slippery ways—In which they shall not walk with any steadiness, safety, or satisfaction: or they shall fail and miscarry in all their designs.

Verses 13, 14. I have seen—Rather, I saw, namely, formerly, before I cast them out of their own land; folly—Hebrew, תפלה, stupidity, infatuation. The LXX. render it, ἀνομωγὰ, iniquities, or unlawful actions, and the Vulgate, fatuitatem, sottishness; in the prophets of Samaria—That is, in those that belonged to the ten tribes, whose chief city was Samaria. They prophesied in Baal—Pretending they had their relations from Baal, they caused the people of that kingdom to err—That is, they seduced them from the worship and service of the true God to idolatry. I have seen also in the prophets of Jerusalem a horrible thing—Hebrew, שערור, a thing to be detested, an abomination. He compares the sins of the prophets of Samaria with those of the prophets of Jerusalem, and pronounces the sins of the latter to be more enormous, because they pronounced their false prophecies in the name of the true God, and pretended that he was the author of all their impostures: the wickedness of their lives also reflected great dishonour upon his name and religion. Compare chap. iii. 11. They commit adultery—See chap. xxix. 23. And walk in lies—Utter what they themselves have feigned, and call their inventions divine visions, and use all manner the hands of evil-doers, that none doth return from his wickedness: they are all of them unto me as ^b Sodom, and the inhabitants thereof as Gomorrah.

15 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts concerning the prophets; Behold, I will feed them with ^c wormwood, and make them drink the water of gall: for from the prophets of Jerusalem is ^d profaneness gone forth into all the land.

16 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Harken not unto the words of the prophets that prophesy unto you: they make you vain: ^e they speak a vision of their own heart, and not out of the mouth of the LORD.

^b Chap. ii. 8.—^c Isaiah ix. 16.—^d Or, filthiness.—^e Chap. xxix. 23.—^f Verse 26.—^g Ezekiel xiii. 23.—^h Deut. xxxii. 32; Isaiah i. 9, 10.—ⁱ Chap. viii. 14; ix. 15.—^j Or, hypocrisy.—^k Chap. xiv. 14; Verse 21.

of deceit and fraud. They strengthen also the hands of evil-doers—They confirm men in their evil ways, both by their own bad example, and by promising them peace and security, notwithstanding their wicked conduct and ungodly deeds. See verse 17; and Ezek. xiii. 22. They are all of them unto me as Sodom—See Deut. xxxii. 32; Isa. i. 10; Ezek. xvi. 46–48.

Verse 15. Therefore thus saith the Lord concerning the prophets—The priests also, and all ecclesiastical guides, are included. Behold, I will feed them with wormwood—Will afflict them with most bitter calamities. For from the prophets of Jerusalem is profaneness gone forth—Or, hypocrisy, which seems rather to be the meaning of תנפה, the word here used. Certain it is, that this was a vice they were generally addicted to. These false prophets affected to be looked upon as pious, while they indulged themselves in various acts of wickedness; and as this could not be totally concealed, the people took example from them, and indulged themselves in vice, while they put on the garb of piety. The Jewish nation continued much in this habit even to the times of Christ, as is sufficiently evident from what is said of the Pharisees in the New Testament.

Ver. 16, 17. Thus saith the Lord, Harken not unto the words of the prophets—People are under no religious obligation to hear what is contrary to the revealed will of God, or to obey those who enjoin things which that does not require. They make you vain—Or rather, they deceive you, as the words may be properly rendered: or they make you trust to and undertake vain things. The inhabitants of Jerusalem were fed by these false prophets with the vain hopes of being able to drive the Babylonians from their walls, and raise the siege of the city; yea, and of shaking off the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar entirely, and being quite free for the future. They speak a vision of their own heart—A pretended vision which they have framed themselves. They say still—That is, they persist to say; unto them that despise me—That are destitute even of my fear,

A. M. 3405. 17 They say still unto them that
B. C. 599. despise me, The LORD hath said, "Ye shall have peace; and they say unto every one that walketh after the ⁸imagination of his own heart, ¹No evil shall come upon you.

18 For ⁹who hath stood in the ⁹counsel of the LORD, and hath perceived and heard his word? who hath marked his word, and heard it?

19 Behold, a ^hwhirlwind of the LORD is gone forth in fury, even a grievous whirlwind: it shall fall grievously upon the head of the wicked.

20 The ⁱanger of the LORD shall not return, until he have executed, and till he have per-

^a Chap. vi. 14; viii. 11; Ezek. xiii. 10; Zech. x. 2.—⁸ Or, stubbornness, Chapter xiii. 10.—¹ Mic. iii. 11.—⁹ Job xv. 8; 1 Cor. ii. 16.—⁹ Or, secret.—^h Chap. xxv. 32; xxx. 23.

and therefore slight my authority, and violate my commands; The Lord hath said, Ye shall have peace—Whereas, in truth, I have said the contrary, and have assured them, There is no peace to the wicked—Thus they both make me to patronise sin, and to contradict myself.

Verse 18. For who hath stood in the counsel of the Lord?—These are either the words of God expressing that none of these pretended prophets knew any thing of his designs, as he had not revealed them unto them, and they could not otherwise know them; or else they are to be understood as the words of these false prophets, who, among other things, told the people, that God's counsels were not to be absolutely known; and that therefore neither Jeremiah, nor the rest of the prophets, who foretold the destruction of Jerusalem, were informed more than others of what God intended to do.

Verses 19, 20. Behold, a whirlwind of the Lord is gone forth with fury—A severe judgment of God, that shall resemble a whirlwind for the sudden and utter destruction that it shall bring. The same word, כַּעֲרָה, is elsewhere translated a storm. It is called a whirlwind of the Lord, both to denote the greatness of it, and to signify that it should come forth from God, and be of his sending. It shall fall grievously upon the head of the wicked—Whatever these flattering teachers may assert to the contrary. Blaney translates the verse, Behold, the whirlwind of Jehovah! it goeth forth hot, even a settling whirlwind; (so he translates כַּחֲמֹל, which we render, grievous,) upon the head of the wicked it shall settle. And he observes, "The hot, scorching wind, blowing from the south, (see note on chap. iv. 11, 12,) is evidently here alluded to, that blows, not with a transient blast, but exerts a continued force upon the head of the unfortunate traveller till it has effectually destroyed him:" an emblem this of the consuming and insupportable wrath of God. The anger of the Lord shall not return—The prophet speaks of the judgment as of a messenger, which should not return formed the thoughts of his heart: ^k in. A. M. 3405. the latter days ye shall consider it ^{B. C. 599.} perfectly.

21 ^lI have not sent these prophets, yet they ran; I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied.

22 But if they had ^mstood in my counsel, and had caused my people to hear my words, then they should have ⁿturned them from their evil way, and from the evil of their doings.

23 Am I a God at hand, saith the LORD, and not a God afar off?

24 Can any ^ohide himself in secret places that I shall not see him? saith the LORD. ^pDo not I fill heaven and earth? saith the LORD.

ⁱ Chap. xxx. 24.—^k Gen. xlix. 1.—^l Chap. xiv. 14; xxvii. 15; xxix. 9.—^m Verse 18.—ⁿ Jer. xxv. 5.—^o Psa. cxxxix. 7; Amos ix. 2, 3.—^p 1 Kings viii. 27; Psalm cxxxix. 7.

till it had done its errand, and executed what God had resolved it should effect. In the latter days ye shall consider, &c.—Though you will not now believe it, but flatter yourselves with vain hopes, yet hereafter, when it shall be too late, you shall consider it perfectly, that is, when this judgment hath overtaken you, you shall fully believe and understand that God did indeed bring it upon you, for the punishment of your sins.

Verses 21, 22. I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran—They were always ready to bring you pleasing tidings as from me, though I had given them no commission so to do, or revealed any thing to them. But if they had stood in my counsel—Been made acquainted by me with my will and pleasure; and had caused my people to hear my words—And not their own conceits and inventions; then they should have turned them from their evil way—This was the design of all God's messages by his prophets, and therefore all true prophets made this their principal aim. And the giving encouragement to men to continue in their sinful courses, or in a state of carnal security, is often mentioned as a mark of a false prophet.

Verses 23, 24. Am I a God at hand and not a God afar off?—Do these false prophets imagine that I am only a God in some particular places, and that I cannot see or know things done privately, or at a distance from the place where they suppose me to be? Do they think to impose upon me, or vent their own dreams in my name, and I not discover them? As if either distance or secrecy could place any thing out of the reach of my power and knowledge. Atheism, or ignorance of God, is generally the foundation of a wicked life. Men think God does not see, or does not regard them and their actions, and will not call them to an account for them, and therefore they go on in their trespasses. By a God at hand, some understand, in heaven: as if he had said, Do you think my eyes are limited like yours, so that I cannot see men's practices though at a dis-

A. M. 3405. 25 I have heard what the prophets
B. C. 599. said, that prophesy lies in my name, saying, I have dreamed, I have dreamed.

26 How long shall this be in the heart of the prophets that prophesy lies? yea, they are prophets of the deceit of their own heart;

27 Which think to cause my people to forget my name by their dreams which they tell every man to his neighbour, ⁹ as their fathers have forgotten my name for Baal.

28 The prophet ¹⁰ that hath a dream, let him tell a dream; and he that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully. What is the ⁹ Judg. iii. 7; viii. 33, 34.—¹⁰ Heb. with whom is.—¹¹ Deut.

tance from the place of my peculiar and glorious residence? Others interpret the particle with respect to time; Am I a god of yesterday, like the idols? Am not I the Ancient of days? the eternal God, of whose majesty, omniscience, and omnipresence you ought to have been sensible? Can any hide himself in secret places—Can any man hide his projects or intentions, his thoughts or desires, his words or works, that I shall not see them? Surely not. No arts or concealments can hide any man's practices or even the counsels of his heart from the eye of God, nor in any respect deceive his judgment of them. Do not I fill heaven and earth, namely, by my essential presence, as well as by my universal providence? Am I not continually present, and continually active through all parts of the universe? As I am above all, so I am through all, and in all, Eph. iv. 6.

Verses 25-27. I have heard what the prophets say, &c.—I am perfectly acquainted with what these prophets have thought and said, though they think I take no notice of it, and so continue to act the same counterfeit part over again. Saying, I have dreamed—I have had a divine vision, or have received information from God in a dream. This, it appears, the false prophets often pretended, when they had received nothing of the kind. How long shall this be in the heart of the prophets?—How long shall I bear with them while they prophesy the deceit of their own hearts? while they utter, for prophecies, that which they have feigned or devised themselves? Will they never see what an affront they put upon me, what an abuse they put upon my people, and what judgments they are preparing for themselves? To cause my people to forget my name by their dreams, &c.—They act as if they designed to draw my people off from worshipping and serving me, and from all regard to my laws and ordinances and to the true prophets. Indeed, their palming upon the people counterfeit revelations, and fathering their own fancies upon divine inspiration, was the ready way to bring all religion into contempt, and make men turn atheists and infidels.

Verses 28, 29. The prophet that hath a dream let him tell a dream—Or, as some render it, let him chaff to the wheat? saith the LORD. A. M. 3405.

29 Is not my word like as a fire? B. C. 599.

saith the LORD; and like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces?

30 Therefore behold, ¹¹ I am against the prophets, saith the LORD, that steal my words every one from his neighbour.

31 Behold, I am against the prophets, saith the LORD, ¹¹ that use their tongues, and say, He saith.

32 Behold, I am against them that prophesy false dreams, saith the LORD, and do tell them, and cause my people to err by their lies, and by

xviii. 20; Chap. xiv. 14, 15.—¹¹ Or, that smooth their tongues.

tell it as a dream. Let him lay no more stress upon it than men do upon their dreams, nor expect any more regard to be paid to it. Or, he that pretends to have a message from God, either by dream, or vision, or voice, or otherwise, let him declare it. And he that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully—Let him speak it, as truth; so some read the clause; let him keep close to his instructions, and you will soon perceive a vast difference between the dreams which the false prophets tell, and the divine oracles which the true prophets deliver, and will easily discern which is of God and which is not. Those that have spiritual senses exercised will be able to distinguish. For what is the chaff to the wheat—There is as much difference between my will and their dreams, as there is between the chaff and the wheat. Is not my word like fire?—Quick and powerful, capable of trying men as metals are tried in a furnace, and ready to burn up that which will not bear the trial. And like a hammer that breaks the rock in pieces—As a hammer breaks to pieces the hardest rock, so is my word, when properly applied, able to break the hardest and most obstinate heart, and to beat down the confidence of the most hardened sinner.

Verses 30-32. Behold, I am against the prophets that steal my words, &c.—"That imitate the true prophets, speaking in my name, as they do, and saying, Thus saith the Lord, (see verse 31,) and using their words, but applying them to their own purpose: or, it may be, adding their own inventions to them." So Lowth. Others paraphrase the verse thus, "That conspire together what to say to deceive the people, and to steal what they say one from another." Or, perhaps the meaning rather is, That utter, as revelations made to themselves, things which they have learned, and, as it were, stolen from others. That use their tongues, &c.—That take their own tongues, as Blaney renders it, and say, He (the Lord) hath said. "The phrase of taking their own tongue," he observes, "is, I think, very easily to be understood of those who, without any inspiration, took upon them to deliver messages to the people, and pretended that they came from God." I am against them that prophesy false dreams—False

A. M. 3405. ^a their lightness; yet I sent them not, B. C. 599. nor commanded them: therefore they shall not profit this people at all, saith the LORD.

33 ¶ And when this people, or the prophet, or a priest, shall ask thee, saying, What is ^a the burden of the LORD? thou shalt then say unto them, What burden? ^a I will even forsake you, saith the LORD.

34 And as for the prophet, and the priest, and the people, that shall say, The burden of the LORD, I will even ¹² punish that man and his house.

35 Thus shall ye say every one to his neighbour, and every one to his brother, What hath the LORD answered? and, What hath the LORD spoken?

36 And the burden of the LORD shall ye mention no more: for every man's word shall be his burden; for ye have perverted A. M. 3405. the words of the living God, of the B. C. 599. LORD of hosts our God.

37 Thus shalt thou say to the prophet, What hath the LORD answered thee? and, What hath the LORD spoken?

38 But since ye say, The burden of the LORD; therefore thus saith the LORD; Because ye say this word, The burden of the LORD, and I have sent unto you, saying, Ye shall not say, The burden of the LORD:

39 Therefore behold, I, even I, ^a will utterly forget you, and ^b I will forsake you, and the city that I gave you and your fathers; and cast you out of my presence:

40 And I will bring ^c an everlasting reproach upon you, and a perpetual shame, which shall not be forgotten.

^a Zeph. iii. 4.—^t Mal. i. 1.—^u Verse 39.—¹² Hebrew, visit upon.—^x Hos. iv. 6.—^y Verse 33.—^z Chap. xx. 11.

things, under the notion of revelations made to them in their sleep. And cause my people to err—To wander from the right way; by their lies, and by their lightness—By their groundless assertions, their folly, their rashness and inconsistency with themselves: or, by the flatteries of their preaching, soothing men up in their sins, and by the looseness and lewdness of their conversation encouraging them to persist in them. Yet I sent them not, &c.—They are not my messengers, nor is what they say my message. Therefore they shall not profit this people at all—All the profit they aim at communicating is to make the people easy, but they shall not be able to do even that; for my providences will be such as will fill them with painful apprehensions and distressing fears. Some read the clause, They do not profit this people, considering the words as implying more than they express, namely; that these false prophets not only did the people no good, but did them a great deal of hurt. Observe, reader, none can expect God's blessing upon their ministry who are not called and sent of God. And those that corrupt the word of God, while they pretend to preach it, are so far from edifying the church, that they do it the greatest mischief imaginable.

Verse 33. When this people, or the prophet, &c., shall ask thee, &c.—“The remaining part of this chapter is directed against those who called the word of God, spoken by the true prophets, a BURDEN, by way of reproach; meaning that it always portended evil, and never good;” the word נִשָּׂא, a burden, generally signifying a calamitous prophecy. See note on Isa. xlii. 1. “Ahab intended to cast the same slur on the Prophet Micaiah when he represented him as one that never prophesied good concerning him, but evil, 1 Kings xxii. 8.” The false prophets, who said, Peace, peace, it seems, derided the true prophets, whose predictions were full of threatenings, as if God's messages were a burden which they were weary of hearing; and made a jest of these words, The burden of the Lord, with which God's prophets sometimes prefaced their prophecies. Upon this account God forbade the use of that expression, as in the following verses. See Lowth.

Verse 36. For every man's word shall be his burden—You shall be made severely to account for your loose and profane speeches, wherewith you deride and pervert the words and messages of God himself. Or, “Every man shall have most reason to regard his own word as hurtful and prejudicial to him. For the words of God were delivered with a salutary tendency, to warn sinners of the danger of their situation, and to call them to repentance. Those, therefore, who made a right use of them would have no cause to complain. But those who despised and rejected them perverted that which should have been for their wealth into an occasion of falling.”—Blaney.

Verse 39. Therefore, behold, I will utterly forget you—The Vulgate renders this clause, Propterea ecce ego tolam vos portans, Therefore, behold, I will take you away removing you, (taking the verb נָשָׂא, nashah, in the sense of נָסָא, nasa, as words of a like sound are often of a promiscuous signification,) which makes the sense more pertinent to the foregoing verses. ‘The LXX. interpret the clause to the same purpose, Διὰ τετοῦτο ἰδὲ ἐγὼ λαμβανῶ καὶ ράσω ὑμᾶς, &c. Therefore, behold I take you, and cast you down, or, dash you, to the ground, and the city which I gave to you and to your fathers.

CHAPTER XXIV.

This chapter belongs to the beginning of Zedekiah's reign, probably to the first year of it, the vision contained in it being dated from the carrying away of Jeconiah, and the people with him, into captivity, as from an event which happened but a little before. Here, under the type of good and bad figs, God represents to Jeremiah the different ways in which he would deal with the people already gone into captivity, and Zedekiah, and his subjects that were left behind; showing favour and kindness to the former in their restoration and re-establishment: but pursuing the latter with judgments unto their utter destruction, 1-10.

A. M. 3406.
B. C. 598.

THE ^aLORD showed me, and behold, two baskets of figs were set before the temple of the LORD, after that Nebuchadnezzar ^b king of Babylon had carried away captive ^c Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, and the princes of Judah, with the carpenters and smiths, from Jerusalem, and had brought them to Babylon.

2 One basket had very good figs, even like the figs that are first ripe: and the other basket had very naughty figs, which could not be eaten, ¹ they were so bad.

^a Amos vii. 1, 4; viii. 1.—^b 2 Kings xxiv. 12, &c.; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 10.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXIV.

Verse 1. The Lord showed me—Probably in a vision; and behold two baskets of figs—Such as used to be offered up for first-fruits; were set before the temple of the Lord—Hebrew, כִּיעָר, appointed, offered according to law, as Blaney renders the word; that is, they were brought and placed before the temple for an offering of first-fruits, as the law had directed. After Nebuchadnezzar had carried away captive Jeconiah—Concerning which, see 2 Kings xxiv. 11-16. This was in the eighth year of Nebuchadnezzar's reign. With the carpenters and smiths—Or, the artificers and armorers, as Blaney translates the words; the former, חֲרָשׁ, being “a general name for any handicraftsman, whether working in wood or metal;” but the latter, סָכָר, סָכָר, to shut in, or enclose, meaning properly, “the armorers who made the coats of mail which enclose the body.” And it is reasonable to presume that the king of Babylon would be solicitous to carry all these off, with intent, not to employ them in his own service, but to prevent the Jews, who were left behind, from furnishing themselves with arms in case of a revolt.”

Verse 2. One basket had very good figs—Dr. Shaw speaks of three sorts of figs; the first of which he calls “boccare, (being those here spoken of,) which come to maturity toward the middle or latter end of June; the second, the kermex, or summer fig, which ripens seldom before August; and the third, the winter fig. This is usually of a much longer shape, and dark complexion than the kermex, hanging and ripening upon the tree even after the leaves are shed; and, provided the winter proves temperate, is gathered as a delicious morsel in the spring.”—Shaw's Travels, p. 370, fol. The doctor thinks that the latter sort were those which our

3 Then said the LORD unto me, A. M. 3406.
B. C. 598.
What seest thou, Jeremiah? and I said, Figs; the good figs, very good; and the evil, very evil, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil.

4 ¶ Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

5 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel; Like these good figs, so will I acknowledge ² them that are carried away captive of Judah, whom I have sent out of this place into the land of the Chaldeans for their good.

^c Chap. xxii. 24, &c.; xxix. 2.—¹ Heb. for badness.—² Heb. the captivity.

Saviour expected to find on the fig-tree at the time of the passover in March, Matt. xxi. 19; Mark xi. 13. See Blaney.

Verses 5-7. Thus saith the Lord God of Israel—Here the Lord explains the parable of the good figs, the figs first ripe. These represented the pious captives who were sent first into captivity, as if they had been first ripe for ruin; but who should prove first ripe for mercy, and their captivity should help to ripen them. Among these were Daniel and his companions, and also Ezekiel. The calamities inseparable from a state of captivity were calculated to humble them, and bring them to repentance, and it seems had that good effect: while those who escaped being carried away became more and more hardened in sin. Like these good figs so will I acknowledge them—Namely, for my people, and will favour them accordingly. “The Jews, who were left in their own country,” says Lowth, “thought themselves better beloved of God than their brethren who were carried away captive. To check this vain confidence, God promises to show the latter particular signs of his favour in a strange land, and to show distinguishing marks of his displeasure upon the former: see chap. xxix. 17. For I will set mine eyes upon them for good—To order every thing for the best, that all the circumstances of the affliction may concur to the answering of the great intention of it. Accordingly we find that many of these, Daniel and his companions, for instance, found great esteem and honour during their captivity. And I will bring them again to this land—Some of them probably returned before the end of the captivity, some at the end of the seventy years. “They were sent abroad,” says Henry, “for improvement awhile under a severe discipline; but they shall be fetched back, when they have gone through their trial there, to their

A. M. 3406. 6 For I will set mine eyes upon
B. C. 598. them for good, and ^d I will bring them again to this land: and ^e I will build them, and not pull them down; and I will plant them, and not pluck them up.

7 And I will give them ^f a heart to know me, that I am the LORD: and they shall be ^g my people, and I will be their God: for they shall return unto me ^h with their whole heart.

8 ¶ And as the evil ⁱ figs, which cannot be eaten, they are so evil; surely thus saith the LORD, So will I give Zedekiah the king of Ju-

^d Chapter xli. 15; xxix. 10.—^e Chap. xxxii. 41; xxxiii. 7; xlii. 10.—^f Deuteron. xxx. 6; Chap. xxxii. 39; Ezek. xi. 19;
xxxvi. 26, 27.—^g Ch. xxx. 22; xxxi. 33; xxxii. 38.—^h Chap.
xxix. 13.—ⁱ Chap. xxix. 17.

Father's house." And I will build them, and not pull them down, &c.—The meaning of these meta-phorical expressions is, I will prosper them, and provide for them. And it may be understood, both of the prosperous estate God would give them in the land of their captivity, where they should both build houses and increase their families, (see chap. xxix.
5, 6,) and also of the blessings he would confer upon them and their posterity, after their return to their own land, ibid. verse 10. And he engages to prepare them for the temporal blessings which he designed for them, by conferring spiritual blessings upon them. It is this that would make their captivity for their good: this would be both the improvement of their affliction and their qualification for deliverance.
I will give them a heart to know me—I, who at first commanded light to shine out of darkness, will shine into their hearts, to give them the knowledge of my glory; even that true and saving knowledge of me which is eternal life; which is always productive of faith in, and love to, me, 1 John iv. 7, 8; of obedience to my will, 1 John ii. 3, 4; and a conformity to mine image, 2 Cor. iii. 18. They shall become acquainted with me in a higher degree, and to a better purpose, than formerly; and shall learn more of me by my providences and grace in Babylon than they had learned by my oracles and ordinances in Jerusalem. Mark well the expression, reader, I will give them a heart to know me; not only the mind, but the heart; not only the understanding and judgment, but the will and affections are concerned in the true knowledge of God, which does not consist in mere notions and speculations, but implies the exercise of all spiritual graces and the practice of all divine virtues. And this knowledge is the supernatural gift of God, communicated by the Spirit of wisdom and revelation, Eph. i. 17. The mere natural and unenlightened man has it not: for God and divine things knoweth no man but by the Spirit of God, 1 Cor. ii. 11, 14; see also 1 John v. 20. And they shall be my people—I will own them for my people as formerly, as well in the discoveries of myself to them, as in my acceptances of their services, and my gracious appearance in their behalf. And dah, and his princes, and the residue ^{A. M. 3406.} of Jerusalem, that remain in this land, ^{B. C. 598.} and ^k them that dwell in the land of Egypt:

9 And I will deliver them ^l to ^m be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth for their hurt, ⁿ to be a reproach and a proverb, a taunt ^o and a curse, in all places whither I shall drive
them.

10 And I will send the sword, the famine, and the pestilence, among them, till they be consumed from off the land that I gave unto them and to their fathers.

^k Chap. xliii. 4; xlv.—^l Hebrew, for removing, or, vexation.
^m Deut. xxviii. 25, 37; 1 Kings ix. 7; 2 Chron. vii. 20; Chap.
xv. 4; xxix. 18; xxxiv. 17.—ⁿ Psa. xlv. 13, 14.—^o Chap.
xxix. 18, 22.

I will be their God—They shall have liberty to own me for their God, both in their prayers and praises offered to me, and their expectations from me. For they shall return unto me with their whole heart— They shall be so thoroughly changed in heart and life that they shall make my will their rule, and my glory their end, in all their intentions, affections, and actions, and my service their chief and most delightful business from day to day. This follows upon the former: for they that have a heart to know God aright will not only turn to him, but turn with their whole heart: while those who are either lukewarm in their services, or formal and hypocritical in their religion, may be truly said to be unacquainted with him.

Verses 8–10, As the evil figs—so will I give Ze-dekiah—Or rather, so will I make Zedekiah, as פֶּחַז should be rendered here, and as the same verb is rendered chap. xxix. 17. And them that dwell in the land of Egypt—Whither, it is probable, many of the Jews had fled upon the coming, or the report of the coming, of the king of Babylon: see chap.
xliii. 4, xlv. I will deliver them to be removed into all the kingdoms, &c.—The Lord, by his prophet, uses the words of Moses, wherewith to express those tremendous judgments which he designed to bring upon this wicked prince and people, as well because the Jews had, or professed to have, great reverence for that man of God, how little soever they had for Jeremiah, as to let them see that what the Lord here threatened, and soon would bring to pass, was but an accomplishment of what he foretold by Moses should befall them in case of their disobedience, by which predictions they ought to have taken warning. To be a reproach, and a proverb, and a taunt—To be made a jest of and a by-word: see Dan. ix. 16. And a curse in all places whither I shall drive them—
Men shall use this phrase as a form of execration, “God make thee like Zedekiah, and those who remained with him;” compare chap. xxix. 22. On the contrary, to make a man a blessing, implies that his name should be mentioned as a signal instance of God's favour: see Gen. xlviii. 20; Zech. viii. 13.
Till they be consumed from off the land—My judgments shall follow them so closely that neither they nor any of their posterity shall ever enjoy any possession or property in their own country. This seems to be spoken of those miserable remains of the Jews who, when the rest were carried into captivity, were, either by secreting themselves, or some other means, left in the desolated country.

CHAPTER XXV.

IN this chapter, which seems to come next in succession to chap. xxii., xxiii., (1.) The prophet reproves the Jews for their disregard of the divine calls to repentance, 1-7. (2.) He foretels their subjugation, together with that of the neighbouring nations to the king of Babylon for seventy years, and the fall of the Babylonish empire at that period, 8-14. (3.) The same is foreshown under the symbol of the cup of God's wrath, with which Jeremiah is sent, probably in a vision, unto divers nations, to make them drink of it, to their utter subversion, 15-29. (4.) The like prophecy is the third time repeated in a strain of sublime and poetic imagery, 30-38.

A. M. 3397. THE word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the people of Judah^a in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, that was the first year of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon;

2 The which Jeremiah the prophet spake unto all the people of Judah, and to all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying,

From B. C. 3^b From the thirteenth year of Josiah the son of Amon king of Judah, even unto this day, that is the three and twentieth year, the word of the LORD hath come unto me, and I have spoken^{A. M. 3397.} unto you, rising early and speaking; ^{B. C. 607.} but ye have not hearkened.

4 And the LORD hath sent unto you all his servants the prophets,^d rising early and sending them; but ye have not hearkened, nor inclined your ear to hear.

5 They said, ^e Turn ye again now every one from his evil way, and from the evil of your doings, and dwell in the land that the LORD hath given unto you and to your fathers for ever and ever:

^a Chap. xxxvi. 1. — ^b Chap. i. 2. — ^c Chap. vii. 13; xi. 7, 8, 10; xiii. 10, 11; xvi. 12; xvii. 23; xviii. 12; xix. 15; xxii. 21.

^d Chapter vii. 13, 25; xxvi. 5; xxix. 19. — ^e 2 Kings xvii. 13; Chap. xviii. 11; xxxv. 15; Jonah iii. 8.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXV.

Verse 1. The word that came to Jeremiah in the fourth year of Jehoiakim—It is probable this revelation was made to the prophet in the early part of that year; for the defeat of the Egyptians at Carchemish, and the subsequent taking of Jerusalem, are both placed in the same year: but from verse 9 it appears that Nebuchadnezzar had but just entered upon his expedition when the Lord sent this word to Jeremiah, and had not yet carried into execution any of those designs for which God there says he would take and send him. The reader will observe, the fourth year of Jehoiakim was seven years and some months before Jeconiah was carried into captivity, as appears from 2 Kings xxiii. 36, and xxiv. 8-15, and eighteen years before the taking of the city and the more general captivity; which shows that this prophecy was delivered at least six or seven years before that in the preceding chapter. That was the first year of Nebuchadnezzar—That is, according to the Jewish mode of computing his reign, from the time of his being associated with his father in the empire before he set out on his Syrian expedition. But the Babylonians do not reckon his reign to have begun till two years after, upon his father's death.

Verses 2, 3. Which Jeremiah spake to all the people of Judah—That is, the word which he spake concerned them all, and he spake it to as many of them as he met with in any public assembly at Jerusalem or elsewhere. From the thirteenth year of Josiah—In which year, as we read, chap. i. 2, Jeremiah began to prophesy; Josiah reigned thirty-one years, 2 Kings xxii. 1; so that, taking in the thirteenth year, he prophesied nineteen years during the life of Josiah, to which the four years of Jehoiakim's reign being added, make the number twenty-three. These twenty-three years, says the prophet, I have been a preacher to you, and I have not been negligent in my work, but, like men that rise early in the morning to despatch their business, I have been attentive and laborious in the discharge of my prophetic office.

Verses 4-7. And the Lord hath sent unto you all his servants, &c.—Nor am I the only prophet whom the Lord hath sent you, and whom you have neglected and despised. God hath sent you many more, and you have despised as many as he hath sent. This contempt of the Lord's messengers is made the proximate cause of God's wrath coming upon this people, till there was no remedy, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 16. They said, Turn ye again now, &c.—The substance, both of their and my sermons, hath been to persuade you to abandon those sinful courses, wherein you have lived, and which you might have amended, by virtue of that grace which God did not

A. M. 3397. 6 And go not after other gods to
B. C. 607. serve them, and to worship them, and provoke me not to anger with the works of your hands; and I will do you no hurt.

7 Yet ye have not hearkened unto me, saith the LORD; that ye might ^f provoke me to anger with the works of your hands to your own hurt.

8 ¶ Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts;
Because ye have not heard my words,

9 Behold, I will send and take ^g all the families of the north, saith the LORD, and Nebu-

^f Deut. xxxii. 21; Chap. vii. 19; xxxii. 30.—^g Chap. i. 15.
^h Chapter xxvii. 6; xliii. 10; Isa. xlv. 28; xlv. 1; Chap. xl. 2.
ⁱ Chap. xviii. 16.

deny you. We have not differed in our doctrine, to the practice of which you have also been encouraged, both by them and me, with an assurance from God, that, if you obeyed it, you should enjoy this good land which the Lord promised, and gave to you and your fathers, and which you have now possessed for many ages. And go not after other gods— Though the Jews were guilty of many other sins, yet their most heinous sin was idolatry, as it was a direct renouncing of God's authority, who had, by so many miracles of mercy, set them apart for himself and his own service, and had bestowed so many signal privileges and blessings upon them. And provoke me not with the works of your hands—By worshipping, as gods, the images which your own hands have made, or with any works which are contrary to my law. And I will do you no hurt—You shall yet enjoy your own land and prosper. Yet ye have not hearkened unto me—Ye heard me, and other the Lord's prophets, thus speaking to you, but you have not obeyed; that ye might provoke me, &c.—As if you had disobeyed with a design to incense me against you; to your own hurt—For the sinful actions of men do not affect or injure me, but are to the hurt of those who do them.

Verses 8, 9. Therefore, because ye have not heard —That is, because ye have not hearkened to, nor obeyed my words, Behold, I will send and take all the families of the north, &c.—All those kings whose territories lie northward of Judea, and particularly Nebuchadnezzar, who, in this work, shall be my servant; and will bring them against this land, &c.—I will lead, as commander in chief, them and their armies up against this people; and I will deprive you of all hopes of safety from your alliances with other nations, for the king of Babylon shall first subdue them. See 2 Kings xxiv. 7. And will utterly destroy them, and make them an astonishment
—Will make these countries, and their inhabitants, the objects of men's scorn and reproach. See note on chap. xxiv. 9. And a perpetual desolation—It is often observed, that the Hebrew word עולם, here rendered perpetual, does not always imply eternity, or perpetuity, in a strict sense; but is sometimes chadrezzar the king of Babylon, ^h my A. M. 3397. servant, and will bring them against B. C. 607.

this land, and against the inhabitants thereof, and against all these nations round about, and will utterly destroy them, and ⁱ make them an astonishment, and a hissing, and perpetual desolations.

10 Moreover ¹ I will take from them the ^k voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride, ¹ the sound of the millstones, and the light of the candle.

¹ Heb. I will cause to perish from them.—^k Isa. xxiv. 7; Chap.
vii. 34; xvi. 9; Ezek. xxvi. 13; Hosea ii. 11; Rev. xviii. 23.
¹ Eccles. xii. 4.

taken for such a duration as had a remarkable period to conclude it. Thus it is said of a servant, in a certain case, Exod. xxi. 6, That he shall serve his master for ever—Which the Jews interpret as meaning, "till the next jubilee." So here the sense of the word is to be restrained to the period of seventy years, mentioned verse 11.

Verses 10, 11. Moreover, I will take from them the voice of mirth, &c.—See the note on chap. vii. 34;
xvi. 9. The sound of the millstones and the light of the candle—There shall be no longer any marks of trade carried on, even respecting the common necessaries of life, such as the grinding of corn; and there will be no use of candles, where the inhabitants are dispersed and destroyed; nor will there be occasion for such illuminations as are usual on festival solemnities, in the time of general desolation, verse 11. See the like expressions used, Rev. xviii. 22; where we may observe that St. John exactly follows the Hebrew text; whereas the LXX., in this place, instead of the sound of the millstones, read σμύρον μυρου, the smell of ointment. From which, and several other places of the New Testament, it appears that the apostles and evangelists did not implicitly follow the Greek translation, but only when they thought it consistent with the original text. See Lowth. Mr. Harmer has an excellent observation on this place, which the reader will be glad to see.
"The time for grinding their corn is in the morning;
which consideration makes the prophet's selecting the noise of millstones, and the lighting up of candles, as circumstances belonging to inhabited places, appear in a view which no commentators, that I have examined, have taken any notice of. I am indebted to Sir John Chardin's MS. for the knowledge of this fact. It informs us that 'in the East they grind their corn at break of day; and that when one goes out in a morning, he hears everywhere the noise of the mill, and that it is the noise that often awakens people.' It has been commonly known that they bake every day; and that they usually grind their corn as they want it; but this passage informs us, that it is the first work done in a morning, as well as that this grinding of their mills makes a considerable

A. M. 3397. 11 And this whole land shall be a B. C. 607. desolation, and an astonishment; and these nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years.

Beginning 12 ¶ And it shall come to pass,
B. C. 606. ^mwhen ²seventy years are accomplished, that I will ³punish the king of Babylon, and that nation, saith the LORD, for their iniquity, and the land of the Chaldeans, ⁿand will make it perpetual desolations.

^m 2 Chronicles xxxvi. 21, 22; Ezra i. 1; Chapter xxix. 10;
Daniel ix. 2.—² Beginning B. C. 606, 2 Kings xxiv. 1, ending
B. C. 536, Ezra i. 1.—³ Hebrew, visit upon.

noise, and attracts every ear; and as the lighting up of candles begins the evening, there is an agreeable contrast observable in these words, I will take from thee, &c., the sound of millstones and the light of the candle. And their whole land shall be a desolation—Gloomy shall be the silence of the morning, melancholy the shadows of the evening; no cheerful noise to animate the one, no enlivening ray to soften the gloom of the other. Desolation shall every where reign. A land may abound with habitations, and furnish an agreeable abode, where the voice of mirth is not heard; none of the songs, the music, and the dances of nuptial solemnities; but in the East, where no millstones are heard in the morning, no light seen in the evening, it must be a dreary, dismal solitude.—Chap. iv. obs. 4. See also chap. iii. obs. 18.

Verse 11. These nations shall serve the king of Babylon—That is, Nebuchadnezzar and his successors, collectively considered; seventy years—“This period of the nation’s servitude must be computed from the defeat of the Egyptians at Carchemish, in the same year that this prophecy was given, when Nebuchadnezzar reduced the neighbouring nations of Syria and Palestine, as well as Jerusalem, under his subjection. This was near two years before the heathen chronologers in general begin his reign, his father being still living. After his father’s death, according to Ptolemy’s canon, he reigned forty-three years; Ilverodamus, or Evil-merodach, his son two, Neriglissar four, and Nabonadius, supposed to be Belshazzar, the grandson of Nebuchadnezzar, seventeen; to which, if we add two years of Darius the Mede, who is said, Dan. ix. 1, to have been made king over the realm of the Chaldeans, we shall find the nations to have continued all that time, nearly seventy years, in subjection, more or less, to the king of Babylon. But after the accession of Cyrus, who put an end to the Babylonish monarchy, the nations could serve the king of Babylon no longer, because there was no longer a king of Babylon to serve; for the kings of Persia were never called kings of Babylon; but Babylon became itself a subject and dependant province, under a subordinate governor, and began from that instant to experience, in some degree, those divine visitations which terminated at length in what is so justly called, in the next verse,

13 And I will bring upon that land A. M. 3397 all my words which I have pronounced B. C. 607.
against it, even all that is written in this book, which Jeremiah hath prophesied against all the nations.

14 °For many nations ^pand great kings shall ^aserve themselves of them also: ^rand I will recompense them according to their deeds, and according to the works of their own hands.

15 ¶ For thus saith the LORD God of Israel

^a Isa. xiii. 19; xiv. 23; xxi. 1, &c.; xlvii. 1; Chap. i. 3, 13, 23, 39, 40, 45; li. 25, 26.—° Chap. i. 9; li. 27, 28.—^p Chap.
i. 41; li. 27.—⁴ Chap. xxvii. 7.—^r Chap. i. 29; li. 6, 24.

perpetual desolations.”—Blaney. See notes on chap. xxix. 10; and Ezra i. 1.

Verses 12–14. When seventy years are accomplished, I will punish the king of Babylon—“God often punishes the persons whom he makes instruments of his vengeance upon others for those very things which they did by his appointment, because their intention was merely to carry on their own ambitious and cruel purposes, and not at all to fulfil God’s will, or advance his glory. So that the evil they did was altogether their own, and the good that was brought out of it was to be ascribed solely to God.”—Lowth. See notes on Isa. x. 5–7. And that nation for their iniquity—For their pride, ambition, luxury, tyranny, and cruelty, as well as for their various idolatries, which, after Daniel’s interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar’s dreams, and the miracles wrought by the God of Israel, in favour of Shadrach and his companions, not to mention the testimony borne to the true religion by many other pious Jews, were greatly aggravated, and without all excuse. And the land of the Chaldeans, and make it perpetual desolations—Chaldee was not reduced to desolation immediately upon the taking of Babylon, and the conquest of the country by the Medes and Persians, but its power was then broken, and the sources of its prosperity greatly diminished, and by degrees the country was turned into a solitude. Of the steps whereby this was effected, see notes on Isa. xiii. 19–22, and chap. i. 40. All that is written in this book, which Jeremiah hath prophesied against all nations—Those prophecies are meant which are to be found all together from chap. xlv. to chap. li. inclusively; and which the LXX. have introduced in this place. For many nations, &c., shall serve themselves of them also—Namely, the nations and kings who were confederates with Cyrus. Houbigant renders the clause, For powerful people, and mighty kings, shall reduce even those nations to servitude, and so, &c. And Blaney to nearly the same sense, thus: For of them, even of these, shall many nations and great kings exact service; and I will render, &c.

Verses 15, 16. Thus saith the Lord, Take the wine-cup of this fury, &c.—“Those circumstances which constitute the good and evil of human life are often represented in Scripture as the ingredients of

A. M. 3397. unto me; Take the ^awine-cup of B. C. 607. this fury at my hand, and cause all the nations, to whom I send thee, to drink it.

16 And ^athey shall drink, and be moved, and be mad, because of the sword that I will send among them.

17 Then took I the cup at the LORD's hand, and made all the nations to drink, unto whom the LORD had sent me :

18 To wit, Jerusalem, and the cities of Judah, and the kings thereof, and the princes thereof,
to make them ^aa desolation, an astonishment,
a hissing, and ^za curse; as it is this day;

^a Job xxi. 20; Psalm lxxv. 8; Isa. li. 17; Revelation xiv. 10.
^b Chap. li. 7; Ezek. xxiii. 34; Nah. iii. 11.—^c Verses 9, 11.
^d Chap. xxiv. 9.—^e Chap. xlv. 2, 25.—^f Verse 24.

a cup, which God, as master of a feast, mixes up, and distributes to the several guests as he thinks fit. Hence, when our Saviour asks James and John, whether they were able to drink of the cup which he was to drink of, he means, whether they had resolution and patience to undergo the like sufferings as his Father had allotted for him. And in the like sense he prays, If it be possible let this cup pass from me. Accordingly, by this image of the wine-cup of God's wrath, we are to understand those dreadful judgments which an incensed God was about to inflict on the objects of his displeasure. And Jeremiah the prophet, who announced them, is considered as acting the part of a cup-bearer, carrying the cup round to those who were appointed to drink of it; the effects of which were to appear in the intoxication, that is, the terror and astonishment, the confusion and desolation, that should prevail among them.—Blaney. See notes on Ps. xi. 6, and lxxv. 8; Isa. li. 21.

Verse 17. Then took I the cup—It is not to be imagined that Jeremiah went round in person to all the nations and kings here enumerated, with a cup of wine in his hand, but, doubtless, what is here related passed in a vision, in which it was represented to his view. This, either by writing, or by some special messenger, he communicated to the several kings and nations to which God ordered him to publish it. Or, he himself actually did what is figuratively designed, that is, he publicly announced the judgments of God severally against them, as we find in the chapters mentioned in the note on verse 13.

Verses 18–21. To wit, Jerusalem and the cities thereof—The Jews are mentioned first, because Jeremiah, as well as the rest of the prophets, was in the first place sent to them, and they were to have the greatest share in the judgments denounced. As it is this day—This clause speaks of the desolation of Judah and Jerusalem; when all that Jeremiah had foretold against them was fulfilled; and therefore must have been added either by Baruch, his amanuensis, or else by Ezra: or whoever it was that collected Jeremiah's prophecies into one volume, who,

19 ^y Pharaoh king of Egypt, and ^ahis servants, and his princes, and all his people;

20 And all ^zthe mingled people, and all the kings of ^athe land of Uz, ^band all the kings of the land of the Philistines, and Ashkelon, and Azzah, and Ekron, and ^cthe remnant of Ashdod,

21 ^dEdom, and ^eMoab, and the children of ^fAmmon,

22 And all the kings of ^gTyrus, and all the kings of Zidon, and the kings of the ^hisles which are beyond the ⁱsea,

^a Job i. 1.—^b Chap. xlvii. 1, 5, 7.—^c Isa. xx. 1.—^d Chap. xlix. 7.—^e Chapter xlviii. 1.—^f Chapter xlix. 1.—^g Chap. xlvii. 4.—^h Or, region by the sea-side.—ⁱ Chap. xlix. 23.

it is likely, added the fifty-second chapter. Pharaoh king of Egypt—Whose army Nebuchadnezzar overcame before he took Jerusalem. And all the mingled people—Or, intermingled, as Blaney translates דערער, joining the expression with the preceding verse, and understanding thereby all the foreigners resident in Egypt, who had, by intermarriages, formed connections with the Egyptians. St. Jerome takes the word in the same sense. Our translators, however, seem to have understood by it a mixture of several nations, dwelling either upon the coasts of the Mediterranean, or of the Red sea. And all the kings of the land of Uz—This was the country of Job; but concerning its situation different opinions are entertained. It was most probably on the confines of Idumea, if not a part of it. The daughter of Edom is said to dwell in the land of Uz, Lam. iv. 21: see note on Job i. 1. Those who were leaders, or governors of different tribes or families, seem to have had the name of kings: they are now called emirs. And all the kings of the Philistines—The princes of the different districts, or cities, into which Philistia was divided, namely, Ashkelon and Azzah, &c. And the remnant of Ashdod—Or Azotus, which had been very much ruined by two sieges in which it was taken, the one by Tartan, the Assyrian general, mentioned Isa. xx. 1; the other by Psammetichus, king of Egypt, who retook it after the longest siege that had even been known in those times: Herodot. lib. ii. c. 157. The prophecy respecting the Philistines is contained in chap. xlvii. Edom—Or rather, And Edom—As the LXX. Syr. and Vul. read, with seven MSS. For the prophecies concerning Edom, Moab, and the Ammonites, see chap. xlviii. and xlix. 1–22.

Verses 22–24. And all the kings of Tyrus and Zidon—The nobles, or chief men of each city, seem to be meant by kings here, for neither of these cities had more than one king. And the kings of the isles, which are beyond the sea—Cyprus, &c., which Nebuchadnezzar subjected. Or, as the Hebrew דער דים, is rendered in the margin, The region by the sea-side. For that ^ais, rendered isle in the

A. M. 3397. 23 ¹ Dedan, and Tema, and Buz, B. C. 607. and all ² that are in the utmost corners, 24 And ³ all the kings of Arabia, and all the kings of the ¹ mingled people that dwell in the desert,

25 And all the kings of Zimri, and all the kings of ^m Elam, and all the kings of the Medes,

26 ⁿ And all the kings of the north, far and

¹ Chapter xlix. 8.—² Hebrew, cut off into corners, or, having the corners of the hair polled, Chapter ix. 26; xlix. 32.
³ 2 Chron. ix. 14.

text, does not always signify an island, properly so called, is manifest from many passages. Dedan, and Tema, and Buz—A person called Dedan was descended from Abraham by Keturah, Gen. xxv. 3. Probably he founded the city Dedan; which, however, in process of time, seems to have been annexed to Edom: see chap. xlix. 8; Ezek. xxv. 13. Tema was one of the sons of Ishmael, Gen. xxv. 15, and a city, or district, called after him, was situate near the mountains which separate Arabia from Chaldea.—An. Univ. Hist., vol. vii. p. 230, fol. Buz was the brother of Uz, Gen. xxii. 21, and settled, most probably, in his neighbourhood. Elihu, the wisest of Job's friends, was a Buzite, Job xxxii. 2. And all that are in the utmost corners—Or, all that have the coast insulated, as Blaney translates it: see note on chap. ix. 26. These, he supposes, to be the inhabitants of the peninsula of Arabia, especially those situate toward the bottom, or narrow part of it. And all the kings of Arabia—"The whole country to which we give the general name of Arabia seems to have been thrown, in Scripture, into two great divisions, one of which is called properly עֲרַבָּה, Arabah, the other קֶדֶם, Kedem, according to their respective situations; Arabah, signifying the west, as Kedem does the east. Each of these had their subdivisions; the first, comprehending that which geographers have distinguished by the name of Arabia Petrea, and also, perhaps, those parts along the western coast of the Red sea bordering upon Egypt. The other part, called Kedem, comprehended Arabia Felix, and Arabia Deserta; the former of which the Scripture seems to have distinguished by the name of קְצוּצֵי פֶּתַח, those that have their coast insulated, mentioned in the preceding verse; and the latter in this verse, by the mingled race of those that dwell in the desert, meaning such as inhabited the great desert country, lying between Mesopotamia and Palestine. These may have been so called from the manner of inhabiting the desert promiscuously and in common, without any fixed property or abode, settling, for a time, where they found pasture, and then removing with their flocks to another place; or, from their being made up of people of different descents."—Blaney.

Verses 25, 26. All the kings of Zimri—Those descended from Zimran, one of Abraham's sons, by near, one with another, and all the A. M. 3397. kingdoms of the world, which are B. C. 607.

upon the face of the earth: ² and the king of Sheshach shall drink after them.

27 Therefore thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; ^p Drink ye, and ^a be drunken, and spew, and fall, and rise no more, because of the sword which I will send among you.

¹ Verse 20; Chap. xlix. 31; 1. 37; Ezek. xxx. 5.—² Chap. xlix. 34.—³ Chapter 1. 9.—⁴ Chap. li. 41.—^p Hab. ii. 16.
^a Isa. li. 21; lxiii. 6.

Keturah; all of whom he sent to settle in the east country, Gen. xxv. 2, 6. It is probable that these descendants of Zimran were the same that Pliny mentions among the inhabitants of Arabia, by the name of Zamareni. And all the kings of Elam—Namely, of Persia. And all the kings of the Medes—Who were descended from Madai, the son of Japhet. The Medes and Persians were commonly confederates and partakers of the same prosperity or adversity. And all the kings of the north far and near—"By the kings of the north that were near, the kings of Syria are probably meant: see chap. xlix. 23. Those that were afar off may mean the Hyrcanians and Bactrians, who are reckoned in Xenophon's Cyropædia, lib. i., among them that were subjected or oppressed by the king of Babylon, and perhaps others besides of the neighbouring nations that were compelled to submit to the Babylonian yoke. All these lay to the north of Judea, and at a great distance." And all the kingdoms of the world, &c.—It is justly observed by Blaney, that this must be understood with a limitation to that part of the continent with which the Jews had some correspondence, or acquaintance; just as Πασα η οικουμένη stands for the whole Roman empire, Luke ii. 1. "The ambition of a prince like Nebuchadnezzar, who aimed at universal monarchy, could not but occasion great confusion and distress, both among those who felt, and among those who dreaded, the power of his arms." And the king of Sheshach shall drink after them—Here the speech of Jehovah is resumed, which was broken off at the end of verse 16. That Sheshach means Babylon, appears clearly from chap. li. 41. "But, among the reasons that have been assigned for this name," says Blaney, "I have met with none that I think satisfactory. שָׁכַךְ, signifies to subside, and sink down; and may perhaps allude to the low situation of Babylon, which did not derive its strength from being built, like many other great cities, upon the heights of a rock, but stood upon a large flat, or plain, cowering, as it were, amidst the waters that surrounded it, and by which it was rendered in some parts inaccessible to an enemy."

Verses 27–29. Drink ye and be drunken—The imperative is here put for the future: see the like mode of speaking, Isa. ii. 9; vi. 9; xxxiii. 16. The cup being metaphorically put for calamity, to be drunken with

A. M. 3397. 28 And it shall be, if they refuse to take the cup at thy hand to drink, then shalt thou say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Ye shall certainly drink.
B. C. 607.

29 For lo, ^aI begin to bring evil on the city ^awhich ^ais called by my name, and should ye be utterly unpunished? Ye shall not be unpunished: for ^aI will call for a sword upon all the inhabitants of the earth, saith the LORD of hosts.

30 Therefore prophesy thou against them all these words, and say unto them, The LORD shall ^aroar from on high, and utter his voice from ^ahis holy habitation; he shall mightily roar upon ^ahis habitation; he shall give ^aa shout, as they that tread the grapes, against it, and fall, &c., must signify extreme calamity, or destruction. If they refuse to take the cup, &c.—“If they either do not believe thy threatenings, or disregard them, as thinking themselves sufficiently provided against any hostile invasion, thou shalt let them know that the judgments denounced against them are God’s irreversible decree,” which shall certainly be executed, and that it will be in vain for them to hope to escape the threatened ruin. For lo, I bring evil on the city called by my name, &c.—“Judgment often begins at the house of God, for the correction of his people, and to be a warning to others; but the heaviest strokes of it are reserved for the ungodly:” see Lowth, and chap. xlix. 12; 1 Pet. iv. 17, 18. And should ye be utterly unpunished?—No: if this be done in the green tree, what shall be done in the dry? If they that have some good in them, can they expect to escape that have worse evils and no good found among them? If Jerusalem be punished for learning idolatry of the nations, shall not the nations be punished of whom they learned it? No doubt they shall; for, says the Lord, I will call for a sword upon all the inhabitants of the earth—For they have helped to corrupt the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

^a Proverbs xi. 31; Chapter xlix. 12; Ezekiel ix. 6; Obadiah 16; Luke xxiii. 31; 1 Peter iv. 17.—^b Heb. upon which my name is called.—^c Daniel ix. 18, 19.—^d Ezekiel xxxviii. 21. ^e Isaiah xlii. 13; Joel iii. 16; Amos i. 2.—^f Psalm xi. 4; Chap. xvii. 12.

Verses 30–33. The Lord shall roar from on high—Shall manifest his anger from heaven. God speaks by his judgments, and those, when they are very terrible, may be fitly compared to the roaring of a lion, which strikes a consternation into those that hear it. He shall mightily roar upon his habitation—He shall pronounce and execute a terrible judgment upon his temple, the place on earth which he hath chosen for his residence: see 1 Kings viii. 29. He shall give a shout as they that tread the grapes—That is, He shall utter his voice before his army, as Joel expresses it, chap. ii. 11. Like a leader or general, he shall encourage them to give the onset all the inhabitants of the earth. A. M. 3397.

B. C. 607.

31 A noise shall come even to the ends of the earth; for the LORD hath ^aa controversy with the nations, ^bhe will plead with all flesh; he will give them that are wicked to the sword, saith the LORD.

32 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Behold, evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and ^aa great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth.

33 ^aAnd the slain of the LORD shall be at that day from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth: they shall not be ^alamented, ^fneither gathered, nor buried; they shall be dung upon the ground.

34 ^aHowl, ye shepherds, and cry; and

^a 1 Kings ix. 3; Psalm cxxxii. 14.—^b Isaiah xvi. 9; Chap. xlviii. 33.—^c Hosea iv. 1; Micah vi. 2.—^d Isaiah lxvi. 16; Joel iii. 2.—^e Chap. xxiii. 19; xxx. 23.—^f Isaiah lxvi. 16. ^a Chap. xvi. 4, 6.—^b Psa. lxxix. 3; Chap. viii. 2; Rev. xi. 9. ^c Chap. iv. 8; vi. 26.

upon their enemies, which is usually performed with a shout, as great as that which the treaders of grapes use at the time of the vintage. A noise shall come to the ends of the earth—The report of these calamities and confusions shall reach the most distant countries: For the Lord hath a controversy with the nations—God enters into judgment with men for their impieties, as being so many injuries to his honour, for which he demands satisfaction, Hos. iv. 1; Micah vi. 2. He will plead with all flesh—Namely, with fire and sword, as Isaiah expresses it, chap. lxvi. 16. He will give the wicked to the sword—His quarrel with men is for their wickedness, for their contempt of him, of his authority over them, and kindness to them. They have provoked him to anger, and thence comes all this destruction. Behold, evil shall go forth from nation to nation—As the cup of God’s wrath goes round, every nation shall have its share, and take its turn, because one doth not take warning, by the calamities of another, to repent and reform. A great whirlwind shall be raised up, &c.—The Chaldean army shall come like a hurricane, raised in the north, and thence carried forward with incredible fierceness and swiftness, bearing down all before it. God’s vengeance is often compared to a whirlwind, and is here said to come from the coasts, or sides of the earth, because Chaldea was, at that time, thought to be one of the most remote regions. And the slain of the Lord, &c.—Multitudes shall fall by the sword of the merciless Chaldeans, so that the dead shall be everywhere found, here termed, the slain of the Lord, because slain by commission from him, and sacrificed to his justice. They shall not be lamented—They shall fall in such great numbers that the usual funeral rites and lamentations shall not be paid them, and many of them will lie unburied.

Verses 34, 35. Howl, ye shepherds, and cry—The imperative is here also put for the future: see ver. 27.

A. M. 3397. wallow yourselves in the ashes, ye
B. C. 607. principal of the flock: for ⁷ the days of your slaughter and of your dispersions are accomplished; and ye shall fall like ⁸ a pleasant vessel.

35 And ⁹ the shepherds shall have no way to flee, nor the principal of the flock to escape.

36 A voice of the cry of the shepherds, and a howling of the principal of the flock, shall be

⁷ Hebrew, your days for slaughter.—⁸ Hebrew, a vessel of desire.

Shepherds are here the same with kings, princes, or generals. In pursuance of the same metaphor, by the principal of the flock are meant the great and rich men of each nation. Though such are wont to be the most courageous and secure, yet of these it is foretold, that their hearts should so fail them that they should howl, and cry, and wallow in ashes. Seeing themselves utterly unable to make head against the enemy, and seeing their country, which they had the charge of, and for the protection and prosperity of which they were concerned, inevitably ruined, they should abandon themselves to despair, sorrow, and lamentation. For the days of your slaughter, &c., are accomplished.—The time fixed in the divine counsel for the slaughter of some,
and the dispersion of the rest, is fully come. And ye shall fall like a pleasant vessel.—Ye shall be utterly destroyed, as a crystal glass when it is dashed against the ground. The shepherds shall have no way to flee, &c.—The enemy will be so numerous, so furious, so sedulous, and the extent of their army so vast, that it will be impossible to avoid falling into their hands.

heard: for the LORD hath spoiled A. M. 3397.
their pasture. B. C. 607.

37 And the peaceable habitations are cut down because of the fierce anger of the LORD.

38 He hath forsaken ¹¹ his covert, as the lion:
for their land is ¹⁰ desolate because of the fierce-ness of the oppressor, and because of his fierce anger.

⁹ Heb. flight shall perish from the shepherds, and escaping from,
&c., Amos ii. 14.—¹¹ Psa. lxxvi. 2.—¹⁰ Heb. a desolation.

Verses 36-38. A voice of the cry of the shepherds
—Those are great calamities indeed that strike such a terror upon great men, and put them into this mighty consternation. For the Lord hath spoiled their pasture—In which they fed their flock, and out of which they fed themselves; the spoiling of this makes them cry out thus. Carrying on the metaphor of a lion roaring, the prophet alludes to the great fright into which shepherds are put when they hear a roaring lion coming toward them, and find that neither they nor their flocks can escape. And the peaceable habitations are cut down—Those that used to be quiet and not molested, who had long dwelt in peace and safety, shall now be exposed to all the calamities of war, and shall be thereby destroyed; or, those that used to be peaceable, and not to molest any of their neighbours, nor give provocation to any, shall yet not escape. This is one of the direful effects of war, that even those that are most harmless and inoffensive, often suffer hard things.
Blessed be God, there is a peaceable habitation above for all the sons of peace, which is out of the reach of fire and sword.

CHAPTER XXVI.

In this chapter, (1.) by God's direction, Jeremiah faithfully warns the assembled Jews that, if they did not speedily repent and reform, their city and temple should be destroyed, 1-7. (2.) Being on this account prosecuted for his life, by the priests and false prophets, he boldly avows the divine authority for what he had done, and his good intent in doing it, and warns them that, if they murdered him, it would be at their peril, 8-15. (3.) By the prudence of the civil rulers he is protected, (as Micah had been by Hezekiah,) even while King Jehoiakim murdered Urijah, who was less bold, 16-24.

A. M. 3397. IN the beginning of the reign of
B. C. 607. Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah came this word from the A. M. 3397.

LORD, saying, B. C. 607.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXVI.

Verse 1. In the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim, &c.—The preceding chapter is dated in the fourth year of the reign of Jehoiakim, but ascribed, with probability, to the early part of that year. This chapter is dated in the beginning of the same reign.
Hence it has been concluded, that this must have preceded the former in order of time. "But the conclusion," says Blaney, "will not hold, if we consider that, (chap. xxviii. 1,) the beginning of Zedekiah's reign is expressly declared to mean the fourth year and the fifth month of it. The same therefore may be the case here," and this chapter may be allowed to speak of events subsequent to those of the foregoing one, though taking place immediately after

them.

A. M. 3397. 2 Thus saith the LORD; Stand in
B. C. 607.

^a the court of the LORD's house, and speak unto all the cities of Judah, which come to worship in the LORD's house, ^b all the words that I command thee to speak unto them; ^c diminish not a word:

3 ^d If so be they will hearken, and turn every man from his evil way, that I may ^e repent me of the evil, which I purpose to do unto them because of the evil of their doings.

4 And thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD, ^f If ye will not hearken to me to walk in my law, which I have set before you,

5 To hearken to the words of my servants the prophets, ^g whom I sent unto you, both rising up early, and sending them; but ye have not hearkened;

6 Then will I make this house like ^h Shiloh, and will make this city ⁱ a curse to all the nations of the earth.

7 So the priests and the prophets and all the people heard Jeremiah speaking these words in the house of the LORD.

^a Chap. xix. 14.—^b Ezek. iii. 10; Matt. xxviii. 20.—^c Acts xx. 27.—^d Chap. xxxvi. 3.—^e Chap. xviii. 8; Jonah iii. 8, 9. ^f Lev. xxvi. 14; Deut. xxviii. 15.—^g Chap. vii. 13, 25; xi. 7.

Verses 2, 3: Stand in the court of the Lord's house—The great court where both men and women ordinarily worshipped, says Dr. Lightfoot, when they brought no sacrifice; for when they did so, they were to bring it into the inner court, otherwise called the court of Israel, or of the priests, as the same learned author has observed in his treatise concerning the temple service. And speak unto all the cities of Judah—Here it is evident that ערי, cities, are put for their inhabitants; and we may conjecture from hence, that this transaction passed at one of the great festivals, when the people of Judah were assembled, out of all their cities, to worship at Jerusalem. All the words that I command thee—Not in the least varying from them, either to please men or to save thyself harmless. Diminish not a word—Either out of fear, favour, or flattery: declare not only the truth, but the whole truth, and give them faithful warning. Thus must all God's ambassadors keep close to their instructions, and neither add to, nor diminish from, the word of the truth of the gospel, but must faithfully make known the whole counsel of God. If so be they will hearken and turn, &c.—Not that God was ignorant of their obstinacy, or did not foreknow that they would harden their hearts, and remain impenitent; yet it was for the glory of his justice, mercy, and holiness, to afford them both time for, and the means of, repentance. And he did give them time, for it was at least six years after this before the captivity of Jehoiakim, and seventeen be-

8 ¶ Now it came to pass, when A. M. 3397.
Jeremiah had made an end of speak- B. C. 607.

ing all that the LORD had commanded him to speak unto all the people, that the priests and the prophets and all the people took him, saying, Thou shalt surely die.

9 Why hast thou prophesied in the name of the LORD, saying, This house shall be like Shiloh, and this city shall be desolate without an inhabitant? And all the people were gathered against Jeremiah in the house of the LORD.

10 When the princes of Judah heard these things, then they came up from the king's house unto the house of the LORD, and sat down ¹ in the entry of the new gate of the LORD's house.

11 Then spake the priests and the prophets unto the princes and to all the people, saying, ² This man is worthy to die; ³ for he hath prophesied against this city, as ye have heard with your ears.

12 ¶ Then spake Jeremiah unto all the

¹ 1 Samuel iv. 10, 11; Psalm lxxviii. 60; Chapter vii. 12, 14. ² Isa. lxx. 15; Chap. xxiv. 9.—³ Or, at the door.—⁴ Heb. The judgment of death is for this man.—⁵ Chap. xxxviii. 4.

fore that of Zedekiah took place; and as for means, God favoured them not only with such as were ordinary, but such as were extraordinary, namely, with the ministry of this prophet.

Verse 7. So the priests and the prophets—Namely, the false prophets; they who pretended to be prophets, though they had received no divine commission. And all the people—Who were present at that time; heard Jeremiah, &c., in the house of the Lord—That is, "In the court before the Lord's house. The outer courts, being holy ground, and dedicated to God's worship, are called by the name of the temple. So the treasury, where Christ preached, is called the temple, (John viii. 20,) though it stood in the outer court of it. And St. Paul is said to have entered into the temple, Acts xxi. 26, &c.; that is, into the court of the temple, and the Jews to have laid hold on him there."—Lowth.

Verses 8-10. The priests and prophets took him, &c.—As a disturber of the government, and a discourager of the people from defending their country against the enemy, in prophesying that the temple and city of Jerusalem should become a desolation. When the princes of Judah heard these things—That is, the king's counsellors, or chief officers of the state, who were also members of the great court of the sanhedrim, first instituted Num. xi. 16, and revived by Jehoshaphat, 2 Chron. xix. 8. They came and sat in the entry of the gate, &c.—This was built by Jotham, as we read 2 Kings xiii. 35. The intelligent

A. M. 3397. princes, and to all the people, saying,
B. C. 607.

The LORD sent me to prophesy against this house and against this city all the words that ye have heard.

13 Therefore now ¹amend your ways and your doings, and obey the voice of the LORD your God; and the LORD will ^mrepent him of the evil that he hath pronounced against you.

14 As for me, behold, ⁿI am in your hand: do with me ³as seemeth good and meet unto you:

15 But know ye for certain, that if ye put me to death, ye shall surely bring innocent blood upon yourselves, and upon this city, A. M. 3397.

and upon the inhabitants thereof: for B. C. 607.

of a truth the LORD hath sent me unto you to speak all these words in your ears.

16 ¶ Then said the princes and all the people unto the priests and to the prophets; This man is not worthy to die: for he hath spoken to us in the name of the LORD our God.

17 ° Then rose up certain of the elders of the land, and spake to all the assembly of the people, saying,

18 ^p Micah the Morasthite prophesied in the days of Hezekiah king of B. C. 607.
Judah, and spake to all the people of Judah,

¹ Chap. vii. 3.—^m Verses 3, 19.—ⁿ Ch. xxxviii. 5.—³ Heb.

as it is good and right in your eyes.—^o Acts v. 34.—^p Mic. i. 1.

reader will observe a great similarity between the conduct of these priests and false prophets toward Jeremiah, and that of the priests, the scribes, and Pharisees toward Jesus Christ, of whom Jeremiah was a type: see particularly Mark xiv. 58; Matt. xxvi. 61.

Verses 13-16. Amend your ways, and the Lord will repent, &c.—It appears here again that God's determination to give up Jerusalem to destruction was conditional: see note on chap. xviii. 7-10. If the people had repented of their sins, and reformed their conduct, their ruin would have been prevented, and they would have enjoyed a continuance of peace and prosperity. As for me, behold I am in your hand—I have neither any power, nor can make any interest to oppose you; do with me as seemeth good in your sight—I am content even to lose my life, if God be pleased to permit you to take it. But know ye for certain, &c.—Be fully assured; if you put me to death—Who, as you well know, am not guilty of any crime; ye shall surely bring innocent blood upon yourselves, and upon this city, &c.—You may think that by killing the prophet you will defeat the accomplishment of the prophecy, but you will find yourselves wretchedly deceived: such an act will at once greatly add to your guilt, and aggravate your ruin. Their own consciences could not but tell them that if Jeremiah was (as certainly he was) sent of God to bring them this message, it was at their utmost peril if they treated him for it as a malefactor. For of a truth the Lord hath sent me unto you, &c.—Such is Jeremiah's justification of himself. He reduces all to this, that God had sent him; and his adversaries were able to make no reply. "If God hath sent me, you can have nothing to say against me." It is upon this that he is declared innocent in the following verse, This man is not worthy to die—Which was the sentence pronounced by the princes and all the people: for the people, who before were forward to condemn him, now, upon hearing his apology, were as forward to acquit him.

Verses 17-19. Then rose up certain of the elders—Either the princes before mentioned, or the more intelligent men of the people, stood up, and put the assembly in mind of a former case, as is usual with us in giving judgment, the wisdom of our predecessors being a direction to us. The case referred to is that of Micah, the book of whose prophecies we have among those of the minor prophets. Was it thought strange that Jeremiah prophesied against this city and the temple? Micah did so before him, even in the reign of Hezekiah, that reign of reformation, verse 18. Micah said as publicly, as Jeremiah had now spoken to the same purpose, Zion shall be ploughed like a field—The buildings shall be all destroyed, so that nothing shall hinder but it may be ploughed; Jerusalem shall become heaps—Of ruins; and the mountain of the house—On which the temple is built; shall be as the high places of the forest—Overrun with briars and thorns. This Micah not only spoke, but wrote, and left it upon record, chap. iii. 12. Now did Hezekiah and all Judah put him to death?—Did the people come together in a body to accuse Micah, and demand sentence against him, as they had now done in the case of Jeremiah? Did they and their king make an act to silence him, or take away his life? No: on the contrary, they took the warning he gave them. Hezekiah, that renowned prince, set a good example before his successors; for he feared the Lord, as Noah, who, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, was moved with fear. He besought the Lord—To turn away the judgment threatened, and to be reconciled to them; and he found it was not in vain to do so; for the Lord repented him of the evil—Returned in mercy to them, and even sent an angel, who routed the army of the Assyrians that then threatened to destroy Jerusalem. These elders conclude, that it would be of dangerous consequence to the state if they should gratify the importunity of the priests and prophets in putting Jeremiah to death; saying, Thus we might procure great evil against our souls—Observe, reader, it is well to deter ourselves from sin, with the consideration of the mischief we should certainly do to ourselves by it, and the irreparable damage we should thereby bring upon our own souls.

A. M. 3397. saying, 'Thus saith the LORD of hosts ;
B. C. 607. ^a Zion shall be ploughed like a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house as the high places of a forest.

19 Did Hezekiah king of Judah and all Judah put him at all to death ? ^r did he not fear the LORD, and besought ⁴ the LORD, and the LORD ⁵ repented him of the evil which he had pronounced against them ? ^s Thus might we procure great evil against our souls.

20 And there was also a man that prophesied in the name of the LORD, Urijah the son of Shemaiah of Kirjath-jearim, who prophesied against this city and against this land, according to all the words of Jeremiah :

^a Mic. iii. 12.—^r 2 Chron. xxxii. 26.—⁴ Heb. the face of the LORD.—^s Exod. xxxii. 14 ; 2 Sam. xxiv. 16.

Verses 20-23. And there was also a man—There are three different opinions respecting the following passage. The first ascribes it to an opposite party, who, by a contrary precedent to the foregoing, urged the condemnation of Jeremiah, a precedent in which the speaking such words as he had spoken was adjudged treason. But against this view of the passage it is objected that such a transition of the speakers would have had some mark of distinction prefixed. Others suppose that this instance was alleged by the same persons that adduced the former, and with an intent to mark the different consequences that had ensued, and to caution the people and government against taking another step of a similar kind, and thereby adding sin to sin. As if he had said, Hezekiah, who had protected Micah, prospered ; but did Jehoiakim, who slew Urijah, prosper ? No : they all saw the contrary : one prophet had been slain already, let them not fill up the measure of national iniquity by slaying another. But Blaney thinks the least exceptionable opinion is, "that the elders concluded their speeches verse 19, and that the writer of the narrative goes on here to observe, in his own person, that notwithstanding the precedent of Micah, there had been a later precedent in the present reign, which might have operated very unfavourably to the cause of Jeremiah, but for the influence and authority of Ahikam the son of Shaphan, which was exerted to save him."

Who prophesied against this city, &c., according to all the words of Jeremiah—The prophets of the Lord agreed in their testimony, and one would have supposed that this circumstance should have caused their word to be regarded. And the king sought to put him to death—Being, with his courtiers, greatly exasperated against him on account of the faithful testimony which he bore, and the true predictions of approaching judgments which God commissioned him to utter. But when Urijah heard it, he was afraid, and fled—In this, it seems, he was faulty,

21 And when Jehoiakim the king, ^{A. M. 3397.} with all his mighty men, and all the ^{B. C. 607.}
princes, heard his words, the king sought to put him to death : but when Urijah heard it, he was afraid, and fled, and went into Egypt ;

22 And Jehoiakim the king sent men into Egypt, namely, Elnathan the son of Achbor, and certain men with him into Egypt.

23 And they fetched forth Urijah out of Egypt, and brought him unto Jehoiakim the king ; who slew him with the sword, and cast his dead body into the graves of the ⁵ common people.

24 Nevertheless, ^u the hand of Ahikam the son of Shaphan was with Jeremiah, that they should not give him into the hand of the people to put him to death.

^t Acts v. 39.—⁵ Heb. sons of the people.—^u 2 Kings xxii. 12, 14 ; Chap. xxxix. 14.

and that through the weakness of his faith : he was too much under the power of that fear of man which brings a snare, and did not sufficiently confide in the power of God to protect him in the faithful execution of his office. And Jehoiakim sent men into Egypt, &c.—One would have thought Jehoiakim's malice might have been satisfied with driving him out of the country ; but they are blood-thirsty that hate the upright, Prov. xxix. 10. It was the life, the precious life, that Jehoiakim hunted after, and nothing less would satisfy him. So implacable is his revenge, that he sends a party of soldiers into Egypt, (there being a strict alliance between him and Pharaoh-nechoh,) some hundreds of miles, and they bring him back by force of arms unto Jehoiakim, who slew him with the sword—Some think, even with his own hands, but this appears improbable. Neither did even this satisfy the king's insatiable malice, but he loads the body of the good man with infamy, would not allow it the decent respects usually and justly paid to the remains of persons of distinction, but cast it into the graves of the common people—As if he had not been a prophet of the Lord. Thus Jehoiakim hoped both to ruin Urijah's reputation with the people, that no heed might be given to his predictions, and to deter others from prophesying in like manner : but in vain. Jeremiah bears the same testimony. There is no contending with the word of God. Herod thought he had gained his point when he had cut off John the Baptist's head, but found himself deceived when, soon after, he heard of Jesus Christ, and said in a fright, This is John the Baptist ; he is risen from the dead.

Verse 24. Nevertheless, the hand of Ahikam, &c., was with Jeremiah—Both he and his father Shaphan were chief ministers under Josiah, 2 Kings xxii. 12-14. And the brothers of Ahikam, Gemariah, Elasah, and Jaazaniah were considerable men in those days, with Ahikam, and members of the great council ; Jer. xxix. 3 ; Ezek. viii. 11. So Ahikam made use of his interest with them to deliver Jeremiah from the danger that threatened him. Thus God wonderfully preserved Jeremiah, though he did not flee as Urijah did, but stood his ground. Ord-nary ministers may use ordinary means, provided they be lawful ones, for their preservation; but they that have an extraordinary mission may expect an extraordinary protection.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Ambassadors having come to Zedekiah from the kings of Edom, Moab, and other neighbouring nations, probably to solicit him to join with them in a confederacy against the king of Babylon, Jeremiah is here ordered to put bands and yokes about his neck, and to send them afterward to the before-mentioned kings, declaring the sovereignty of Nebuchadnezzar and his successors to be of divine appointment, and promising peace and protection to such as submitted quietly, but menacing evil in case of resistance, 1-11. A like admonition is delivered to Zedekiah, advising him not to expose himself and his people to certain ruin, by listening to the suggestions of false prophets, and revolting from the service of the king of Babylon, 12-15. The priests and all the people are also warned not to give credit to the false prophets, who taught them to expect a speedy restoration of the vessels which had been carried to Babylon together with Jeconiah. Instead of which it is foretold, that the remaining vessels in the house of God, and in the king's house at Jerusalem, should be carried after the other, and should not return till the appointed period of Judah's captivity was at an end, 16-22.

A. M. 3408. IN the beginning of the reign of
B. C. 596. Jehoiakim the son of Josiah ^a king of Judah came this word unto Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Thus ¹ saith the LORD to me; Make thee bonds and yokes, ^b and put them upon thy neck,

3 And send them to the king of Edom, and to the king of Moab, and to the king of the Am-monites, and to the king of Tyrus, and to the king of Zidon, by the hand of the messengers which come to Jerusalem unto Zedekiah king
of Judah;

^a Verses 3, 12, 19, 20; Ch. xxviii. 1.—¹ Or, hath the LORD said.—^b Chap. xxviii. 10, 12; So Ezek. iv. 1; xii. 3; xxiv. 3.
² Or, concerning their masters, saying.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXVII.

Verse 1. In the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim—Instead of Jehoiakim here, Dr. Waterland, Houbigant, Blaney, and many others, read Zedekiah, because it is difficult, if not impossible, to reconcile the common reading with what follows. Lowth also, in his commentary upon the place, gives it as his opinion, that “the least forced way of solving the difficulty is, to say that Jehoiakim has crept into the text by the negligence of the scribes, (who might have their eyes fixed upon the beginning of the last chapter or section,) instead of Zedekiah. This emendation is confirmed by comparing this verse with the 3d, 12th, and 20th verses of this chapter, and with the beginning of the next. Such little verbal mistakes must be allowed by all impartial readers to have sometimes happened in transcribing the Holy Scriptures, as well as in other books, and may easily be corrected, by comparing the suspected reading with other parts of the sacred text, which admit of no difficulty or uncertainty.”

Verses 2, 3. Make thee bonds and yokes, &c.—The prophets were frequently ordered to foreshow future events by actions as well as by words. Thus Isaiah was commanded to go naked and barefoot, Isa. xx. 3.

4 And command them ² to say unto: A. M. 3408. their masters, Thus saith the LORD B. C. 596. of hosts, the God of Israel; Thus shall ye say unto your masters;

5 ^o I have made the earth, the man and the beast that are upon the ground, by my great power and by my outstretched arm, and ^d have given it unto whom it seemed meet unto me.

6, ^e And now have I given all these lands into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, ^f my servant; and ^g the beasts of the field have I given him also to serve him.

^c Psa. cxv. 15; cxlvi. 6; Isa. xlv. 12.—^d Psa. cxv. 16; Dan.
iv. 17, 25, 32.—^e Chap. xxviii. 14.—^f Chap. xxv. 9; xlii. 10;
Ezek. xxix. 18, 20.—^g Chap. xxviii. 14; Dan. ii. 38.

Ezekiel, in like manner, was ordered to prophesy by signs, Ezek. iv. 1; xii. 3; and xxiv. 17-19. In making these yokes, putting them upon his neck, and fastening them on with bands, Jeremiah was intended to be a type both to his own people, and also to the people afterward mentioned, that they should be brought under subjection to the king of Babylon. And send them to the king of Edom, &c.—These nations were near to the Jews, and their princes had their ambassadors resident at Jerusalem. They were also some of those countries which God had declared that he had given into the hand of the king of Babylon: see chap. xxv. 21, 24. By the hand of the messengers, &c.—The business of these messengers seems to have been, to engage Zedekiah to join in a league with the nations from which they came, against the king of Babylon.

Verse 6. I have given all these lands into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar—“God is the sole lord and proprietor of the world; and, by virtue of his absolute sovereignty and dominion, has a right to give the kingdoms of the earth to whomsoever he pleases, Dan. iv. 17, and he exercises this authority by changing times and seasons, by removing kings, and setting up kings, Dan. ii. 21. The king

A. M. 3408. 7^h And all nations shall serve him, B. C. 596. and his son, and his son's son,ⁱ until the very time of his land come: ^k and then many nations and great kings shall serve themselves of him.

8 And it shall come to pass, that the nation and kingdom which will not serve the same Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, and that will not put their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, that nation will I punish, saith the LORD, with the sword, and with the famine, and with the pestilence, until I have consumed them by his hand.

9 Therefore hearken not ye to your prophets, nor to your diviners, nor to your ³ dreamers, nor to your enchanters, nor to your sorcerers, which speak unto you, saying, Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon :

10 ¹ For they prophesy a lie unto you, to remove you far from your land; and that I should drive you out, and ye should perish.

11 But the nations that bring their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him,

A. M. 3408. those will I let remain still in their own land, saith the LORD; and they shall till it, and dwell therein. B. C. 596.

12 ¶ I spake also to ^m Zedekiah king of Judah according to all these words, saying Bring your necks under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him and his people, and live.

13 ⁿ Why will ye die, thou and thy people, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence, as the LORD hath spoken against the nation that will not serve the king of Babylon?

14 Therefore hearken not unto the words of the prophets that speak unto you, saying, Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon; for they prophesy ^o a lie unto you.

15 For I have not sent them, saith the LORD, yet they prophesy ^a a lie in my name; that I might drive you out, and that ye might perish, ye, and the prophets that prophesy unto you.

16 ¶ Also I spake to the priests and to all this people, saying, Thus saith the LORD;

^b 2 Chronicles xxxvii. 20.—ⁱ Chap. xxv. 12; 1. 27; Dan. v. 26.
^k Chap. xxv. 14.—³ Heb. dreams.—¹ Verse 14.

^m Chap. xxviii. 1; xxxviii. 17.—ⁿ Ezek. xviii. 31.—^o Chap. xiv. 14; xxiii. 21; xxix. 8, 9.—^a Heb. in a lie, or, lyingly.

of Babylon, my servant—One whom I have made use of as an instrument to execute my purposes in inflicting punishment on many nations: see note on chap. xxv. 9. And the beasts of the field have I given him—This is a hyperbolical way of speaking, to signify the most ample authority and dominion.

Verses 7, 8. All nations shall serve him, his son, and his son's son—His son was Evil-merodach, and his son's son Belshazzar, in whom his kingdom ended. Then the time of reckoning with his land came, when the tables were turned; and many nations and great kings—Incorporated in the empire of the Medes and Persians, served themselves of him. The nation, &c., that will not put their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon—That will not submit to that servitude, represented by the yoke, mentioned verses 2, 3; will I punish with the sword, &c.—With one judgment after another, until they are wasted and ruined. Nebuchadnezzar was very unjust and barbarous in invading the rights and liberties of his neighbours, and forcing them into a subjection to him; yet God had just and holy ends in view in permitting it, namely, to punish those nations for their idolatry and gross immoralities. They that would not serve the God that made and preserved them, were justly made to serve their enemies that sought to ruin them.

Verses 9–11. Hearken not ye to your prophets, nor to your diviners—These nations, it must be observed, had their prophets as well as the Jews, or rather persons that pretended to foretel future events by consulting the stars, by dreams, and various arts of divination; and they, to please their patrons, flattered them with assurances that they should not be brought into subjection and servitude by the king of Babylon. By these means they designed to animate them to a vigorous resistance: and though they had no ground for such an expectation, they hoped hereby to do them service. But Jeremiah here tells them, that it would prove to their destruction; for by resisting they would provoke the conqueror to deal severely with them, to remove them from their land, and to drive them out into a miserable captivity, in which they should be buried in oblivion, and perish. But the nations that bring their neck under the yoke, &c.—That, upon the first summons, or without making any hostile opposition, shall yield themselves subjects to the king of Babylon, shall continue in their own country and possessions, being only made tributaries to that king.

Verses 12, 13. I spake also to Zedekiah, &c.—What the prophet here says to Zedekiah has a particular weight in it, because he was made king of Judea by Nebuchadnezzar, and had taken an oath to be faithful to him, and never to resist his authority. Why will ye die, thou and thy people?—That is, why wilt thou wilfully ruin, not only thyself, but thy people, by the sword, the famine, and the pestilence? by which judgments the Lord hath declared, that all nations who will not willingly yield to the king of Babylon shall be destroyed.

Verses 16–18. Also I spake to the priests and to all this people—The prophet, being God's true servant, spared none, but gave faithful warning to all sorts

A. M. 3408. Hearken not to the words of your
B. C. 596.

prophets that prophesy unto you, saying, Behold, ² the vessels of the LORD's house shall now shortly be brought again from Babylon: for they prophesy a lie unto you.

17 Hearken not unto them; serve the king of Babylon, and live: wherefore should this city be laid waste?

18 But if they be prophets, and if the word of the LORD be with them, let them now make intercession to the LORD of hosts, that the vessels which are left in the house of the LORD, and in the house of the king of Judah, and at Jerusalem, go not to Babylon.

19 ¶ For thus saith the LORD of hosts ^a concerning the pillars, and concerning the sea,

2 Chron. xxxvi. 7, 10; Chap. xxviii. 3; Dan. i. 2.—^a 2 Kings xxv. 13; Chap. lii. 17, 20, 21.—^b 2 Kings xxiv. 14, 15; Chap.

of persons, to take heed of being deceived by the false prophets, who undertook to foretell that the vessels of the temple, carried away in the time of Jehoiakim and his son Jeconiah, (of which we read 2 Chron. xxxvi. 7, 10,) should be brought back again to Jerusalem in a short time: see chap. xxviii. 3. Hearken not unto them.—Believe them not, but acquiesce in God's providence with respect to you, and be content to be subject to the king of Babylon, that so your lives may be given you for a prey. Wherefore should this city be laid waste?—If you do not comply with God's will in this instance, your city will certainly be destroyed, and why should you pull down such a judgment upon your own heads? But if they be prophets, &c.—If they be true prophets, and have any power with God, instead of foretelling the bringing back of the vessels carried away, let them apply to him in prayer to prevent the carrying away of the vessels that yet remain, whether in the house of the Lord, or in the king's house, or in Jerusalem, which can be done no other way than by pleading with God to turn away his wrath, and not proceed in inflicting those sore judgments which he is most certainly bringing upon you.

and concerning the bases; and concerning the residue of the vessels that remain in this city, 20 Which Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon took not, when he carried away ^c captive Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah from Jerusalem to Babylon, and all the nobles of Judah and Jerusalem;

21 Yea, thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, concerning the vessels that remain in the house of the LORD, and in the house of the king of Judah and of Jerusalem;

22 They shall be ^d carried to Babylon, and there shall they be until the day that I ^e visit them, saith the LORD; then ^f will I bring them up, and restore them to this place.

xxiv. 1.—^g 2 Kings xxv. 13; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 18.—^h 2 Chron. xxxvi. 21; Chap. xxix. 10; xxxii. 5.—ⁱ Ezra i. 7; vii. 19.

Verses 19-22. Thus saith the Lord concerning the pillars, &c.—These were all parts of the temple, or vessels used in it: see 1 Kings vii. And all the nobles, &c.—Concerning the persons and things which the king of Babylon carried away, see 2 Kings xxiv. 13-15. Yea, thus saith the Lord—The prophet enlarges the divine threatening, and represents it as extending to all other vessels of value in the houses of the king, the nobles, or more wealthy citizens. They shall be carried to Babylon, and there shall they be—See an historical account of the fulfilment of this prophecy, 2 Kings xxv. 13-16; and 2 Chron. xxxvi. 18; and that they abode in Babylon till the end of the captivity, appears from Dan. v. 2, where we read of Belshazzar's sending for them, to drink wine in at his fatal feast; until the day that I visit them—That is, until the expiration of the time of the Jewish captivity, which was seventy years. Then will I restore them to this place—Of the fulfilling of which part of the prophecy we have an account Ezra i. 7-9. So punctually was Jeremiah's prophecy in this place fulfilled, and so exactly does one part of holy writ agree with another, which are irrefragable proofs of the divine authority of the sacred Scriptures.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

In the foregoing chapter Jeremiah had charged those prophets with speaking lies who foretold the speedy breaking of the yoke of the king of Babylon, and the speedy return of the vessels of the sanctuary; now here we have his contest with a particular prophet upon those heads. (1.) Hananiah, in contradiction to Jeremiah, pretends to foretell that, within two years, the Babylonish yoke should be broken, and the vessels which had been carried to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar, together with all the captives, should within that time be restored, 1-4. (2.) Jeremiah consents to allow of Hananiah's pretensions to the character of a true prophet, in case his prediction should be accomplished, 5-9. (3.) Hananiah, in confirmation of what he had foretold, breaketh off the yoke from Jeremiah's neck, 10, 11. (4.) Jeremiah is ordered to declare, that the king of Babylon's yoke, instead of wood, should be made of iron, 12-14. (5.) He foretels the death of Hananiah within the year; and he dies accordingly two months after, 15, 17.

A. M. 3408.
B. C. 596.

AND ^ait came to pass the same year, in the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the fourth year, and in the fifth month, that Hananiah the son of Azur the prophet, which was of Gibeon, spake unto me in the house of the LORD, in the presence of the priests, and of all the people, saying,

2 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, I have broken ^bthe yoke of the king of Babylon.

3 ^cWithin ¹two full years will I bring again into this place all the vessels of the LORD's house, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon took away from this place, and carried them to Babylon.

4 And I will bring again to this place Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, with all the ²captives of Judah, that went into Babylon, saith the LORD; for I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon.

5 ¶ Then the Prophet Jeremiah said unto

^a Chapter xxvii. 1.—^b Chapter xxvii. 12.—^c Chapter xxvii. 16.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXVIII.

Verses 1-4. And it came to pass the same year—Namely, the same in which the preceding prophecy was delivered; for the words manifestly refer to the time specified at the beginning of the foregoing chapter, and confirm the conjecture there made, that Jehoiakim is put there, by a mistake in the copies, for Zedekiah: see note on chap. xxvi. 1, where the fourth year of Jehoiakim's reign is termed the beginning of it. Hananiah the son of Azur the prophet—That is, a pretended prophet. Being of Gibeon, a city belonging to the priests, it is probable he was a priest as well as Jeremiah; spake unto me in the house of the Lord—Delivered publicly, and solemnly, and in the name of the Lord, what he wished to be considered as a true prediction; in the presence of the priests and of the people—Who probably were expecting to have some message from Heaven. In delivering this feigned prophecy, Hananiah designed to confront and contradict Jeremiah. His prediction is, that the king of Babylon's power, at least over Judah and Jerusalem, should be speedily broken; that within two full years the vessels of the temple should be brought back, and Jeconiah, and all the captives that were carried away with him, should return; whereas Jeremiah had foretold that the yoke of the king of Babylon should be bound on yet faster, and that the vessels and the captives should not return for seventy years.

Verses 5-9. The Prophet Jeremiah said, Amen: the Lord do so!—Thereby expressing his hearty concern for the good of his nation, and wishing that God would repent him of the evil wherewith he

the Prophet Hananiah in the presence of the priests, and in the presence of all the people that stood in the house of the LORD,

6 Even the Prophet Jeremiah said, ^dAmen: the LORD do so: the LORD perform thy words which thou hast prophesied, to bring again the vessels of the LORD's house, and all that is carried away captive, from Babylon into this place.

7 Nevertheless, hear thou now this word that I speak in thine ears, and in the ears of all the people;

8 The prophets that have been before me and before thee of old, prophesied both against many countries, and against great kingdoms, of war, and of evil, and of pestilence.

9 ^eThe prophet which prophesieth of peace, when the word of the prophet shall come to pass, then shall the prophet be known, that the LORD hath truly sent him.

10 ¶ Then Hananiah the prophet took the ¹ Heb. two years of days.—² Heb. captivity.—^d 1 Kings i. 36.

^e Deut. xviii. 22.

had threatened them by his ministry; for such an affection had he for them, and so truly desirous was he of their welfare, that he would have been content to lie under the imputation of being a false prophet so that their ruin might have been prevented. Nevertheless, hear thou now this word—As if he had said, The word which I am about to speak concerns thee, and not thee alone, but all the people, therefore do thou mark it well, and let them observe it also. The prophets that have been before me and before thee—Namely, Joel, Amos, Hosea, Micah, Zephaniah, Nahum, Habakkuk, and others; prophesied both against many countries and great kingdoms, &c.—“Jeremiah offers two reasons in defence of his own prophecies, and against those of Hananiah. 1st, That many other prophets agreed with him in prophesying evil against the Jews, and other neighbouring countries; whereas Hananiah, being single in his predictions, nothing but the perfect answering of the event to them could give him the authority of a true prophet. 2d, That, considering the general corruption of the people's manners, it was highly probable that God would punish their iniquities. To this the Jews add a third explication of the words, namely, that when any prophet foretold peace and prosperity, (namely, unconditionally and absolutely, as Hananiah here did,) his prophecy must certainly be fulfilled to prove him to be a true prophet; whereas, when a prophet foretold evil, which was Jeremiah's case, the event might be suspended by the repentance of the persons concerned.”—Lowth.

Verses 10-14. Then Hananiah took the yoke from off Jeremiah's neck—Thus it appears that Jeremiah

A. M. 3408. ^f yoke from off the Prophet Jeremiah's neck, and brake it. B. C. 596.

11 And Hananiah spake in the presence of all the people, saying, Thus saith the LORD; Even so will I break the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon ^g from the neck of all nations within the space of two full years. And the Prophet Jeremiah went his way.

12 ¶ Then the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah the prophet, after that Hananiah the prophet had broken the yoke from off the neck of the Prophet Jeremiah, saying, 13 Go and tell Hananiah, saying, Thus saith the LORD; Thou hast broken the yokes of wood; but thou shalt make for them yokes of iron.

14 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; ^h I have put a yoke of iron upon the neck of all these nations, that they may serve Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon; and they shall serve him: and ⁱ I have given him the beasts of the field also.

15 ¶ Then said the Prophet Jeremiah unto Hananiah the prophet, Hear now, Hananiah; The LORD hath not sent thee; but ^k thou makest this people to trust in a lie.

16 Therefore thus saith the LORD; Behold, I will cast thee from off the face of the earth: this year thou shalt die, because thou hast taught ^l rebellion ³ against the LORD.

17 So Hananiah the prophet died B. C. 596. the same year in the seventh month.

^f Chap. xxvii. 2.—^g Chap. xxvi. 7.—^h Deuteron. xxviii. 48; Chap. xxvii. 4, 7.—ⁱ Chap. xxvii. 6.

^k Chap. xxix. 31; Ezek. xiii. 22.—^l Deuteron. xiii. 5; Chap. xxix. 32.—³ Heb. revolt.

wore this yoke, agreeably to the command given him by God, as a symbol of that subjection to the king of Babylon to which he admonished the Jews and other neighbouring nations to submit, in order that they might prevent the extreme evil which would otherwise fall upon them: and this yoke Hananiah took off the prophet's neck, and broke it, by way of a symbolical sign that the Jews, and these other nations, should be freed from the Babylonian yoke within two years. And the Prophet Jeremiah went his way—Quietly and patiently, knowing that it would answer no good end to contend with one whose mind was heated, and in the midst of the priests and people that were violently set against him. Doubtless he expected that God would soon send a special message to Hananiah, and he would say nothing till he received it. It is often our wisdom and duty to yield to violence, to bear revilings with patience, and to retreat rather than contend. Then the word of the Lord came unto Jeremiah—To ratify and confirm the prophecy he had lately uttered; saying; Go and tell Hananiah, Thou hast broken the yokes of wood, &c.—Which were light and easy; but thou shalt make for them yokes of iron—Such as no human strength can break; that is, thou shalt bring a heavier and more grievous yoke upon them than they otherwise would have had, by persuading them not to submit to Nebuchadnezzar.

Verses 15–17. Then said Jeremiah, Hear now, Hananiah—Jeremiah, being a second time confirmed in the truth of what he had foretold, and having likewise a special revelation relating to this false prophet, comes and calls him by his name, and tells him his doom, that he should die within a year, because he had taught rebellion against the Lord—Had taught people to believe and trust to what was false, contradicting God's will revealed by Jeremiah, and encouraging and exciting the people to hold out against Nebuchadnezzar, and not quietly to yield to this dispensation of God. "Thus, as Hananiah had limited the accomplishment of his prophecy to the space of two years, to gain credit with the people by such a punctual prediction, so Jeremiah confines the trial of his veracity to a much shorter time, and the event, exactly answering to the prediction, evidently showed the falsehood of Hananiah's pretences."—Lowth. So Hananiah died the same year in the seventh month—Two months after he had uttered this false prophecy, as appeareth from verse 1. So dangerous a thing it is for those who speak in the name of God to teach people contrary to his revealed will!

CHAPTER XXIX.

In the preceding chapter we had Jeremiah's contest with a false prophet, face to face; here is another, carried on by letters. In the letter which Jeremiah wrote to the captives in Babylon, 1–3, (1.) He directs them how to make their captivity as easy as they could, 4–7. (2.) He cautions them to give no credit to their false prophets, who promised them a speedy relief, 8, 9. (3.) He assures them that, after seventy years, the Lord would mercifully restore them to their own land, 10–14. (4.) He foretels that those Jews who remained in Canaan should, after manifold grievous disasters, be brought captives to Babylon, 15–19. (5.) He foretels the ruin of two false prophets at Babylon, who, by their bad example and flattering seductions, encouraged them to wickedness, 20–23. In resentment, Shemaiah, a false prophet at Babylon, wrote to the priests at Jerusalem, to persecute Jeremiah as a villain or madman, 22–29: and thereby drew upon himself and family a prediction of ruin by Jeremiah, 30–32.

A. M. 3406.
B. C. 598.

NOW these are the words of the letter that Jeremias the prophet sent from Jerusalem unto the residue of the elders which were carried away captives, and to the priests, and to the prophets, and to all the people whom Nebuchadnezzar had carried away captive from Jerusalem to Babylon;

2 (After that ^a Jeconiah the king, and the queen, and the ¹ eunuchs, the princes of Judah and Jerusalem, and the carpenters, and the smiths, were departed from Jerusalem;)

3 By the hand of Elasah the son of Shaphan, and Gemariah the son of Hilkiah, (whom Zedekiah king of Judah sent unto Babylon to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon,) saying,

^a 2 Kings xxiv. 12, &c.; Chapter xxxii. 26; xviii. 4.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXIX.

Verse 1. Now these are the words of the letter—Hebrew, דברי הכתר, the words of the book, or writing, as both the LXX. and the Vulgate translate it. Although this title announces but one, Blaney gives it as his opinion that this chapter undeniably contains the substance of two writings sent at different times, which, he says, "is evident from comparing verse 28 with verses 4, 5, and that the distinction between them is at the end of verse 20. For in the first the prophet exhorts the captives to accommodate themselves to their present circumstances, under an assurance that their captivity would last to the end of seventy years; after which period, and not before, God would visit and restore them. And to prevent their listening to any false suggestions that might flatter them with hopes of a speedier return, he informs them of what would happen to their brethren that were left behind at Jerusalem, for whom a harder fate was reserved than for those that had been carried away. After this, finding, as it should seem, upon the return of the messengers, the little credit the first message had met with, he sends a second to the same persons, denouncing the divine judgments against three of their false prophets, by whose influence chiefly the people had been prevented from hearkening to his good advice." The time when one or both of these written declarations of the divine will was sent to Babylon is not known, but it is thought to have been at the beginning of Zedekiah's reign. By the residue of the elders, Lowth thinks that the remnant of the members of the Sanhedrim is intended, who were carried away captive in the third year of Jehoiakim's reign, (Dan. i. 3,) or in Jeconiah's captivity, (see 2 Kings xxiv. 14,) many of whom might die by the hardships they suffered in their transportation. These, being persons of authority, were more likely to influence the rest of the people, and induce them to hearken to the prophet's advice. Houbigant, however, not content with this interpretation, renders it, Unto the principal elders. Instead

A. M. 3406.
B. C. 598.

4 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, unto all that are carried away captives, whom I have caused to be carried away from Jerusalem unto Babylon;

5 ^b Build ye houses, and dwell in them; and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them;

6 Take ye wives, and beget sons and daughters; and take wives for your sons, and give your daughters to husbands, that they may bear sons and daughters; that ye may be increased there, and not diminished.

7 And seek the peace of the city whither I have caused you to be carried away captives, and pray unto the LORD for it: for in the peace thereof shall ye have peace.

¹ Or, chamberlains.—^b Verse 28.—^c Ezra vi. 10; 1 Tim. ii. 2.

of prophets, here the LXX. read ψευδοπροφητας, false prophets: but the Chaldee understands by the word the scribes or doctors of the law; while others again think that Ezekiel, (carried away with Jeconiah,) Daniel, and other prophets of the captivity, may be meant.

Verses 2, 3. After that Jeconiah and the queen, &c.—By the queen is meant Jeconiah's mother: see 2 Kings xxiv. 12–15, where an account is given of this captivity. And the eunuchs—Or court-officers, as Dr. Waterland renders it; and the princes of Judah and Jerusalem—Men of authority and influence among the people. By the hand of Elasah, &c.—Zedekiah having some occasion to send two messengers to Babylon, Jeremiah, knowing that as there were false prophets at Jerusalem who fed the people with hopes of a speedy return, so there were some with them in Babylon, writes and sends the following prophecy by these two messengers, to quiet the people's minds, disturbed by these false prophets, and excited to vain hopes, for which there was no ground at all.

Verses 4–7. Thus saith the Lord, Build ye houses, and plant gardens, &c.—It appears by the advice which the prophet here gives, that many of the captive Jews neglected to cultivate and plant the places allotted to them about Babylon; because they were not willing to bestow cost and pains for the advantage of others; since they flattered themselves that they were soon to return into Judea: and therefore Jeremiah here admonishes them that their continuance in their captivity would be long enough for them their sons and their grandsons, to enjoy the fruit of their labours there; and that, therefore, if they regarded their own ease and accommodation, they should set about making the places of their captivity as convenient and agreeable to them as they could. And seek the peace of the city, &c.—Pray and desire, and do all that lies in your power, that Babylon may enjoy peace, and remain in safety, because you yourselves must be partakers of its prosperity or adversity, as it is appointed by God for you to remain: there

A. M. 3406. 8 ¶ For thus saith the LORD of
B. C. 598. hosts, the God of Israel; Let not your prophets and your diviners, that be in the midst of you, ^ddeceive you, neither hearken to your dreams which ye cause to be dreamed.

9 ° For they prophesy ²falsely unto you in my name: I have not sent them, saith the LORD.

B. C. 598. 10 ¶ For thus saith the LORD, That after ^fseventy years be accomplished at Babylon I will visit you, and perform my good word toward you, in causing you to return to this place.

11 For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the LORD, thoughts of peace,

^d Chap. xiv. 14; xxiii. 21; xxvii. 14, 15; Eph. v. 6. — ^e Verse
31. — ^g Heb. in a lie. — ^f 2 Chron. xxxvi. 24, 22; Ezra i. 1;
Ch. xxv. 12; xxvii. 22; Dan. ix. 2. — ^h Heb. end and expectation.

seventy years. The word peace here, as elsewhere, signifies safety and plenty of all things. Observe here, reader, it is the duty of all private persons to submit to the government that protects them, and to pray for the prosperity of it: see Ezra vi. 10; 1 Tim.
ii. 1, 2. And if the governing powers are persecutors or enemies to the truth, it must be left to God to execute upon them the judgments he has denounced against tyrants and oppressors; which judgments the Jews expected that God would execute upon Babylon in due time, Psa. cxxxvii. 8, 9.

Verse 8. For thus saith the Lord of hosts—The prophet continues to speak by the authority of God; Let not your prophets, &c., deceive you—Suffer not yourselves to be deluded by them. While we have the word of God, by which to try the spirits, it is our own fault if we be deceived; for by it we may be directed. Neither hearken to your dreams which ye cause to be dreamed—The LXX. render this clause, καὶ μὴ ἀκούετε εἰς τὰ ἐνυπνια ὁπσον, α ὑμεῖς ἐνυπνιαζόμενοι, hearken not, or attend not, to your dreams which you dream. Thus also the Vulgate. Blaney, however, prefers translating the words, Neither hearken ye to your dealers in dreams, whom ye cause to dream; observing, "These dreamers might be said to be made, or encouraged, to dream, by the easy credit given to their impostures, and the reputation and respect they thereby acquired." Some have thought it probable that those who interpreted dreams (which sort of people abounded in Babylon) used to interpret all the dreams of Jews, on which they were consulted, to signify their speedy return to their own country; as they knew that this was what the Jews earnestly wished for, and would be glad to hear, and consequently be induced to consult these interpreters the more frequently; who therein found their profit.

Verses 10–14. After seventy years be accomplished at Babylon—Hebrews, לפי כלאות שבעים שנה, literally, At the mouth of the accomplishment of seventy years. "And as the mouth of a river, me-and not of evil, to give you an ³ex- A. M. 3406. pected end. B. C. 598.

12 Then shall ye ²call upon me, and ye shall go and pray unto me, and I will hearken unto you.

13 And ^bye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me ⁱwith all your heart.

14 And ^kI will be found of you, saith the LORD: and I will turn away your captivity, and ^lI will gather you from all the nations,
and from all the places whither I have driven you, saith the LORD; and I will bring you again into the place whence I caused you to be carried away captive.

^g Dan. ix. 3. — ^h Lev. xxvii. 39, 40; Deut. xxx. 1. — ⁱ Chap.
xxiv. 7. — ^k Deut. iv. 7; Psalm xxxii. 6; xlv. 1; Isaiah lv. 6.
^l Chap. xxiii. 3, 8; xxx. 3; xxxii. 37.

taphorically, denotes the extremity of its course, where it discharges its waters into the sea; so, by a farther metaphor drawn from hence, לפ seems to denote being at the full end of a certain period or limited course of time, where it is just going to lose itself in, and mix with, the ocean of eternity. Here therefore we are to understand that, 'at the very instant of, or immediately upon, the completion of seventy years,' the restoration of the Jews should take place."—Blaney. These seventy years of the captivity, it appears, are to be computed from the fourth year of Jehoiakim, which, in the Scripture account, is the first year of Nebuchadnezzar's reign: see note on chap. xxv. 1. I will visit you and perform my good word—My promise, in causing, rather, of causing you to return, &c.—There were but few, comparatively speaking, of those captives that returned in person into their own country, Ezra iii. 12. Therefore, this promise was chiefly fulfilled in their posterity; and it is common in Scripture to speak of blessings bestowed upon the children, as if they had been actually fulfilled to their progenitors. For I know the thoughts that I think toward you—And God's works agree exactly with his thoughts; for he doeth all things according to the counsel of his own will. Thoughts of peace, or good, and not of evil—Even that which seems evil is designed for good, and will at last appear to have actually wrought for good: to give you an expected end—Hebrew, אחרית וקוה, literally, to give you an end and expectation, or, as Blaney translates it, to make your latter end even an object of hope:
see chap. xxxi. 17. Then shall ye call upon me—
That is, when you place your hope in me only, and that with assurance, and not wavering; and I will hearken unto you—A sure token of God's favour chap. xxxiii. 3, as his rejecting men, and casting them off, is expressed by his hiding his face and refusing to hear their prayers, chap. xiv. 12; Lam. iii.
8, 41. And ye shall seek me and find me—According to my promises made Lev. xxvi. 40–45; Deut. xxx.

A. M. 3406. 15 ¶ Because ye have said, The LORD hath raised us up prophets in Babylon;

16 Know that thus saith the LORD of the king that sitteth upon the throne of David, and of all the people that dwelleth in this city, and of your brethren that are not gone forth with you into captivity;

17 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Behold, I will send upon them the sword, the famine, and the pestilence, and will make them like vile figs, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil.

18 And I will persecute them with the sword, with the famine, and with the pestilence, and will deliver them to be removed to all the kingdoms of the earth, to be a curse, and an astonishment, and a hissing, and a reproach, among all the nations whither I have driven them:

19 Because they have not hearkened to my words, saith the LORD, which I sent unto them by my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them; but ye would not hear, saith the LORD.

20 ¶ Hear ye therefore the word of the LORD, all ye of the captivity, whom I have sent from Jerusalem to Babylon:

21 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of

^m Chapter xxiv. 10.—ⁿ Chap. xxiv. 8.—^o Deut. xxviii. 25; 2 Chron. xxix. 8; Chap. xv. 4; xxiv. 9; xxxiv. 17.

⁴ Hebrew, for a curse.—^p Chapter xxvi. 6; Chapter xlii. 18. ^q Chap. xxv. 4; xxxii. 33.

2, 3; Psa. xxxii. 6. When ye shall search for me with all your heart—Observe, reader, in seeking God, we must search for him, that we may find him; must search for directions in seeking him, &c., for encouragements to our faith and hope: we must continue, and take pains in seeking him, namely, in seeking his favour, his image, and communion with him; and this we must do with our heart—That is, in sincerity and uprightness, and with all our heart, that is with vigour and fervency, putting forth all that is within us in prayer: and those who thus seek God shall find him, and know, by experience, that he is their bountiful rewarder, Heb. xi. 6, for he never said to such, Seek ye me in vain.

Verse 15. Because ye have said, &c.—The LXX. have transposed this verse, and placed it “where,” says Blaney, “it undoubtedly ought to stand,” immediately before verse 21; “this emendation,” says he, “I have adopted, as by it a due order and connection are restored, both in the place from whence the verse is removed, and in that to which it is transferred, a sufficient proof of its authenticity.” The Lord hath raised us up prophets in Babylon—This is meant of the false prophets who foretold nothing but peace and prosperity. The reader will easily observe how properly this sentence, as Blaney has just observed, would follow verse 20, and precede verse 21, and how well it would connect with both.

Verses 16–19. Thus saith the Lord of the king and all the people, &c.—See chap. xxiv. 8–10; that dwell in this city—Namely, the city of Jerusalem, which is the city spoken of. I will make them like vile figs—Rather like sour figs, that cannot be eaten.—The meaning is, I will deal with them as men deal with bad figs. They have made themselves vile and hateful, and I will use them accordingly. This refers to the vision, chap. xxiv., and the prophecy which we had there upon it. And I will deliver them to be a curse, &c.—A more severe punishment is denounced upon these than upon those of the two former captivities; because though warned by the example of Jehoiakim and Jeconiah, who suffered heavily for their perfidy, they yet again, a third time, broke the faith which they had pledged to the king of Babylon in the name of God, and despised all the admonitions and counsels of God by Jeremiah, as is observed in the next verse.

Verses 20–23. Hear all ye of the captivity whom I have sent, &c.—These phrases, I have sent, I have driven, &c., should be well observed by us. There is no evil or punishment in cities or nations, but, whoever be the instruments in bringing it on, God is the author of it. Thus saith the Lord of Ahab and of Zedekiah—Of these two persons we read no more in holy writ. That they pretended to be prophets, and to reveal God’s will, although he had not called them to any such office, nor had made known his will to them, and that therefore they had abused God’s name, we learn in this verse, and that they came to a miserable end we find in verse 22. He shall slay them before your eyes—As persons that disturbed the minds of the Jews, his subjects, and made them unwilling to submit to his government, by giving them hopes of a speedy deliverance from under it: see verses 7, 8. And of them shall be taken up a curse—That is, an imprecation shall be used, namely, The Lord make thee like Zedekiah, &c., or, May thou meet with punishment similar to that which these persons met with. Whom the king of Babylon roasted in the fire—Casting persons into the fire was a punishment used in that country, as appears from the history of Shadrach and his companions, Dan. iii. There was likewise in use a way of roasting persons by a gentle fire, to make them die by a more lingering death, such as Antiochus practised upon the seven brethren, 2 Mac. vii. 5. The word here properly denotes this sort of punishment. Because they have committed villany in Israel, &c.—The Jewish rabbins, as Grotius here observes, have a traditionary notion, that these were the two elders who attempted the chastity of Susannah; the story of which they think to be true in part, though not altogether such as it is represented in the Greek. Some translate the words, Because they had committed villany, or, evil in Israel, and had committed adultery, &c., understanding them

A. M. 3406. Israel, of Ahab the son of Kolaiah, B. C. 598. and of Zedekiah the son of Maaseiah, which prophesy a lie unto you in my name; Behold, I will deliver them into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon; and he shall slay them before your eyes;

22 ² And of them shall be taken up a curse by all the captivity of Judah which are in Babylon, saying, The LORD make thee like Zedekiah and like Ahab, ^a whom the king of Babylon roasted in the fire;

23 Because ^a they have committed villany in Israel, and have committed adultery with their neighbours' wives, and have spoken lying words in my name, which I have not commanded them; even I know, and am a witness, saith the LORD.

24 ¶ Thus shalt thou also speak to Shemaiah the ^b Nehelamite, saying,

25 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, Because thou hast sent letters in thy name unto all the people that are at Jerusalem, ^a and to Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, and to all the priests, saying,

26 The LORD hath made thee priest in the stead of Jehoiada the priest, that ye should be ^a officers in the house of the LORD, A. M. 3406. for every man that is ^a mad, and B. C. 598. maketh himself a prophet, that thou shouldst ^a put him in prison, and in the stocks.

27 Now therefore why hast thou not reproved Jeremiah of Anathoth, which maketh himself a prophet to you?

28 For therefore he sent unto us in Babylon, saying, This captivity is long: ^a build ye houses, and dwell in them; and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them.

29 And Zephaniah the priest read this letter in the ears of Jeremiah the prophet.

30 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

31 Send to all them of the captivity, saying, Thus saith the LORD concerning Shemaiah the Nehelamite; Because that Shemaiah hath prophesied unto you, ^b and I sent him not, and he caused you to trust in a lie:

32 Therefore thus saith the LORD; Behold, I will punish Shemaiah the Nehelamite, and his seed: he shall not have a man to dwell among this people; neither shall he behold the good that I will do for my people, saith the LORD; ^c because he hath taught ^d rebellion against the LORD.

^a Gen. xlviii. 20; Isa. lxxv. 15.—^b Dan. iii. 6.—^c Ch. xxiii. 14.
^a Or, dreamer.—^b 2 Kings xxv. 18; Ch. xxi. 1.—^c Ch. xx. 1.

^a 2 Kings ix. 11; Acts xxvi. 24.—^b Chap. xx. 2.—^c Verse 5.
^b Chap. xxviii. 15.—^c Chap. xxviii. 16.—^d Heb. revolt.

as assigning the cause why Nebuchadnezzar had roasted these persons alive, namely, because they had committed adultery, it being a custom among some of the eastern nations, and they suppose also among the Babylonians, to punish that crime in the most severe manner.

Verses 24–28. Thus shalt thou speak to Shemaiah the Nehelamite—Or, the dreamer, as the word הנהלמי is rendered in the margin: see verse 8. The termination, however, rather shows it to be a word expressing Shemaiah's family or country, and we find such a place as Helam mentioned, 2 Sam. x. 16, 17. The prophet, it seems, was commanded to send this message to Shemaiah after the messengers who delivered the forementioned writing to the captives at Babylon were returned home, who brought along with them Shemaiah's letter, mentioned in the following verse. Because thou hast sent letters to Zephaniah, (see chap. xxi. 1,) saying, The Lord hath made thee priest—Shemaiah directs his letter to Zephaniah in the first place, as being next in order to the high-priest, and therefore called the second priest, chap. lii. 24, and tells him that God has appointed him to supply the place of the high-priest, being probably absent at that time, who was either Azariah, or Seraiah his son. But who then, it may be asked, was Jehoiada? "Perhaps," says Blaney,

"he was one that had been superseded in his office of second priest, for being remiss in his duty; and therefore Zephaniah may have been here reminded of him, by way of intimation that, as they had been both appointed for the same purposes, so Zephaniah might expect the same fate as his predecessor, if he copied the example of his negligence. The second priest officiated as substitute of the high-priest, in case of absence or indisposition, and perhaps was always invested with subordinate authority." That ye should be officers, &c., for every man that is mad, &c.—The prophets and inspired persons were often accused of madness, or of being possessed with an evil spirit, by their enemies. See the margin. For therefore, rather, because, he sent unto us in Babylon—See verse 5.

Verse 32. He shall not have a man to dwell among his people, &c.—None of his posterity shall remain to see my people restored to their own land again. See verse 11. Because he hath taught rebellion—Or, prevarication, as Blaney translates סרר, observing, "It properly signifies a declining, or turning aside from the straight path, the path of truth and right. Here, and chap. xxviii. 16, it means the presumption of uttering, as a revelation from God, what the man who uttered it knew to be not so."

CHAPTER XXX.

This and the following chapter contain general promises of God's mercy to the Jews, and assurances that he would never forget the covenant which he had made with their fathers. These promises were partly fulfilled in their restoration under Cyrus, but were more fully to be accomplished in the times of the Messiah, and by the gracious terms of that new covenant which he would establish with the spiritual Israel. In this chapter, (1.) After a short preface, in which the prophet is commanded to commit to writing the matters revealed to him, it is promised that Israel and Judah should be delivered from captivity, and restored to their own land, though they were now in great distress and terror, 1-7; and though their enemies were very strong, 8, 9. (2.) They are encouraged to confide in the divine assurances of restoration and protection; though other nations should be utterly destroyed, 10, 11; though all means of relief should long appear as cut off; though God had justly punished them; and though their case seemed utterly desperate, 12-17. (3.) It is promised that after their restoration they should have a happy settlement; their cities and temples should be rebuilt, 18; their numbers increased, and their religious ordinances observed, 19, 20; their government established, especially in the hands of Christ, and God's covenant with them renewed, 21, 22; and their enemies destroyed, 23, 24.

A. M. 3410.
B. C. 594.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Thus speaketh the LORD God of Israel, saying, Write thee all the words that I have spoken unto thee in a book.

3 For lo, the days come, saith the LORD, that ^a I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel and Judah, saith the LORD: ^b and I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it.

4 ¶ And these are the words that the LORD

^a Verse 18; Chap. xxxii. 44; Ezek. xxxix. 25; Amos ix. 14, 15.
^b Chap. xvi. 15.—¹ Or, there is fear and not peace.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXX.

Verse 1. The word that came to Jeremiah, &c.—“There is no particular date annexed to this prophecy, whereby to ascertain the precise time of its delivery, but it may not unreasonably be presumed to have followed immediately after the preceding one, in which the restoration of the people from their Babylonish captivity is in direct terms foretold. From hence the transition was natural and easy to the more glorious and general restoration that was to take place in a more distant period, and was designed for the ultimate object of the national hopes and expectations. Both events are frequently thus connected together in the prophetic writings, and perhaps with this design, that when that which was nearest at hand should be accomplished, it might afford the strongest and most satisfactory evidence that the latter, how remote soever its period, would, in like manner, be brought about by the interposition of Providence, in its due season.”—Blaney.

Verses 2, 3. Thus speaketh the Lord, Write thee all the words that I have spoken, &c.—The following words contain a promise of the restoration of God's people. These God commands to be committed to writing for the use of posterity, to be a support to the Jews, an encouragement to them to trust in God, and a proof of his prescience and overruling providence when the event foretold should be brought about. I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel and Judah—The people that returned from Babylon were only, or at least chiefly, the peo-spake concerning Israel, and con- A. M. 3410.

cerning Judah. B. C. 594.

5 For thus saith the LORD; We have heard a voice of trembling, ¹ of fear, and not of peace.

6 Ask ye now, and see whether ² a man doth travail with child? wherefore do I see every man with his hands on his loins, ³ as a woman in travail, and all faces are turned into paleness?

7 ^d Alas! for that day is great, ^e so that none

² Heb. a male.—³ Chapter iv. 31; vi. 24.—^d Joel ii. 11, 31; Amos v. 18; Zeph. i. 14, &c.—^e Dan. xii. 1.

ple of Judah, who had been carried away captive by Nebuchadnezzar; but here it is foretold, that not the captivity of Judah only should be restored, but that of Israel also, or of those ten tribes that were carried away before by Shalmaneser, king of Assyria; and who still remain in their several dispersions, having never returned, at least in a national capacity; but the terms of this prophecy entitle us to expect, not an obscure and partial, but a complete and universal, restoration, when God will manifest himself, as formerly, the God and patron of all the families of Israel, not of a few only. The reunion also of Judah and Israel, after their restoration, seems to be here clearly foretold.

Verses 4-7. And these are the words that the Lord spake—And which God ordered to be written: and those promises, which were written by his order, are as truly his word as the ten commandments, which were written with his finger. We have heard a voice of trembling—Such a one as discovers great fears and apprehensions of impending evils. Ask ye now and see, &c.—Make diligent inquiry, and ask every one, whether they ever knew or heard of any such thing as a man's travelling with child? Wherefore then do I see every man with his hands on his loins—As if he were going to bring forth, and felt all the pains of a woman in travail? Alas! for that day is great—The word day in Scripture often comprehends a succession of time, in which a whole series of events is transacted: so it here contains the whole time of the siege and taking of Jerusalem, the

A. M. 3410. is like it: it is even the time of
B. C. 594. Jacob's trouble, but he shall be saved out of it.

8 For it shall come to pass in that day, saith the LORD of hosts, that I will break his yoke from off thy neck, and will burst thy bonds, and strangers shall no more serve themselves of him:

9 But they shall serve the LORD their God, and ^fDavid their king, whom I will ^graise up unto them.

^f Isaiah lv. 3, 4; Ezekiel xxxiv. 23; xxxvii. 24; Hosea iii. 5.
^g Luke i. 69; Acts ii. 30; xiii. 23.

destruction of the city and temple, and the carrying away of the people captive. This is described as a time of great tribulation, in which it was an earnest of the day of judgment, the great and terrible day of the Lord.

Verses 8, 9. It shall come to pass in that day—In the day when Jacob shall be saved out of all his troubles, verse 7. The phrase that day often denotes an extraordinary or remarkable time for some signal events of Providence: see Isa. iv. 2. That I will break his yoke from off thy neck—This promise was in part fulfilled when Cyrus set the Jews free from the Babylonish yoke, and gave them liberty to return to their own country. And strangers shall no more serve themselves of him—In this latter part of the sentence the Jewish state, or rather that of Israel and Judah, is spoken of in the third person, him; in the foregoing part in the second person, thy neck. But they shall serve the Lord their God—They shall live in subjection and obedience to the one living and true God, and to David their king—That is, the Messiah, who is often called by the name of David in the prophets, as the person in whom all the promises made to David were to be fulfilled. See the margin. Here it is promised that, after this restoration, the Jews and Israelites “should no more fall under the dominion of foreigners, but be governed by princes and magistrates of their own nation, independent of any but God and David their king. But this was not the case with the Jews that returned from Babylon. They then indeed had a leader, Zerubbabel, one of their own nation, and also of the family of David. But both the nation and their leader continued still in a state of vassalage and the most servile dependance upon the Persian monarchy. And when the Grecian monarchy succeeded, they changed their masters only, but not their condition; till, at length, under the Asmonæan princes, they had, for a while, an independent government of their own, but without any title to the name of David. At last they fell under the Roman yoke, since which time their situation has been such as not to afford the least ground to pretend that the promised restoration has yet taken place. It remains, therefore, to be brought about, in future, under the reign of the Messiah, emphatically distinguished by the name of David; when every particular circumstance predict-

10 ¶ Therefore ^hfear thou not, O ^{A. M. 3410.}
^{B. C. 594.} my servant Jacob, saith the LORD; neither be dismayed, O Israel: for lo, I will save thee from afar, and thy seed ⁱfrom the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and shall be in rest, and be quiet, and none shall make him afraid.

11 For I, am with thee, saith the LORD, to save thee: ^kthough I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee, ^lyet will I not make a full end of thee: but I will cor-

^h Isa. xli. 13; xliii. 5; xliv. 2; Chap. xlv. 27, 28.—ⁱ Chap. iii. 18.—^k Amos ix. 8.—^l Chap. iv. 27.

ed concerning it will, no doubt, be verified by a distinct and unequivocal accomplishment.”—Blaney. Whom I will raise up unto them—An expression elsewhere used by the holy writers when they speak of the coming of Christ. See the margin. Hence this prophecy must be considered as implying the conversion of the Jews to the Christian faith, God, according to his promises, having constituted Christ the Prince and the Saviour to whom every knee must bow, and whom every tongue must confess.

Verses 10, 11. Fear thou not, O my servant Jacob—As if God had utterly forsaken thee or cast thee off. See the margin. For, lo, I will save thee from afar—I will restore you from your captivity, though you should be dispersed into the most distant countries. And though this be not accomplished in the Jews of the present age, it shall be made good to their posterity, who are beloved for their fathers' sake, as St. Paul speaks, Rom. xi. 28. And Jacob shall be in rest and quiet, &c.—Shall enjoy peace and safety. Though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee—Such as the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Egyptians; yet will I not make a full end of thee—The Jews to this day continue a remarkable monument of the truth and immutability of God's promises. Where now are all the nations which carried them into captivity, and trod them under foot? All, all are perished; their kingdoms overturned, their laws and languages abolished, their very names, as nations, extinct; not the least footsteps remaining of their having ever been a people: for God had determined to make a full end of them. But the people of the Jews, though carried into captivity, slain by the sword, destroyed by pestilence and famine, and every other method of destruction, do yet remain a people: under all the revolutions and changes of kingdoms, languages, and people, they still exist unmixed; and, though for their heinous sins they are scattered abroad among all nations, they still preserve their name, language, and most of their ancient ceremonies and customs, for God has promised not to make a full end of them. But I will correct thee in measure—Or, according to judgment, למשפט signifies, that is, with discretion, not more than thou deservest, nay, not more than thou canst well bear. God's afflicting his people is in a way of correction, and that correction is always moderated,

A. M. 3410. rect thee. ^m in measure, and will not
B. C. 594. leave thee altogether unpunished.

12 For thus saith the LORD, ⁿ Thy bruise is incurable, and thy wound is grievous.

13 There is none to plead thy cause, ³ that thou mayest be bound up: ^o thou hast no healing medicines.

14 ^p All thy lovers have forgotten thee; they seek thee not; for I have wounded thee with the wound ^q of an enemy, with the chastisement ^r of a cruel one, for the multitude of thine iniquity; ^s because thy sins were increased.

15 Why ^t criest thou for thine affliction? thy sorrow is incurable for the multitude of thine iniquity: because thy sins were increased, I have done these things unto thee.

^m Psalm vi. 1; Isaiah xxvii. 8; Chapter x. 24; xlvii. 28.
ⁿ 2 Chron. xxxvi. 16; Chap. xv. 18.—³ Heb. for binding up, or, pressing.—^o Chap. viii. 22.—^p Lam. i. 2.—^q Job xiii. 24; xvi. 9; xix. 11.

and always proceeds from love. And will not leave thee altogether unpunished—As thou art ready to think I should do because of thy relation to me. Observe, reader, a profession of religion, though never so plausible, will be far from securing to us impunity in sin. God is no respecter of persons, but will show his hatred of sin wherever he finds it, and he always hates it most in those that are nearest to him.

Verses 12–15. Thy bruise is incurable—In all human appearance. The state that the Jews should be in would be so miserable that it would be incurable from any hand except that of God. There is none to plead thy cause—There is none that, by the reformation of their lives, or their intercessions with God, endeavour to avert his displeasure. Or, as the words may be rendered, There is none to judge thy cause, none that knows the true nature of thy malady, or what medicines are proper to be applied to it. Their calamitous state is compared to a distempered body; (see verse 17, and chap. viii. 22; Isa. i. 5, 6;) and the false prophets, instead of applying proper remedies, have healed thy wound slightly. Or the words may mean, There is none to intercede for thee with thy victors and oppressors. All thy lovers have forgotten thee—All the nations whose alliance they had solicited, and whose idolatries they had imitated, and who had professed much friendship for them, had neglected and forgotten them, and desired no farther connection with them. They seek thee not—Seek not thy welfare, but abandon thee to ruin. For I have wounded thee with the wound of an enemy, &c.—Thy iniquities have provoked me to punish thee with that severity which appears like cruelty, and as if I had declared myself an utter enemy to thee. Why criest thou for thine affliction?—Why shouldst thou expostulate with me, as if I had dealt unjustly with thee, whereas, if thy condition seem desperate, it is owing to thine own iniquities, which 16 Therefore all they that devour ^{A. M. 3410.} thee ^{B. C. 594.} shall be devoured; and all thine adversaries, every one of them, shall go into captivity; and they that spoil thee shall be a spoil, and all that prey upon thee will I give for a prey.

17 ^r For I will restore health unto thee, and I will heal thee of thy wounds, saith the LORD; because they call thee an Outcast, saying, This is Zion, whom no man seeketh after.

18 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, Behold, ^v I will bring again the captivity of Jacob's tents, and ^z have mercy on his dwelling-places; and the city shall be builded upon her own ⁴ heap, and the palace shall remain after the manner thereof.

^r Job xxx. 21.—^s Chap. v. 6.—^t Chap. xv. 18.—^u Exod. xxxiii. 22; Isaiah xxxiii. 1; xli. 11; Chap. x. 25.—^x Chapter xxxiii. 6.—^y Verse 3; Chap. xxxiii. 7, 11.—^z Psa. cii. 13.
⁴ Or, little hill.

have still been increased with new aggravations of guilt.

Verses 16, 17. Therefore—Or rather, yet surely, as לכן should be rendered; (see note on chap. xvi. 14;) all they that devour thee shall be devoured—The Egyptians, Philistines, Midianites, Ammonites, Edomites, Syrians, Assyrians, Chaldeans, and others, who have afflicted and oppressed you, shall be extirpated, while you shall be restored and re-established. See note on verse 11. Though God chastises his own people with severity, according to the nature and quality of their faults, yet he does it so as never utterly to destroy them. The Assyrians, who afflicted Israel and Judah, were so destroyed by the Babylonians, Medes, and Persians, that mention is no more made of their empire. The monarchy of the Chaldeans, who destroyed Jerusalem, and carried the Jews into captivity, was overthrown by the Persians, and never recovered itself. The empires of the Persians and Egyptians were destroyed by Alexander. The Grecian, or Syro-Macedonian kingdom, which, especially under Antiochus Epiphanes, cruelly persecuted them, was destroyed by the Romans. And the Roman empire, powerful as it was, after being made the instrument of bringing greater calamities on the Jewish nation than they had ever suffered from any other power, was broken to pieces by the incursions of the northern nations on the one hand, and by the Saracens and Turks on the other. But the Jewish people, who have repeatedly appeared to be almost destroyed and annihilated in their dispersions, have reappeared, and sprung up again, as it were, from their ashes, and become as numerous and powerful as before.

Verses 18–22. Behold, I will bring again the captivity of Jacob's tents—The expression alludes to the ancient custom of dwelling in tents. This promise was, in some degree, fulfilled under Zerubbabel. And the city shall be builded upon her own heap—

A. M. 3410. . 19 And ^a out of them shall proceed B. C. 594. thanksgiving and the voice of them that make merry: ^b and I will multiply them, and they shall not be few; I will also glorify them, and they shall not be small.

20 Their children also shall be ^c as aforetime, and their congregation shall be established before me, and I will punish all that oppress them.

21 And their nobles shall be of themselves, ^d and their governor shall proceed from the midst of them; and I will ^e cause him to draw near, and he shall approach unto me: for who

^a Isa. xxxv. 10; li. 11; Chap. xxxi. 4, 12, 13; xxxiii. 10, 11. ^b Zech. x. 8.—^c Isa. i. 26.—^d Gen. xlix. 10.—^e Numbers xvi. 5.

Upon her ruins, which were cleared away, that new houses might be built. And the palace shall remain—Rather, the palace shall be inhabited; after the manner thereof—By ארמון, here rendered palace, Dr. Waterland and some others understand the temple, and render the clause, The temple shall stand, or, abide after the manner thereof. Their children also, and their congregation, &c.—Their church and commonwealth shall be restored to their former state. Or rather, His children and his congregation, as Blaney translates it; that is, Jacob's children and congregation, the pronouns both in this and the following verse being in the singular number. And their nobles shall be of themselves—Hebrew, מכון אדיר, literally, his prince, or, his mighty one, shall be of him. And his governor shall proceed from the midst of him—Some understand this of Zerubbabel, who, by the permission of Cyrus, had the government over the Jews whom he led into Judea to rebuild Jerusalem and the temple. Others interpret it of the Messiah, who, they think, is plainly marked out by the two names of Prince, or Mighty One, and Governor, in this verse. Thus the Targum understands it. I will cause him to draw near, &c.—Says the Lord; that is, “he shall have a near attendance upon me; for I will make him a priest as well as a king,” according to the prophecy in Psa. cx. 4. For who is this that engaged his heart, &c.—Who is there so entirely devoted to my service as the Messiah? The words in the original, כי דוא זה, who is this, &c., have the emphasis which cannot be expressed in another language, and are spoken by way of admiration. See Lowth. Blaney translates the verse, “And his prince shall be of his own race, and his governor shall go forth out of the midst of him; and I will draw him that he may come near unto me; for who is he that hath set his heart to draw near unto me? saith Jehovah.” Ye shall be my people, &c.—You shall continually adhere to my religion and worship, and I will take you into my favour, and under my protection.

is this that engaged his heart to ap- A. M. 3410. proach unto me? saith the LORD. B. C. 594.

22 And ye shall be ^f my people, and I will be your God.

23 ¶ Behold, the ^g whirlwind of the LORD goeth forth with fury, a ^h continuing whirlwind: it shall ⁱ fall with pain upon the head of the wicked.

24 The fierce anger of the LORD shall not return, until he have done it, and until he have performed the intents of his heart: ^j in the latter days ye shall consider it.

^f Chap. xxiv. 7; xxxi. 1, 33; xxxii. 38; Ezek. xi. 20; xxxvi. 28; xxxvii. 27.—^g Chapter xxxiii. 19, 20; xxv. 32.—^h Heb. cutting.—ⁱ Or, remain.—^j Gen. xlix. 1.

who is this, &c., have the emphasis which cannot be expressed in another language, and are spoken by way of admiration. See Lowth. Blaney translates the verse, “And his prince shall be of his own race, and his governor shall go forth out of the midst of him; and I will draw him that he may come near unto me; for who is he that hath set his heart to draw near unto me? saith Jehovah.” Ye shall be my people, &c.—You shall continually adhere to my religion and worship, and I will take you into my favour, and under my protection.

Verses 23, 24. Behold, the whirlwind of the Lord goeth forth with fury—Rather, with anger, the word fury being manifestly improper when applied to God. These two verses occur with some slight variations, chap. xxxiii. 19, 20, where see the note. In the latter days ye shall consider it—The latter days here may signify the time to come; but they commonly imply the times of the gospel, that being the last dispensation, and what should continue till the end of the world. Thus understood, the words import, “When all these evils are come upon you, which God has threatened for your disobedience, and particularly for your heinous crime of rejecting the Messiah, and you have found the denunciations verified in the several captivities you have undergone, then you will understand the import of this and several other prophecies, and the event will perfectly instruct you in their meaning.”—Lowth.

CHAPTER XXXI.

This chapter contains the second and third parts of the prophecy begun in the preceding chapter, embellished with a variety of beautiful scenes and images. (1.) God here announces the renewal of his ancient love for Israel, and promises them a speedy restoration of their privileges and happiness, 1-5. (2.) Watchmen, or heralds, are represented as proclaiming on mount Ephraim the arrival of the joyful day; summoning the people to reassemble once more in Zion; and promulging, by special command, the glad tidings of salvation which God had accomplished for them, 6, 7. (3.) God himself declares his readiness to conduct home the remnant of Israel, to compassionate and relieve their infirmities, and to provide them with all necessary accommodations by the way, 8, 9. (4.) The news is carried into distant lands; and the nations are summoned to attend to the display of God's power and goodness in rescuing his people from their stronger enemies, and supplying them with all good things, 10-14. (5,) Rachel, bewailing the loss of her children, is comforted, and assured her sorrow for them shall be at an end, 15-17. And Ephraim, lamenting his past disobedience and obstinacy, acknowledging that he had been justly chastised, and praying earnestly to be converted, is accepted as a child, and brought home again, 18-20. (6,) The virgin of Israel is exhorted to hasten the preparations for her return, and encouraged with the prospect of having a signal miracle wrought in her favour, 21, 22. (7,) The vision closes with a promise that the divine blessing should again rest upon the land of Judah, and that God's people should once more dwell there, cultivating it according to the simplicity of ancient institutions, and fully discharged from every want, 23-26. (8,) Several gracious promises are annexed by way of appendix to the vision: That God would be as diligent to restore as he had ever been to destroy them; and would not any more visit the offences of the fathers upon the children, 27-30. That he would make with them a better covenant than he had made with their forefathers, 31-34. That they should continue his people by an ordinance as firm and lasting as that of the heavens, 35-37; and that Jerusalem should again be built, enlarged in its extent, and secure from future desolation, 38-40.

A. M. 3410.
B. C. 594.

AT^a the same time, saith the LORD,
b will I be the God of all the families of Israel, and they shall be my people.

2 Thus saith the LORD, The people which were left of the sword found grace in the wilderness; even Israel, when c I went to cause him to rest.

^a Chapter xxx. 24.—^b Chapter xxx. 22.—^c Num. x. 33; Deut. i. 33; Psa. xc. 11; Isaiah lixiii. 14.—¹ Heb. from afar.
⁴ Mal. i. 2.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXI.

Verse 1. At the same time, saith the Lord— Namely, in the latter days, mentioned chap. xxx. 24. I will be the God of all the families of Israel— Not of the two tribes only, but of all the tribes; not of the house of Aaron only and the families of Levi, but of all the families. And they shall be my people— I will favour them, and do them good, and they shall be subject to, and shall worship and obey me. "This second part of the prophecy," says Calmet, "principally respects the return of the ten tribes. And I have shown, in a particular dissertation, that not only Judah, Benjamin, and Levi, but also the twelve tribes returned into their own country." Doubtless, many individuals of the ten tribes returned with the Jews from Babylon, having been incorporated among them in the several places where they were settled; yet this seems to have been only a very partial accomplishment of this prophecy, which, as Blaney observes, "points out circumstances that certainly were not fulfilled at the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity, nor have hitherto had their completion." But, in the latter days, when the fullness of the Gentiles are brought in, all Israel shall be saved; for, as Isaiah and St. Paul testify, there shall come out of Zion the deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob. Isa. lix. 19; Rom. xi. 26-29. See note on chap. xxx. 10.

Verse 2. The people that were left of the sword— That sword of Pharaoh with which he cut off the male children as soon as they were born, and that sword with which he threatened to cut them off when he pursued them to the Red sea. Found grace in the wilderness— Though in the wilderness, where they seemed to be lost and forgotten, as these latter Jews and Israelites were now in a strange land, yet they found grace in God's sight, were owned, and 3 The LORD hath appeared ¹ of old unto me, saying, Yea, ^d I have loved thee with ^e an everlasting love: therefore ² with loving-kindness have I ^f drawn thee.

4 Again ^g I will build thee, and thou shalt be built, O virgin of Israel: thou shalt again be adorned with thy ^h tabrets, ³ and shalt go highly honoured by him, and blessed with wonderful instances of his peculiar favour. And he went to cause them to rest— Went before them in a pillar of cloud, to mark out the places for them where they should pitch their tents, and conducted them to the land that he had provided for them. And after such evidences of his kindness to them, why should they doubt of the continuance of his favours?

^a Romans xi. 28, 29.—² Or, have I extended loving-kindness unto thee.—^f Hosea xi. 4.—^g Chap. xxxiii. 7.—^h Exod. xv. 20; Judg. xi. 34; Psa. cxlix. 3.—³ Or, timbrels.

Verses 3, 4. The Lord hath appeared of old unto me— The prophet here personifies the Jewish nation, the people spoken of in the foregoing verse, who are introduced as calling to mind how God, in times of old, had manifested himself to the fathers of their nation, and appeared for their deliverance. Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love— These are evidently the words of God addressed to Zion or Jerusalem. As if he had said, The mercies I promised you, as a nation, when I made a covenant with your fathers, shall never fail. My love was not a temporary love, manifested merely to a single generation, but it is an everlasting love, and will continue through all generations. Therefore with loving-kindness have I drawn thee— I have shown my benignity toward you, by taking all opportunities of doing you good, and preventing you, by acts of grace and goodness, to draw you to myself, as your God, from all the idols to which you had turned aside. I have ever dealt graciously with them who fear me, and who hope in my mercy, and will always continue so to do. Again I will build thee, O virgin of Israel— "Thy inhabitants shall be again restored to thee, who shall rebuild their cities and habitations that lay desolate during the time of their captivity." Perhaps the Jews have the title of virgin of Israel bestowed upon them to imply that, in consequence of their repentance and reformation, "they should be washed from the stains of their

A. M. 3410. forth in the dances of them that
B. C. 594. make merry.

5 ⁱThou shalt yet plant vines upon the mountains of Samaria: the planters shall plant, and shall ⁴eat them as common things.

6 For there shall be a day, that the watchmen upon the mount Ephraim shall cry, ^kArise ye, and let us go up to Zion unto the LORD our God.

ⁱ Isaiah lrv. 21; Amos ix. 14.—⁴Heb. profane them, Deut. xx. 6; xxviii. 30.

former idolatries, so often compared to whoredom in the Scriptures.ⁿ—Lowth. Thou shalt again be adorned with thy tabrets—"All the signs, both of religious and civil joy, shall be restored to thee." That it was usual for the women of Israel to go forth with tabrets and dancing in times of public rejoicing and prosperity, see Exod. xv. 20; Judges xi. 34; 1 Sam. xviii. 16. These times were now to be renewed.

Verse 5. Thou shalt yet plant vines—Building and planting are commonly joined together; upon the mountains of Samaria—Samaria, being the metropolis of the ten tribes, seems to be put for the kingdom of Israel, as it is distinct from that of Judah. According to which interpretation the mountains of Samaria are equivalent to the mountains of Israel, and therefore the words imply; that the deliverance here spoken of should extend to Israel as well as Judah. The planters shall plant, and shall eat them as common things—After they have planted them they shall eat the fruits thereof, according to the promise contained in the parallel texts, (Isa. lrv. 21; Amos ix. 14,) whereas, God had threatened as a curse, that, in case of their disobedience, when they had planted their vines, another should eat the fruit, Deut. xxviii. 30. The verb הָלַל, translated, eat them as common things, alludes to the law that forbade the fruit of any young trees to be eaten till the fifth year of their bearing. For the first three years they were to be considered as in a state of uncircumcision or uncleanness. In the fourth year the fruit was holy to the Lord. But after that time it became free for the owner's use, Lev. xix. 23–25. See also Deut. xx. 6; and xxviii. 30; where the same verb is used for eating of the fruit of a plantation without restraint. Here, therefore, a promise is given directly opposite to the above-mentioned threat, namely, That the persons who planted the vineyards on the hills of Samaria should not be compelled to give up the fruit of their labours to others, but should themselves remain in the land, and enjoy the produce of their plantations unmolested.

Verses 6, 7. For there shall be a day, that the watchmen shall cry—By the watchmen are meant God's prophets, or the ministers of his word, giving notice of his dispensations, and calling upon men to act suitably under them. The first reference may be to the leaders and teachers of the Jews, returning from Babylon, or to the general summons through-with gladness for Jacob, and shout B. C. 594.

7 For thus saith the LORD; ¹Sing A. M. 3410.
among the chief of the nations: publish ye, praise ye, and say, O LORD, save thy people, the remnant of Israel.

8 Behold, I will bring them ^mfrom the north country, and ⁿgather them from the coasts of the earth, and with them the blind and the lame, the woman with child and her that tra-

¹ Isa. ii. 3; Mic. iv. 2.—¹ Isa. xii. 5, 6.—^m Chap. iii. 12, 18; xxiii. 8.—ⁿ Ezek. xx. 34, 41; xxxiv. 13.

out all the ten tribes, for which Ephraim is put, to repair to Jerusalem, and join themselves to the true church, from which they had been so long separated; but, doubtless, in the full completion of the prophecy, by watchmen the preachers of the gospel are to be understood. The phrase, crying upon mount Ephraim, alludes to the custom of persons that had to publish any proclamation ascending to the top of some high hill, from whence their voice might be heard a great way off. See Judges ix. 7; 2 Chron. xiii. 4; Isa. xl. 9. The phrase, Arise ye, let us go up to Zion, &c., alludes to the Jewish custom of going in companies to Jerusalem at their three annual festivals. For thus saith the Lord, Sing with gladness, &c.—When ye see some dawning of these blessed times, express your joy for the restoration of Jacob's posterity in the most public manner that can be; and shout among the chief of the nations—Namely, among the most potent nations from whence you are to be gathered. Or, persons belonging to the chief nations of the earth are here called upon to congratulate the Israelites on their restoration to their own land, and their conversion to the church of God, as Moses predicted, Deut. xxxii. 43, and the apostle exhorts, Rom. xv. 10, Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with his people; for when the promises made to the fathers are accomplished, the Gentiles shall glorify God for his mercy; as it is written, For this cause will I confess to thee among the Gentiles, and sing unto thy name, Rom. xv. 8. Publish ye, praise ye, and say, O Lord, save thy people—Publish these good tidings with the highest expressions of praise and glory to God; and likewise pray that he, who hath begun so glorious a work, would proceed and complete it.

Verses 8, 9. Behold, I will bring them from the north country—Here God himself undertakes to conduct home the remnant of his people from the countries through which they had been scattered; and the promise relates to the ten tribes, as well as to those of Judah and Benjamin; for Assyria and Media, whither they were removed, lay north of Judea as well as Babylon. And the following words speak of a general restoration of this people from their several dispersions; and with them the blind and the lame, &c.—God will compassionate their infirmities, and will conduct them with all imaginable care and tenderness, and furnish the feeble and indigent of them with suitable accommodations. The prophet

A. M. 3410. vaileth with child together : a great
B. C. 594. company shall return thither.

9 ° They shall come with weeping, and with supplications will I lead them ; I will cause them to walk ^p by the rivers of waters in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble :
for I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my ^q firstborn.

10 ¶ Hear the word of the LORD, O ye na-

° Psalm cxxvi. 5, 6 ; Chap. l. 4.—^s Or, favours, Zech. xii. 10.
^p Isa. xxxv. 8 ; xliii. 19 ; xlix. 10, 11.—^q Exod. iv. 22.

alludes to the care and compassion which God manifested in conducting his people, of all ages and conditions, through the wilderness, compared to the care with which a parent or nurse carries a tender child, Deut. i. 31. See also Isa. xl. 11, and xlix. 10. They shall come with weeping—The LXX. translate the words, Εν κλαυθμῳ ἐξηλθόν, και ἐν παρακλησει ἀναξω αὐτες, they went forth with weeping, but with comfort will I bring them back ; which sense agrees exactly with the words of Ps. cxxxvi. 5, 6, which was composed upon occasion of the return from captivity, He that sows in tears shall reap in joy : he that goeth forth weeping, shall come again with rejoicing. Our translation, however, is much more agreeable to the original words, and is also confirmed by chap. iii. 21, where we read, A voice was heard, weeping and supplications of the children of Israel ; the prophet speaking upon the same subject, and in the same words here used. See also chap. l. 4, where it is said, The children of Israel and Judah shall come together, going and weeping, and seek the Lord their God. All which words imply, that the Jews and Israelites, at the time of their general restoration, shall have their joy tempered with tears of repentance for their former miscarriages ; which is more fully expressed Zech. xii. 10, where God promises to pour upon them the spirit of grace and supplication. I will cause them to walk by the rivers of waters—So that they shall not be afflicted with thirst, or the want of any accommodation in their journey. The words allude to God's miraculously supplying the Israelites with water in the wilderness. See notes on Isa. xxxv. 6, 7, and xli. 17, 18, and xlix. 10. In a straight way wherein they shall not stumble—This phrase is an allusion to God's leading the Israelites through the Red sea, and afterward in the wilderness. See Isa. lxiii. 13, and xlii. 16. For I am a father to Israel—The remembrance of former connections is here mentioned as the motive of God's returning favour to Israel. And Ephraim is my firstborn—Ephraim is often, as here, equivalent to Israel, especially when Israel denotes the ten tribes as distinct from Judah. He is termed the first-born among the tribes of Israel ; because the birth-right which Reuben had forfeited was conferred upon the two sons of Joseph, of whom Ephraim had the precedence. "The reader will observe, that all this was but imperfectly verified in the return of the Jews from Babylon, but was fully made good in tions, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel ^r will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock.

11 For ^s the LORD hath redeemed Jacob, and ransomed him ^t from the hand of him that was stronger than he.

12 Therefore they shall come and sing m ^u the height of Zion, and shall flow together to ^r Isa. xl. 11 ; Ezek. xxxiv. 12, 13, 14.—^s Isa. xlv. 23 ; xlviii.

20.—^t Isa. xlix. 24, 25.—^u Ezek. xvii. 23 ; xq. 40.

those who were made partakers of the gospel of Christ, in the miracles, in the preaching of the apostles, in the free grace and pardoning mercy of the Redeemer."

Verses 10, 11. Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations, &c.—This apostrophe, or turning to the heathen nations, was, as it were, the prelude of calling them to the knowledge of the true God. This calling of them was certainly never effected by the Jews in the way and to the degree it was by the apostles of Christ and their disciples, who gained thousands more to Christianity than ever the Jews did to Judaism. Here the prophet calls upon the Gentiles, not the Jews, to hear the word of the Lord, and to proclaim or make it known ; and the event has proved that he did not do this but by the direction of the Divine Spirit, since the Gentiles were far more ready to hear and obey the word of God by Christ, and to receive his divine doctrine, and propagate it, than the Jews were. Declare it in the isles afar off—The Jews, as we have repeatedly seen, called all the countries islands to which they went by sea. He that scattered Israel, &c.—He that caused Israel to be carried away captive into various countries, and dispersed them over the face of the earth, will gather them into one body or people, Isa. xi. 12 ; xxvii. 12 ; liv. 7. And keep him as a shepherd does his flock—As God's care over his people is often compared to that of a shepherd, so the office of the Messiah is described under the same character, Isa. xl. 11, and particularly with respect to the Jews, after their conversion and restoration. For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, &c., from him that was stronger than he—From those who by subtlety and power conquered him, and detained him captive ; an emblem of that redemption which Christ obtains for us by vanquishing the devil, called the strong one, Matt. xii. 29.

Verses 12–14. They shall sing in the height of Zion—By the height of Zion is meant the temple, built upon a hill adjoining to mount Zion, and it is here to be taken metaphorically, as it frequently is in the writings of the prophets, for the church, which is compared, by Christ, to a city set on a hill, as being remarkable for the excellence of its laws and institutions, and the piety and virtue of its genuine members. And shall flow to the goodness of the Lord, &c.—Spiritual blessings are here, as elsewhere, described under the emblems of fruitfulness and

A. M. 3410. * the goodness of the LORD, for
B. C. 594. wheat, and for wine, and for oil, and for the young of the flock and of the herd: and their soul shall be as a ^v watered garden; ^z and they shall not sorrow any more at all.

13 Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, both young men and old together: for I will turn their mourning into joy, and will comfort them, and make them rejoice from their sorrow.

14 And I will satiate the soul of the priests with fatness, and my people shall be satisfied with my goodness, saith the LORD.

* Hos. iii. 5. — ^v Isaiah lviii. 11. — ^z Isaiah xxxv. 10; lxx. 19; Revelation xxi. 4.

plenty. And their soul shall be as a watered garden—Refreshed and fertilized by the truth and grace of God. And they shall not sorrow any more at all—Hebrew, ולא יסופו לראבב עוד, They shall not add, or, continue, yet to grieve. The LXX. render it, ου περιεσπονσιν επι, They shall not hunger any more; and so the Vulgate. Then shall the virgin rejoice, &c., both young men and old—There shall be signs of a universal joy, in which all ages shall unanimously join. The expressions in the next verse allude to that plentiful provision that was made for the temporal support of the priests under the law, which is here put metaphorically for that plenitude of blessings which are to be enjoyed under the gospel.

Verses 15–17. Thus saith the Lord; A voice, &c.—Here “the scene of this prophecy changes, and two new personages are successively introduced, in order to diversify the subject, and to impress it more strongly on the mind of the reader. The first is Rachel, who in these verses is represented as just rising from the grave, and bitterly bewailing the loss of her children, for whom she looks about in vain, but none are to be seen. Her tears are dried up, and she is consoled with the assurance that they are not lost for ever, but shall in time be brought back to their ancient borders.” The passage is strongly figurative, but not difficult of interpretation, as the reader will perceive by what follows: A voice was heard in Ramah—Ramah was a city of Benjamin, (see Judg. xix. 13,) near which Rachel, the mother of Joseph and Benjamin, was buried. She is here, in a beautiful figure of poetry, represented as come forth out of her grave, and, as chief mourner on so sad an occasion, lamenting bitterly for the loss of her children, none of whom presented themselves to her view, being all either slain or gone into exile. In this way the prophet sets forth the lamentations, in and about Jerusalem, at the time of the several captivities mentioned chap. lli. 15, 28–30. The evangelist indeed applies these words to Herod’s massacre of the infants at Bethlehem and its environs, Matt. ii. 17, 18. But the context here plainly shows, that this massacre could not have been the

15 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; ^a A voice was heard in ^b Ramah, lamentation, and bitter weeping; Rachel weeping for her children refused to be comforted for her children, because ^c they were not.

16 Thus saith the LORD; Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears: for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the LORD; and ^d they shall come again from the land of the enemy.

17 And there is hope in thine end, saith the LORD, that thy children shall come again to their own border.

^a Matthew ii. 17, 18. — ^b Josh. xviii. 25. — ^c Genesis xlii. 13.
^d Verses 4, 5; Ezra i. 5; Hos. i. 11.

direct and immediate object of the prophecy, (see the following note,) but the prophet’s words so well suited the occasion that the evangelist, with great propriety, observes their congruity therewith. He must however be understood just as if he had said, The circumstances of this affair were such that the words of Jeremiah, though spoken with a different view, may well be accommodated to this event. And this is as much as can be allowed with respect to several passages of the New Testament, where the words of the Old Testament were said to be fulfilled. See Matt. ii. 16; Acts i. 16–20, &c.; and Blaney. It is observable, that the Vulgate and Chaldee understand the word, רמה, ramah, not as a proper name, but as an appellative, and translate it, in excelso, on high, or, aloud; according to which the sense will be, A voice is heard on high, or aloud, lamentations, weepings; of Rachel bewailing her children, and refusing to be comforted concerning them, because they are not. Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears—Set bounds to thy sorrow, repress and moderate thy inordinate and excessive grief; for thy work shall be rewarded—That is, it will appear thou hast not brought forth children in vain, nor shalt thou be deprived of the satisfaction of seeing the welfare of thy children, which is the parent’s reward for her pain in bringing them into the world, and her care and attention in providing for their support and education; for they shall come again from the land of the enemy. Thus the text interprets itself. But if the massacre at Bethlehem had been primarily designed here, with what propriety could it have been said, how could it have been affirmed, that they should return from the land of the enemy, or, as in the next verse, should come again to their own border? The words יש תקוה לאחריהן, rendered here, There is hope in thine end, may be translated, There is hope, or expectation, to thy posterity; that is, though these of the present age do not experience a return from captivity, yet their posterity shall enjoy that blessing. This promise was particularly fulfilled with respect to the tribe of Benjamin, as well as that of Judah, in their return under Cyrus. See Ezra i. 5.

A. M. 3410.
B. C. 594.

18 ¶ I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself thus; Thou hast chastised me, and I was chastised, as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke: ° turn thou me, and I shall be turned; for thou art the LORD my God.

19 Surely † after that I was turned, I repented; and after that I was instructed, I smote

* Lam. v. 21.—† Deut. xxx. 2.—‡ Deut. xxxii. 36; Isa. lxiii.

Verse 18. I have surely heard Ephraim, &c.—Here, still further to diversify the subject, and give it the greater force, the other personage referred to in the preceding note is introduced. Ephraim, representing the ten tribes, is brought forward, lamenting his past undutifulness with great contrition and penitence, and professing an earnest desire of amendment. And “these symptoms of returning duty are no sooner discerned in him than God acknowledges him once more as a darling child, and resolves to receive him with mercy.” The passage is intended to show the change necessary to be wrought in the hearts of the Israelites, in order to their obtaining this restoration from captivity, according to the conditional promises made of old to this people. See Lev. xxvi. 40, 41. Previously to his conferring this great benefit upon them, God must hear them bemoaning themselves, or bewailing their miserable state, and the sins which had brought them into it, acknowledging that the chastisements which they had suffered had not been more or greater than their sins had justly merited, and praying earnestly for mercy and deliverance. Thou hast chastised me, and I was chastised—Or, instructed by thy discipline, as אָמַר may be properly rendered. As a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke—Whereas before I was as an untamed bullock, or heifer, that is not to be managed but by stripes and corrections. Turn thou me, and I shall be turned—Do thou turn my heart by thy preventing and renewing grace, and then I shall be effectually reformed, Lam. v. 21. “Sometimes the Scripture ascribes the whole work of man’s conversion to God, because his grace is the first and principal cause of it. But yet, to make it effectual, man’s concurrence is necessary, as appears particularly from chap. li. 9, where God says, We would have healed Babylon, and she is not healed; that is, God did what was requisite on his part for her conversion, but she refused to comply with his call. To the same purpose he speaks to Jerusalem, (Ezek. xxiv. 13,) I have purged thee, and thou wast not purged.”

Verse 19. Surely after that I was turned, I repented—After I was enlightened and impressed with a due sense of my duty, and of the many deviations from it of which I had been guilty, and after my will was subjected to the will of God, I straightway became a true penitent, and expressed my repentance by all the outward and inward signs of an unfeigned sorrow for, and hatred to, my past conduct. And after that I was instructed—Re-upon my thigh: I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I did bear the reproach of my youth.

20 Is Ephraim my dear son? is he a pleasant child? for since I spake against him, I do earnestly remember him still: ‡ therefore my bowels are troubled for him; † I will surely have mercy upon him, saith the LORD.

15; Hos. xi. 8.—° Heb. sound.—† Isa. lvii. 18; Hos. xiv. 4.

specting my sin and folly, in forsaking the fountain of living waters for the broken cisterns that could hold no water; I smote upon my thigh—Through the most poignant grief and concern, and with indignation against myself. I was ashamed, yea, even confounded—At my own stupidity and frowardness, and could neither with any confidence look up to God, nor with any comfort reflect upon myself; because I did bear the reproach of my youth—The burden of my former sins lay heavy upon my mind, and I became sensible that all the calamities and reproaches I had undergone were the due deserts of my offences. Ephraim smote upon his thigh, as the publican upon his breast. We find, both in the Holy Scriptures, and other ancient records, smiting on the thigh mentioned as an expression of great surprise and concern. Thus God commands Ezekiel to cry and howl, on account of the sword that should be upon his people, and to smite upon his thigh. We find the same custom noticed by Homer, Iliad xvi. l. 124.

—ανταρ Αχιλλεως

Μηρω πληξαμενος Πατροκλην προσειπεν.

Divine Achilles view’d the rising flames,
And smote his thigh, and thus aloud exclaims, Arm, arm, Patroclus! POPE.

It is also noticed by Xenophon, Cicero, and others. The meaning is, when Ephraim was made sensible of his sinfulness he showed marks of real contrition.

Verse 20. Is Ephraim my dear son? Is he, &c.—These questions are designed to be answered in the affirmative, as appears from the inference, therefore my bowels are moved for him. It seems that, to suit the idiom of our language, and fully to express the sense of the original, the particle not ought to have been supplied, and the clause to have been read, Is not Ephraim my dear son? Is he not a pleasant child? That is, is he not one that I have set my affections on, as a parent does upon a child in whom he delights? Thus Dr. Waterland, Lowth, and many others interpret the words. Houbigant, however, defends the common reading, and thinks that God means to deny that Ephraim was his son, in order to show him that his bowels were moved toward him solely through free mercy, and not on account of any merits or deservings of his people. For since I spake against him—Or, of him, as the same phrase in the original is translated chap. xlviii. 27. I do earnestly remember him still—Ever since I have so severely reprov’d and chastised him, my

A. M. 3410. 21 Set thee up way-marks, make
B. C. 594. thee high heaps: ⁱ set thy heart toward the highway, even the way which thou wentest: turn again, O virgin of Israel, turn again to these thy cities.

ⁱ Chap. i. 5.—^k Chap. ii. 18, 23, 36.

thoughts toward him have been thoughts of peace. I have a fatherly kindness and affection for him. Therefore my bowels are troubled for him—Or, yearn over him, as Joseph's bowels yearned toward his brethren, even when he spake roughly to them. Observe, reader, when God afflicts his people, yet he does not forget them; when he casts them out of their land, yet he does not cast them out of his sight; nor out of his mind. Even then, when God is speaking against us, yet he is acting for us, and designing our good in all; and this is our comfort in our affliction, that the Lord thinketh upon us, though we have forgotten him. When Israel's afflictions extorted a penitent confession and submission, it is said, (Judg. x. 16,) his soul was grieved for the misery of Israel: for he always afflicts with the greatest tenderness. It was his compassion that mitigated Ephraim's punishment, (Hos. xi. 8, 9,) My heart is turned within me, &c., and now the same compassion accepted Ephraim's repentance, and induced God to say, I will surely have mercy upon him.

Verse 21. Set thee up way-marks—"These words are a call to Israel to prepare for their return. The word צִיָּב, rendered way-marks, means stone pillars, and תְּמוֹדִים, translated heaps, from הָכָר, a palm-tree, probably signifies tall-poles, like palm-trees, or, perhaps, made of palm-trees; both set up in the roads, at certain distances, for the traveller's direction, and extremely necessary for those who had to pass wild and spacious deserts."—Blaney. Set thy heart toward the way which thou wentest—Mind well the way that the Assyrians and Babylonians carried thee captive, for thou shalt return the same way. Turn again—That is, Return to thine own country; O virgin of Israel—See note on verse 14. Turn again to these thy cities—The expression is doubled for the greater certainty of the event.

Verse 22. How long wilt thou go about—Or, go out of the right way, or follow thine own imaginations, O thou backsliding daughter—Thou that didst formerly revolt from thy sovereign Lord, and decline from his worship and service, going after idols, and seeking help from foreign nations, instead of applying to him for it; and who now seemest to loiter when God calls thee to return homeward out of a strange country. The expression is often used of Israel, or the ten tribes: see chap. iii. 6-12: and of Judah and Israel together, ibid., verses 14, 22; both being comprehended under the title of the virgin of Israel, in the foregoing verse. For the Lord hath created, or doth create, a new thing in the earth, a woman shall compass a man—It is difficult to say, with any certainty, what this obscure passage means. Several ancient Jews expounded it of the Messiah, and most Christian interpreters understand it of the miraculous conception of the child 22 ¶ How long wilt thou ^k go A. M. 3410.

about, O thou ⁱ backsliding daugh- B. C. 594.
ter? for the LORD hath created a new thing in the earth, A woman shall compass a man.

ⁱ Chap. iii. 6, 8, 11, 12, 14, 22.

Jesus in the womb of the virgin. "Taking the words in this sense they properly import," as Lowth justly observes, "a new creation, and such as is the immediate work of God. And that such a prophecy concerning the conception of Christ may not be thought to come in here abruptly, it is to be observed, that as the coming of the Messiah is the foundation of the promises, both of the first and second covenant; so it contains the most powerful arguments to persuade men to obedience: and the covenant, of which Christ was to be the Mediator is plainly foretold and described in the 31st and three following verses of this chapter." Blaney, however, thinks the original words, נָקְבָה וְנָבַר, cannot by any construction be brought to imply any such thing as the miraculous conception above mentioned. "Admitting," he says, "that the word תְּסוּבָה may signify shall encompass, or, comprehend in the womb, and that נָבַר, instead of an adult, or, strong man, (which the word generally means,) may also signify a male child; yet the words, all taken together, still import no more than that a woman shall conceive, or contain, a male child: but this is nothing new or extraordinary, and therefore I presume it not the sense intended." Being of opinion that the word, which we translate compass, or encompass, may signify to cause to turn about, or repulse, he renders the clause, "A woman shall put to the rout a strong man," judging it to be a proverbial form of speech, denoting, "The weaker shall prevail over the stronger," an expression equivalent to, one shall chase a thousand. Now this, says he, it must be confessed, is in itself new and unusual and contrary to the ordinary course of nature; and accordingly it is ascribed to the interposing power of God, who is said therein to create a new thing, or, in other words, to work a miracle. Interpreting the passage in this sense, he explains its connection with the context as follows: "The virgin of Israel is exhorted not to turn aside, or decline the invitation given her to return, as she might, perhaps, be disposed to do through dread of the power of enemies, who would oppose her deliverance. For her encouragement she is told, that she had no reason to be apprehensive of the superior strength of any enemies, since God would work a miracle in her favour, and enable her, though apparently weak, to overcome and prevail against all their opposition." By an interpretation nearly allied to this, many understand the passage as being a promise that the Jewish Church in its time, and afterward the gospel church, should prevail over all its enemies; though comparing the fewness and weakness of the church's members with the multitude of her enemies, and the greatness of their power, it seemed as strange a thing as for a woman to prevail against a strong and mighty man.

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. 23 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; As yet they shall use this speech in the land of Judah and in the cities thereof, when I shall bring again their captivity; ^m The LORD bless thee, O habitation of justice, and ⁿ mountain of holiness.

24 And there shall dwell in Judah itself, and ^o in all the cities thereof together, husbandmen, and they that go forth with flocks.

25 For I have satiated the weary soul, and I have replenished every sorrowful soul.

26 Upon this I awaked, and beheld; and my sleep was sweet unto me.

27 ¶ Behold, the days come, saith the LORD,

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. that ^p I will sow the house of Israel and the house of Judah with the seed of man, and with the seed of beast.

28 And it shall come to pass, that like as I have ^q watched over them, ^r to pluck up, and to break down, and to throw down, and to destroy, and to afflict; so will I watch over them, ^s to build and to plant, saith the LORD.

29 ¶ ^t In those days they shall say no more, The fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge.

30 ^u But every one shall die for his own iniquity: every man that eateth the sour grape, his teeth shall be set on edge.

^m Psa. cxxii. 5, 6, 7, 8; Isa. i. 26.—ⁿ Zech. viii. 3.—^o Chap. xxxiii. 12, 13.—^p Ezekiel xxxvi. 9, 10, 11; Hosea ii. 23;

Zech. x. 9.—^q Chapter xlv. 27.—^r Chapter i. 10; xviii. 7. ^s Chap. xxiv. 6.—^t Ezek. xviii. 2, 3.—^u Gal. vi. 5, 7.

Verses 23-25. Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel—These prophecies of the restoration of the Jews are ordinarily prefaced with these two attributes of God, the one of which asserts his power to do the thing promised; the other, his goodness to his people; as yet, or, yet again, they shall use this speech in the land of Judah, and in the cities thereof, &c.—Three things the prophet here foretels, 1st, That the cities which had formerly been the habitations of unjust, cruel, and bloody men, should become the habitations of men who should do justice to all. 2d, That the city which stood upon mount Zion, and had formerly been a habitation of idolaters and other unholy persons, should become a place in which men should, in a due and holy manner, worship and serve the true God. 3d, That they should be so famous, both for justice and holiness, that men would take notice of it, and wish they might be blessed on that account: so that as they had, for their sins, been made a curse and proverb, so, upon their reformation, they should be for a blessing. And there shall dwell in Judah, &c., husbandmen—This verse is not only intended to express that the country should be inhabited, as well as the cities, after their return from captivity, but to set forth their peaceable and happy state at that time, For I have satiated, or, I will satiate, the weary soul—I will comfort them after their sorrows and afflictions, and will give them abundance of ease and plenty.

Verse 26. Upon this I awaked, &c.—These words afford a plain proof that the preceding revelations had been made to the prophet in a dream, or vision. And my sleep was sweet unto me—The vision which I had seen was so agreeable to me that it gave me as great satisfaction and comfort as men usually feel when they have been refreshed with an undisturbed and sweet sleep.

Verses 27, 28. I will sow the house of Israel—Under the captivity the land lay desolate, without man and beast, chap. xxxiii. 12; but here it is promised that it should be again inhabited and replenished with both. And like as I have watched over them to pluck up, &c.—I will show the same care and diligence in restoring them as I have formerly done in destroying them, according to the promise made to them upon their repentance and reformation. See chap. xviii. 7-10.

Verses 29, 30. They shall say no more, The fathers have eaten a sour grape, &c.—"God had often declared that he would visit the sins of the fathers upon the children, and had particularly threatened to execute judgment upon the present generation for the idolatries and other sins of their forefathers. See note on Exod. xx. 5, and chap. xv. 4. This gave occasion to the proverb mentioned in this verse, which they that were in captivity applied to their own case, as if the miseries they endured were chiefly owing to their fathers' sins: see Lam. v. 7; Ezek. xviii. 2; but when this judgment should be removed, then there would be no further occasion to use this proverb, as Ezekiel there speaks." But every one shall die for his own iniquity, &c.—These national judgments ceasing, every one shall suffer only for his own faults. "This promise," says Lowth, "will be remarkably verified when God shall cease to visit upon the Jewish nation that imprecation which they laid upon themselves by the crucifixion of Christ, his blood be upon us, and upon our children." It was the opinion of Bishop Warburton, that the punishment of children for the iniquity of their parents, was to supply the want of the sanction of a future state, which he supposed was very obscurely, if at all, revealed under the Mosaic dispensation. "For," says he, "while a future state was kept hid from the Jews there was an absolute need of such a law to restrain the more daring spirits by working upon their instincts. But when a doctrine was brought to light which held them up, and continued them after death, the objects of divine justice, it had then no further use, and was therefore reasonably to be abolished, with the rest of the Jewish laws peculiar to the Mosaic dispensation." But it may be inquired here, Do not children still suffer for the sins of their parents in the only sense in which they ever did, namely, in all na-

A. M. 3410. 31 ¶ Behold, the ^x days come, saith
B. C. 594. the LORD, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah :

32 Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers, in the day that ^y I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt ; which my covenant they ^z brake, ⁷ although I was a husband unto them, saith the LORD :

^x Chap. xxxii. 40 ; xxxiii. 14 ; Ezek. xxxvii. 26 ; Heb viii. 8-12 ; x. 16, 17. — ^y Deut. i. 31. — ⁷ Or, should I have continued a husband unto them ? — ^z Chap. xxxii. 40.

tional calamities, and in that poverty and reproach, and those bodily afflictions, which the vices of their parents entail upon them ?

Verses 31, 32. Behold, the days come, saith the Lord—The latter days, or the times of the gospel, are here intended, as is evident from the apostle's applying the following promises to those times, and quoting this whole passage as a summary of the covenant of grace, Hebrews viii. 8-10. I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and the house of Judah—The benefits of this covenant were first offered to the Jews ; as being the completion of that covenant which God had made with their fathers, Acts iii. 26, and xiii. 46 ; but those benefits were actually conferred only on the spiritual seed of Abraham, or the imitators of Abraham's faith, the true Israel of God, on whom peace is and shall be, Gal. vi. 16, and with whom only this new covenant is made. In other words, Israel and Judah stand here for the true people or church of God, especially the gospel church : and the covenant here promised to be made with them is said to be new, not because it was so as to the substance of it, for it was made with Abraham, Gen. xvii. 7, and with the Israelites, Deut. xxvi. 17, 18 ; but, upon many other accounts, especially the following :—1st, It was new, considered as a testament, confirmed by the actual death of the testator, which did not take place till gospel times. 2d, It was revealed after a new manner, more fully and particularly, plainly and clearly. 3d, It contained no such mixture of temporal promises as when first made with the Jews. 4th, The ceremonial law was no part of it, as it was to the Jews, who were obliged to approve themselves God's people, by a strict observance thereof. 5th, The publication of it was extended to the Gentiles as well as the Jews, which was not the case with the Mosaic covenant. 6th, The influences of the Divine Spirit, attending the publication of it, are conferred more largely under this than under the old covenant, distributing to believers a greater measure and variety of gifts and graces, to enable them to comply with the terms, and fulfil the demands of it. Not according to the covenant made with their fathers —Differing from it in the circumstances above mentioned, and in others declared afterward : in the 33 ^z But this shall be the covenant A. M. 3410. that I will make with the house of B. C. 594.

Israel ; After those days, saith the LORD, ^a I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts ; ^b and will be their God, and they shall be my people.

34 And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the LORD : for ^c they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the

^a Psalm xl. 8 ; Ezekiel xi. 19, 20 ; xxxvi. 26, 27 ; 2 Cor. iii. 3.
^b Chap. xxiv. 7 ; xxxii. 38. — ^c Isa. liv. 13 ; John vi. 45 ; 1 Cor.
ii. 10 ; 1 John ii. 26.

day when I took them by the hand, &c.—The covenant which God made with the Jews, when they came out of the land of Egypt, was on his part the law which he gave them from Sinai, with the promises annexed ; on their part, (which made it a formal covenant,) their promise of obedience to it.
This covenant God says he made with them when they were a weak and ignorant people, the care of whom he took upon himself, and led them as a parent leads his feeble child by the hand. Which my covenant they brake—This covenant they are said to have broken, not because of every defect, or failure in their obedience, for in that sense, through the general depravity and weakness of human nature, they could not but break it ; (see Rom. iii. 20 ; Gal. iii. 10, 11 ;) but because of their gross and wilful sins often repeated and continued in without repentance, and more especially by their idolatry, compared to whoredom, which broke the marriage covenant between God and them, and caused him to divorce them, and to say, Lo Ammi, You are not my people : Although I was a husband to them—This their covenant-breaking was aggravated by God's kindness to them and care of them, who, as he stood related to them in the character of a husband, so he had always manifested to them such love as is but faintly shadowed forth by that of the most affectionate husband to his wife, and had given them no temptation to go a whoring from him.

Verses 33, 34. This shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel—That is, with those who are Israelites indeed, in whom is no guile, John i. 47, who are Jews inwardly, Rom. ii. 29, by the circumcision of the heart and spirit, spoken of and promised by God, Deut. xxx. 6. I will put my law in their inward parts, &c.—In the times of the gospel God's law is not abrogated and made void ;
for Christ came not to destroy the law, but to fulfil it : but it is written in the hearts of God's true Israel by the finger of his Spirit ; and they become obedient to it from their secret approbation of it as holy, just, and good, and from the delight they take in it after the inward man. But it may be asked, How was this peculiar to this new covenant ? Did not God of old write his law on the hearts of his people ? Did not David and others, the servants of God, of whom we read in the Old Testament, serve

A. M. 3410. greatest of them, saith the LORD :
B. C. 594. for ^d I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more.

35 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, ^e which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth ^f the sea when the waves thereof roar; ^g The LORD of hosts is his name :

36 ^h If those ordinances depart from before me, saith the LORD, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation be- A. M. 3410 fore me for ever. B. C. 594.

37 Thus saith the LORD; ⁱ If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, I will also cast off all the seed of Israel for all that they have done,
saith the LORD.

38 ¶ Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that the city shall be built to the LORD ^k from the tower of Hananeel unto the gate of the corner.

^d Chap. xxxiii. 8; 1. 20; Mic. vii. 18; Acts x. 43; xiii. 39;
Romans xi. 27.—^e Genesis i. 16; Psalm lxxii. 5, 17; lxxxix.
2, 36, 37; cxix. 89.

^f Isa. li. 15.—^g Chap. x. 16.—^h Psalm cxlviii. 6; Isa. liv.
9, 10; Chap. xxxiii. 20.—ⁱ Chap. xxxiii. 22.—^k Neh. iii. 1; Zech. xiv. 10.

God, out of a principle of love and delight in his law? We must answer, Undoubtedly they did, and the law of God was, in a measure, written in their hearts; but this was not through the virtue of the Mosaic dispensation, but through the grace of this new covenant, revealed and communicated, though but obscurely and partially, even under that dispensation. The principal design of the prophet here is evidently to express the difference between the law and the gospel: the law shows man his duty, the gospel brings the grace of regeneration, by which the heart of man is changed, and he is enabled to do his duty. All who, during the time of the Mosaic dispensation, attained salvation, were saved by virtue of this new covenant; but this was not then evidently exhibited; neither was the renewing grace of God so generally and largely given as it has been under the gospel. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour—This must not be so interpreted as if under the gospel there should be no more need of ministerial teaching, for Christ himself sent out his apostles to preach; nor yet as if there should be no further need of brethren in Christ teaching one another, for the contrary is commanded, Col. iii. 16. This expression only signifies the great increase of divine knowledge, especially of the knowledge of the being and attributes of the one living and true God, and of the relations in which he is pleased to stand to his people, which is the knowledge here chiefly intended. For they shall all know me, from the least unto the greatest—Even the least of them, who have an interest in this new covenant, and are ingrafted into the good olive, and partake of the fatness of the root, even babes in Christ, and much more they who have arrived at the measure of the stature of his fulness; shall all savingly know me, and have eternal life in and by that knowledge. For I will forgive their iniquity, &c.—Here God represents the free pardon of all their sins as being the root and foundation of this grace, and of all the privileges and blessings of this new covenant.

Verses 35–37. Thus saith the Lord, who giveth the sun for a light by day—All the acts here mentioned are such as manifest the divine, almighty power of him who is the Lord of all the hosts of the creation: Which divideth, or, who did divide, the sea—Namely, as the words are generally interpreted, the Red sea, to give the Israelites passage. The original words, however, רִגַּע הַיָּם, which occur Isa. li. 15, where they are translated as here, are by Bishop Lowth rendered, who stilleth the sea, a sense which accords better with the words immediately following, when the waves thereof roar—That is, even when the waves are most tumultuous, and roar most dreadfully, he, with infinite ease, quiets them, and produces a perfect calm. In this sense the same word is interpreted verse 2 of this chapter, and also chap. l. 34. If these ordinances—Hebrew, חֻקֵּי, these appointments respecting the heavenly bodies and their motions and uses; depart from before me—Be altered or suspended in their operations; then shall the seed of Israel cease from being a nation, &c.—Thus God makes the continuance of the laws of nature a pledge of the continuance of Israel as a people. The prediction implies, 1st, That God would preserve a remnant of them in the country to which they were led captive, and would restore them to their own land; 2d, That there should be another remnant of them, at the beginning of the gospel, called οἱ σωθέντες, the saved, (Acts ii. 47,) who, by embracing the faith of Christ, should escape those terrible judgments that should be inflicted upon the main body of that nation; and 3d, That Providence would still preserve them in a body distinct from all other people in the world, in order to their conversion in God's due time. To this place St. Paul, speaking of the conversion of the Jews in the latter times, seems to refer when he says, The gifts and calling of God [to the Jews] are without repentance, Rom. xi. 29. If heaven above can be measured, &c.—If the height and extent thereof can be ascertained by men, which is impossible, I will also cast off all the seed of Israel, &c.—That is, I will never cast them all off—a promise which the apostle, (Rom. xi. 1, 2,) proves to have been made good by God, notwithstanding the rejection of the great body of that people.

Verses 38–40. Behold, the days come, that the city shall be built to the Lord—Or, for the Lord, namely, for his use and service. Blaney renders it, Under the direction of the Lord, from the tower of Hananeel, &c.—Here follows a description of the cir-

A. M. 3410. 39 And ¹the measuring line shall
B. C. 594. yet go forth over against it upon the hill Gareb, and shall compass about to Goath.

40 And the whole valley of the dead bodies, and of the ashes, and all the fields unto the

¹ Ezek. xl. 8; Zech. ii. 1.—^m 2 Chron. xxiii. 15;

cumference of a new city to be built on the site of Jerusalem; but that it does not mean the city which was rebuilt after the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity is evident from two principal circumstances; first, because the limits are here extended farther, so as to include a greater space than was contained within the walls at that time; and secondly, it is here said, that it should never be razed or destroyed any more. This new city, therefore, must be referred to those after-times when the general restoration of Israel is appointed to take place." Thus Blaney, with whom many other commentators agree. That this prophecy "was not fulfilled," says Dr. Dodd; "from the return out of Babylon to the days of Christ, we are assured from sacred history; where we read that mount Goath, or Golgotha, (which word in Hebrew signifies the heap of Gotha,) was situated without Jerusalem. The same may be said of the valley of dead bodies and of the ashes," namely, the valley of Hinnom, so described, from its having been made a common burying place, and a receptacle for the rubbish and filth of the city. "As brook of Kidron, ^munto the corner A. M. 3410. of the horse-gate toward the east, B. C. 594.

ⁿ shall be holy unto the LORD; it shall not be plucked up, nor thrown down any more for ever.

Nehemiah iii. 28.—ⁿ Joel iii. 17.

to Gareb we know nothing certain. We may also add, that the last clause of this chapter, it shall not be plucked up, &c., any more for ever, cannot refer to the Jerusalem which was rebuilt after the captivity, and which was plucked up and thrown down by the Romans. We must necessarily recur, therefore, either to some future building of that city, or to the church of Christ, against which we are assured the gates of hell shall never prevail," and which is elsewhere called the city of God, and the new Jerusalem. Taking the passage in this mystical sense, as a description of the church, in its most enlarged and perfect state, in the latter days, we can be at no loss to explain the clause in the last verse which expresses that all parts of the city, even the valley of Hinnom, and all the fields, unto the brook Kidron, &c., shall be holy unto the Lord. For, undoubtedly, at this time the church shall be thoroughly purged from all corruption, both with regard to the doctrine taught in it, and the principles and practices of its members, who shall all be both well instructed in divine things, and truly holy in their hearts and lives.

CHAPTER XXXII.

In this chapter, which has no connection with the preceding, we have an account, (1.) Of Jeremiah's imprisonment for foretelling the destruction of Jerusalem and the captivity of King Zedekiah, 1-5. (2.) Of an order he received from God to purchase a field in Anathoth, and of his executing the order in due form, and delivering the writings to Baruch to be kept safely, in token of God's purposing to restore the rights of possession in the land, 6-15. (3.) In a prayer he acknowledges God's infinite greatness and power, and the wonders of his goodness to Israel, with the ungrateful and contumacious behaviour of that people, which had brought the present calamities upon them; and concludes with an humble representation of the desperate circumstances of his country, notwithstanding that he had been commanded to make the foregoing purchase, 16-25. (4.) In reply, God asserts his own all-sufficiency; and then goes on to avow his resolution to give up the city to be taken and burned by the Chaldeans, because of the many and great provocations which had been given him, 26-35. (5.) He promises, however, in time to reassemble his people, and bring them back to their own land, to enter into covenant with them anew, and to promote their welfare; so that the land, though given up to desolation at present, should flourish again, and possessions be once more bought and sold, as in former times, 36-44.

A. M. 3415. THE word that came to Jeremiah
B. C. 589. from the LORD ^ain the tenth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, which was the eighteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar.

^a 2 Kings xxv. 1, 2; Jer. xxxix. 1.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXII.

Verse 1. The word that came to Jeremiah—As the date of the following transaction and prophecy is here stated to have been in the tenth year of Zedekiah's reign, while the Chaldeans invested the city,

2 For then the king of Babylon's A. M. 3415.
army besieged Jerusalem: and Jere- B. C. 589.
miah the prophet was shut up ^bin the court of the prison, which was in the king of Judah's house.

^b Neh. iii. 25; Ch. xxxiii. 1; xxxvii. 21; xxxviii. 6; xxxix. 14.

and Jeremiah was confined in the court of the prison, it must have been after the Egyptians had retreated back to their own land, and the Chaldeans had renewed the siege a second time. Jeremiah at the beginning, it seems, of the siege foretold to Zedekiah

A. M. 3415. 3 For Zedekiah king of Judah had
B. C. 589. shut him up, saying, Wherefore dost thou prophesy, and say, Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it;

4 And Zedekiah king of Judah ^d shall not escape out of the hand of the Chaldeans, but shall surely be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon, and shall speak with him mouth to mouth, and his eyes shall behold his eyes;

5 And he shall lead Zedekiah to Babylon, and there shall he be ^e until I visit him, saith the

^c Chap. xxxiv. 2.—^d Chap. xxxiv. 3; xxxviii. 18, 23; xxxix. 5; lii. 9.

that the city should be taken, and the king sent captive to Babylon, chap. xxxiv. 1, 7. The king, or his princes rather, irritated at his freedom, put him in prison, or, at least, in the court of the prison, which was in the palace. And it was in this place that the transaction here recorded happened. As Nebuchadnezzar came to besiege Jerusalem in the ninth year of Zedekiah, it is probable Jeremiah had now been confined a year or more in prison. The siege, it may be observed, lasted from the tenth month of that year to the fourth month of the eleventh year of that king's reign.

Verses 3-5. Jeremiah was shut up in the court of the prison—He was afterward put in the dungeon, chap. xxxvii. 16; and xxxviii. 6. But now he was not under so severe a restraint. Compare verses 26 and 28 of that chapter. For Zedekiah had shut him up, saying, Wherefore dost thou prophesy and say, &c.—This refers to the prophecy recorded chap. xxxiv. 2, &c., the particulars there mentioned being, in order of time, before the passages related in this chapter. We nowhere read that Zedekiah himself immediately commanded Jeremiah to be imprisoned: he seems rather to have been favourable to him, and to have been averse to his confinement; but God accounts princes to do that which their ministers or subordinate magistrates do with their connivance, or without their prohibition. Behold, I will give this city, &c., and Zedekiah shall not escape—Jeremiah prophesies that both the city and the court should fall into the hands of the king of Babylon: for God, whose city it was, in a peculiar manner would put it out of his protection, and give it into their hands; that, though Zedekiah should attempt to make his escape, he should be overtaken, and brought as a prisoner into Nebuchadnezzar's presence, to his great confusion and terror, he having made himself particularly obnoxious to him by breaking his faith with him; that he should hear the king of Babylon pronounce his doom, and see with what fury and indignation he should look upon him, his eyes, as it is expressed, beholding Nebuchadnezzar's eyes. He further prophesies that Zedekiah should be carried to Babylon, and continue a miserable captive there

LORD: ^f though ye fight with the Chaldeans, ye shall not prosper. A. M. 3415 B. C. 589.

6 ¶ And Jeremiah said, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

7 Behold, Hanameel, the son of Shallum thine uncle, shall come unto thee, saying, Buy thee my field that is in Anathoth: for the ^g right of redemption is thine to buy it.

8 So Hanameel mine uncle's son came to me in the court of the prison, according to the word of the LORD, and said unto me, Buy my field, I pray thee, that is in Anathoth, which is in the country of Benjamin: for the right of in-until God should visit him—That is, till God should put an end to his life by a natural death, as Nebuchadnezzar had long before put an end to every comfort of his life by putting out his eyes. And, lastly, he foretels that all their attempts to force the besiegers from their trenches would be ineffectual; for though they should fight with the Chaldeans, they should not prosper. For prophesying thus, that is, for bearing testimony to the truth, and giving them faithful warning of impending judgments, he is imprisoned.

^e Chap. xxvii. 22.—^f Chap. xxi. 4; xxxiii. 5.—^g Lev. xxv. 24, 32; Ruth iv. 4.

Verses 6-8. The word of the Lord came unto me—"Jeremiah, after having just informed us why he was put in prison, returns to his design, and tells us that God had advised him, probably in a dream or vision, that Hanameel, his cousin, should come to him with the offer of a field in Anathoth; the right of redeeming whereof was in him. Jeremiah might have given up his right, as not being in a situation to make the purchase; but, understanding from the revelation of the Lord, that this affair had a mystical reference, and that he ought to accept the offer of his cousin, he purchased the field, as is afterward related, with the full process and meaning of the affair."—Dodd. The field, being in Anathoth, near Jerusalem, was consequently at this time actually in the possession of the Chaldean army. And the design of God in directing Jeremiah to purchase it was to signify, that though Jerusalem was now besieged, and the whole country was likely to be laid waste, yet the time should come when houses, and fields, and vineyards should be again possessed in that land, verse 15. As God appointed Jeremiah to confirm his predictions of the approaching destruction of Jerusalem by his own practice in living unmarried, so he now appointed him to confirm his predictions of the future restoration of Jerusalem by his own practice in purchasing this field. The Roman historian, Florus, relates, as a great instance of the bravery of the Roman citizens, that in the time of the second Punic war, when Hannibal besieged Rome, and was very near making himself master of it, a field, on which part of his army lay, being offered for sale at that time, was presently purchased, in a

A. M. 3415. heritance is thine, and the redemption
B. C. 589. is thine; buy it for thyself. Then I knew that this was the word of the LORD.

9 And I bought the field of Hanameel mine uncle's son; that was in Anathoth, and ^bweighed him the money, even ¹seventeen shekels of silver.

10 And I ²subscribed the evidence, and sealed it, and took witnesses, and weighed him the money in the balances.

11 So I took the evidence of the purchase, both that which was sealed according to the law and custom, and that which was open:

12 And I gave the evidence of the purchase unto ¹Baruch the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, in the sight of Hanameel mine uncle's son, and in the presence of the ²witnesses that subscribed the book of the purchase, before all the Jews that sat in the court of the prison.

13 ¶ And I charged Baruch before them,
saying,

14 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Take these evidences, this evidence of the purchase, both which is sealed, A. M. 3415.

and this evidence which is open; and B. C. 589.
put them in an earthen vessel, that they may continue many days.

15 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Houses and fields and vineyards ¹shall be possessed again in this land.

16 ¶ Now when I had delivered the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son of Neriah, I prayed unto the LORD, saying,

17 Ah Lord God! behold, ^mthou hast made the heaven and the earth by thy great power and stretched-out arm, and ⁿthere is nothing ³too hard for thee:

18 Thou showest ^oloving-kindness unto thousands, and recompensest the iniquity of the fathers into the bosom of their children after them: the Great, ^pthe Mighty God, ^qthe LORD of hosts, is his name;

19 ^rGreat in counsel, and mighty in ⁴work:
for thine ^seyes are open upon all the ways of the sons of men; ^tto give every one according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings:

^a Gen. xxiii. 16; Zech. xi. 12.—¹ Or, seven shekels and ten pieces of silver.—² Heb. wrote in the book.—¹ Chap. xxxvi. 4.
⁴ Isa. viii. 2.—¹ Ver. 37, 43.—^m 2 Kings xix. 15.—ⁿ Gen. xviii. 14; Verse 27; Luke i. 37.

³ Or, hid from thee.—^o Exodus xx. 6; xxxiv. 7; Deut. v. 9.
10.—^p Isaiah ix. 6.—^q Chap. x. 16.—^r Isaiah xxviii. 29.
⁴ Heb. doing.—^s Job xxxiv. 21; Psa. xxxiii. 13; Prov. v. 21, Chap. xvi. 17.—^t Chap. xvii. 10.

firm belief that the Roman valour would raise the siege, lib. ii. cap. 6. And have not we much more reason to venture our all upon the word of God, and to embark in Zion's interests, which will undoubtedly be the prevailing interests at last?

Verse 9. I weighed him the money—In ancient times all money was paid by weight, a custom still used in several countries; even seventeen shekels of silver—A sum which, in our money, is not much above forty shillings; a small price for a field or piece of ground. It must be considered, however, “that the quantity of land is uncertain, and that the circumstances of the times must have greatly tended to lessen the value of land. The field in question was at the time of the purchase in the enemy's possession; and the purchaser well knew that he or his heirs had no chance of entering upon it till after the expiration of the seventy years' captivity.
Besides, the seller, it is likely, was in the immediate want of the money, and could get no one else to purchase in the precarious situation things were in. He might therefore be glad to take what the prophet, who, doubtless, was not rich, was able to give, and who would not have thought of making the purchase at any rate had he not acted under the divine direction for a special purpose.”—Blaney.

Verses 10–14. I subscribed the evidence, and sealed it—I wrote down an account of the transaction in a book. The method it appears then in use among the Jews when any purchase was made was, that the purchaser, as well as those who sold, testified his consent by some writing signed before witnesses.

I took the evidence, both that which was sealed and that which was open—The open, or unsealed writing, was either a copy of the sealed one, or else a certificate of the witnesses, in whose presence the deed of purchase was signed and sealed. I gave the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch—“Baruch was a scribe by profession, and it may be concluded that the attendance of such a one, skilled in the forms of law, was necessary on those occasions, both to draw up the writings and to officiate in the character of a notary public. And to his custody, as being a public officer, the custody of the title-deeds was intrusted.”
I charged Baruch, to put them in an earthen vessel—To preserve them from fire and moisture.
It was common with the ancients to put their writings into earthen vessels. Origen found at Jericho a version of the Scriptures hid in an earthen pot.
That they may continue many days—When hid under ground for greater security, to be produced when the land should be rehhabited.

Verses 16–22. When I had delivered the evidence, I prayed unto the Lord—What he prayed for we learn in the following verses: by which it appears that he was not without some doubts and perplexities in this business. And though he yielded a ready and absolute obedience to God's command,

A. M. 3415. 20 Which hast set signs and won-
B. C. 589. ders in the land of Egypt, even unto this day, and in Israel, and among other men; and hast made thee ^aa name, as at this day;

21 And ^xhast brought forth thy people Israel out of the land of Egypt with signs, and with wonders, and with a strong hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with great terror;

22 And hast given them this land, which thou didst swear to their fathers to give them, ^ya land flowing with milk and honey;

23 And they came in, and possessed it; but ^zthey obeyed not thy voice, neither walked in thy law; they have done nothing of all that thou commandedst them to do; therefore

^a Exod. ix. 16; 1 Chron. xvii. 21; Isa. lxiii. 12; Dan. ix. 15.
^x Exod. vi. 6; 2 Sam. vii. 23; 1 Chron. xvii. 21; Psa. cxxvi. 11, 12.—^y Exod. iii. 8, 17; Chap. xi. 5.

yet he prays for a clearer revelation of his meaning in the matter. Saying, Ah Lord God! &c.—He begins his prayer with an acknowledgment of God's infinite power, made manifest in his works, both of creation and providence, whereby he shows himself wonderful in his mercies, and terrible in his judgments. It is observable that God himself makes use of these instances to confirm his people's faith in his ability to do whatever he pleases, chap. xxvii. 5. And the servants of God are often represented in holy writ as giving God such names and titles, and ascribing to him such attributes, as were calculated to strengthen their faith in prayer. And there is nothing too hard for thee—Hebrew, לֹא יִפְּלֵא מִכָּךְ, too wonderful for thee, or, hidden from thee, as some render the clause: that is, out of the reach of thy wisdom and power to bring to pass. Thou shovest loving-kindness unto thousands, and recompensest, &c.—This name God gave himself, Exod. xxxiv. 7; Deut. v. 9, 10, where see the notes; and concerning the latter clause, the note on chap. xxxi. 29, 30. The great, the mighty God, the Lord of hosts—The God of infinite majesty, of boundless power, and of universal dominion, and therefore worthy of all adoration and praise, of all reverence and fear, of all subjection and obedience. Great in counsel, and mighty in work—Who art infinitely wise in ordering all events, and powerful in putting thy decrees in execution. Thine eyes are open upon all the ways, &c.—Beholding the evil and the good, and that not as an unconcerned spectator, but as an observing judge; to give every one according to his ways—To reward or punish men according to their actions, and the principles from which they proceed. Who hast set signs and wonders in the land of Egypt—Who didst wonders of justice in the land of Egypt, which remain, if not in the marks, yet in the memorials of them, unto this day. And in Israel—And wroughtest wonders of mercy in Israel, bringing them out of Egypt through the Red sea, raining thou hast caused all this evil to come upon them: A. M. 3415. B. C. 589.

24 Behold the ^bmounts, they are come unto the city to take it; and the city ^ais given into the hand of the Chaldeans, that fight against it, because of ^bthe sword, and of the famine, and of the pestilence: and what thou hast spoken is come to pass; and behold, thou seest it.

25 And thou hast said unto me, O Lord God, Buy thee the field for money, and take witnesses; ^cfor ^cthe city is given into the hand of the Chaldeans.

26 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

27 Behold, I am the LORD, the ^dGod of all

^a Neh. ix. 26; Chap. xi. 8; Dan. ix. 10-14.—^b Or, engines of shot, Chap. xxxiii. 4.—^c Verses 25, 36.—^d Chap. xiv. 12.
^e Or, through.—^c Verse 24.—^d Num. xvi. 22.

down manna upon them, and quails from heaven, and fetching water out of the rock for them; and among other men—And hast also done many wondrous works in other places, by which thou hast made thyself a glorious name.

Verses 23-25. And they came in and possessed it—In the former two verses he acknowledges God's goodness to Israel, here he owns his truth and faithfulness in bringing them into the land which he had promised them. But they obeyed not thy voice—Having borne testimony to God's power, wisdom, and faithfulness, he comes now to own his justice, confessing that this people for whom he had done so much, had very ill requited him. They have done nothing at all that thou commandedst them, &c.—They have not only broken some particular laws, but thy whole law. Therefore thou hast caused all this evil, &c.—Therefore thou art righteous in bringing these judgments upon them. Behold the mounts—The ramparts raised against the walls for placing battering engines on, and engines to cast weapons against the defenders, or for the purpose of making a general assault and taking the city. And the city is given—Is ready to be given; into the hand of the Chaldeans, because of the sword, &c.—Such is the havoc that the sword, the famine, and the pestilence make among the people, that they cannot make head against the besiegers, but must be overcome by them. And thou hast said unto me, Buy thee the field for money—In this posture of affairs, when the city, and the country round about it, are in the power of the enemy, thou hast commanded me to make this purchase, which I have no prospect of ever enjoying. As if he had said, Lord! expound thy meaning to me, why thou shouldst set me to make purchases for thine enemies to possess.

Verses 26-35. Then came the word of the Lord unto Jeremiah—To this difficulty of Jeremiah, between what was commanded him, and the prospect of its being, not only useless, but disadvantageous to

A. M. 3415. flesh : * is there any thing too hard
B. C. 589. for me ?

28 Therefore thus saith the LORD ; Behold, ^f I will give this city into the hand of the Chaldeans, and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and he shall take it :

29 And the Chaldeans, that fight against this city, shall come and ^g set fire on this city, and burn it with the houses, ^h upon whose roofs they have offered incense unto Baal, and poured out drink-offerings unto other gods, to provoke me to anger.

30 For the children of Israel and the children of Judah ⁱ have only done evil before me from their youth : for the children of Israel have only provoked me to anger with the work of their hands, saith the LORD.

31 For this city hath been to me as ^j a provocation of mine anger and of my fury from the day that they built it even unto ^k A. M. 3415. this day ; ^l that I should remove it ^m B. C. 589.

from before my face,

32 Because of all the evil of the children of Israel and of the children of Judah, which they have done to provoke me to anger, ⁿ they, their kings, their princes, their priests, and their prophets, and the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

33 And they have turned unto me the ^o back,^m and not the face : though I taught them, ^p rising up early and teaching ^q them, yet they have not hearkened to receive instruction.

34 But they ^r set their abominations in the house which is called by my name, to defile it.

35 And they built the high places of Baal, which ^s are in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to ^t cause their sons and their daughters to pass through ^u the fire unto ^v Molech ; ^w which I com-

* Verse 17.—^f Verse 3.—^g Chap. xxi. 10 ; xxxvii. 8, 10 ;
lii. 13.—^h Chap. xix. 13.—ⁱ Chap. ii. 7 ; iii. 25 ; vii. 22-26 ;
xxii. 21 ; Ezek. xx. 28.—^j Heb. for my anger.—^k 2 Kings xxiii. 27, xxiv. 3.

^l Isa. i. 4, 6 ; Dan. ix. 8.—^m Heb. neck.—ⁿ Chap. ii. 27 ;
vii. 24.—^o Chap. vii. 13.—^p Chap. vii. 30 ; xxiii. 11 ; Ezek.
viii. 5, 6.—^q Chapter vii. 31 ; xix. 5.—^r Leviticus xviii. 21 ; 1 Kings xi. 33.—^s Chap. vii. 31.

him, the Lord answered, Behold, I am the God of all flesh—Of all men : is anything too hard for me ?—The difficulties which thou thinkest are not to be surmounted are not difficulties to me, who can do all things, and have the lives and actions of men wholly at my disposal. Therefore, thus saith the Lord—The Lord now proceeds to confirm again the predictions so frequently given, concerning both the destruction and the restoration of Jerusalem ; and to explain more fully the reasons of his conduct toward the Jews and Israelites. The Chaldeans, that fight against this city shall burn it—Thou judgest right : this city shall be taken, and that by this very army of Chaldeans which now besieges it ; who shall destroy it by fire ; with the houses, upon whose roofs they have offered incense, &c.—As if he had said, In the execution of my vengeance I shall not act by absolute power, but as a just and righteous judge, vindicating the honour of my violated laws. For they have polluted their houses by idolatrous worship upon the roofs of them, openly and publicly, in contempt of my authority, and defiance of my justice. For the children of Israel and Judah have only done evil before me, &c.—If they had offended me only by some particular acts of sin, or by omitting their duty in only some few instances, or but for a short time, I might have been thought to act with severity toward them ; but from the time they first began to be a nation they have only provoked me to anger with the works of their hands—Passing from one course of sin, and from one species of idolatry, to another. For this city hath been a provocation of mine anger, &c.—The conduct of its inhabitants has been generally and long provoking : they began betimes, and have continued in the commission of the most daring wickedness from age to age. From the day that they built it—Or, that it was built, the verb personal being often used for the impersonal. Solomon completed the building of Jerusalem, having greatly enlarged and beautified it with the temple and other stately buildings, and he afterward greatly defiled it by idolatry, the sin here spoken of. See 1 Kings xi. 7, compared with 2 Kings xxiii. 13. And, except in David's time, the worship of God could hardly be said to be preserved pure through the entire reign of any one king. That I should remove it from before my face—As if they had pursued these idolatrous practices on purpose to provoke me to destroy the city, and to cast its inhabitants out of it. As nothing can be more easy than for people to keep close to the divine rule, as to external acts of worship, so nothing is more provoking to God than their not doing so. And yet nothing has been more rarely done in any nation ; as if men had set themselves to bid defiance to a jealous God. Because of all the evil of the children of Israel—Still God makes their destruction to be of themselves, provoking him to that wrath which he executed upon them. They, their kings, their princes, &c.—The whole head was sick, the whole heart faint. All orders of men were so corrupted that there was no hope of their reformation or amendment. They have turned unto me the back and not the face—They have behaved themselves contemptuously toward me, like men who, when they are admonished or instructed, instead of looking toward those who instruct or admonish them, turn their backs upon them : see note on chap. ii. 27. Though I taught them, rising up early, &c.—Their sin would not have been so great

A. M. 3415. manded them not, neither came it
B. C. 589. into my mind, that they should do this abomination, to cause Judah to sin.

36 ¶ And now therefore thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning this city, whereof ye say, ^aIt shall be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence;

37 Behold, I will. ^tgather them out of all countries, whither I have driven them in mine anger, and in my fury, and in great wrath;
and I will bring them again unto this place,
and I will cause them ^uto dwell safely.

38 And they shall be ^xmy people, and I will be their God:

39 And I will ^ygive them one heart and one

^a Verse 24.—^t Deuteron. xxx. 3; Chap. xxiii. 3; xxix. 14; xxxi. 10; Ezekiel xxvii. 21.—^u Chapter xxiii. 6; xxxiii. 16.
^x Chap. xxiv. 7; xxx. 22; xxxi. 33.—^y Chap. xxiv. 7; Ezek. xi. 19, 20.

and heinous if I, by my prophets, had not so continually instructed and reprov'd them; and they as stubbornly refused to hearken to the instruction, and to be amended by the reproofs. They set their abominations—Their idols, which, above all things, the jealous God abhors; in the house which is called by my name—That is, in the temple, which was ordinarily called the house of the Lord. This they did under some of the idolatrous kings. And they build the high places of Baal, &c.—See the notes on chap. xix. 5, 6, where all the clauses of this verse are explained.

Verses 36–39. Now therefore, &c.—In this and the following verses God returns an answer to the prophet's expostulation, verse 25. Or the words may be thus translated, But now, notwithstanding, [all this,] thus saith the Lord; concerning this city, whereof ye say, It shall be delivered into the hand, &c.—Many of the Jews now began to see that the Chaldeans would certainly take the city, and they became as much dispirited as before they were full of courage. By the sword and by the famine, &c.—The famine and pestilence, as well as the sword, seemed to fight for the king of Babylon, by the great havoc they made of the besieged, which rendered the taking of the city so much easier. Behold, I will gather them out of all countries, &c.—See notes on chap. xxiii. 3, 8, and xxix. 14. I will bring them again, &c., and cause them to dwell safely—Though the city shall be taken, and the people shall go into captivity, yet they shall not be utterly lost, for I will gather them again, and they shall dwell here in quietness and safety as formerly. It is justly observed, however, by St. Jerome, in his notes on the place, that this promise, taken in its full extent, was not made good to those that returned from captivity, because they were frequently infested with wars, as well by the kings of Syria and Egypt, as by the rest of their neighbours, as appears from the history of the Mac-way, that they may fear me ⁹for ever, A. M. 3415.

for the good of them, and of their ^{B. C. 589.} children after them:

40 And ^zI will make an everlasting covenant with them, that I will not turn away ¹⁰from them; to do them good; but ^aI will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me.

41 Yea, ^bI will rejoice over them to do them good, and ^cI will plant them in this land ¹¹assuredly with my whole heart and with my whole soul.

42 For thus saith the LORD; ^dLike as I have brought all this great evil upon this people, so will I bring upon them all the good that I have promised them.

⁹ Heb. all days.—^z Isaiah lv. 3; Chap. xxxi. 31.—¹⁰ Heb. from after them.—^a Chap. xxxi. 33.—^b Deut. xxx. 9; Zeph. iii. 17.—^c Chap. xxiv. 6; xxxi. 28; Amos ix. 15.—¹¹ Heb. in truth, or, stability.—^d Chap. xxxi. 28.

cabees; and were finally subdued and destroyed by the Romans. And they shall be my people, &c.—See note on chap. xxiv. 7, and xxx. 22. And I will give them one heart and one way—When the ten tribes set up a distinct kingdom from that of Judah, they stood divided, not only in their civil interests, but also in respect to their religious worship. These distinctions, God here says, he would entirely abolish, so that Israel and Judah should be united, and become one nation and one church, living under the same civil government, and using the same forms of divine worship, equally acknowledging and serving the one living and true God. That they may fear me for ever—That they may worship and obey me in truth, as a people that have a real reverence for and fear of offending me; for the good of them and of their children—Which will be for the great advantage and happiness of them and their posterity as long as they shall continue so to do. This promise, in its full sense, will not be accomplished till the general conversion of Judah and Israel to Christianity, and their restoration and reunion in the latter days. See notes on chap. iii. 18, and xxx. 3.

Verses 40–44. And I will make an everlasting covenant with them—The Jewish covenant, even with respect to the ceremonial ordinances contained in it, is sometimes called an everlasting covenant: see Gen. xvii. 13; Lev. xxiv. 8; Isa. xxiv. 5; because those ordinances were to continue for a long succession of ages; but when this expression is applied to the gospel covenant, there is a peculiar emphasis contained in it, implying that it should never be abolished, or give way to any other dispensation. That I will not turn away from them to do them good—This clause manifestly shows, that this promise relates to those Jews and Israelites that should embrace the gospel, and become Jews inwardly, and Israelites indeed; for, as to others, God did turn away from doing them good, when their city was

A. M. 3415. 43 And ^e fields shall be bought in
B. C. 589. this land, ^f whereof ye say, It is desolate without man or beast; it is given into the hand of the Chaldeans.

44 Men shall buy fields for money, and subscribe evidences, and seal them, and take wit-

^e Verse 15.—^f Chap. xxxiii. 10.

taken by Titus, and so many myriads of them perished by the sword, famine, and pestilence. But I will put my fear into their hearts—My Spirit shall beget in them a true reverence for, and genuine, loving fear of me, producing obedience to my laws, subjection to my authority, and perseverance in my ways, so that they shall not depart from me. Some justly infer from this declaration, that when once the body of the Jews shall be converted, they shall never again apostatize from God. Yea, I will rejoice over them to do them good—I will not only do them good, but will take pleasure therein. And I will plant them, &c., assuredly, with my whole heart—With a true and lasting affection. Like as I have brought all this great evil, &c.—They shall find me as true to my promises as to my threatenings. See chap.

nesses in ^e the land of Benjamin, and A. M. 3415.
in the places about Jerusalem, and in B. C. 589.
the cities of Judah, and in the cities of the mountains, and in the cities of the valley, and in the cities of the south: for ^h I will cause their captivity to return, saith the LORD.

^e Chap. xvii. 26.—^h Chap. xxxiii. 7, 11, 26.

xxx. 28. And fields shall be bought in this land, &c.—So that it was not without good reason that I sent Hanameel unto thee, verse 8. It was to assure thee that, though at present the Chaldeans shall prevail against Jerusalem, and the Jews shall be carried into captivity, and shall neither buy nor sell here, yet fields shall be bought here again. Men shall buy and sell, and seal evidences in all parts of this land, whereof you say, in despair, It is desolate without man or beast—Having no hope of the land being ever inhabited by your nation again. For I will cause their captivity to return, saith the Lord—The return of their captivity under Cyrus shall be an earnest of those greater blessings which I will bestow upon them at their general restoration.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

This chapter contains a prophecy, which, though applicable, in some parts, to the restoration of the Jews from Babylon, cannot, however, be so applied upon the whole, for reasons already touched upon in the notes on chap. xxx. and xxxi. (1.) God here reveals his gracious purpose of healing the wounds of Jerusalem, restoring the captivity both of Israel and Judah, forgiving their sins, and distinguishing them with such blessings as to strike the astonished nations with fear and trembling, 1-9. (2.) He foretels that the land, whose desolation they deplored, should again flourish with multitudes both of men and cattle, 10-13. (3.) He confirms his former promise of establishing a kingdom of righteousness in a branch of the house of David, and rendering it perpetual, together with the priesthood of the sons of Levi, 14-18. (4.) He declares his covenant, in this respect, with David and the Levites, to be as sure as the covenant of day and night, 19-22. And, (5.) To remove the reproach of having cast off those families whom he had once distinguished by his choice, he renews his protestations of infallibly restoring the seed of Jacob, and of appointing the seed of David to rule over them for ever, 23-26.

A. M. 3415. MOREOVER the word of the
B. C. 589. LORD came unto Jeremiah the second time, while he was yet ^a shut up in the court of the prison, saying,

^a Chap. xxxii. 2, 3.—^b Isa. xxxvii. 26.—^c Or, JEHOVAH.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXIII.

Verse 1. The word of the Lord came unto Jeremiah the second time—See note on chap. xxxii. 2. Jeremiah being forced out of the temple, God follows him to the prison, and there reveals his mind to him once and again. The wickedness of the Jews in persecuting the prophet could not make God's promises of no effect respecting mercy to be shown to the people after the captivity; which promises, though made before, are here confirmed a second time.

2 Thus saith the LORD the ^b maker A. M. 3415. thereof, the LORD that formed it, to B. C. 589.
establish it; ¹ The ^c LORD is his name:

3 ^d Call unto me, and I will answer thee, and ^e Exod. xv. 3; Amos v. 8; ix. 6.—^d Psa. xci. 15; Ch. xxix. 12.

Verse 2. Thus saith the Lord, the maker thereof—That is, as many interpreters understand it, of the city of Jerusalem, a figure of that church spoken of before: see chap. xxxii. 36, 44, compared with the 4th, 6th, and 9th verses of this chapter. Blaney, however, renders the clause, Thus saith Jehovah the doer of it, Jehovah the framer of it, who also disposeth it, considering the pronoun it as referring to the thing which God here says he is about to do.

Verse 3. Call unto me, and I will answer thee—An expression manifesting God's favour and loving

A. M. 3415. show thee great and ² mighty things,
B. C. 589. which thou knowest not.

4 For thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning the houses of this city, and concerning the houses of the kings of Judah, which are thrown down by ^o the mounts, and by the sword;

5 ^f They come to fight with the Chaldeans, but it is to fill them with the dead bodies of men, whom I have slain in mine anger and in my fury, and for all whose wickedness I have hid my face from this city.

6 Behold, ^g I will bring it health and cure, and I will cure them, and will reveal unto them the abundance of peace and truth.

^a Or, hidden, Isa. xlviii. 6.—^e Chap. xxxii. 24.—^f Chapter xxxii. 5.—^g Chapter xxx. 17.—^h Chapter xxx. 3; xxxii. 44; Verse 11.—ⁱ Isa. i. 26; Chap. xxiv. 6; xxx. 20; xxxi. 4, 28;

kindness; that he was ready to comply with the first intimations of his servant's desires. Compare chap. xxix. 12. God, by thus directing his discourse to Jeremiah, not only signified his kindness toward him, but likewise the affection he still bore to his people, for whom this prophet so earnestly interceded, and whose welfare he had so much at heart. And show thee great and mighty things—That is, give thee a clear and full prospect of them. Hebrew, גְּדוּלוֹת וְכִזְיוֹת, great and abstruse, or, hidden things, as some render the words; which thou knowest not—And canst not know without further revelation, meaning, probably, not only what related to the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity, but likewise the blessings to be conferred upon them in the times of the Messiah.

Verses 4, 5. Thus saith the Lord concerning the houses of this city—Not excepting those of the kings of Judah, thrown down by the mounts—Namely, by the battering engines placed upon the mounts, which were raised against the walls of the city; and by the sword—By the violence of war. The Hebrew word generally rendered sword may mean any instrument of iron, and particularly such as were used in demolishing any building. It is rendered a mattock by our translators, 2 Chron. xxiv. 6, and axes, Ezek. xxvi. 9. They come to fight with the Chaldeans—Most interpreters understand this as spoken of the Jews sallying forth against the Chaldeans, to beat them off from the siege, which they attempted to do in vain, and to their own destruction, only thus filling the houses of Jerusalem with the dead bodies of their men, who died of the wounds received from the Chaldeans in making those sallies. And the verse is thought to come in by way of parenthesis, between the fourth and sixth, to show that at present God would not prosper any efforts that were made for the defence of the city, though he would restore it hereafter to its former splendour.

Verses 6–8. Behold, I will bring it health and cure—The latter part of this verse expounds the

7 And ^h I will cause the captivity A. M. 3415 of Judah and the captivity of Israel B. C. 589 to return, and will build them, ⁱ as at the first.

8 And I will ^k cleanse them from all their iniquity, whereby they have sinned against me; and I will ^l pardon all their iniquities, whereby they have sinned, and whereby they have transgressed against me.

9 ^m And it shall be to me a name of joy, a praise, and an honour, before all the nations of the earth, which shall hear all the good that I do unto them: and they shall ⁿ fear and tremble for all the goodness and for all the prosperity that I procure unto it.

xlii. 10.—^k Ezek. xxxvi. 25; Zech. xiii. 1; Heb. ix. 13, 14. ^l Chap. xxxi. 34; Mic. vii. 18.—^m Isa. lxii. 7; Chap. xlii. 11. ⁿ Isaiah lx. 5.

former, for, by health and cure, the prophet means peace and truth, or, stability. Blaney renders it, I will make it, namely, the city or state perfectly sound and whole. The disturbed and calamitous state of the nation being compared to wounds and sickness, (see chap. viii. 21, 22, and xxx. 17,) the restoring of it to a peaceful and prosperous state is fitly called its health and cure. And will build them as at the first—When they, by repentance, do their first works, God will, by their restoration, manifest toward them his ancient mercies and loving-kindnesses. He will not only cause their captivity to return, as is expressed, in plain words, in the former clause, but will re-establish them in the possession of their civil and religious privileges, and hereby promote both their virtue and happiness. And I will cleanse them from all their iniquity—I will make them pious and holy, as well as virtuous and happy; and I will pardon all their iniquities—Will not impute their past sins any longer to them as I have done, but will remit the further punishments to which for sin they were liable.

Verse 9. And it shall be to me a praise and an honour—Jerusalem thus rebuilt, and Judah thus re-established, shall be to my glory before all the nations. In other words, it is foretold here that God's especial providence over the Jews, in restoring their city and temple, and re-establishing them in their own land, should be taken notice of by the heathen world, and should cause them to give glory to that God whom the Jews worshipped: see Ezra i. 2, and vi. 12. Or, as the words may imply, This renewed nation shall be as much a reputation to religion as formerly they were a reproach to it. This promise, however, has been much more signally fulfilled in the Christian Church, to which the heathen resorted, as to the seat and temple of truth, than it has yet been in the Jewish. And they shall fear and tremble for the goodness that I do unto it—These surprising effects of my goodness shall produce an astonishment like that which arises from fear. Or,

A. M. 3415. 10 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; Again
B. C. 589. there shall be heard in this place, ° which ye say shall be desolate without man and without beast, even in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, that are desolate,
without man, and without inhabitant, and without beast,

11 The.^p voice of joy, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride, the voice of them that shall say, ^a Praise the LORD of hosts:
for the LORD is good; for his mercy endureth for ever: and of them that shall bring ^t the sacrifices of praise into the house of the LORD.
For ^a I will cause to return the captivity of the land, as at the first, saith the LORD.

12 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts; ^t Again in this place, which is desolate without man and without beast, and in all the cities thereof, shall be a habitation of shepherds causing their flocks to lie down.

13 ^u In the cities of the mountains, in the cities of the vale, and in the cities of the south, and in the land of Benjamin, and in the places about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, shall the flocks ^x pass again under the hands of him that telleth them, saith the LORD.

14 ^y Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that ^z I will perform that good thing which I have promised unto the house of Israel and to the house of Judah.

15 ¶ In those days, and at that time, will I cause the ^a Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land.

16 ^b In those days shall Judah be saved, and

^o Chap. xxxii. 43.—^p Chap. vii. 34; xvi. 9; xxv. 10; Rev. xviii. 23.—^q 1 Chron. xvi. 8, 34; 2 Chron. v. 13; vii. 3; Ezra iii. 11; Psa. cxxxvi. 1; Isa. xii. 4.—^r Lev. vii. 12; Psa. cvii. 22; cxvi. 17.

^a Verse 7.—^t Isa. lxx. 10; Chap. xxxi. 24; 1. 19.—^u Chap. xvii. 26; xxxii. 44.—^x Levit. xxvii. 32.—^y Chapter xxiii. 5; xxxi. 27, 31.—^z Chap. xxix. 10.—^a Isa. iv. 2; xi. 1; Chap. xxiii. 5.—^b Chap. xxiii. 6.

the meaning is, They shall fear to engage against a nation so beloved and favoured by me, Exod. xv. 14-16.

Verses 10, 11. Again there shall be heard in this place which ye say shall be desolate—See note on chap. xxxii. 43; the voice of joy and the voice of gladness—The contrary to what takes place in the times of captivity and desolation. The voice of them that shall say, Praise ye the Lord, for the Lord is good, &c.—We read, (Ezra iii. 11,) that those who returned from captivity used this very hymn. And of them that shall bring the sacrifice of praise into the house of the Lord—Such as was wont to be offered upon any great deliverance. See Lev. vii. 12; Psa. cvii. 22, and cxvi. 17. The Hebrew מְבַאֵם, תוֹרָה, is literally, of them that bring praise, or, thanksgiving, there being nothing for the word sacrifice. This, however, is called by St. Paul, the sacrifice of praise, even the fruit of our lips, (Heb. xiii. 15,) to distinguish it from the oblations commanded by the law, which consisted of the fruits of the ground, or of the flock and herd. The sum of this verse is, that those who were carried into captivity should return, and, upon their return, should be in their former state as to civil transactions, marrying and giving in marriage; and, as to religion, should publicly praise the Lord with holy and spiritual joy, as they had been wont to do in the best and most prosperous times of their commonwealth, which was fulfilled, as we see, Neh. xii. 27-40.

Verses 12, 13. Again in this place shall be a habitation for shepherds, &c.—See chap. i. 19; Isa. lxx. 10. In those places which were desolate, without man and beast, there should be flocks and herds of sheep and goats, which the shepherds should take care of as in former times. And in the cities of Ju- dah shall the flocks pass again under the hands of him that telleth them—Namely, so as to keep account of them, as they were wont to do, both morning and evening in those countries. Virgil alludes to the same custom, when he says, Ecl. iii., Bisque die numerant ambo pecus, alter et hædos; Twice each day they count my goats and sheep. See Lev. xxvii. 32, where חֲשַׁבַת חֶשֶׁבֶת, passing under the rod, means their being numbered, the shepherds striking every sheep with his rod, or crook, as it passed out of the fold, and so counting them; and the expression here made use of, עַל יַד מוֹנֶה, under the hand of him that numbers them, seems to signify the same thing.

Verses 14-16. Behold, the days come that I will perform that good thing, &c.—The Lord's word is not yea and nay: he cannot lie, or repent. There shall come a time when he will verify every good word which he hath spoken to, or concerning, his people. In those days will I cause the Branch of righteousness to grow up to David—The kings they had hitherto had of the line of David were most of them unrighteous men; but God here promises that after the captivity they should have a branch of David that would execute judgment and righteousness in the land, for the protection and government of those that feared him. If this passage point at all to Zerubbabel, who was a good man, a descendant of David, and, though not a king, a ruler of the Jews, after their return from Babylon, and who governed with equity and not as Jehoiakim had done; yet it can only refer to him as a type of the Messiah, the branch out of the stem of Jesse, Isa. xi. 1; the branch of the Lord that was to be beautiful and glorious, Isa. iv. 2; and the righteous branch that was to be raised up unto David, as he is described chap. xxiii

A. M. 3415. Jerusalem shall dwell safely; and
B. C. 589. this is the name wherewith she shall be called, ³The LORD our Righteousness.

17 ¶ For thus saith the LORD; ⁴David shall never ^cwant a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel;

18 Neither shall the priests the Levites want a man before me to ^doffer burnt-offerings, and to kindle meat-offerings, and to do sacrifice continually.

³ Heb. Jehovah-tsidkenu.—⁴ Heb. There shall not be cut off from David.—² Samuel vii. 16; 1 Kings ii. 4; Psa. lxxxix.
29, 36; Luke i. 32, 33.

5, a passage exactly similar to this, and undoubtedly meant of the same person. 'See the notes on these passages. In those days shall Judah be saved, &c.—
If a temporal salvation be here at all intended, it must be, not that which the Jews enjoyed for a short season under the government of Zerubbabel, a deliverance and protection from, or security against their enemies, which was very imperfect, and frequently interrupted; but that more perfect salvation, peace, and prosperity, which they shall enjoy in the latter days, after their conversion to Christianity, and restoration to their own land, according to the predictions contained in this and the three preceding chapters. But a spiritual and eternal salvation undoubtedly is chiefly intended here, as well as in the parallel passage, chap. xxiii. 6. And this is the name wherewith ye shall be called, The Lord our righteousness—According to this reading it is here foretold, that the name which properly belongs to the Messiah shall be given to Jerusalem, that is, to the church; "to signify," says Lowth, "that it is in a peculiar manner dedicated to him, he having chosen it for the place of his residence, (see Ezek. xlviii. 35,) and that all the righteousness of the faithful, both their justification and sanctification, is derived from him. This seems," adds he, "to be the genuine sense of the words, as may appear to any that will compare the original phrase here, יקרא לה, with Isa. lxii. 4, 12, where it is said of Zion, Thou shalt be called Hephzibah, or, my delight is in her, and sought out, a city not forsaken. Nor is there any greater impropriety in giving the name Jehovah to a city, than in calling an altar Jehovah-nissi, that is, Jehovah my banner, (Exod. xvii. 15,) and Je- hovah-shalom, Jehovah peace, (Judg. vi. 24,) in token that the Lord was the author of those mercies of which the said altars were designed to be monuments. So the servants of God are described as having his name written upon their foreheads, Rev.
iii. 12; xiv. 1; but several interpreters, particularly Huetius, and our learned Bishop Pearson, (in his Exposition of the Creed, p. 165,) render the words thus: He that shall call her [to be his peculiar people] is the Lord our righteousness." Thus also Dr.
Waterland and others. But Blaney, who renders the last clause of chap. xxiii. 6, This is the name by which Jehovah shall call him, OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS,

19 ¶ And the word of the LORD A. M. 3415. came unto Jeremiah, saying, B. C. 589.

20 Thus saith the LORD; ^eIf ye can break my covenant of the day, and my covenant of the night, and that there should not be day and night in their season;

21 Then may also ^fmy covenant be broken with David, my servant, that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne; and with the Levites the priests, my ministers.

^d Romans. xii. 1; xv. 16; 1 Peter ii. 5, 9; Revelation i. 6.
^e Psalm lxxxix. 37; Isaiah liv. 9; Chapter xxxi. 36; Verse 25.
^f Psalm lxxxix. 34.

translates this, And this is he whom Jehovah shall
call OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS, judging that the ה in לה, rendered her, is not the feminine pronoun affix, but the masculine, after the Chaldee form.

Verses 17, 18. For thus saith the Lord, David shall never want a man, &c.—It is very evident that the prophecies in these verses were not fulfilled in the Jews after the Babylonish captivity; for, from that time to the coming of Christ, David was without a successor of his family sitting upon the throne of Judah or Israel. Nor have they been fulfilled in them since, for, from the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans to the present time, they have neither had a king nor a regular priesthood belonging to their nation. There can therefore be no doubt that Jeremiah here foretels the kingdom of the Messiah, and the priesthood, or ministry rather, to be established by him, by which a pure and spiritual oblation should be offered in every place where a church should be formed for him, (see Mal. i. 11,) and not at Jerusalem and in Judea only. "As the Jewish priesthood, in the family of Aaron, is extinct, and hath been exercised neither in Jerusalem nor in any other place for seventeen centuries, it follows," says Calmet, "that these promises can respect only the eternal priesthood of Jesus Christ, exercised by himself, and by his ministers, in the Christian Church from the beginning, and which shall continue to the end of time." Nor is it unusual for God in the Old Testament to express promises relating to, and to be fulfilled under, the gospel, by terms proper to the Old Testament. See Isa. xix. 19; lvi. 7; lxvi. 23. And as the prophets often describe the Christian worship by representations taken from the temple service, so the apostles prove the rights and privileges belonging to the ministers of the gospel from the prerogatives given to the Jewish priesthood. See Rom. xv. 16; 1 Cor.
ix. 13, 14.

Verses 20, 21. If you can break my covenant of the day and of the night—Called the ordinances of the day and night, chap. xxxi. 35, 36. Then may also my covenant be broken with David and with the Levites—A promise this, that the kingdom of Christ and a Christian ministry shall continue in the church to the end of time. And as his kingdom shall have no end, (Luke i. 32, 33,) the words may

A. M. 3415. 22 As ^a the host of heaven cannot
B. C. 589. be numbered, neither the sand of the sea measured: so will I multiply the seed of David, my servant, and the Levites that minister unto me.

23 ¶ Moreover the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah, saying,

24 Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, ^b The two families which the LORD hath chosen, he hath even cast them off? thus they have despised my people, that

^a Gen. xiii. 16; xv. 5; xxii. 17; Chap. xxxi. 37.—^b Verses 21, 22.—^c Verse 20; Gen. viii. 22.

also be construed as extending to the eternal state, in which, as Christ shall reign in glory for ever, so his saints shall be priests unto God, and reign for ever with him.

Verse 22. As the host of heaven cannot be numbered, &c.—The former promise respected the stability, this the enlargement of the church, the members of which are here termed the seed of David, as they are elsewhere often called the seed of Abraham, being the imitators of the faith of Abraham and David. Or they may be termed the seed of David, because they are the seed of Christ, who is sometimes called David in the writings of the prophets; (see chap. xxx. 9,) and whose seed and whose Levites are multiplied in the multiplying of Christians and of faithful ministers under the gospel, which are the blessings here promised.

Verses 24–26. The two families which the Lord hath chosen—“It is plain from verse 26,” says Blaney, “that the two families here meant are those of Jacob and David, though some have supposed the two kingdoms of Israel and Judah, others the royal and sacerdotal families of David and Levi, to be intended.” He hath even cast them off—The words are spoken by those unbelieving Jews who thought God would never restore them to their former condition, nor give them again a king of the seed of David, thus indirectly accusing him of a breach of they should be no more a nation before them. A. M. 3415.

B. C. 589.

25 Thus saith the LORD; If ⁱ my covenant be not with day and night, and if I have not ^k appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth;

26 ^l Then will I cast away the seed of Jacob, and David my servant, so that I will not take any of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: for ^m I will cause their captivity to return, and have mercy on them.

^k Psalm lxxiv. 16, 17; civ. 19; Chap. xxxi. 35, 36.—^l Chap. xxxi. 37.—^m Verses 7, 11; Ezra ii. 1.

promise. Thus they have despised my people, &c.—Thus, saith God, they have spoken in a reproachful and degrading manner of my people, as if they should never be a nation again, having rulers of themselves and a ministry. If my covenant be not with day and night, &c.—If I have not appointed the vicissitudes of day and night, and of summer and winter, upon which the seasons of the year and the fruitfulness of the earth depend; then will I cast away the seed of Jacob—Then will I finally, and for ever, abandon the body of the Jews and Israelites; and David my servant—Namely, the seed of David, all persons lineally descended from him, so that none of them shall ever hereafter reign over Israel and Judah. The sum of these verses is plainly this, that a restoration of them to their own land should as certainly succeed their captivity as the day succeeds the night, or summer follows winter. God had as certainly ordained the one as the other, and would as certainly have mercy on his people as he would certainly continue the revolutions of the heavenly bodies. And in showing this mercy he would take care that one of the seed of David should be their ruler: which has been, and still more fully shall be, fulfilled in the Messiah, who shall always as certainly govern his church, whether consisting of converted Jews or Gentiles, as there will always be a church on earth to be governed.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

In this chapter we have two distinct prophecies. The first, dated at the time when Nebuchadnezzar was engaged in carrying on the siege of Jerusalem, and of Lachish, and Azekah, announces to Zedekiah the taking and burning of Jerusalem, and his own captivity, peaceful death, and honourable interment, 1–7. The second prophecy, delivered after the Chaldeans had broken off the siege and were gone to meet the Egyptian army, coming to the relief of Jerusalem, reproaches the people of Judah for their perfidious and inhuman behaviour to their brethren, whom they had released from bondage according to the law; but on thinking all danger from the enemy over, had compelled to resume their former servitude. For this God threatens to let loose upon them at once the sword, the pestilence, and the famine; and to deliver them up to the vexations of the Chaldeans, their cruel enemies, who should return, take, and burn their city, and reduce their country to a solitary waste, 8–22.

A. M. 3415.
B. C. 589.

THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD; ^a when Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and all his army, and ^b all the kingdoms of the earth ¹ of his dominion, and all the people fought against Jerusalem, and against all the cities thereof, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel; Go and speak to Zedekiah king of Judah, and tell him, Thus saith the LORD; Behold, ^c I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and ^d he shall burn it with fire:

3 And ^e thou shalt not escape out of his hand, but shalt surely be taken, and delivered into his hand; and thine eyes shall behold the eyes of the king of Babylon, and ² he shall speak with thee mouth to mouth, and thou shalt go to Babylon.

^a 2 Kings xxv. 1, &c.; Chap. xxxix. 1; lli. 4.—^b Chap. i. 15.
^c Heb. the dominion of his hand.—^d Chap. xxi. 10; xxxii. 3, 29.
^e Chap. xxxii. 29; Verse 22.—^f Chap. xxxii. 4.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXIV.

Verse 1. The word which came unto Jeremiah from the Lord, when Nebuchadnezzar, &c., fought against Jerusalem—The siege was begun in the ninth year of Zedekiah, the tenth month and tenth day of the month, which answers to the latter end of our December. See chap. lli. 4. Blaney thinks the prophet received this revelation a month or two after the siege was begun, or toward the latter end of Zedekiah's ninth year; namely, during the interval between the raising the siege of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar and his return to that city, after having repulsed the king of Egypt, who was coming to the succour of Zedekiah, chap. xxxvii. 5. Jeremiah, it appears, was not at this time in prison: see verses 4, 14, 15, of that chapter. And against all the cities thereof—The lesser cities of Judea, which were subject to Jerusalem, as their metropolis, called elsewhere the daughters of Judah by way of distinction from the mother city.

Verses 2-5. Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and thou shalt not escape, &c.—This prophecy, which threatened the king in particular, as well as the city and nation in general, so much displeased Zedekiah that he shut up Jeremiah in prison. See notes on chap. xxxii. 2-5, where the same things are related that occur here. But thou shalt die in peace—Namely, by a natural death. The king of Babylon took him, killed his sons before his eyes, then put out his eyes, and bound him with chains, (chap. xxxix. 7,) but did not put him to death, as we here learn. With the burning of thy fathers, &c., so shall they burn odours for thee—It was customary among the Jews, at the funerals of their kings, especially of those whose memories they honoured, to prepare a bed of spices, of which they made a perfume by burning them, and

A. M. 3415.
B. C. 589.

4 Yet hear the word of the LORD, O Zedekiah king of Judah; Thus saith the LORD of thee, Thou shalt not die by the sword:

5 But thou shalt die in peace: and with ^f the burnings of thy fathers, the former kings which were before thee, ^g so shall they burn odours for thee; and ^h they will lament thee, saying, Ah lord! for I have pronounced the word, saith the LORD.

6 Then Jeremiah the prophet spake all these words unto Zedekiah king of Judah in Jerusalem, 7 When the king of Babylon's army fought against Jerusalem, and against all the cities of Judah that were left, against Lachish, and against Azekah: for ⁱ these defenced cities remained of the cities of Judah.

^a Heb. his mouth shall speak to thy mouth.—^b 2 Chron. xvi. 14; xxi. 19.—^c Dan. ii. 46.—^d Chap. xxii. 18.—^e 2 Kings xviii. 13; xix. 8; 2 Chron. xi. 5, 9.

therein to deposit the body of the deceased prince: see 2 Chron. xvi. 14, and xxi. 19. And they will lament thee, saying, Ah lord!—In these, and the foregoing words, God promises Zedekiah an honourable interment, and suitable to his quality; a favour he did not vouchsafe to Jehoikim, chap. xxii. 18.

Verse 7. When the king of Babylon fought against Lachish and against Azekah—See 2 Kings xviii. 13; xix. 8. These two cities were not far from Jerusalem, and had been fortified by Rehoboam, for the defence of his kingdom, 2 Chron. xi. 9. After that Zedekiah had made a covenant with the people to proclaim liberty, &c.—By the law of Moses, (Exod. xxi. 2; Deut. xv. 12,) the Israelites were not allowed to detain their brethren of the Hebrew race in perpetual bondage, but were required to let them go free after having served six years. This law had, it seems, fallen into disuse; but King Zedekiah, upon the approach of the Chaldean army, whether from religious motives, or a political view to employ the men who were set free in the service of the war, engaged the people in a covenant to act conformably to the law; and they released their brethren accordingly. But no sooner were their fears abated, by the retreat of the Chaldeans, than, in defiance of every principle of religion, honour, and humanity, they imposed the yoke of servitude anew upon those unhappy persons. Archbishop Usher computes the ninth year of Zedekiah's reign to have been the sabbatical year, and supposes that, on this account, the covenant of general release was entered into at the beginning of that year. But the sabbatical year, which was every seventh year from that in which the Israelites entered into the possession of the land of Canaan, had nothing at all to do with the release of servants. In the year of sabbath they were only restrained from sowing their ground, and pruning

A. M. 3415. 8 ¶ This is the word that came
 B. C. 599. unto Jeremiah from the LORD, after that the King Zedekiah had made a covenant with all the people which were at Jerusalem, to proclaim ^k liberty unto them ;

9 ¹ That every man should let his man-servant, and every man his maid-servant, being a Hebrew or a Hebrewess, go free ; ^m that none should serve himself of them, to wit, of a Jew his brother.

10 Now when all the princes, and all the people which had entered into the covenant, heard that every one should let his man-servant, and every one his maid-servant, go free, that none should serve themselves of them any more, then they obeyed, and let them go.

11 But ⁿ afterward they turned, and caused the servants and the handmaids, whom they

A. M. 3415.
 B. C. 599. had let go free, to return, and brought them into subjection for servants and for handmaids.

12 ¶ Therefore the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

13 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel ;
 I made a covenant with your fathers in the day
 that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bond-men, saying,

14 At the end of ^o seven years, let ye go every man his brother a Hebrew, which ³ hath been sold unto thee ; and when he hath served thee six years, thou shalt let him go free from thee ;
 but your fathers hearkened not unto me, neither inclined their ear.

15 And ye were ⁴ now turned, and had done right in my sight, in proclaiming liberty every man to his neighbour ; and ye had ^p made a

* Exodus xxi. 2 ; Leviticus xxv. 10 ; Verse 14.—¹ Neh. v. 11.
^m Lev. xxv. 39-46.—ⁿ Verse 21 ; Chap. xxxvii. 5.

^o Exod. xxi. 2 ; xxiii. 10 ; Deut. xv. 12.—³ Or, hath sold him- self.—⁴ Heb. to-day.—^p 2 Kings xxiii. 3 ; Neh. x. 29.

their vineyards. But every seventh year, from the beginning of their service, the Hebrew bond-slaves were to be discharged. Six years were they to serve, and in the seventh they were to go out free.
 Only the fiftieth year, or year of jubilee, was also to be a time of general release, Lev. xxv. 39-41. But, that the sabbatical year was so, I see not the least reason to conclude, but quite the contrary.—Blaney.

Verses 10, 11. Now when all the princes, &c., heard—This verse is better translated by Blaney and others thus, And all the princes hearkened, or, con- sented, and all the people who entered into covenant to let every one his bondman, and every one his bond-woman go free, and not to exact service of them any more, they hearkened, I say, and let them go. That is, they conformed to the obligations of the covenant, which they had entered into at the instigation of their prince. But afterward they turned, and brought them into subjection, &c.—Namely, upon the advance of the Egyptian army, which caused Nebuchadnezzar to raise the siege of Jerusalem.
 When they thought themselves safe from their enemies, as if they had also got out of God's hand, they repented of their repentance, and returned to their old oppressions. Now this was not only a contempt of the divine law, as if it were of no force at all, but they might either keep it or break it as they thought fit ; but it was a contempt of the covenant which they had, in a very solemn manner, (see verses 18-20,) made with him, and of that wrath which they had imprecated upon themselves in case they should break that covenant. It was jesting with God Almighty, as if he could be imposed on by fallacious promises, which, when they had gained their point, they would think themselves no longer obliged by.
It was lying to God with their mouths, and flattering him with their tongues. It was likewise a contempt of the judgments of God, and setting them at defiance ; as if when once the course of them was stopped a little, and interrupted, they would never proceed again, nor be revived : whereas, reprieves are so far from being pardons, that if they be abused thus, and sinners take encouragement from them to return to sin, they are but preparatives for heavier strokes of divine vengeance.

Verses 13, 14. I made a covenant with your fa- thers, saying, At the end of seven years—This is the literal translation of בְּסוֹף שְׁנָה שְׁנָה ; but the import of the phrase is, in the course of the seventh year ; or, within the term of seven years, as Dr.
 Waterland renders it. “The seventh year was the year of release, (Deut. xv. 9,) consequently servants were to continue in service but six years, and at the beginning of the seventh were to be let go free ; ibid.
verse 12. And the words mean no more, as appears by a like form of speech, Deut. xiv. 28, where it is said, At the end of three years thou shalt bring forth all the tithe of thy increase that year : which is to be explained by chap. xxvi. 12, where every third year is called the year of tithing. So Christ is said to rise again after three days, Mark viii. 31, which is elsewhere explained by his rising the third day.
But your fathers hearkened not unto me—Their worldly profit swaying more with them than God's command. It appears from hence, that the law, requiring them to let their servants go free after six years' service, had been violated by the Jews for ages before the captivity, as the law respecting the sabbatical year had also been. The consequence was, that the servants had, by long disuse, lost the benefit of the gracious provision which God, in his law, had made for them, for this trespass of them and their fathers God now justly delivered them into servitude to strangers.

Verses 15-17. And ye were now turned—That is, reformed in this particular ; and had done right in my

A. M. 3415. covenant before me ^a in the house
B. C. 589.

^a which is called by my name :

16 But ye turned and ^r polluted my name, and caused every man his servant, and every man his handmaid, whom he had set at liberty at their pleasure, to return, and brought them into subjection, to be unto you for servants and for handmaids.

17 Therefore thus saith the LORD ; Ye have not hearkened unto me, in proclaiming liberty, every one to his brother, and every man to his neighbour : ^s behold, I proclaim a liberty for you, saith the LORD, ^t to the sword, to the pestilence, and to the famine ; and I will make you

^a Chapter vii. 10.—^s Hebrew, whereupon my name is called.
^r Exodus xx. 7 ; Leviticus xix. 12.—^t Matt. vii. 2 ; Gal. vi. 7 ; James ii. 13.

sight—In proclaiming liberty to your servants. And ye had made a covenant before me—Had entered into solemn engagements in my presence and temple to that purpose. This was probably such a covenant as Josiah and all the people had made formerly, (2 Kings xxiii. 2, 3,) whereby they obliged themselves to serve God, and obey his laws in general, and this concerning giving freedom to their servants in particular. But ye turned—Declined from these good beginnings ; and polluted my name—That is, profaned it, in swearing, or solemnly promising in and by it, to do that which you have not done. Certainly, whoever uses the name of God, by way of sanction to his promises, that the greater confidence may be placed in them, and afterward does not perform them, profanes or pollutes the name of God. Therefore, behold I proclaim liberty for you to the sword, &c.—I now declare that I give free commission and liberty to my sore judgments, the sword, the famine, and the pestilence, to invade and destroy multitudes of you. See chap. xxxii. 24, 36. The expressions here used import, that these calamities come upon men by direction and commission from God, as the executioners of his justice. And to be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth—Those of you who escape destruction shall be dispersed through different nations, where you shall learn by experience how great are the hardships and miseries attendant on a state of servitude. See note on chap. xxiv. 9.

Verse 18. When they cut the calf in twain, and passed between the parts—In order to ratify the covenant, they killed a calf, or young bullock, which they cut in two, and placing the two parts at some distance from each other, they passed between them ; signifying by this rite that they consented to be served in the like manner, in case they violated their part of the covenant. We learn from the Holy Scriptures, and from heathen authors, that the same or similar ceremonies were in use in making and ratifying covenants and treaties in ancient times. In this way Abraham's covenant with God was con-

⁶ to be ^u removed into all the king- A. M. 3415.
doms of the earth. B. C. 589.

18 And I will give the men that have transgressed my covenant, which have not performed the words of the covenant which they had made before me, when ^x they cut the calf in twain, and passed between the parts thereof,

19 The princes of Judah, and the princes of Jerusalem, the eunuchs, and the priests, and all the people of the land, which passed between the parts of the calf ;

20 I will even give them into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of them that seek their life : and their ^y dead bodies

^t Chapter xxxii. 24, 36.—⁶ Heb. for a removing.—^u Deut. xxviii. 25, 64 ; Chap. xxix. 18.—^x Gen. xv. 10, 17.—^y Chap. vii. 33 ; xvi. 4 ; xix. 7.

firmed, Gen. xv. 10. And, according to Livy, lib. i. cap. 24 ; and lib. xxi. cap. 45, rites of a similar kind were in use among the old Romans ; as we find from Homer they were also among the Greeks. Thus he tells us, when they had entered into a solemn agreement with the Trojans to put an end to the war, by the single combat of Paris and Menelaus, at the pouring out of their wine upon their sacrifice, they made the following imprecation upon those who should not observe their part of the treaty, Iliad, iii. 1, 298.

Οπισθεροι προτεροι υπερ ορκια πημηνειαν,
Ωδε σφ' εγκεφαλος χαμαδις ρεοι, ως οδε οινος.

“So may their blood who first the league confound, Shed, like this wine, distain the thirsty ground.”

POPE.

Verses 19-22. The princes of Judah, &c., (see chap. xxix. 2,) the eunuchs—The officers belonging to the court ; the priests and all the people which passed between the parts of the calf—Assenting to the solemn and awful imprecation, Let us in like manner be cut in pieces if we do not perform what we now promise. I will even give them into the hand of their enemies, &c.—God does not here threaten all the Jews, but those only who had first made, and then broken, this solemn covenant, and thereby falsified their engagements, and dealt treacherously with him. The king and nobles, and great courtiers, as well as the people, he would give into the hand of their enemies, who sought, not their wealth only, or their service, but their lives : and who should obtain what they sought ; and, not content therewith, should leave their dead bodies lying unburied upon the face of the earth, a loathsome spectacle to all mankind, and an easy prey to the fowls of the heaven and the beasts of the earth. Thus doth the Lord execute justice, without respect of persons, on all that do wickedly, and who will neither be won by his mercies, nor be brought to obey him by a dread of his wrath. Behold, I will command, and cause them to return to this city—Name-

A. M. 3415. shall be for meat unto the fowls of
B. C. 589. the heaven, and to the beasts of the earth.

21 And Zedekiah king of Judah and his princes will I give into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of them that seek their life, and into the hand of the

^a Chapter xxxvii. 5, 11.—^a Chap. xxxvii. 8, 10.—^b Chapter

ly, the king of Babylon's army, which had departed for a season, having gone to meet the army of the king of Egypt. I will put it into their hearts to return, saith the Lord, to the siege, and they shall leave it no more till they have taken the city, and burned it with fire, and made the whole country desolate. The motions of armies are under the government of Divine Providence, they are all at God's command; when he bids them come they come, and they shall certainly effect what he hath determined to be done. When we come to chapter xxxix. we shall read of the fulfilment of this prophecy. Observe here, reader, 1st, As an humble confidence in God is a hopeful presage of approaching deliverance, so security in king of Babylon's army, ² which are A. M. 3415.

gone up from you. B. C. 589.

22 ^a Behold, I will command, saith the LORD, and cause them to return to this city; and they shall fight against it, ^b and take it, and burn it with fire: and ^c I will make the cities of Judah a desolation without an inhabitant.

xxxviii. 3; xxxix. 1, 2, 8; lii. 7, 13.—^c Chap. ix. 11; xlii. 2, 6.

sin is a sad omen of approaching destruction. 2d, When judgments are removed from a people before they have done their work, and leave them unhumiliated and unreformed, they do but retreat to come on again with so much the greater force; for when God judges he will overcome. 3d, It is just with God to disappoint those expectations of mercy which his providence had excited, when we disappoint those expectations of duty which our professions, pretensions, and fair promises had given cause for. If we repent of the good we had promised, God will repent of the good he had purposed. The froward are an abomination to the Lord. With the froward he will show himself froward.

CHAPTER XXXV.

In this chapter, (1.) The prophet sets before the Jews, as an aggravation of their disobedience to God, the obedience of the family of the Rechabites to the commands which were left them by Jonadab, their ancestor, and shows how they persevered in that obedience, and would not be induced to decline from it, 1–11. (2.) With this he aggravates the disobedience of the Jews to God, and upbraids them with their contempt of his precepts, 12–15. (3.) He foretels, that the judgments of God would fall upon them for this disobedience, 16, 17. (4.) He assures the Rechabites of the blessing of God, because of their dutiful behaviour to their father, 18, 19.

A. M. 3398. THE word which came to Jeremiah
B. C. 606. from the LORD, in the days of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah,
saying,

2 Go unto the house of the ^a Rechabites, and speak unto them, and bring them into the house of the LORD, into one of ^b the chambers, and give them wine to drink.

^a 2 Kings x. 15; 1 Chron. ii. 55.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXV.

Verse 1. The word which came unto Jeremiah in the days of Jehoiakim, &c.—Here we have another evidence that the prophecies of this book are not placed in that order wherein they were delivered, for all the intermediate prophecies from chap. xxvi. belong clearly to the reign of Zedekiah; and consequently are posterior to this chapter and the next, which are dated in the reign of Jehoiakim, together with chap. xlv., which is closely connected with the latter of these two chapters. This may most probably be referred to the fourth year of Jehoiakim's reign, when Nebuchadnezzar, having beaten the

3 Then I took Jaazaniah the son A. M. 3398. of Jeremiah, the son of Habaziniab, B. C. 606.
and his brethren, and all his sons, and the whole house of the Rechabites;

4 And I brought them into the house of the LORD, into the chamber of the sons of Hanan, the son of Igdaliah, a man of God, which was by the chamber of the princes, which was

^b 1 Kings vi. 5.

king of Egypt's army at Euphrates, (see chap. xlvii. 2.) marched toward Syria and Palestine, to recover those provinces again which the king of Egypt had conquered, in which expedition he laid siege to Jerusalem.

Verses 2–4. Go to the house of the Rechabites—“The Rechabites, as may be collected from verse 7, were not of the children of Israel, but strangers of another race that dwelt among them. From 1 Chron. ii. 55, they appear to have been Kenites, a people originally settled in that part of Arabia Petrea which was called the land of Midian. At what time Rechab lived, who gave his name to the family, is not

A. M. 3398. above the chamber of Maaseiah the
B. C. 606. son of Shallum, ° the keeper of the 1 door :

5 And I set before the sons of the house of the Rechabites pots full of wine, and cups, and I said unto them, Drink ye wine.

6 But they said, We will drink no wine : for ° Jonadab the son of Rechab our father commanded us, saying, Ye shall drink no wine, neither ye, nor your sons for ever :

7 Neither shall ye build house, nor sow seed, nor plant vineyard, nor have any : but all your days ye shall dwell in tents ; ° that ye may live many days in the land where ye be strangers.

° 2 Kings xii. 9 ; xxv. 18 ; 1 Chron. ix. 18, 19. —¹ Heb. threshold, certain, nor whether he was the immediate father, or remote ancestor of Jonadab ; for the word son often denotes nothing more than a lineal descendant. But it is most likely that the Jonadab here spoken of, as having dictated a rule of living to the Rechabites, was the same person of whom mention is made 2 Kings x. 15. For that this latter was a man of considerable eminence is manifest from the respect shown him by Jehu ; and his being taken along with that prince to witness his zeal for the honour of the true God, shows him to have been a man of right and religious principles. The institutions he left with his posterity bespeak a principal concern for the purity of their morals, which he might rightly suppose would be less liable to be corrupted whilst they adhered to the simplicity of their ancient usages, than if they adopted the refinements of modern luxury. He, therefore, enjoined them not only to abstain from the use of wine, but to live as the patriarchs did of old, and as many of their countrymen, the Scenite Arabs, continue to do at this day, without any fixed habitations or possessions, far from the society of cities, in the open country, feeding their flocks, and maintaining themselves by the produce of them."—Blaney. And bring them into the house of the Lord—Into one of the chambers adjoining to the temple. By this it appears that the Rechabites were not idolaters, for it was not lawful for such persons to come within the precincts of the temple. I brought them into the chamber of the sons of Hanan—The chambers adjoining to the temple, of which there were several, were for the use of the priests and Levites, during the time of their ministrations. They were also used as repositories for laying up the holy vestments, and vessels, and whatever stores were necessary for the daily sacrifices, and the other parts of the temple service. The son of Igdaliah, a man of God—That is, as this name usually imports, a prophet, or one who had been employed upon a divine commission. Which was by the chamber of the princes—The chamber where the princes, or the members of the sanhedrim, or great council, used to 8 Thus have we obeyed the voice A. M. 3398.

of Jonadab the son of Rechab our B. C. 606.
father in all that he hath charged us, to drink no wine all our days ; we, our wives, our sons, nor our daughters ;

9 Nor to build houses for us to dwell in : neither have we vineyard, nor field, nor seed :

10 But we have dwelt in tents, and have obeyed, and done according to all that Jonadab our father commanded us.

11 But it came to pass, when Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came up into the land, that we said, Come, and let us go to Jerusalem for fear of the army of the Chaldeans, and for or, vessel.—^d 2 Kings x. 15.—° Exod. xx. 12 ; Eph. vi. 2, 3.

assemble. Above the chamber of Maaseiah, the keeper of the door—That is, one of the keepers ; for there were several Levites appointed to that office, both to open and shut the gates of the temple in due time, and likewise to attend at them all day, for preventing any thing that might happen to the prejudice of the purity, or safety of that holy place. Some of these officers had likewise the custody of the holy vessels.

Verses 5-7. I set before the sons of the Rechabites pots full of wine, &c.—In obedience to God's command, (verse 2,) and that the prophet might have full proof of their fixed resolution to adhere to the injunction of their progenitor Jonadab, which no temptation could prevail with them to violate. But they said, We will drink no wine—They peremptorily refused, and all agreed in the refusal. The prophet knew very well they would refuse, and therefore when they did so, urged them no further. For Jonadab, our father, commanded us, saying, Ye shall drink no wine—Concerning the probable reasons of this command, and of those in the following verse, see note on verse 2.

Verses 8-11. Thus have we obeyed the voice of Jonadab our father—We have conformed ourselves to his injunctions, and governed our lives by them, during the space of nearly three hundred years. But when Nebuchadrezzar came, &c., we said, Come, let us go to Jerusalem—The Rechabites appear to have retired within the walls of Jerusalem upon the hostile approach of Nebuchadnezzar and his army, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim. Calmet, indeed, supposes it was not till the latter end of Jehoiakim's reign that the Rechabites were driven into the city for shelter, grounding his opinion upon its being said in this verse, that they entered it for fear of the army of the Chaldeans, and of the army of the Syrians, and comparing this with 2 Kings xxiv. 2, where the Lord is said to have sent bands of the Chaldees, and bands of the Syrians, against Judah to destroy it. "But this reasoning," says Blaney, "will not hold, for, 1st, Nebuchadnezzar might have

A. M. 3398. fear of the army of the Syrians : so
B. C. 606. we dwell at Jerusalem.

12 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

13 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Go and tell the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, Will ye not receive instruction to hearken to my words? saith the LORD.

14 The words of Jonadab the son of Rechab, that he commanded his sons not to drink wine, are performed; for unto this day they drink none, but obey their father's commandment: notwithstanding I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking; but ye hearkened not unto me.

15 I have sent also unto you all my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them, saying, ^k Return ye now every man from his evil way, and amend your doings, and go not after other gods to serve them, and ye shall dwell in the land which I have given to you and to your fathers; but ye have not inclined your ear, nor hearkened unto me.

16 Because the sons of Jonadab the son of Rechab have performed the commandment of their father, which he commanded them; but this people hath not hearkened unto me:

17 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring upon Judah and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem all the evil that I have pronounced against them; ^l because I have spoken unto them, but they have not heard; and

^f Chap. xxxii. 33.—^g 2 Chron. xxxvi. 15.—^h Chap. vii. 13; xxv. 3.—ⁱ Chap. vii. 25; xxv. 4.

^k Chap. xviii. 11; xxv. 5, 6.—^l Proverbs i. 24; Isa. lxx. 12; lxxi. 4; Chap. vii. 13.

been, and most probably was, joined by the Syrians in his first expedition against Jerusalem, after the defeat of the Egyptians at Carchemish, which brought on the submission of Syria. And, 2d, Nebuchadnezzar does not appear to have come in person a second time, at least till after Jehoiakim was taken prisoner, and his generals had closely invested Jerusalem." So we dwell at Jerusalem—Having retired to Jerusalem upon the Chaldean invasion, they were forced to continue there during the siege of the place. In such an extraordinary case, they did not think themselves obliged to a strict observance of the injunction of Jonadab respecting dwelling in tents, because all human laws admit of an equitable construction, and may be superseded in cases of necessity, or when the observance of them is attended with such great inconveniences as the lawgiver himself, if he could have foreseen them, would probably have excepted.

Verses 12-16. Then came the word of the Lord unto Jeremiah—As the trial of the constancy of the Rechabites was only intended for a sign, so now we have the application of it made by God himself. Tell the men of Judah, Will ye not receive instruction? &c.—Will nothing enlighten or affect you? Will nothing prevail to make you sensible of your sin and duty? You see how obedient the Rechabites are to their father's commandment; but you have not hearkened unto me—Though it might have been more reasonably expected that my people should have obeyed me, than that the sons of Jonadab should have obeyed him. Thus the Rechabites' observance of their father's charge to them is made use of by God as an aggravation of the disobedience of the Jews to him: and the aggravation was certainly very high. For, 1st, The Rechabites were obedient to one that was but a man like themselves, and had only the wisdom and power of a man, and was only the father of their flesh; but the Jews were disobedient to the infinite and eternal God, that had an absolute authority over them, as the father of their spirits. 2d, Jonadab was long since dead, and was ignorant of his posterity, and could neither take cognizance of their disobedience to his orders, nor give any correction for it; but God lives for ever to see how his laws are observed, and is in readiness to punish all disobedience. 3d, The Rechabites were probably seldom or never put in mind of their obligations to their progenitor; but God often sent his prophets to his people, to remind them of, and excite to, their duty to him, yet they would not comply with it. This is insisted on here as a great aggravation of their disobedience, verses 14, 15. 4th, Jonadab had not conferred, nor could confer, any such favours on his seed as God had bestowed on his people, nor had laid them under any such obligations, from duty and interest, to obey him, as God had laid Israel and Judah under to observe his laws. 5th, God did not oblige his people to so much hardship, and to such instances of self-denial and mortification, as Jonadab enjoined to his seed, and yet Jonadab's orders were obeyed, and God's were not.

Verse 17. Therefore thus saith the Lord, Behold, &c.—Because they have not obeyed the precepts of my word, I will therefore perform the threatenings of it. I will bring upon Judah, &c.—Namely, by the Chaldean army; all the evil that I have pronounced against them—Both in the law and in the prophets; because I have spoken unto them, and called unto them—Tried all ways and means to convince and reduce them; spoken by my word, called by my providence, and both in order to the same end; and yet all to no purpose: they have not heard nor answered.

A. M. 3398. I have called unto them, but they
B. C. 606. have not answered.

18 ¶ And Jeremiah said unto the house of the Rechabites, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Because ye have obeyed the commandment of Jonadab your father, and kept

^a Heb. There shall not a man be cut off from Jonadab

Verses 18, 19. Jeremiah said unto the house of the Rechabites, &c.—Mercy is here promised to the family of the Rechabites for their steady and unanimous adherence to the laws of their house. Though it was only for the shaming of Israel that their constancy was tried, yet, being unshaken, God takes occasion from it to tell them that he had blessings in reserve for them. Jonadab shall not want a man to stand before me for ever—"The meaning of this promise," says Blaney, "in its full extent, seems to be, not only that the race of Jonadab should never all his precepts, and done according A. M. 3398.

unto all that he hath commanded you : B. C. 606.

19 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; ² Jonadab the son of Rechab shall not want a man to ^m stand before me for ever.

the son of Rechab to stand, &c.—^m Chap. xv. 19.

fail or be extinct, but that some of the family should ever be found among the worshippers of the true God. For to stand in the presence of a prince, implies an attendance, in some degree, upon his person and service. So the queen of Sheba, speaking of Solomon's court, says, Happy are thy men, happy are these thy servants, which stand continually before thee, 1 Kings x. 8; and therefore, to stand before God, must denote at least the privilege of treading his courts, and of worshipping him among the train of his chosen servants and people."

CHAPTER XXXVI.

In this chapter we have an account of another expedient tried, but tried in vain, to awaken and reform this heedless and refractory people. (1.) By divine appointment a roll of a book is provided, and Jeremiah causes Baruch to write therein all his preceding prophecies, 1-4. (2.) Baruch, by Jeremiah's order, reads this roll to all the people publicly on a fast day, 5-10. (3.) The princes are informed of it, and send for Baruch, who reads the roll before them, at the contents of which they are greatly alarmed, and advise Jeremiah and Baruch to hide themselves, 11-19. (4.) They acquaint the king with these things, who sends for the roll, and having heard a part of it read, he cuts it in pieces and burns it, 20-26. (5.) God commands Jeremiah to write it anew, and to denounce the judgments of God against King Jehoiakim, 27-31. (6.) Baruch writes a new copy, with additions, 32.

A. M. 3398. AND it came to pass in the fourth
B. C. 606. year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, that this word came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Take thee a ^a roll of a book, and ^b write

^a Isa. viii. 1; Ezek. ii. 9; Zech. v. 1.—^b Chap. xxx. 2.

therein all the words that I have A. M. 3398. spoken unto thee against Israel, and B. C. 606.
against Judah, and against ^c all the nations, from the day I spake unto thee, from the days of ^d Josiah, even unto this day.

^c Chap. xxv. 15.—^d Chap. xxv. 3.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXVI.

Verse 1. And it came to pass, &c.—Jeremiah here inserts a history of some things which related to, or had a connection with, his prophecies; (as we find Isaiah did with regard to his;) and, accordingly, we are here informed how they came to be written, namely, by the express order of God, that they might stand upon record before the things foretold came to pass; so that there might be no room to say he had never prophesied such and such things, or that the prophecies were made after the things they pretended to foretel had happened. In the fourth year of Jehoiakim this word came unto Jeremiah—It is uncertain whether what is related in this chapter happened during the siege of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, (for the city was besieged in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, 2 Kings xxiv. 1, 2,) or after the siege, when Jehoiakim was escaped from the hand of Nebuchadnezzar. It seems probable from what follows, particularly from verse 9, that it happened at or near the end of the fourth year, when Nebuchadnezzar was retired. For Jeremiah says nothing of the siege, and he orders Baruch to read his prophecies before an assembly of the people who had come to Jerusalem out of their cities, verse 6, which certainly implies that Jerusalem was not then in a state of siege. See Calmet.

Verse 2. Take thee a roll of a book—Compare Isa. viii. 1; Ezek. ii. 9; Zech. v. 1. The ancient manner of writing was upon long scrolls of parchment, which they afterward rolled upon sticks. On these words it is remarked by Harmer, (vol. iv. chap. 7, obs. 122,) "Many things were rolled up, much in the shape of an ancient Jewish manuscript, which

A. M. 3398. 3 * It may be that the house of
B. C. 606.

Judah will hear all the evil which I purpose to do unto them; that they may ^freturn every man from his evil way; that I may forgive their iniquity and their sin.

4 Then Jeremiah ^gcalled Baruch the son of Neriah: and ^hBaruch wrote from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the LORD, which he had spoken unto him, upon a roll of a book.

^e Verse 7; Chapter xxvi. 3.—^f Chap. xviii. 8; Jonah iii. 8.
^g Chap. xxxii. 12.

yet were not fit to write upon; the words then in this, and some other similar cases, may be understood to mean, Take thee a roll, or volume, fit to be made a book of, fit to be written on." And write therein all the words that I have spoken against Israel and Judah—Jeremiah prophesied against Israel as well as against Judah, chap. ii. 4; iii. 12, 14; xxiii. 13; xxxii. 30. The kingdom of Israel was indeed destroyed by Shalmaneser, before the time of Jeremiah; but yet the prophet was ordered to reprove their sins, both to make the justice of God appear in punishing them so severely, and withal to warn the Jews by their example. Besides, there were some remains of these tribes still left, who joined themselves to the tribe of Judah. And against all the nations—See chap. xxv. 15, 16. From the day I spake unto thee, from the days of Josiah—Namely, all the revelations which he had had from God for twenty-two years last past; for he began to prophesy in the thirteenth year of Josiah, who reigned thirty-one years, so that he prophesied eighteen years during Josiah's life, and this was the fourth year of the reign of Jehoiakim, his successor. God would have his prophecies recorded, that there might be a memorial of them, that so the truth of them might appear when God should bring them to pass; the time of which now drew near.

Verse 3. It may be that the house of Judah will hear, &c.—That is, will hearken, and lay to heart, all the evil, &c., that they may return, &c.—Blaney translates the verse, "Peradventure the house of Judah may hear all the evil which I purpose to do unto them, so as to return every one from his evil way, and I may forgive their iniquity and their sin." See the like expression, verse 7; chap. xxvi. 3; Ezek. xii. 3; Am. v. 15; in which places God is introduced as speaking after the manner of men, and using such methods as, in human probability, might be most likely to prevail: compare chap. viii. 6. These, and expressions of the like kind, sufficiently indicate that God's foreknowledge of future events lays no restraint on the will of man, nor takes away the liberty of human actions. That I may forgive their iniquity and their sin—Forgiveness of sin in Scripture sometimes signifies the acquitting of a sinner from the obligation sin had laid him under to eternal death; sometimes the remission of a temporal punishment: it may here be understood as comprehending both, though it is probable the latter is principally intended.

5 And Jeremiah commanded Baruch, saying, I am shut up, I cannot go into the house of the LORD:

6 Therefore go thou and read in the roll, which thou hast written from my mouth, the words of the LORD in the ears of the people in the LORD's house upon ⁱthe fasting day: and also thou shalt read them in the ears of all Judah that come out of their cities.

^h Chapter xlv. 1.—ⁱ Leviticus xvi. 29; xxiii. 27–32; Acts xxvii. 9.

Verse 4. Then Jeremiah called Baruch—Baruch was the most faithful disciple of this prophet: he served him as long as he lived in the capacity of his secretary, and never left him till his death. And Baruch wrote from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words, &c.—We need not ask how Jeremiah could remember all the prophecies that he had prophesied, for twenty-two years before, considering who it was that commanded him to put them in writing. God undoubtedly brought them to his remembrance, otherwise it would have been impossible for him to have recollected them all. The Spirit of God dictated to Jeremiah, and he to Baruch.

Verses 5, 6. Jeremiah commanded Baruch, saying, I am shut up—It is not said, that "he was shut up in prison" at this time: but barely that he was shut up, or confined, as עָצוּר signifies, that is, under some such confinement, or restraint, as precluded his going to the house of the Lord. Therefore go thou and read in the roll, &c., upon the fasting day—Not the day of the yearly fast, mentioned Lev. xxiii. 27, but on a day appointed for a national fast, of which we read more, verse 9, proclaimed by Jehoiakim, probably to avert the calamity hanging over them from the Chaldeans, or from the drought. And it was undoubtedly because of the concourse of people which the prophet knew would then be in the temple that he chose that day, when some would be present from all parts of Judah. It was the opinion, indeed, of Archbishop Usher and Dean Prideaux, that the roll was twice read by Baruch in the temple, and that the first reading was on the tenth day of the seventh month, being the great day of atonement, in the fourth year of King Jehoiakim. "But this," says Blaney, "I am persuaded is a mistake; and that the reasons urged by the latter of those two learned men, in support of this hypothesis, are by no means conclusive. I see no good reason for concluding that the roll was read publicly in the temple more than once; nor does Josephus, who speaks of its being read in the ninth month of the fifth year, (Antiquities, lib. x. cap. 6.) give the least hint of its having been read before; if it had been, I think we might naturally expect to be informed how it was received by those who heard it the first time, as well as by those who heard it the second. From the utter silence on this head, the contrary may be presumed, and we may fairly conjecture the case to have been pretty nearly as follows. Toward the

A. M. 3398. 7 ^k It may be ¹ they will present
B. C. 606. their supplication before the LORD, and will return every one from his evil way:
for great is the anger and the fury that the LORD hath pronounced against this people.

8 And Baruch the son of Neriah did according to all that Jeremiah the prophet commanded him, reading in the book the words of the LORD in the LORD's house.

B. C. 606. 9 And it came to pass in the fifth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, in the ninth month, that they proclaimed a fast before the LORD to all the people in Jerusalem, and to all the people that came from the cities of Judah unto Jerusalem.

10 Then read Baruch in the book the words of Jeremiah in the house of the LORD, in the chamber of Gemariah the son of Shaphan the scribe, in the higher court, at the A. M. 3398.

²entry¹ of the new gate of the LORD's B. C. 606.
house, in the ears of all the people.

11 ¶ When Michaiah the son of Gemariah, the son of Shaphan, had heard out of the book
all the words of the LORD,

12 Then he went down into the king's house, into the scribe's chamber: and lo, all the princes sat there, even Elishama the scribe, and Delaiah the son of Shemaiah, and Elnathan the son of Achbor, and Gemariah the son of Shaphan, and Zedekiah the son of Hananiah, and all the princes.

13 Then Michaiah declared unto them all the words that he had heard, when Baruch read the book in the ears of the people.

14 Therefore all the princes sent Jehudi the son of Nethaniah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Cushi, unto Baruch, saying, Take in thy ^k Verse 3.—¹ Heb. their supplication shall fall.

² Or, door.—¹ Chap. xxvi. 10.

latter end of Jehoiakim's fourth year, after Nebuchadnezzar had replaced him on the throne, and had left the city, it is possible that both king and people, freed from former apprehensions, began again to indulge their wicked inclinations; and therefore Jeremiah was ordered to lay before them at once all the evils that still threatened them, and from which nothing but speedy repentance could protect them. In consequence of this charge, he caused Baruch to write a collection of all his prophecies, and to have them in readiness to read at a fit opportunity. Perhaps the collection was not fully completed before the fifth year was already begun; but the season pitched on, as most convenient for reading this tremendous publication, was the day on which the people should assemble to deplore, before God, the calamity with which he had visited them just twelve months before. Accordingly, at that time Baruch read openly in the temple what he had written, and the immediate consequences of such reading are here related at large."

Verses 7, 8. It may be they will present their supplications—Hebrew, הכל התחנן לפני יהוה, peradventure they may prostrate themselves in supplication before Jehovah; or, more literally, their supplication may fall before Jehovah, which, undoubtedly, says Blaney, "respects the humble posture of the supplicant in presenting it;" see note on verse 3. In the subsequent part of the verse, the words anger and fury (or, wrath, as החמה, should rather be rendered) are put by a metonymy for the effects of them, namely, the heavy judgments which, in consequence thereof, Jehovah had denounced against this people. We learn from this verse that prayer and reformation are the most likely means that can be used to turn away God's wrath when it is ready to fall upon a sinful nation.

Verses 9, 10. In the fifth year, &c., they proclaimed a fast—"It was customary among the Jews to proclaim anniversary fasts upon certain days, in memory of some great calamities which had befallen them at that time. Of this kind were the fasts of the fourth, fifth, seventh, and tenth months; mentioned Zech. vii. 5, and viii. 19; the first instituted in remembrance of the city's being taken by Nebuchadnezzar; the second in memory of the temple's being burned in that month; the third for the murder of Gedaliah; the fourth in memory of the siege which then began. Then read Baruch the words of Jeremiah, in the house of the Lord—It has been before observed, that by the house of the Lord is meant all that is included within the sacred precincts of the temple; not only the sanctuary, or house properly so called, but all the out-buildings, and the courts around, both the inner court of the priests, and the outer court, which was open to all the people. In the chamber of Gemariah the scribe—This chamber was undoubtedly in the great outer court, either close to, or over the gateway of the eastern gate; so that if he read, as is supposed, from a window, or balcony, he would be heard by the concourse of people that came flocking into the court through that gate: see chap. xxvi. 10.

Verses 11–15. When Michaiah, the son of Shaphan, had heard, &c.—Shaphan's family were all great men at court: see note on chap. xxvi. 24; he went down into the king's house, &c.—It is uncertain whether this Michaiah went to make this relation to the princes, who sat in the secretary's chamber, as a piece of news only, or out of a malicious design to accuse the prophet and Baruch, as persons guilty of a seditious practice, in what they had done. Then Michaiah declared unto them all the words that he had heard—That is, the substance of all the words, &c.; for none can imagine that a

A. M. 3398. hand the roll wherein thou hast read in the ears of the people, and come. So Baruch the son of Neriah took the roll in his hand, and came unto them.
B. C. 606.

15 And they said unto him, Sit down now, and read it in our ears. So Baruch read it in their ears.

16 Now it came to pass, when they had heard all the words, they were afraid both one and other, and said unto Baruch, We will surely tell the king of all these words.

17 And they asked Baruch, saying, Tell us now, How didst thou write all these words at his mouth?

18 Then Baruch answered them, He pronounced all these words unto me with his hearer could remember every word. Therefore all the princes sent Jehudi, &c.—That is, all the princes who at that time sat there in council sent a messenger with a command to Baruch to appear before them, and to bring the roll which he had read in the ears of the people. And they said, Sit down now and read it. So Baruch read it—The courage of Baruch is admirable; he was now before the council, in the king's house; the substance of the prophecies was, to threaten heavy judgments to the king, and court, and all the people; and the king, as appears by all history, was of a vindictive spirit, and a persecutor of God's prophets; and yet Baruch is not afraid, but reads the prophecy in their ears.

^m Amos

Verses 16-19. When they heard all the words—It is hardly to be imagined that all these counsellors would sit still till they had heard all the prophecies read which Jeremiah had uttered for the last twenty-two years; but all signifies many, or, the substance of all his prophecies. They were afraid both one and other—That is, they were all of them afraid. The judgments denounced were so terrible as to make the ears of them that heard them tingle. Jeremiah had now been above twenty years a prophet to this people, and doubtless had been in great esteem for eighteen years of that time, while Josiah was alive, and they could not but observe that his prophecies had been often accomplished. They were, therefore, it seems, afraid that they should see these fulfilled also. And they asked Baruch, saying, Tell us now, How didst thou write all these words?—This seemed a reasonable question, considering they were the substance of what he had been prophesying for so many years. The matter seemed strange to the princes, the prophets not being used to study and write their discourses, but to preach them extempore. Baruch answered, He pronounced all these words, and I wrote them, &c.—This could not but add to the princes' fear that these prophecies would be accomplished, for they must needs conceive that, without a special mouth, and I wrote them with ink in the book. A. M. 3398. B. C. 606.

19 Then said the princes unto Baruch, Go hide thee, thou and Jeremiah, and let no man know where ye be.

20 ¶ And they went in to the king into the court, but they laid up the roll in the chamber of Elishama the scribe, and told all the words in the ears of the king.

21 So the king sent Jehudi to fetch the roll: and he took it out of Elishama the scribe's chamber. And Jehudi read it in the ears of the king, and in the ears of all the princes which stood beside the king.

22 Now the king sat in ^m the winter-house in the ninth month: and there was a fire

iii. 15.

influence of God, it would have been a thing impossible that Jeremiah should have called to mind all that he had spoken at sundry times for so many years. Then said the princes unto Baruch, Go hide thee, thou and Jeremiah—They thought it their duty to acquaint the king with the matter, and yet were unwilling that Jeremiah and Baruch should feel the effects of his displeasure.

Verse 20. And they went in to the king into the court—"They were before, it is said, verse 12, in the king's house, that is, in the exterior precincts of the palace, where were apartments and offices fitted up for the principal officers of state, and for the attendants of the court. But, from what is here said, there was an interior body of building for the king's personal residence, ranged, as is the fashion of the great houses of the East at this day, round an open court, or quadrangle, and containing apartments separately appropriated for summer and winter use."—Blaney. But they laid up the roll, &c.—They were obliged by their office, as counsellors to the king, to acquaint him with what they heard, which might be prejudicial to him and his nation; and indeed this was the very end for which God commanded the enrolling of these prophecies, that both the king and his counsellors, together with all the people, might take notice of them; but they did not carry the book with them, but laid it up in the secretary's chamber.

Verse 22. Now the king sat in the winter-house—The princes and great men had distinct houses, or apartments, fitted for the several seasons of the year, Am. iii. 15. In the ninth month—Which answers to the latter end of our November and part of December. And there was a fire on the hearth burning before him—Hebrew, אֵת הָאֵשׁ לִפְנֵי מְבַעֵר, et focus coram ipso ardebat, Buxtorff: literally, And a hearth, or, fire-pan was burning before him. Thus the LXX., καὶ εὐχάρα πυρὸς κατὰ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ; and a pan of fire before him. To the same purpose the Vulgate, et posita erat arula coram eo

A. M. 3399. on the hearth burning before him. B. C. 606.

23 And it came to pass, that when Jehudi had read three or four leaves, he cut it with the penknife, and cast it into the fire that was on the hearth, until all the roll was consumed in the fire that was on the hearth.

24 Yet they were not afraid, nor ^arent their garments, neither the king, nor any of his servants that heard all these words.

^a 2 Kings xxii. 11; Isa. xxxvi. 22; xxxvii. 1.

plena prunis, There was set before him a little altar, or fire-pan, full of burning coals. The reason of this phraseology we have in the account which Lightfoot gives us from Maimonides, namely, that chimneys were not admitted at Jerusalem by reason of the smoke. And Mr. Harmer tells us, (chap. iii. obs. 24,) that Sir John Chardin, in his MS. notes, supposes that the fire which was burning before Jehoiakim was a pan of coals; and cites a passage from him, which says, in French, "This was just as persons of quality warm themselves in winter in Persia, and particularly in Media, and wherever there is no want of wood. The manner in which they sit will not allow them to be near a chimney: in these places, therefore, of the East, they have great brasiers of lighted coals." Harmer likewise informs us, that "the fires used at Aleppo, in the lodging rooms, are of charcoal in pans; and that pans of coals are the fires which are often made use of in winter in Egypt." It may be observed further here, that this description of Jehoiakim sitting in his winter-house, in the ninth month, with a pan of fire before him, answers to Dr. Russel's account; who says, that the most delicate in those countries make no fires till the end of November. How long they continue the use of them he does not say; but we learn from other sources, that in Judea they are continued far into the spring: see John xviii. 18.

Verse 23. When Jehudi had read three or four leaves—Hebrew, דלתות, rolls, or scrolls, for their books, as we have observed, consisted of several pieces of parchment rolled upon each other. Dr. Waterland renders the word columns, and Blaney, sections, observing that to render it leaves, "seems rather to carry an eye to the books of modern times, than to suit that ancient mode of writing." The word primarily signifies doors, that open and shut, and therefore is properly enough put for distinct and separate rolls, or parts of those prophecies which, being delivered at different times, and having a relation to different subjects, have each a proper beginning and ending of its own. Houbigant reads, pages, which he says, "were the same with those now found in the parchments called, 'The Volumes of the Synagogue,' in which the parchments are not sewed one beneath another; for if this were the case, the volume would only have one page, whose beginning would be at the top, and its end at the bottom of the parchment; but the parchments are sewed one to another on their sides, and are read by unfolding the volume either to the right or left; so that there are as many pages as there are parchments." He cut it with a penknife—Hebrew, כַּתֵּף, the knife of the scribe. It seems the implements for writing were lying on the table before the king, ready for the scribe's or secretary's use, in case there was any call for writing orders, or despatches. Among these was the knife he used, either for cutting the pen when necessary, or for making erasures. And cast into the fire until all the roll was consumed—Not considering or not regarding its containing a revelation of the will of God, and a divine message to him in particular: a piece this of as daring impiety as a man could easily be guilty of, and a most impudent affront to the God of heaven!

25 Nevertheless Elnathan and Delaiah and Gemariah had made intercession to the king that he would not burn the roll: but he would not hear them.

26 But the king commanded Jerahmeel the son ³ of Hammelech, and Seraiah the son of Azriel, and Shelemiah the son of Abdeel, to take Baruch the scribe and Jeremiah the prophet: but the LORD hid them.

³ Or, of the king.

Verse 24. Yet they were not afraid—No, not those princes that trembled at the word when they heard it the first time, verse 16. The fear with which they were then seized quickly wore off, or else they durst not discover it in the king's presence, who showed no concern himself. Nor rent their garments—A custom observed among the Jews at the hearing of any dreadful news; neither the king nor any of his servants that heard all these words—How different was the spirit of this king and his courtiers from that of his father Josiah, who, when he heard the words of the law read to him by Shaphan the scribe, both rent his clothes and wept before the Lord in the deepest humiliation and distress, persuaded that great was the wrath about to be poured upon the nation; and yet the parts of the law read to him were certainly neither so particular, nor so immediately adapted to the present state of affairs in the country as the contents of this roll were.

Verses 25, 26. Nevertheless, Elnathan, Delaiah, and Gemariah had made intercession, &c.—These three princes appear to have had a greater dread of God upon their hearts than the rest, for, so far as they durst, they interposed and besought the king not to burn the roll; but he would not hearken to their advice; so far from it that he gives orders to apprehend both Jeremiah and Baruch. But the Lord hid them—God by his providence kept them both out of their hands, directing them to such a place of recess as the king's messengers could not find out.

A. M. 3399. 27 ¶ Then the word of the LORD
B. C. 605. came to Jeremiah, after that the king had burned the roll, and the words which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremiah, saying, 28 Take thee again another roll, and write in it all the former words that were in the first roll, which Jehoiakim the king of Judah hath burned.

29 And thou shalt say to Jehoiakim king of Judah, Thus saith the LORD; Thou hast burned this roll, saying, Why hast thou written therein, saying, The king of Babylon shall certainly come and destroy this land, and shall cause to cease from thence man and beast?

30 Therefore thus saith the LORD, of Jehoi-

° Chap. xxii. 30.—° Chap. xxii. 19.

Verses 27-29. Then the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah, &c.—Jeremiah now receives orders to write in another roll the same words that were written in that which Jehoiakim had burned. Observe well, reader, though the attempts of hell against the word of God are very daring, yet not one tittle of it shall fall to the ground; nor shall the unbelief of man make the truth of God of none effect. Its enemies may prevail to burn many of the Bibles which contain it, yet they cannot abolish the word of God; they can neither extirpate it, nor defeat the accomplishment of it. And thou shalt say to Jehoiakim—Or, of Jehoiakim; as by is translated, verse 30; for this command seems to have been given to Jeremiah during the time of his confinement. Thou hast burned this roll, saying, Why, &c.—We learn here what was the cause of the king's anger; Jeremiah had prophesied, that the king of Babylon should come and take Jerusalem, and lay the country waste, which was fulfilled within six years after this, and more fully still in eighteen years.

Verses 30, 31. He shall have none to sit on the throne of David—That is, none that shall be king any considerable time; Jeconiah, his son, was set up, but kept his throne only three months, and left none to succeed him in a direct line. And his dead body shall be cast out—See note on chap. xxii. 19. And I will punish him and his seed, &c.—Even his seed and his servants shall fare the worse for their relation to him: for they shall be punished, not in-akim king of Judah; ° He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David: A. M. 3399.

B. C. 605. and his dead body shall be ° cast out in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost.

31 And I will ° punish him and his seed and his servants for their iniquity; and I will bring upon them, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and upon the men of Judah, all the evil that I have pronounced against them; but they hearkened not.

32 ¶ Then took Jeremiah another roll, and gave it to Baruch the scribe, the son of Neriah; who wrote therein from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the book which Jehoiakim king of Judah had burned in the fire: and there were added besides unto them many, like words.

° Heb. visit upon, Chap. xxiii. 34.—° Heb. as they.

deed for his iniquity, but the sooner for their own. And as to the people, God threatens that they should feel what they were not willing to hear, even all the evil which God by his prophet had pronounced against them. Though the roll, the copy of the divine decree, was burned, the original remained, which should again be copied out after another manner in bloody characters. There is no escaping God's judgments by striving against them. Who ever hardened his heart against God and prospered?

Verse 32. Then took Jeremiah another roll—Here we are shown, that wicked men gain nothing by opposing themselves to the revealed will of God, how ungrateful soever it may be to them, but the addition of guilt to their souls, and the increase of divine wrath; God's counsels shall stand, and what he speaks shall most certainly be accomplished. Here is another roll written, with additional threatenings, confirming what God had before said. There were added unto them, besides, many like words—Blaney translates the clause, And there was a further addition made unto them of many words of the same sort. "From hence we may infer," says Lowth, "that God's Spirit did not always endite the very form of words which the holy writers have set down, but, directing them in general to express his sense in proper words, left the manner of expression to themselves. From whence proceeds that variety of style which we may observe in the Scriptures, suitable to the different genius and education of the writers."

CHAPTER XXXVII.

In this chapter we have, (1.) Certain preliminary facts related, tending to fix the time and occasion of Zechariah's second message to Jeremiah, 1-5. (2.) God suggests an answer, foretelling the retreat of the Egyptians, and the return of the Chaldean army, who should take and burn Jerusalem, 6-10. (3.) During the absence of the Chaldeans, Jeremiah, attempting to quit the city and retire to his own country possessions, is seized upon for a deserter, and thrown into a dungeon, 11–15. (4.) The king sends for and consults him; and, being entreated by the prophet not to remand him to his former prison, is prevailed upon to change the place, and to abate the rigour, of his confinement, 16–21.

A. M. 3405.
B. C. 599.

AND King ^a Zedekiah the son of Josiah reigned instead of Coniah the son of Jehoiakim, whom Nebuchadrezzar, king of Babylon, made king in the land of Judah.

2 ^b But neither he, nor his servants, nor the people of the land, did hearken unto the words of the LORD, which he spake ¹ by the Prophet Jeremiah.

B. C. 599. 3 And Zedekiah the king sent Jehucal the son of Shelemiah, and ^c Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest to the Prophet Jeremiah, saying, Pray now unto the LORD our God for us.

4 Now Jeremiah came in and went out among the people: for they had not put him into prison.

5 Then ^d Pharaoh's army was come forth out

^a 2 Kings xxiv. 17; 2 Chronicles xxxvi. 10; Chap. xxii. 24.
^b 2 Chron. xxxvi. 12; 14.—¹ Heb. by the hand of the prophet.
^c Chap. xxi. 1, 2; xxix. 25; lii. 24.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXVII.

Verses 1, 2. Zedekiah, whom Nebuchadrezzar made king—See 2 Kings xxiv. 17; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 10, where is related the history of Zedekiah's succession. He was but a tributary king, having taken an oath of homage to the king of Babylon. He was a feeble and irresolute prince, and although not so bad as many of his predecessors, yet he had but little true piety or virtue. Neither he nor his servants, &c., did hearken unto the words of the Lord—Though they saw in his predecessor the fatal consequences of contemning the word of God, and though it had already begun to be fulfilled, yet they did not take warning, nor give any more heed to it than others had done before them.

Verses 3–5. Zedekiah sent Jehucal the son of Shelemiah—This man came in the place of Pashur, who, together with Zephaniah, brought the former message from Zedekiah; saying, Pray now unto the Lord our God for us—Wicked men of all ranks are desirous, in their distresses, of the prayers of those whose counsels and admonitions they never regard while they are in prosperity, which is a plain evidence of their acting contrary to the convictions of their own consciences. Now Jeremiah came in and went out among the people—That is, he was not yet put in prison as he afterward was: see verse 15; chap. xxxii. 2. Jerusalem also, for the present, was at liberty, for Pharaoh's army was come forth out of Egypt, &c.—“Zedekiah, contrary to the oath that he had given to Nebuchadrezzar, made an alliance with the king of Egypt, and contracted with him for assistance against the king of Babylon; whereupon the of Egypt: ^e and when the Chaldeans ^{A. M. 3414.} that besieged Jerusalem heard tidings ^{B. C. 590.} of them, they departed from Jerusalem.

6 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto the Prophet Jeremiah, saying,

7 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel; Thus shall ye say to the king of Judah, ^f that sent you unto me to inquire of me; Behold, Pharaoh's army, which is come forth to help you, shall return to Egypt into their own land.

8 ^g And the Chaldeans shall come again, and fight against this city, and take it, and burn it with fire.

9 Thus saith the LORD; Deceive not ² yourselves, saying, The Chaldeans shall surely depart from us: for they shall not depart.

10 ^h For though ye had smitten the whole army of the Chaldeans that fight against you,

^d 2 Kings xxiv. 7; Ezekiel xvii. 15.—^e Verse 11; Chapter xxxiv. 21.—^f Chapter xxi. 2.—^g Chap. xxxiv. 22.—^h Heb. souls.—^h Chap. xxi. 4, 5.

king of Egypt sent an army to his relief: see Ezek. xvii. 15; which obliged the Chaldeans to raise the siege of Jerusalem, that they might go and fight this army.”—Lowth. During this time, it seems, it was that Zedekiah sent to desire the prophet to pray for them.

Verses 7–10. Pharaoh's army, which is come forth to help you, shall return—They shall be discomfited by the Chaldeans, and forced to retreat without affording you any assistance: see 2 Kings xxiv. 7. And the Chaldeans shall come again—They shall return, renew the siege, and prosecute it with more vigour than ever. And take it and burn it with fire—The sentence passed upon Jerusalem shall be executed, and they shall be the executioners: see chap. xxxiv. 22. Deceive not yourselves, &c.—In vain did the Jews rejoice in Pharaoh's coming to help them: in vain did they flatter themselves that the army of the Chaldeans would be routed; for, (as God was against them,) had this even been the case, had they smitten, as God here tells them, the whole army of the Chaldeans, so that there remained but wounded men among them, yet would they have been sufficient to have taken and laid low the proud city of Jerusalem. For, when God will take away, who shall rescue?—In vain, therefore, if God be our enemy, is all our power and policy; in vain do we endeavour to strengthen ourselves by riches and great friends, and to build our nest on high; for we can never be safe, but in the favour, and under the protection of the Almighty. And we may observe further, that whatever instruments God has determined to make use of, in any service for him, whe-

A. M. 3415. and there remained but ³ wounded
B. C. 589. men among them, yet should they rise up every man in his tent, and burn this city with fire.

11 ¶ ¹ And it came to pass, that when the army of the Chaldeans was ⁴ broken up from Jerusalem for fear of Pharaoh's army,

12 Then Jeremiah went forth out of Jerusalem to go into the land of Benjamin, ⁵ to separate himself thence in the midst of the people.

13 And when he was in the gate of Benjamin, a captain of the ward was there, whose ³ Heb. thrust through.—¹ Verse 5.—⁴ Heb. made to ascend.

⁵ Or, to slip away from thence in the midst of the people.

ther of mercy or judgment, they shall accomplish that for which they are designed, whatever incapacity they may lie under, or be reduced to.

Verse 12. Then Jeremiah went forth, &c., to go into the land of Benjamin—Jeremiah, having no further revelation from God to communicate, and knowing the city would soon be taken, resolves to go to his own country to Anathoth. To separate himself thence, &c.—The Hebrew, לחלק כשם בתוך העם, is rendered by Houbigant, "That he might have there a possession for himself with the people;" by Dr. Waterland, "To take rents from thence," &c.; and by Blaney, "To receive a portion thereof among the people." "This," says the last-mentioned critic, "seems a more natural interpretation of the words, than to understand them, as our translators seem to have done, of the prophet's withdrawing himself, or slipping away, (as it is expressed in the margin,) for fear of being shut up again in the city, on the renewal of the blockade. For the case appears to have been this, Jeremiah had been cut off from his patrimony in the land of Benjamin, by the Chaldeans having been masters there. But, upon their retreat, he meant to return, with a view of coming in for a share of the produce of the land with the rest of his neighbours. For that he was likely to want some means for his support is evident from his having been obliged to be subsisted in prison afterward upon a public allowance."

Verses 13, 14. When he was in the gate of Benjamin—The gate leading toward the country of Benjamin; Irijah, the son of Hananiah—Probably of that Hananiah whose death Jeremiah had foretold, ch. xxviii. 17; took Jeremiah the prophet—Apprehended him as one who was about to desert the city, and fall off to the Chaldeans; the ground of which accusation was the prophet's having foretold that the Chaldeans should take the city, and exhorted the Jews to submit to them. Then said Jeremiah, It is false—Though, as the Lord's prophet, he had faithfully revealed his will, and foretold the calamity that was about to come upon the nation, by means of the Chaldeans, this did not prove that he took their part, for at the same time he gave advice

A. M. 3415. name was Irijah, the son of Shele-B. C. 589. miah, the son of Hananiah; and he took Jeremiah the prophet, saying, Thou fallest away to the Chaldeans.

14 Then said Jeremiah, It is ⁶ false; I fall not away to the Chaldeans. But he hearkened not to him; so Irijah took Jeremiah, and brought him to the princes.

15 Wherefore the princes were wroth with Jeremiah, and smote him, ^k and put him in prison in the house of Jonathan the scribe: for they had made that the prison.

16 ¶ When Jeremiah was entered into ^l the

⁶ Heb. falsehood, or, a lie.—^k Chap. xxxviii. 26.—^l Chapter xxxviii. 6.

both to the king and people how they might, in some measure at least, escape the judgments he had denounced against them; nor had he now any design to flee to the Chaldeans; so far from it, that, when the city was taken, and the captain of the guard gave him his choice, either to go along with him to Babylon, or to go back to Gedaliah, whom the king of Babylon had left as deputy governor in Judea, he chose rather to go and live under Gedaliah's government in a poor condition, than to enjoy protection and plenty in an idolatrous country. But he hearkened not unto him—The captain of the ward would not believe him, but carried him before the princes.

Verse 15. Wherefore the princes were wroth—
These princes seem to have been much more hostile to the prophet than those that were in the time of Jehoiakim, (see chap. xxxvi. 19.) for they proceed here merely upon the captain's information, and, treating him as guilty, without any proof, cruelly cause him to be beaten, though entirely innocent, and put into a most miserable dungeon. In the house of Jonathan the scribe—"There is nothing extraordinary," says Blaney, "in making the dwelling-house of a great man a prison, according to either the ancient or modern manners of the East:
see Gen. xxxix. 20; even in the royal palace itself
we find there was a prison, chap. xxxii. 2." Mr.
Harmer (chap. viii. obs. 37) quotes the following passage from a MS. of Sir John Chardin:—"The eastern prisons are not public buildings erected for that purpose; but a part of the house in which their criminal judges dwell. As the governor and provost of a town, or the captain of the watch, imprison such as are accused in their own houses, they set apart a canton of them for that purpose, when they are put into these offices, and choose for the jailer
the most proper person they can find of their domestics." Thus Mr. Harmer thinks that Jonathan's house became a prison in consequence of his being a royal scribe, or, as we should term him, secretary of state.

Verse 16. When Jeremiah was entered into the dungeon—Hebrew אל בית הכור, into the house of the pit, ditch, or lake; and into the cabins—Or,

A. M. 3415. dungeon, and into the ⁷cabins, and
B. C. 589. Jeremiah had remained there many days;

17 Then Zedekiah the king sent, and took him out: and the king asked him secretly in his house, and said, Is there any word from the LORD? And Jeremiah said, There is: for, said he, thou shalt be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon.

18 Moreover, Jeremiah said unto King Zedekiah, What have I offended against thee, or cells, as החניות signifies. "From comparing this place with chap. xxxviii. 6, it seems likely that this dungeon was a deep pit, sunk perpendicularly like a well, in the middle court or quadrangle, around which the great houses were built; and that in the sides of it, near the bottom, were scooped niches, like the cabins of a ship, for the separate lodgment of the unfortunate persons who were let down there. Hence also it may be, that the same word here rendered dungeon is frequently put for the grave; the ancient repositories of the dead being often constructed with niches, in the same manner in which the bodies were placed, separately. Accordingly we read, Isa. xiv. 15, Yet thou shalt be brought down to the grave, to the sides of the pit, אל ירכתי בור. How long Jeremiah was forced to remain in this miserable place is not said, but it seems from ver. 19, that it was until the Chaldean army was returned to the siege.

⁷ Or, cells.

Verse 17. Then Zedekiah the king sent and took him out—When the vain hopes with which they had fed themselves, and on the ground of which they had re-enslaved their servants, were all vanished away, then they were in a greater consternation than ever: and then the king sent, in all haste, for the prophet, to see if he could give him any hope of their deliverance. When the Chaldeans were withdrawn, he only sent to desire the prophet to pray for him, but now, the city being again invested, he sent for him to consult him: thus gracious will men be when pangs come upon them! He asked him secretly in his house—Being ashamed to be seen in his company: Is there any word from the Lord?—That is, Hath God revealed any thing to thee concerning what will be the issue of the return of the Chaldean army to the siege of the city? Canst thou give us any hopes that they will again retire? What need had Zedekiah to make this inquiry, when God, by this prophet, had so often revealed his will to him in this matter? Observe, reader, those that will not hearken to God's admonitions when they are in prosperity, would be glad of his consolations when they are in adversity; and expect that his ministers should then speak words of peace to them. But how can they expect it? what have they to do with peace? Jeremiah said, There is, for thou shalt be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon— against thy servants, or against this people, that ye have put me in prison? A. M. 3115

B. C. 589.

19 Where are now your prophets which prophesied unto you, saying, The king of Babylon shall not come against you, nor against this land?

20 Therefore, hear now, I pray thee, O my lord the king: ⁸let my supplication, I pray thee, be accepted before thee; that thou cause me not to return to the house of Jonathan the scribe, lest I die there.

⁸ Heb. let my supplication fall.

Here we have an instance of that freedom and firmness of mind which belong to them who truly live in the fear of God, and put their trust in him. Jeremiah's life and comfort are in Zedekiah's hands, and he has now an important petition to present to him; and yet, having this opportunity, he tells him plainly that there is a word from the Lord, but no word of comfort to him, or his people; but that destruction awaits them: see the difference between his spirit and that of Zedekiah. Though a king, Zedekiah dares not run the risk of offending his courtiers, who were his subjects and servants, while the prophet dares denounce the king's ruin to himself, not knowing but such integrity might cost him his life. If he had consulted with flesh and blood, he would have given the king a plausible answer, and not have told him the worst at this time, especially as he had so often told it him before. But Jeremiah was one that had obtained mercy of the Lord to be faithful, and would not, to obtain mercy of man, be unfaithful either to God, or to his prince, or to his people; he therefore tells him the truth, and the whole truth, which to know would be a kindness to the king, in order that, being forewarned of the approaching calamity, he might be the better prepared for it.

Verses 18-21. Moreover Jeremiah said, What have I offended against thee—What law have I broken? What injury have I done to thee, or thy people, or government, that ye have put me in prison—Have put me into the pit or dungeon, as a malefactor of the worst kind? Where are now your prophets—That is, your false prophets? Surely the event has now convinced you, how much they have deceived you: for you see the siege renewed, and the city in imminent danger of being taken. Here we see Jeremiah's confinement in the dungeon had not broken his spirit, or diminished either his zeal or courage in delivering God's message: he still speaks with the greatest boldness, and as one having authority. No doubt he would have been willing, had God called him to it, to seal his testimony with his blood: nevertheless, having so fair an opportunity to obtain relief, he thought it his duty to embrace it, and therefore, with great humility and submissiveness, and in a most respectful manner, presents his supplication, not indeed for an entire deliverance from restraint, which, however, it would

A. M. 3415. 21 Then Zedekiah the king com-
B. C. 589. manded that they should commit Jeremiah ^m into the court of the prison, and that they should give him daily a piece of ^m Chap. xxxii. 2; xxxviii. 13, 28.

not have been unreasonable to ask; but for a less cruel treatment. Then Zedekiah commanded that they should commit Jeremiah into the court of the prison—A more agreeable place of confinement; and that they should give him daily a piece of bread, &c.—Namely, out of the public stock, (for the prison was within the precincts of the court,) in order that he might not die for want. Until all the bread of bread out of the bakers' street, ⁿ until A. M. 3415.

all the bread in the city were spent. B. C. 589.
Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.

ⁿ Chap. xxxviii. 9; lii. 6.

the city was spent—Till the famine forced the city to surrender, chap. lii. 6. This was the king's first order, but afterward it was reversed, by the importunity of the princes and great men, chap. xxxviii. 6, when Jeremiah was again thrown into the dungeon. Though after that he was released from that place, and returned to his former confinement, ibid. verse 28.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

This chapter contains the last transaction in which Jeremiah was prophetically concerned before the taking of Jerusalem.

(1.) The princes of Judah, offended with Jeremiah for repeating to the people, who visited him in the court of the prison, the message he was charged with, chap. xxi. 9, 10, caused him to be cast into a deep and miry dungeon, 1-6. (2.) Ebed-melech obtains an order from the king, and takes him out of it, 7-13. (3.) The king consults with him in private; he seeks to persuade the king to give himself up to the king of Babylon's officers, as the only means of safety to himself, and of preserving the city from destruction, 14-23. (4.) The king assures to him his life, but requires him not to divulge the secret of his conference to the princes, who inquire about it, but receive an evasive answer; and Jeremiah remains in the court of the prison, 24-28.

A. M. 3415. THEN Shephatiah the son of Mat-
B. C. 589. tan, and Gedaliah the son of Pashur, and ^a Jucal the son of Shelemiah, and ^b Pashur the son of Malchiah, ^c heard the words that Jeremiah had spoken unto all the people,
saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, ^d He that remaineth in this city shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth forth to the Chaldeans shall live; for he shall have his life for a prey, and shall live.

^a Chapter xxxvii. 3. — ^b Chapter xxi. 1. — ^c Chapter xxi. 8.
^d Chapter xxi. 9.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Verse 1. Then Shephatiah, &c.—Here are four of the great men, counsellors or chief officers to Zedekiah, named, of whom we have no further mention in holy writ; nor do they deserve to have much inquiry made after them. Some of them were sent by Zedekiah to Jeremiah to inquire concerning the event of the siege, chap. xxxvii. 3, and xxi. 1-9. "The answer which Jeremiah returned by them to the king, he afterward published to the people; which was the occasion of the new troubles recorded in this chapter."—Lowth. The fact seems to have been, that, as he was now removed into a little freer air than he had been in, his friends, or such as had a desire to see him, came to him, and being inquisitive concerning the issue of the siege, he could not but

3 Thus saith the LORD, ^e This city A. M. 3415. shall surely be given into the hand B. C. 589.
of the king of Babylon's army, which shall take it.

4 Therefore the princes said unto the king,
We beseech thee, ^f let this man be put to death:
for thus he weakeneth the hands of the men of war that remain in this city, and the hands of all the people, in speaking such words unto them; for this man seeketh not the ^g welfare of this people, but the hurt.

^e Chapter xxi. 10; xxxii. 3. — ^f Chapter xxvi. 11. — ^g Heb.
peace.

tell them what he knew of the mind of God, and advise them the best way he could for their safety. Some of them, it is likely, went to these princes, and informed them of what they had heard from the prophet.

Verses 2-5. Thus saith the Lord, He that goeth forth to the Chaldeans shall live—This had been the constant tenor of this prophet's prophecies. The crime of which he was now accused, seems to lie in this, that in such a time of danger he should repeat this prophecy, and also advise the people to leave the city, and go out to the Chaldeans, telling them that if they did so, though the city would be lost, yet they should save their lives, which might induce some to desert their posts. This they interpret to be not seeking the welfare of the people, but their hurt; though, indeed, their welfare was

A. M. 3415. B. C. 589. 5 Then Zedekiah the king said, Behold, he is in your hand: for the king is not he that can do any thing against you.

6 Then took they Jeremiah, and cast him into the dungeon of Malchiah the son of Hammelech, that was in the court of the prison: and they let down Jeremiah with cords. And in the dungeon there was no water, but mire: so Jeremiah sunk in the mire.

5 Chap. xxxvii. 21.—2 Or, of the king.

that alone which he sought, knowing that there was no other way for them to save their lives, but by submitting to the Chaldeans. The great men, however, did not believe it; for they would not form their judgments on the revelations which God had been pleased to make of his will, but were determined to judge of their safety from what they wished. Hence, for any one not to be of their opinion was to be an enemy to the state. *Therefore the princes said unto the king—See chap. xxxvi. 12, 21; We beseech thee, let this man be put to death—His crime deserves no less a punishment; for he weakeneth the hands of the men of war—*By making them despair of success. *Then the king said, Behold he is in your hand—*At your disposal; I give him up into your power. Though Zedekiah was convinced that Jeremiah was a prophet sent of God, yet he had not courage to own this conviction, but weakly yielded to the violence of his persecutors. *For the king is not he that can do anything against you—*He speaks as one who did not dare, in such difficult times, to contradict the great men about him. Blaney renders the clause, "For the king can carry no point in competition with you;" observing, "The king evidently speaks this in disgust with the princes for endeavouring to frustrate his clemency. He had once rescued Jeremiah out of their hands, and taken him under his royal protection. But his prerogative, he tells them, was likely to avail but little when opposed by their obstinate and repeated importunities. The power was in reality theirs and not his."

Verse 6. *Then they took Jeremiah and cast him into the dungeon of Malchiah—*A place of much the same nature with that mentioned chap. xxxvii. 16, but in another prison. *And they let down Jeremiah with cords—*It seems there was no passage into this dungeon by stairs, and, as it was deep, they were obliged to let him down in this manner. *So Jeremiah sunk in the mire—*Which was in the bottom of this pit. Josephus asserts that he sunk up to his neck in it, and adds, that their intention in putting him into so foul a place was, that he might perish in it, Antiq., lib. ix. cap. 10. It has been thought by some, that during his abode in this loathsome place he composed the melancholy meditations contained in the third chapter of his Lamentations; but this seems highly improbable.

A. M. 3415. B. C. 589. 7 ¶ Now when Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, one of the eunuchs which was in the king's house, heard that they had put Jeremiah in the dungeon; the king then sitting in the gate of Benjamin;

8 Ebed-melech went forth out of the king's house, and spake to the king, saying,

9 My lord the king, these men have done evil in all that they have done to Jeremiah the prophet, whom they have cast into the dun-h Chap. xxxix. 16.

Verses 7-9. Now when Ebed-melech the Ethiopian—Or Cushite, as the Hebrew is. His country seems to be mentioned to let us know that this prophet of the Lord found more kindness from a stranger, who was a native heathen, than from his own countrymen; *one of the eunuchs which was in the king's house—*That is, one of the court officers. It is probable that the princes had put Jeremiah into this miserable place privately, but by some means the report of what they had done providentially reached this officer's ears. *The king then sitting in the gate of Benjamin—*Namely, to hear the complaints of the people, and to administer justice; the courts for that purpose being usually held in the gates of the city. *Ebed-melech went forth and spake to the king—*The zeal as well as courage of this good officer was very remarkable. He did not stay till the king returned to his house, but went to him as he was sitting in the gate administering justice, where doubtless he was not alone, but was probably attended by some of those very princes who had thrown Jeremiah into the dungeon: Ebed-melech, however, was not afraid of them, but complains openly to the king of their cruelty to Jeremiah, *saying, My lord the king, these men have done evil in all that they have done to Jeremiah—*They deal unjustly with him, for he had not deserved any punishment at all, and they deal barbarously with him, so as they used not to deal with the vilest malefactors. *And he is like to die—*Hebrew, ויָמָוֶה תַּחְתִּי, *he will die upon the spot; for hunger, for there is no bread—*That is, as some interpret the clause, "There was no need for those who desired his death to put him into so filthy and loathsome a place; since, if he had continued in the court of the prison, he must have died through the famine which threatens the city. The words, however, are more literally rendered, When there is no longer any bread in the city. Ebed-melech supposed with reason that when the bread failed, Jeremiah must perish with hunger in the dungeon; for he would be of course neglected, and not have it in his power to make those shifts for subsistence which persons at liberty might avail themselves of. Such was the compassion which the stranger had for the Lord's prophet, whom his own countrymen would have destroyed! And God, who put these sentiments of pity and benevolence into Ebed-melech's heart, afterward recompensed him by delivering him

A. M. 3415. geon; and ³ he is like to die for
B. C. 589. hunger in the place where he is: for there is no more bread in the city.

10 Then the king commanded Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Take from hence thirty men ⁴ with thee, and take up Jeremiah the prophet out of the dungeon, before he die.

11 So Ebed-melech took the men with him, and went into the house of the king under the treasury, and took thence old cast clouts and old rotten rags, and let them down by cords into the dungeon to Jeremiah.

12 And Ebed-melech the Ethiopian said unto Jeremiah, Put now these old cast clouts and rotten rags under thine arm-holes under from death when the city was taken, chap. xxxix. 15, 16. But how remarkable it is, that in the whole city of Jerusalem no person was found, save this Ethiopian, to appear publicly, as the friend and advocate of the prophet in his distress! This is the justice of God vindicated in giving up this people into the hands of their enemies, when there was not a single person of their nation willing to hazard his life or character in the cause of God, to save the life of one who had been known among them for a true prophet between twenty and thirty years.

³ Heb. he will die.—⁴ Heb. in thy hand.—¹ Verse 6.

Verses 10–13. Then the king commanded, &c.—The king, who a little while ago durst do nothing against the princes, has now his heart wonderfully and suddenly changed, and will have Jeremiah released in defiance of them; ordering no fewer than thirty men, and those probably of the life-guard, to be employed in fetching him out of the dungeon, lest the princes should raise a party to oppose it. So Ebed-melech took the men—He lost no time, but immediately went about this good work, and used as much tenderness as despatch in accomplishing it; going into the king's house and fetching thence old soft rags and pieces of cloth, to be put under the prophet's arm-holes, to prevent the cords, wherewith he was to be drawn up, from hurting him. This circumstance, trivial as it may appear, is here particularly noticed and recorded to the honour of this pious Gentile; for God is not unrighteous to forget any work or labour of love which is shown to his people or ministers; no, nor any circumstance thereof, Heb. vi. 10. Observe, reader, those that are in distress should not only be relieved, but relieved with compassion and marks of respect, all which things will be remembered, and will be found to a good account, in the day of final recompense.

Verse 14. Then Zedekiah sent, &c.—Here we have an account of the honour which the king did the prophet after he was fetched out of the dungeon: he sent for him to advise with him privately what measures it would be best to take in the present calamitous state of public affairs. The interview took the cords. And Jeremiah did so. A. M. 3415.

B. C. 589. 13 ¹ So they drew up Jeremiah with cords, and took him up out of the dungeon: and Jeremiah remained ² in the court of the prison.

14 ¶ Then Zedekiah the king sent, and took Jeremiah the prophet unto him into the ³ third entry that is in the house of the LORD: and the king said unto Jeremiah, I will ask thee a thing; hide nothing from me.

15 Then Jeremiah said unto Zedekiah, If I declare it unto thee, wilt thou not surely put me to death? and if I give thee counsel, wilt thou not hearken unto me?

16 So Zedekiah the king sware secretly unto Jeremiah, saying, As the LORD liveth, ¹ that place in the third entry in, or leading toward, or adjoining to, the house of the Lord. Dr. Lightfoot explains this of the third passage or gate which lay between the king's palace, where the prison was, and the temple, whither the king now retreated for fear of the Chaldean army. And the king said, I will ask thee a thing—Hebrew, שאל אנ דבר, I am asking thee a word, namely, of prediction, counsel, or comfort, a word from the Lord, chap. xxxvii. 17. Whatever word thou hast for me, hide it not from me—Let me know the worst. He had been plainly told what would be the issue of the measures they were pursuing; but, like Balaam, he asks again, in hopes to get a more pleasing answer; as if God, who is in one mind, were altogether such a one as himself, who was in many minds.

* Chap. xxxvii. 21.—² Or, principal.—¹ Isa. lvii. 16.

Verse 15. Then Jeremiah said, If I declare it unto thee, wilt thou not surely put me to death?—“The prophet had so much experience of the unsteadiness of the king's temper, of his backwardness in following good counsel, and want of courage to stand by those that durst advise him well, that he might, with good reason, resolve not to venture his life to serve a man that was in a manner incapable of being directed. And although God had showed him what would be the effect of his advice, if it were followed, (verse 17,) yet it doth not appear that he had commanded him to make this known to Zedekiah.”—Lowth. And if I give thee counsel, wilt thou not hearken unto me?—Rather, wilt thou hearken unto me? Which is undoubtedly the sense intended, unless we translate the words, as some do, without an interrogation, thou wilt not hearken unto me. So Jeremiah might well conclude from the king's former behaviour, for he had often been advised by him, but would never take his advice, and the prophet knew the same would be the case still, that the king would be overruled by a corrupt court and his own aversion to change his state as a king to the state of a prisoner.

Verse 16. The king sware, As the Lord liveth, that made this soul—That is, who gave me my life and thee thine, and who, as he is the author, so he is the

A. M. 3415. made us this soul, I will not put thee
B. C. 589. to death, neither will I give thee into the hand of these men that seek thy life.

17 Then said Jeremiah unto Zedekiah, Thus saith the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel; If thou wilt assuredly ^mgo forth ⁿunto the king of Babylon's princes, then thy soul shall live, and this city shall not be burned with fire; and thou shalt live and thy house.

18 But if thou wilt not go forth to the king of Babylon's princes, then shall this city be given into the hand of the Chaldeans, and they shall burn it with fire, and ^othou shalt not escape out of their hand.

19 And Zedekiah the king said unto Jeremiah, I am afraid of the Jews that are fallen to the Chaldeans, lest they deliver me into their hand, and they ^pmock me.

20 But Jeremiah said, They shall not deliver

^m 2 Kings xxiv. 12.—ⁿ Chapter xxxix. 3.—^o Chap. xxxii. 4; xxxiv. 3; Verse 23.—^p 1 Sam. xxxi. 4.

preserver, of our life and being: who may uphold or take them away as and when he pleases. I will not put thee to death, &c.—Zedekiah says nothing to the prophet as to obeying his counsel, but he gives him the security of his oath that he would neither himself slay him, by giving an immediate command from himself for his being slain, nor surrender him up into the hands of those princes who, he perceived, sought his life.

Verses 17, 18. Then said Jeremiah, Thus saith the Lord—Here we have the good advice which Jeremiah gave him, with the reasons why the king ought to take it; reasons drawn, not from any prudence or politics of his own, but in the name of the Lord, the God of hosts, and God of Israel. If thou wilt assuredly go forth unto the king of Babylon's princes—Those mentioned chap. xxxix. 3, and submit thyself to them; then thy soul shall live—That is, thou shalt live; and this city shall not be burned, &c.—Thou shalt save the city from destruction by fire, and thy wives and children from suffering a violent death. It must be observed that Nebuchadnezzar was not now in person at the siege of Jerusalem, but at Riblah in Syria, chap. xxxix. 5, 9. His army was commanded by his generals; and it is to them, here termed princes, that Jeremiah counsels Zedekiah to go forth, and through them to submit himself to the king, by whom he had been established on the throne. But if thou wilt not go forth, &c.—As he had before used exhortations and promises, so here he uses warnings and threatenings to prevail with the king to take that course by which alone he could preserve Jerusalem, and himself, and family from ruin.

Verses 19, 20. Zedekiah said, I am afraid of the Jews, &c.—The sense seems to be, that he was afraid lest the Chaldeans, when he had given himthee. Obey, I beseech thee, the voice ^{A. M. 3415.} of the LORD, which I speak unto ^{B. C. 589.} thee: so it shall be well unto thee, and thy soul shall live.

21 But if thou refuse to go forth, this is the word that the LORD hath showed me.

22 And behold, all the women that are left in the king of Judah's house shall be brought forth to the king of Babylon's princes, and those women shall say, ⁶Thy friends have set thee on, and have prevailed against thee: thy feet are sunk in the mire, and they are turned away back.

23 So they shall bring out all thy wives and ^athy children to the Chaldeans: and ^rthou shalt not escape out of their hand, but shalt be taken by the hand of the king of Babylon, and ⁷thou shalt cause this city to be burned with fire.

⁶ Heb. Men of thy peace.—^a Chap. xxxix. 6; xli. 10.—^r Verse 18.—⁷ Heb. thou shalt burn, &c.

self up to them, should deliver him into the hands of those Jews who had fallen to them, and they should insult over and deride him, as being obliged at last to do what he had blamed, and, if he had been able, would have punished them for doing. Thus the Vulgate, Solicitus sum propter Judæos, qui transfugerint ad Chaldaeos: ne forte tradar in manus eorum et illudant mihi. He was conscious he had acted a base part in violating the oath of homage and fidelity which he had given to the king of Babylon, and that he was considered by many of the Jews, especially by those who had gone over to the Chaldeans, as having ruined his country by his impolitic measures. Thus he was more concerned for his honour than for his life, and the lives of his wives and children, and the safety of the whole city. And thus often great persons are more patient of death than of reproach and dishonour. But Jeremiah said, They shall not deliver thee—The Chaldeans will not do so base an act, but deal with thee as with a prince. God foresees all possible events, and what would be the consequence of the several counsels men propose to themselves. Obey, I beseech thee, the voice of the Lord: so it shall be well with thee—Let not thy fears, therefore, respecting the treatment thou wilt meet with, be a temptation to thee to disobey the command of God: for if thou doest as thou art advised to do, thou shalt live—Though not in that splendour in which thou now livest, yet in a much more comfortable state than if the city be taken by storm.

Verses 21-23. But if thou refuse, this is the word that the Lord hath showed me—Namely, what follows in the next two verses. Behold, all the women that are left in the king of Judah's house—The king's wives, his daughters, and the other women that belong to the king's court and family, shall be-

A. M. 3415. 24 ¶ Then said Zedekiah unto
B. C. 589. Jeremiah, Let no man know of these words, and thou shalt not die.

25 But if the princes hear that I have talked with thee, and they come unto thee, and say unto thee, Declare unto us now what thou hast said unto the king, hide it not from us, and we will not put thee to death; also what the king said unto thee: -

26 Then thou shalt say unto them, ^a I presented my supplications before the king, that

^a Chap. xxxvii. 20.—^t Chap. xxxvii. 15.—^s Heb. they come a prey to the chief officers of the king of Babylon's army. And those women shall say, Thy friends have set thee on, &c.—They shall tell thee that, for these thy calamities, thou mayest thank thy hearkening to thy priests and false prophets; (called in the Hebrew the men of his peace, because they soothed up the king with the promises of peace;) in other words, those very women shall then reproach thee for having suffered thyself to be ensnared by the ill advice of thy friends, and brought under insuperable difficulties. They will say to thee, Thy feet are sunk in the mire—Thou art plunged into calamities from which thou canst not extricate thyself. And they are turned away back—Even thy friends, by following whose counsel thou art brought into these snares and troubles, forsake thee in thy distress, every one shifting for himself. And thus shall a greater evil come upon thee than that which thou fearest, and the fear of which makes the unwilling to comply with the will of God concerning thee. So shall they bring out all thy wives, &c.—The prophet partly repeats and partly enlarges on the argument advanced in the former verse, with a view to prevail on the king to surrender himself to the Chaldeans. He urges, that if he would not do it, not only himself but his wives and children also would fall into his enemies' hands, and that their reflection upon him, for the misery he had brought upon them and his country, would be no small aggravation of his affliction.

Verses 24-27. Then said Zedekiah, Let no man know of these words, &c.—Keep what has passed between us secret, and I will keep my promise to thee of preserving thy life. These words sufficient-he would not cause me to return ^t to A. M. 3415.

Jonathan's house, to die there. B. C. 589.

27 Then came all the princes unto Jeremiah, and asked him: and he told them according to all these words that the king had commanded. So ^s they left off speaking with him; for the matter was not perceived.

28 So ^u Jeremiah abode in the court of the prison until the day that Jerusalem was taken: and he was there when Jerusalem was taken.

were silent from him.—^u Chap. xxxvii. 21; xxxix. 14.

ly show that Zedekiah stood in fear of his courtiers. This is the righteous judgment of God, that those who will not sanctify the Lord of hosts in their hearts, and make him their fear, shall fear men, whom to fear is to be in a state of ignoble and miserable bondage. But if the princes hear, &c.—It was hardly possible that Zedekiah should have this private discourse with Jeremiah, but some or other of his courtiers should come to the knowledge of it. But here we see in what a state of miserable subjection this poor prince was to them, in that he could discourse to nobody, but they must come and inquire what he had said. Thou shalt say, I presented my supplication, &c.—Jeremiah had been formerly kept prisoner in Jonathan's house, chap. xxxvii. 15. But the last time he was imprisoned was in the dungeon of Hammelech, verse 6 of this chapter: a place which, perhaps, might at this time be put to some other use. Then came all the princes to Jeremiah—As the king suspected, so it came to pass: his private discourse with the prophet transpired, and all the princes then at court came and inquired of Jeremiah what was the substance of it. And he told them according to all that the king had commanded—He told them part of the truth, but not all, concealing from them the advice which he had given to the king, with relation to the questions he had proposed to him. For a man is not bound in all cases to discover the whole truth, particularly to those who have no right to the knowledge of it, which, in this case, these princes had not. So the matter was not perceived—The princes never got to know what was the principal subject of the king's conference with the prophet.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

This chapter contains an account, (1.) Of the taking of Jerusalem by the Chaldean army, after eighteen months siege, 1-3. (2.) Of the flight of Zedekiah, and the particulars of his punishment, after he was taken and brought before the king of Babylon, 4-7. (3.) Of the burning of the city, and removal of the people, a few of the poor only excepted, 8-10. (4.) Of the release of Jeremiah, and the kindness wherewith he was treated, in consequence of a special charge from Nebuchadnezzar, 11-14. (5.) The piety of Ebed-melech is rewarded with a promise of personal safety amidst the ensuing public calamities, 15-18.

A. M. 3416. B. C. 588. IN the ^aninth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the tenth month, came Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon and all his army against Jerusalem, and they besieged it.

B. C. 588. 2 And in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in the fourth month, the ninth day of the month, the city was broken up.

3 ^bAnd all the princes of the king of Babylon came in, and sat in the middle gate, even Nergal-sharezer, Samgar-nebo, Sarsechim, Rab-saris, Nergal-sharezer, Rab-mag, with all the residue of the princes of the king of Babylon.

4 ¶ ^cAnd it came to pass, that when Zedekiah the king of Judah saw them, and all the men of war, then they fled, and went forth out of the city by night, by the way of the king's garden, by the gate betwixt the two walls: and he went out the way of the plain.

5 But the Chaldeans' army pursued after them, and ^dovertook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho: and when they had taken him, they brought him up to Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon to ^eRiblah in the land of Hamath, where he ^fgave judgment upon him.

6 Then the king of Babylon slew ^{A. M. 3416.} the sons of Zedekiah in Riblah before ^{B. C. 588.} his eyes: also the king of Babylon slew all the nobles of Judah.

7 Moreover ^fhe put out Zedekiah's eyes, and bound him ²with chains, to carry him to Babylon.

8 ¶ ^gAnd the Chaldeans burned the king's house, and the houses of the people, with fire, and brake down the walls of Jerusalem.

9 ^hThen Nebuzar-adan the ³captain ⁴of the guard carried away captive into Babylon the remnant of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to him, with the rest of the people that remained.

10 But Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard left of the poor of the people, which had nothing, in the land of Judah, and gave them vineyards and fields ⁵at the same time.

11 ¶ Now Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon gave charge concerning Jeremiah ⁶to Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard, saying, 12 Take him, and ⁷look well to him, and do him no harm; but do unto him even as he shall say unto thee.

^a 2 Kings xv. 1-4; Chapter lii. 4-7. — ^b Chapter xxxviii. 17. ^c 2 Kings xxv. 4; Chap. lii. 7, &c. — ^d Chap. xxxii. 4; xxxviii. 18, 23. — ^e 2 Kings xxiii. 33. — ^f Heb. spake with him judgments, Chap. iv. 12. — ^g Ezekiel xii. 13, compared with Chap. xxxii. 4. — ^h Heb. with two brazen chains, or, fetters.

¹ 2 Kings xxv. 9; Chapter xxxviii. 18; lii. 13. — ² 2 Kings xxv. 11; Chapter lii. 15. — ³ Or, chief marshal. — ⁴ Heb. chief of the executioners, or slaughtermen, and so verses 10, 11; Gen. xxxvii. 26. — ⁵ Hebrew, in that day. — ⁶ Heb. by the hand of. — ⁷ Heb. set thine eyes upon him.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXIX.

Verses 1-3. In the ninth year of Zedekiah, &c.—See notes on 2 Kings xxv. 1-4. And all the princes of the king of Babylon came in, and sat in the middle gate—Or, the gate of the centre, as Blaney translates it, observing, “The city of Jerusalem stood upon two hills, Zion to the south, and Acra to the north, with a deep valley between them. The gate of the centre, as the term seems plainly to import, was a gate of communication in the middle of the valley between the two parts of the city, sometimes called the higher and the lower city. The Chaldeans entered the city on the north side by a breach in the walls, and immediately rushing forward, and posting themselves in this gate, in the very heart of the city, they became thereby masters at will of the whole. Zedekiah, with his troops, perceiving this, fled out of the opposite gate on the south side.” Even Nergal-sharezer, Samgar-nebo, &c.—It was customary among the Chaldeans to give the names of their idols, as an additional title or mark of honour, to persons of distinction: see note on Isa. xxxix. 1. Nergal was the name of an idol worshipped by the Cuthites, 2 Kings xvii. 30. Nebo was a Babylonish deity, Isa. xlv. 1.

Verses 4-10. They fled by the gate betwixt the two walls—Betwixt the wall and the outworks, or betwixt the old wall of the city and the new one which Hezekiah built, of which mention is made 2 Chron. xxxii. 5. See note on 2 Kings xxv. 4. Blaney thinks it probable that between these two walls there might be a private postern through which the king and his followers might slip out unperceived by the besiegers, who surrounded the city, and undoubtedly kept a strict watch on the principal gates. The Chaldean army pursued, &c.—For an illustration of this and the five following verses, see notes on 2 Kings xxv. 5-12.

Verses 11, 12. Now Nebuchadrezzar gave charge concerning Jeremiah—He had undoubtedly been informed of the advice which Jeremiah had given, both to the king and people, to submit themselves to his authority: which advice, if it had been taken, would have prevented the charge and labour of so long a siege, and the bloodshed that attended it. Saying, Take him and look well to him—Through this order of the king of Babylon, God fulfilled his promise made chap. xv. 11, I will cause the enemy to treat thee well in the day of evil. Jeremiah had been faithful to his God as a prophet, and now God approves himself faithful to him, and the promise he had made him. Now he is comforted, according to the time wherein he had been afflicted, and sees many fall on each hand while he is safe. The false

A. M. 3416. 13 So Nebuzar-adan the captain of
B. C. 588. the guard sent, and Nebushasban, Rab-saris, and Nergal-sharezer, Rab-mag, and all the king of Babylon's princes;

14 Even they sent, ¹ and took Jeremiah out of the court of the prison, and committed him ² unto Gedaliah the son of ¹ Ahikam the son of Shaphan, that he should carry him home: so he dwelt among the people.

15 ¶ Now the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah, while he was shut up in the court of the prison, saying,

16 Go and speak to ^m Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Thus saith the LORD A. M. 3416.

of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, B. C. 588.
ⁿ I will bring my words upon this city for evil, and not for good; and they shall be accomplished in that day before thee.

17 But I will deliver thee in that day, saith the LORD: and thou shalt not be given into the hand of the men of whom thou art afraid.

18 For I will surely deliver thee, and thou shalt not fall by the sword, but ^o thy life shall be for a prey unto thee: ^p because thou hast put thy trust in me, saith the LORD.

¹ Chapter xxxviii. 28. — ^k Chapter xl. 5. — ^l Chapter xxvi. 24.
^m Chap. xxxviii. 7, 12.

ⁿ Daniel ix. 12. — ^o Chap. xxi. 9; xlv. 5. — ^p 1 Chron. v. 20; Psa. xxxvii. 40.

prophets fell by those judgments which they affirmed would never come, (chap. xiv. 15,) which made their misery the more terrible to them. The true prophet escaped those judgments which he said would come, and that made his escape the more comfortable to him. The same persons who were the instruments of punishing the persecutors, were the instruments of relieving the persecuted; and Jeremiah did not the less prize his deliverance, because it came by the hand of the king of Babylon, but saw thereby more of the hand of God in it.

Verses 13; 14. Nebuzar-adan sent and took Jeremiah out of the court of the prison—Where he was when the city was taken, chap. xxxviii. 28; and committed him unto Gedaliah—Namely, after he had been carried out of Jerusalem with the rest of the captives as far as Ramah: see chap. xl. 1-5. Observe here, reader, a king of Israel and his princes put the Lord's prophet in prison, and a heathen king and his princes took him out! God's people and ministers have often met with fairer and kinder treatment among strangers and infidels than among those who call themselves of the holy city. St.

Paul found more favour and justice with King Agrippa than with Ananias the high-priest. But we shall meet with a more full account of Jeremiah's release, and of the kind treatment he received from the Chaldeans, in the next chapter.

Verses 15-18. The word of the Lord came to Jeremiah when he was in the court of the prison—These words give us to understand that this and the next three verses respect a matter which took place before the things related in the preceding part of this chapter, namely, the kindness which Ebed-melech showed to Jeremiah in his distress. Here God commissions his prophet to promise him a recompense for that kindness. He had relieved a prophet in the name of a prophet, and he is here assured he shall receive a prophet's reward. This message was delivered to him immediately after he had shown that mercy to Jeremiah; but it is mentioned here after the taking of the city, to show that, as God was kind to Jeremiah at that time, so he was to Ebed-melech for his sake; and it was a special favour to both, as they no doubt accounted it, that they were not involved in the common calamities.

CHAPTER XL.

In this, and the four following chapters, we have an account of the fate of those few Jews that were left in Canaan, after their brethren were carried into captivity to Babylon. And it is a very mournful story. For, though at first there was some prospect of their doing well, they soon appeared to be as obstinate in sin as ever, unhumiliated and unreformed, till, all the rest of the judgments threatened, Deut. xxviii., being executed upon them, that which completes the threatenings there mentioned, recorded in the last verse of that dreadful chapter, was also accomplished. The Lord shall bring thee into Egypt again. In this chapter we have, (1.) A more particular account of Jeremiah's discharge, and his settlement with Gedaliah, whom Nebuchadnezzar had made governor of the poor Jews, 1-6. (2.) The great resort of the fugitive Jews from the neighbouring countries to Gedaliah, and their agreeable condition with him, 7-12. (3.) Gedaliah is informed of a treacherous design formed against his life by Ishmael, a Jewish prince, instigated by the king of the Ammonites, but does not credit the information, 13-16.

A. M. 3416.
B. C. 588.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, ^a after that Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had let him go from Ramah, when he had taken him being bound in ¹ chains among all that were carried away captive of Jerusalem and Judah, which were carried away captive unto Babylon.

2 And the captain of the guard took Jeremiah, and ^b said unto him, The LORD thy God hath pronounced this evil upon this place.

3 Now the LORD hath brought it, and done according as he hath said: ^c because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed his voice, therefore this thing is come upon you.

4 And now, behold, I loose thee this day from the chains which ² were upon thy hand. ^d If it seem good unto thee to come with me into Babylon, come; and ³ I will look well unto thee: but if it seem ill unto thee to come with me into Babylon, forbear: behold, ^e all the land is before thee: whither it seemeth good and convenient for thee to go, thither go.

5 Now while he was not yet gone back, he

^a Chapter xxxix. 14.—¹ Or, manacles.—^b Chapter i. 7.
^c Deut. xxix. 24, 25; Dan. ix. 11.—² Or, are upon thy hand.
^d Chap. xxxix. 12.—³ Heb. I will set mine eye upon thee.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XL.

Verse 1. The word which came to Jeremiah, &c.—This relates to the prophecy recorded chap. xlii. 7, which was occasioned by the story that here follows concerning Ishmael's conspiracy against Gedaliah. After that Nebuzar-adan had let him go from Ramah—After Jeremiah was taken out of the court of the prison, he was carried, probably by mistake, expressly contrary to Nebuchadnezzar's orders, among the other prisoners to Ramah, a city in the tribe of Benjamin near Gibeon. Here, it seems, the mistake was discovered, and the prophet was discharged by the special order of the court.

Verses 2-4. The captain of the guard said, The Lord thy God hath pronounced this evil, &c.—Although each of the Gentile or heathen nations worshipped its peculiar god or gods, yet they did not reject or deny the gods of other nations; and therefore the captain of the guard speaks here to Jeremiah of Jehovah as his God, and the God of the Jews, and attributes all the calamities which had befallen this people to the indignation of this their God against them, because they had not obeyed and served him as they ought to have done. This seems a much more probable interpretation of Nebuzar-adan's words than to understand them as expressive of his faith in the living and true God, of whom it is likely he knew little or nothing. And now, behold, I loose thee this day, &c.—This captain of the guard, like a faithful servant, remembers his prince's orders about the prophet, and offers to him greater said, Go back also to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan,

A. M. 3416.
B. C. 588.

^f whom the king of Babylon hath made governor over the cities of Judah, and dwell with him among the people: or go wheresoever it seemeth convenient unto thee to go. So the captain of the guard gave him victuals and a reward, and let him go.

6 ^g Then went Jeremiah unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to ^h Mizpah; and dwelt with him among the people that were left in the land.

7 ⁱ Now when all the captains of the forces which were in the fields, even they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam governor in the land, and had committed unto him men, and women, and children, and of ^k the poor of the land, of them that were not carried away captive to Babylon;

8 Then they came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, ¹ even Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and Johanan and Jonathan the sons of Kareah, and Seraiah the son of Tanhumeth, and the sons of ^e Gen. xx. 15.—^f 2 Kings xxv. 22.—^g Chapter xxxix. 14.

^h Judges xx. 1; 1 Sam. vii. 5, 6; 1 Kings xv. 22.—ⁱ 2 Kings xxv. 23.—^k Chapter xxxix. 10.—¹ Chap. xli. 1.

favour than to any of the other prisoners. With respect to them, he uses the power which conquest had given him over them, and they must go whither the king of Babylon pleased to send them; but he gives Jeremiah liberty to choose whether he would go along with him to Babylon, or stay in his own country, assuring him that if he would go to Babylon he would take particular care of him.

Verses 5, 6. Now while he was not yet gone back—Hebrew, וְעַד שֶׁלֹּא יָשׁוּב, while he would not yet return, he said, &c.—The prophet seems to have been in doubt at first what course to take. The Chaldee reads the clause, If thou wilt not abide [here] go back to Gedaliah, understanding the verb יָשׁוּב as if it were derived from יָשַׁב, to abide, words of a like sound having often a promiscuous signification. This Gedaliah was a person of considerable interest and authority. So the captain of the guard gave him victuals and a reward—It was by the particular order of Nebuchadnezzar that the prophet was used in this kind manner. Then went Jeremiah unto Gedaliah to Mizpah—A town in the confines of Judah and Benjamin, where Gedaliah fixed his residence, being a place of note in the times of the judges, and afterward rebuilt by King Asa. See the margin.

Verses 7-10. Now when all the captains of the forces heard, &c., they came to Gedaliah—By the taking of Jerusalem the Chaldeans made a complete conquest of Judea; whereupon that part of the Jewish army which had escaped destruction dis

A. M. 3416. Ephai the Netophathite, and Jeza-B. C. 588. niah the son of a Maachathite, they and their men.

9 And Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan sware unto them and to their men, saying, Fear not to serve the Chaldeans: dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you.

10 As for me, behold, I will dwell at Mizpah, ⁴to serve the Chaldeans, which will come unto us: but ye, gather ye wine, and summer-fruits, and oil, and put them in your vessels, and dwell in your cities that ye have taken.

11 Likewise when all the Jews that were in Moab, and among the Ammonites, and in Edom, and that were in all the countries, heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant of Judah, and that he had set over them Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan;

12 Even all the Jews returned out of all places whither they were driven, and came to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah, unto A. M. 3416.

Mizpah, and gathered wine and B. C. 588.
summer-fruits very much.

13 ¶ Moreover, Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were in the fields, came to Gedaliah to Mizpah.

14 And said unto him, Dost thou certainly know that ^mBaalis the king of the Ammonites hath sent Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, ⁵to slay thee? But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam believed them not.

15 Then Johanan the son of Kareah spake to Gedaliah in Mizpah secretly, saying, Let me go, I pray thee, and I will slay Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and no man shall know it: wherefore should he slay thee, that all the Jews which are gathered unto thee should be scattered, and the remnant in Judah perish?

16 But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam said unto Johanan the son of Kareah, Thou shalt not do this thing: for thou speakest falsely of Ishmael.

⁴ Heb. to stand before, Deut. i. 38.

^m Chap. xli. 10.—⁵ Heb. to strike thee in soul?

persed themselves into several parts of the country. And Gedaliah sware unto them—They might reasonably suspect that the Chaldeans would have a jealous eye upon any conflux of people to Jerusalem, especially military men, and therefore might be somewhat suspicious of him, who was the Chaldean deputy governor; the securing them from fears on that account was the cause of Gedaliah's giving them this voluntary oath; saying, Fear not to serve the Chaldeans—The same advice Jeremiah had formerly given to the Jews, chap. xxvii. 11. As for me, I will dwell at Mizpah, to serve the Chaldeans—I keep my residence here, a place upon the frontiers, that I may be ready to obey any orders that the king of Babylon sends me by his servants. But ye, gather ye wine, and summer-fruits, and oil—But do you live in the country, and gather such fruits as the country affords, and do not fear being spoiled of them; but do as ye used to do in the times of the greatest peace and security. Wine and oil are here put by a metonymy for grapes and olives. It was now about the month of August, which was the proper season for gathering in the summer-fruits in that country.

Verses 11, 12. Likewise when all the Jews that were in Moab, &c.—Probably, upon the king of Babylon's first invading Judea, many fled, and more as he proceeded in his conquests, overrunning the country; and it is likely, at the taking of the city, many escaped and fled into different countries, as they had opportunity, or judged this or that country would be the safest place of refuge. Some, therefore, fled to Moab, some to Ammon, some to Edom, and some to other countries; but when they heard that the king of Babylon had appointed a governor over the country of their own nation and religion, they returned, and, there being few people left in the land, which was of itself wonderfully fruitful, they gathered a great quantity of grapes and other summer-fruits, such as it produced.

Verses 13–16. Johanan the son of Kareah came to Gedaliah, &c.—They had been with him before, verses 8, 9, but now they come to discover to him a conspiracy formed against his life. And said, Dost thou certainly know, &c.—Or, rather, Dost thou not know, &c.; (which is evidently the sense intended,) that the king of the Ammonites hath sent Ishmael to slay thee?—The king of the Ammonites had concerted this matter with Ishmael, with a design to make the Jews, who still remained in their own country, his vassals: see chap. xli. 10. But Gedaliah believed them not—Not being credulous, or of a suspicious temper. Then Johanan spake to Gedaliah secretly—Finding that Gedaliah took little notice of what he had spoken to him in the presence of the other captains, he goes to him secretly, and offers him his service to prevent the stroke designed against him, suggesting to him, that if he did not value his own life, yet he ought to consider in what a destitute condition the people would be, in case he should be cut off: they were at present but a small remnant, and if that calamity should happen, even this remnant would also perish. But Gedaliah said, Thou shalt not do this thing, for thou speakest falsely of Ishmael—Gedaliah shows in this instance more of that charity that thinks no evil, than of that prudence and discretion which became a chief magistrate. He ought to have been particularly on his guard against one, concerning whose mischievous designs he had received such information; but, alas!

he placed too great confidence in the fidelity of those about him, and this proved ruinous, both to himself and to the poor people whom he was appointed to govern and protect.

CHAPTER XLI.

The black cloud that appeared to be gathering in the foregoing chapter here bursts in a dreadful storm. (1.) Gedaliah, and all the Jews that were with him, are barbarously slain by Ishmael, and a pit is filled with their dead bodies, 1-3, 9. (2.) Eighty devout men who were going to bewail the ruins of Jerusalem and the temple are drawn in by Ishmael, and all, except ten, are likewise murdered, 4-8. (3.) The people that escape the sword are taken prisoners by Ishmael, and carried off toward the country of the Ammonites, 10. (5.) By the courage and conduct of Johanan, though the death of the slain is not revenged, yet the prisoners are recovered, and he, now becoming their commander in chief, designs to carry them into the land of Egypt, to avoid the resentment of the Chaldeans, 11-18.

A. M. 3416.
B. C. 588. NOW it came to pass in the seventh month, ^a that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah the son of Elishama, of the seed royal, and the princes of the king, even ten men with him, came unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to Mizpah; and there they did eat bread together in Mizpah.

2 Then arose Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and the ten men that were with him, and ^b smote Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan with the sword, and slew him, whom the king of Babylon had made governor over the land.

3 Ishmael also slew all the Jews, A. M. 3416.
B. C. 588. that were with him, even with Gedaliah, at Mizpah, and the Chaldeans that were found there, and the men of war.

4 And it came to pass the second day after he had slain Gedaliah, and no man knew it,

5 That there came certain from Shechem, from Shiloh, and from Samaria, even fourscore men, ^c having their beards shaven; and their clothes rent, and having cut themselves, with offerings and incense in their hand, to bring them to ^d the house of the LORD.

^a 2 Kings xxv. 25; Chap. xl. 6, 8. — ^b 2 Kings xxv. 25.

^c Lev. xix. 27, 28; Deut. xiv. 1; Isa. xv. 2. — ^d 2 Kings xxv. 9; 1 Sam. i. 7.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLI.

Verse 1. Now, in the seventh month—Answering partly to our September, and partly to October; two months after the taking of Jerusalem. The murder of Gedaliah gave occasion to the fasts of the seventh month, which the Jews observed after their return from captivity, Zech. vii. 5, 8, 19. Ishmael the son of Nethaniah—The same Ishmael that came to Gedaliah, chap. xl. 8, 9, and to whom he swore protection; of the seed royal—Being of the family of David, he supposed he had a greater right to the government than Gedaliah, and therefore seems to have borne him a grudge: on which account he was the fitter instrument for the king of the Ammonites to make use of; and the princes of the king, even ten men with him—Some of the chief officers of state belonging to Zedekiah. These, undoubtedly, brought a great number of others with them in their retinue, or else they could not have made such a destruction as they did.

Verses 3, 4. Ishmael also slew all the Jews and the men of war—That is, all that joined in opposing him, and in assisting Gedaliah: for several of the commanders, as well as the greater part of the people, were still left alive, as appears by the sequel of the story. And on the second day after, &c., no man knew it—That is, no man who lived at any considerable distance from Mizpah, for Ishmael undoubtedly used every means in his power to keep this slaughter secret, lest the news of it should reach the ears of some of the Chaldean commanders, and so he should be prevented from making his escape.

Verse 5. There came fourscore men, having their beards shaven, &c.—“These were tokens of great mourning, by which these persons expressed their grief for the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple. Such expressions of sorrow were forbidden to be used at funeral obsequies, Lev. xix. 27, 28; but might be lawfully used upon other mournful occasions. With offerings and incense to bring them to the house of the Lord—Some understand this as if devout persons brought their oblations to the place where the altar formerly stood, which they looked upon as consecrated ground; a custom, they think, countenanced by the words of Baruch, chap. i. 10, where the exiles at Babylon are supposed to send money to buy offerings for the altar of the Lord, after that Jerusalem was taken and burned. Others by the house of the Lord understand an altar or place of worship erected by Gedaliah at Mizpah; in imitation of that which was formerly set up there by Samuel, which place continued to be a proseucha, or place of worship, in after times, as appears from 1 Mac. iii. 46. There were many such sanctuaries or places of worship, both in Judea and elsewhere, among the Jewish dispersions.”—Lowth.

A. M. 3416. 6 And Ishmael the son of Nethaniah went forth from Mizpah to meet them,¹ weeping all along as he went: and it came to pass, as he met them, he said unto them, Come to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam.

7 And it was so, when they came into the midst of the city, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah slew them, and cast them into the midst of the pit, he, and the men that were with him.

8 But ten men were found among them that said unto Ishmael, Slay us not: for we have treasures in the field, of wheat, and of barley, and of oil, and of honey. So he forbore, and slew them not among their brethren.

A. M. 3416. 9 Now the pit wherein Ishmael had cast all the dead bodies of the men, whom he had slain² because³ of Gedaliah, was it⁴ which Asa the king had made for fear of Baasha king of Israel: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah filled it with them that were slain.

10 Then Ishmael carried away captive all the residue of the people that were in Mizpah,⁵ even the king's daughters, and all the people that remained in Mizpah,⁶ whom Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had committed to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah carried them away captive, and departed to go over to⁷ the Ammonites.

¹ Heb. in going and weeping.—² Or, near Gedaliah.—³ Heb. by the hand, or, by the side of Gedaliah.

⁴ 1 Kings xv. 22; 2 Chron. xvi. 6.—⁵ Chap. xliii. 6.—⁶ Chap. xl. 7.—⁷ Chap. xl. 14.

Verses 6-8. And Ishmael went forth to meet them, weeping all along as he went—As if he sympathized with them, and bewailed, as they did, the desolations of Jerusalem. He appears to have been a complete hypocrite. As he met them he said, Come to Gedaliah—He invites them to the new governor for protection, as if he had been one of his courtiers and friends, and by these arts conceals his bloody design against them. And when they came into the midst of the city—Whence they could not easily escape; Ishmael slew them—Though they had given him no provocation, and indeed, as it seems, were entire strangers to him. And, no doubt, he took the offerings they had brought, and converted them to his own use: for he that did not hesitate to commit such a murder certainly would not scruple to commit sacrilege. And cast them into the midst of the pit—The words, and cast them, are not in the Hebrew, which is literally, slew them in the midst of the pit. So also the LXX., εσφαξεν αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸ φρεαρ. The Complutensian edition, however, supplies καὶ ἐνεβαλεν, and cast them, which accords with the reading of the Syriac. The Vulgate renders the clause, interfecit eos Ismael circa medium lacu: Ishmael slew them about the middle of the lake, or, pool; and Blaney reads, Ishmael massacred them at the pit. He and the men that were with him—Hired, it seems, to assist him in this bloody work. But ten men were found that said, Slay us not, for we have treasures, &c.—He slew seventy of them, but the remaining ten pleading for their lives, and urging that they had estates in the country of corn, oil, and honey, his covetousness prevailed over his cruelty, and he spared their lives, to become master of their property.

Verse 9. Now the pit was it which Asa had made, &c.—The word בור, here and elsewhere rendered pit, frequently signifies, a cistern, basin, or, reservoir; a large place made for receiving rain-water; which seems to be the meaning of the word here. This pit, or reservoir, Asa, who built and fortified

Mizpah, at the time he was at war with Baasha king of Israel, caused to be made in the midst of the city, in order that the people might not be in want of so necessary an article as water in case of a siege. Reservoirs of this kind were much in use in Palestine, as Jerome tells us, in his commentary upon Amos iv. 7, 8. And Josephus testifies the advantage of them to the besieged when he tells us that, when Masada was reduced to the greatest distress for want of water, it was relieved by a fall of rain in the night, which filled all the reservoirs, Antiq. lib. xiv. cap. 14. Each private family seems also to have had one of these reservoirs for its own use. Drink ye every one the waters of his own cistern, בורו, his pit, or, reservoir, says Rabshakeh to the people of Jerusalem, Isa. xxxvi. 16.

Verses 10-13. Ishmael carried away captive all the residue of the people—All that he did not slay: see note on verse 3; and among the rest Zedekiah's daughters, who had been left to the care of Gedaliah, when his sons were slain. These, it seems, being recovered by Johanan, were taken with him into Egypt, where they perished among the other Jews. And Ishmael departed to go over to the Ammonites—Probably intending to make a present of the captives he was taking with him, to Baalis king of Ammon, by whom he had been instigated to the murder of Gedaliah. But when Johanan, and all the captains heard, &c.—It would have been well if Johanan, when he gave information to Gedaliah of Ishmael's treasonable design, had stayed with him; for he and his captains, and their forces, might have been a life-guard to him, and a terror to Ishmael, and so have prevented the mischief, without the effusion of blood. They took all the men, and went to fight with Ishmael—Upon receiving notice of the murders he had committed, and which way he had gone, they pursued him, and found him by the great waters that are in Gibeon—Called the pool of Gibeon, of which we read 2 Sam. ii. 13. Now when all the people which were with Ishmael—Namely, the poor cap-

A. M. 3416.
B. C. 588.

11 ¶ But when Johanan the son of Kareah, and all ^k the captains of the forces that were with him, heard of all the evil that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had done,

12 Then they took all the men, and went to fight with Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and found him by ^l the great waters that are in Gibeon.

13 Now it came to pass, that when all the people which were with Ishmael saw Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, then they were glad.

14 So all the people that Ishmael had carried away captive from Mizpah cast about and returned, and went unto Johanan the son of Kareah.

15 But Ishmael the son of Nethaniah escaped

^k Chap. xl. 7, 8, 13.—^l 2 Sam. ii. 13.

tives whom he was taking into the land of the Ammonites; saw Johanan, &c., they were glad—As they might well be, to see a probability of escaping out of the hands of the bloody man who had slain so many of their brethren: and they presently found an opportunity to wheel about, and come over to Johanan and his captains, Ishmael not attempting to detain them, but readily quitting his prey to save his life.

Verses 16–18. Then took Johanan and the captains, all the remnant of the people, &c.—It would have been a happy thing, if Johanan, when he had rescued the captives, would have sat quietly down with them, in the land of Judah, and governed them peaceably as Gedaliah did; but, instead of that, he is for leading them into the land of Egypt, as Ishmael would have led them into the land of the Ammonites; so that, though he got the command of them in a better way than Ishmael did, yet he did not use it much better. Gedaliah, who was of a meek and quiet spirit, was a great blessing to them; but Johanan, who was of a fierce and restless disposition, seems to have been permitted to get the command of them for their hurt, and to complete their ruin, from Johanan with eight men, and <sup>A. M. 3416.

B. C. 588.</sup> went to the Ammonites.

16 Then took Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, all the remnant of the people whom he had recovered from Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, from Mizpah, after that he had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, even mighty men of war, and the women, and the children, and the eunuchs, whom he had brought again from Gibeon:

17 And they departed, and dwelt in the habitation of ^m Chimham, which is by Bethle-hem, to go to enter into Egypt.

18 Because of the Chaldeans: for they were afraid of them, because Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, ⁿ whom the king of Babylon made governor in the land.

^m 2 Sam. xix. 37, 38.—ⁿ Chapter xl. 5.

even after they were, as they thought, redeemed. Thus did God still walk contrary to them, and thus did evil still pursue this sinful people. And they departed and dwelt in the habitation of Chimham—The same parcel of ground, probably, that David gave to Chimham, the son of Barzillai: see 2 Sam. xix. 38–40. Here Johanan made his headquarters, steering his course toward Egypt, either from a personal affection to that country, or an ancient national confidence in the Egyptians for help in distress. Because of the Chaldeans—As the person, whom Nebuchadnezzar had made governor in the land, was slain, it was not unreasonable for them to think that Nebuchadnezzar would consider the murder of him as an affront done to himself; and though Johanan had no hand in that villainous act, yet he did not know, but the king of Babylon, being unacquainted with all the parties among the Jews, might look upon all that remained in the country as guilty, and might revenge the murder of his deputy governor upon them all. He therefore chooses for them a habitation, from whence they might, in a short time, go down into Egypt, which was Johanan's design, as we shall read in the next chapter.

CHAPTER XLII.

In this chapter, (1.) Johanan and the other captains of the poor Jews in Canaan solicit Jeremiah to pray for God's direction, respecting the course they should take, solemnly engaging to follow it, 1–6. (2.) By God's order Jeremiah encourages them to remain in Judea, assuring them that there only they would be safe and prosperous, 7–12. (3.) He dissuades them from going to Egypt, as what would ruin them, 13–18. (4.) He admonishes them that their dissimulation, in thus consulting God, when they were determined to follow their own will, would be punished with destruction by the sword, famine, and pestilence, 19–22.

A. M. 3416. THEN all the captains of the forces, B. C. 588. ^a and Johanan the son of Kareah, and Jezaniah the son of Hoshaiah, and all the people from the least even unto the greatest, came near,

2 And said unto Jeremiah the prophet, ¹ Let, we beseech thee, our supplications be accepted before thee, and ^b pray for us unto the LORD thy God, even for all this remnant; (for we are left but ^c a few of many, as thine eyes do behold us:)

3 That the LORD thy God may show us ^d the way wherein we may walk, and the thing that we may do.

4 Then Jeremiah the prophet said unto them, I have heard you; behold, I will pray unto the LORD your God according to your words; and it shall come to pass, that ^e whatsoever thing the LORD shall answer you, I will declare it unto you, I will ^f keep nothing back from you.

5 Then they said to Jeremiah, ^g The LORD be a true and faithful witness between us, if we do not even according to all things ^{A. M. 3416.} for the which the LORD thy God shall ^{B. C. 588.} send thee to us.

6 Whether it be good, or whether it be evil, we will obey the voice of the LORD our God, to whom we send thee; ^h that it may be well with us, when we obey the voice of the LORD our God.

7 ¶ And it came to pass after ten days, that the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah.

8 Then called he Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces which were with him, and all the people from the least even to the greatest,

9 And said unto them, Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, unto whom ye sent me to present your supplication before him;

10 If ye will still abide in this land, then ⁱ will I build you, and not pull you down, and I will plant you, and not pluck you up: for I ^k repent me of the evil that I have done unto you.

^a Chapter xl. 8, 13.; xli. 11.—¹ Or, Let our supplication fall before thee.—^b 1 Sam. vii. 8; xii. 19; Isa. xxxvii. 4; James v. 16.—^c Lev. xxvi. 22.—^d Ezra viii. 21.

^e 1 Kings xxii. 14.—^f 1 Sam. iii. 18; Acts xx. 20.—^g Gen. xxxi. 50.—^h Deut. vi. 3; Chapter vii. 23.—ⁱ Chap. xxiv. 6; xxxi. 28; xxxiii. 7.—^k Deut. xxxii. 36; Chap. xviii. 8.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLII.

Verses 1-3. Then all the captains, and all the people—That is, both those captains, and many of the people; came near and said unto Jeremiah—Who was probably carried away with the other captives by Ishmael, and rescued by Johanan; Let, we beseech thee, our supplications be accepted before thee—Thus these men, though wretched hypocrites, yet address the prophet with great respect and reverence, and in words which implied that they thought themselves unworthy to be permitted to ask any favour of him. Probably the evidence they had had so lately of his being a true prophet of the Lord, by the accomplishment of all that he had foretold against both the city and temple, might in some measure occasion their showing him such respect. And pray for us, that the Lord may show us the way wherein we may walk—"It is the constant method of hypocrites to pretend an absolute submission to the will of God till that will is found to run counter to their inclinations or interest."—Lowth.

Verses 4-6. Then Jeremiah said, I have heard you, &c.—That is, I will do for you what you desire. I will pray unto the Lord your God—They called the Lord Jeremiah's God: here Jeremiah calls him their God, both to remind them of God's relation to them, and of their duty toward him. And whatsoever thing the Lord shall answer, I will declare—I will be faithful in giving you an account of what God shall reveal to me to be his will concerning you. Then they said, The Lord be a true and faithful witness, &c.—The words of this and the following verse imply a perfect oath, the form of which lies in appealing to God as a witness of the sincerity of the hearts of those that swear, for a security to those to whom the oath is given: which also includes a secret challenging of God to take vengeance upon those that give that security, if they should not act according to their promise. The thing these men promise is, that they would perfectly obey God's will, whether agreeable or disagreeable to them. And they further declare they were convinced that their prosperity and happiness entirely depended upon their complying with God's will, adding, That it may be well with us, &c.

Verses 7-10. And it came to pass after ten days—Thus long they were held in suspense, perhaps to punish them for their hypocrisy, or to show that Jeremiah did not speak of himself nor what he would; for he could not speak when he would, but was obliged to wait for instructions; the word of the Lord came unto Jeremiah—Namely, the word mentioned, chap. xl. 1, to which the contents of the last two chapters, and the preceding part of this, are but an historical preface. Then called he Johanan, and all the captains, &c.—What the Lord had revealed to him he declared publicly, both to the captains and to all the people, to those in the lowest as well as to those in the highest station; and that fully and faithfully as he had received it. Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel—If Jeremiah had been desired to direct them by his own prudence, probably he could not have determined what to advise them to, the case being certainly difficult: but what he has

A. M. 3416. 11 Be not afraid of the king of
B. C. 588. Babylon, of whom ye are afraid; be not afraid of him, saith the LORD: ¹ for I am with you, to save you, and to deliver you from his hand.

12 And ^m I will show mercies unto you, that he may have mercy upon you, and cause you to return to your own land.

13 But if ⁿ ye say, We will not dwell in this land, neither obey the voice of the LORD your God,

14 Saying, No; but we will go into the land of Egypt, where we shall see no war, nor hear the sound of the trumpet, nor have hunger of bread: and there will we dwell:

15 And now therefore hear the word of the LORD, ye remnant of Judah; Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; If ye ^o wholly set ^p your faces to enter into Egypt, and go to sojourn there; to advise is, that which the Lord God of Israel, to whom they had sent him, directed to be said. If ye will still abide in this land—That is, If you will give up all thoughts of going into the land of Egypt, and abide where you are, or in any part of Judea under subjection to, and in the protection of, the king of Babylon, into whose power I have given you; then will I build you, &c.—Then will I see to your security and prosperity, and make you a happy people, For I repent me of the evil, &c.—I am satisfied with the punishment which your nation hath undergone, and now, if you do not destroy yourselves by new acts of disobedience, I will change the course of my providence toward you. God is said in Scripture to repent when he alters the outward methods of his providence toward any people or individual: see note on Gen. vi. 6.

¹ Isa. xliii. 5; Rom. viii. 31.—^m Psa. cvi. 45, 46.—ⁿ Chap. xlv. 16.—^o Deut. xvii. 16; Chap. xlv. 12, 13, 14.—^p Luke ix. 51.—^q Ezek. xi. 8.—² Heb. shall cleave after you.

Verses 11, 12. Be not afraid of the king of Babylon—As if he had said, I know what you are afraid of; you fear lest the king of Babylon should send a force against you and utterly root you out, because one of your nation hath murdered his viceroy Gedaliah; but suffer not your passion of fear to rise too high on this account, and make you flee into Egypt. For I am with you to save you—For you shall have my presence with you, to deliver and preserve you, so that Nebuchadnezzar shall have neither inclination nor power to do you any harm. I will show mercies unto you that he may have mercy, &c.—We are beholden to God for all the compassion and kindness which we meet with from men; though we may receive good from their hands, it is God who inclines their hearts to do it. And cause you to return to your own land—The mercy which God here promises

16 Then it shall come to pass, that ² the sword, ^a which ye feared, shall overtake you there in the land of Egypt, and the famine, whereof ye were afraid, ² shall follow close after you there in Egypt; and there ye shall die.

17 ³ So shall it be with all the men that set their faces to go into Egypt to sojourn there; they shall die ^r by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: and ^s none of them shall remain or escape from the evil that I will bring upon them.

18 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; As mine anger and my fury hath been ^t poured forth upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem; so shall my fury be poured forth upon you, when ye shall enter into Egypt: and ^u ye shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach; and ye shall see this place no more.

² Heb. so shall all the men be.—^r Chap. xxiv. 10; Verse 22. ^a Chapter xlv. 14, 23.—^s Chap. vii. 20.—^t Chap. xviii. 16; xxiv. 9; xxvi. 6; xxix. 18, 22; xlv. 12; Zech. viii. 13.

these men is, that the king of Babylon should give them liberty to go every one to his own inheritance; for at present they were banished by their own fears from their own houses and estates, though not from their own country.

Verses 13–18. But if ye say, We will not dwell in this land, neither obey—Hebrew, לבלתי שמוע, so as not to obey. If they did not continue in their own land, they disobeyed the voice of the Lord. Saying, No; we will go into the land of Egypt, where we shall see no war, &c.—Their great sin was unbelief: they would not take the promise of God as a security to them for a quiet and peaceable abode, and a supply of all their wants, in Judea: but they resolved to go into Egypt, where they expected to have a greater certainty of peace and plenty. Therefore the Lord declares by his prophet, that the evils which they feared in Canaan should overtake them with double violence in Egypt, namely, both the sword and famine, by which they should die, and that they should be an execration and an astonishment, a curse and a reproach, (verse 18,) as God had threatened to make the inhabitants of Jerusalem, chap. xxiv. 9, and xxix. 18, where see the notes. And ye shall see this place no more—And in this, saith God, will I deal worse with you than with those who were carried captive to Babylon; many of them shall return, after the time fixed for the duration of their captivity is expired, but you shall return into this land no more. There was this aggravation in the sin of those Jews to whom God was now speaking by his prophet, that they had lately seen his words, by the same prophet, fully verified; yet would not take warning, but ran into the same sin of unbelief.

A. M. 3416. B. C. 588. 19 ¶ The LORD hath said concerning you, O ye remnant of Judah; * Go ye not into Egypt: know certainly that I have *admonished you this day.

20 For ^s ye dissembled in your hearts, when ye sent me unto the LORD your God, saying, ^y Pray for us unto the LORD our God; and according unto all that the LORD our God shall say, so declare unto us, and we will do it.

* Deut. xvii. 16.—⁴ Heb. testified against you.—⁵ Or, ye have used deceit against your souls.

Verse 19. The Lord hath said, Go ye not into Egypt—The good prophet, knowing how much it concerned this people to believe and obey the message God had sent to them by him, repeats again what he had urged before, assuring them it was by the command of the Lord that he said it. Know certainly that I have admonished you this day—Hebrew, הֵעִידָתִי בָנְכֶם, have testified to you, or, admonished you before witnesses. "God commanded the Jews, by Moses, not to have any commerce with Egypt, that they might not practise the idolatrous customs of that country, (Lev. xviii. 3,) with whose idolatries they had been defiled during their sojourning there. Afterward he often reproved them by his prophets for making alliances with Egypt. And there were particular reasons, at this time, for so severe a prohibition, as the words here and in the context import, namely, because the Jews either learned several of their idolatrous practices from the Egyptians, or, at least were confirmed in those evil customs by their example. Besides, it was the rival kingdom that contended for empire with the Babylonians; and so the Jews going into Egypt for protection was, in effect, refusing to submit themselves to the king of Babylon, to whom God had decreed the government of Judea and all the neighbouring countries, chap. xxvii. 6."—Lowth.

Verses 20–22. For ye dissembled in your hearts—Hebrew, הִתְחַמֵּתִי, have used deceit. They acted 21 And now I have this day declared it to you; but ye have not obeyed the voice of the LORD your God, nor any thing for the which he hath sent me unto you.

22 Now therefore know certainly that ^z ye shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence, in the place whither ye desire ⁶ to go and to sojourn.

^y Verse 2.—^z Verse 17; Ezekiel vi. 11.—⁶ Or, to go to sojourn.

deceitfully, either toward God, calling him to bear witness to their sincerity in a matter in which they were not sincere; or toward the prophet, sending him to inquire of God for them, and promising to act according as God should direct, when they never intended it; or, toward their own souls, as the margin reads it. Thus Blaney, Surely ye have practised deceit against your own souls, following the Masoretic reading of the margin, confirmed by twenty-two MSS. and five editions. The LXX. read οτι επονηρενσασθε εν ψυχαις υμων; for you have acted wickedly in your souls, and the Vulgate, because you have deceived your souls. Now I have this day declared it to you—I went, according to your desire, to inquire of God for you; he revealed his will to me respecting you, and now I have as faithfully told you what it is. But ye have not obeyed, &c.—Or, will not obey. If it be asked how Jeremiah knew they would not obey God's will in this instance, inasmuch as they had not yet declared their minds to him, it must be answered, God had made their intentions known to him. Now therefore know certainly that ye shall die by the sword, &c.—You think to avoid death by going to Egypt to sojourn for a little time, but you shall perish there, and that by those very deaths which, by going thither, you seek to avoid. Observe, reader, we must expect disappointment, misery, and ruin to follow actions done in disobedience to the revealed will of God

CHAPTER XLIII.

Here, (1.) Johanan and his companions, pretending that Jeremiah's faithful admonitions were not of God, but from Baruch, disregard them, and go to Egypt, taking the prophet along with them, 1–7. (2.) God sends them another message, importing, that the Chaldeans should quickly pursue them into Egypt, and ravage that country, 8–13.

A. M. 3416. B. C. 588. AND it came to pass, that when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking unto all the people all the words of the LORD their God, for which the LORD their God

* Chap.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLIII.

Verses 2, 3. Then spake Azariah, the son of Hoshaiiah—Called Jazaniah, chap. xlii. 1. We may had sent him to them, even all these words, A. M. 3416. B. C. 588.

2 * Then spake Azariah the son of Hoshaiiah, and Johanan the son of Kareah, and all xlii. 1.

observe many like instances in the books of Kings and Chronicles, of the same persons being called by two different names. And all the proud men—They

A. M. 3416. the proud men, saying unto Jeremiah,
B. C. 588.

Thou speakest falsely: the LORD our God hath not sent thee to say, Go not into Egypt to sojourn there:

3 But Baruch the son of Neriah setteth thee on against us, for to deliver us into the hand of the Chaldeans, that they might put us to death, and carry us away captives into Babylon.

4 So Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, and all the people, obeyed not the voice of the LORD, to dwell in the land of Judah.

5 But Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, took ^b all the remnant of Judah, that were returned from all nations, who refused to obey Almighty God when his commands crossed their own inclinations. Saying unto Jeremiah, The Lord hath not spoken by thee—The constant method of hypocrites and infidels, who pretend they are not satisfied of the truth of divine revelation, when the true cause of their unbelief is, that God's commands contradict their own lusts and appetites. But Baruch the son of Neriah setteth thee on against us—They would not directly accuse Jeremiah of partiality toward, or confederacy with, the Chaldeans, as his enemies had done formerly, (chap. xxxvii. 13,) but they lay the blame upon Baruch, whom they knew to be an intimate companion of Jeremiah's, and to have been kindly used by the Chaldeans upon Jeremiah's account.—Lowth.

^b Chap. xl. 11, 12.—^c Chap. xli. 10.—^d Ch. xxxix. 10; xl. 7.

Verses 4-7. So Johanan and all the captains, &c., obeyed not, &c.—That is, they resolved not to obey the message God had sent them by Jeremiah; but took all the remnant of Judah that were returned, &c.—The resolution which they had formed they presently put in practice. Though Jeremiah and Baruch, and probably many of the people, were not willing to go along with them, yet these rebellious captains forced them to go; so that the prophet and his pious friends were now a kind of prisoners to their own countrymen. So they came into the land of Egypt—Their great inclination to go into Egypt arose, as has been intimated, from a supposition that they should be safer there from the Babylonians, who, they thought, might injure them at any time while they stayed in Judea; but would not venture to attack Egypt, on account of its strongly fortified cities, which commanded the passes into the country, and the various channels of the Nile, which were great obstructions to the march of an army. Thus they came even to Tahpanhes—One of the principal cities of Egypt, and a place of residence for their kings. The word is contracted to Hanes, Isa. xxx. 4, and joined with Zaan, the chief city of the kingdom. Tahpanhes gave a name to a queen of Egypt, (1 Kings xi. 19,) and is supposed by many to be the same city which was afterward called whither they had been driven, to A. M. 3416.

dwelt in the land of Judah; B. C. 588.

6 Even men, and women, and children, ^a and the king's daughters, ^d and every person that Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had left with Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and Jeremiah the prophet, and Baruch the son of Neriah.

7 So they came into the land of Egypt: for they obeyed not the voice of the LORD: thus came they even to ^e Tahpanhes.

8 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah in Tahpanhes, saying,

9 Take great stones in thy hand, and hide them in the clay in the brick-kiln, which is at ^a Chap. ii. 16; xlv. 1; called Hanes, Isa. xxx. 4.

Daphnæ Pelusiaca. In this behaviour of the Jews we have an instance of great impiety joined to hypocrisy. They had promised with an oath to follow the advice of the prophet; but, because his counsel was not agreeable to their inclinations, they went down into Egypt, and even charged the prophet with speaking falsely in the name of the Lord. In these Jews we see a picture of those persons who, upon some occasions, express their zeal and good intentions, but reject the most wholesome counsels when those counsels thwart their passions, and are in opposition to what they have secretly purposed. With respect to Jeremiah, it may be observed, God suffered him to be carried to Egypt, that he might there denounce the ruin of the Egyptians as well as of the Jews, who had put their trust in them. Wherever the wicked are, the hand of God finds them out; and those who think, by disobeying him, to avoid the evils which they dread, and to that end make use of unlawful means, fall by those very means into the evils they expect to shun, and are confounded in their hope.

Verses 8, 9. Then came the word of the Lord to Jeremiah in Tahpanhes—Jeremiah was now among idolatrous Egyptians and treacherous Israelites, yet here the word of the Lord came to him, and he prophesied. God can visit his people with his grace, and the revelations of his mind and will, wherever they are; and when his ministers are bound, his word is not bound. When Jeremiah went into the land of Egypt, not out of choice, but by constraint, God withdrew not his wonted favour from him. And what he received of the Lord he delivered to the people. Wherever we are, we must endeavour to do good; for that is our business in this world. Saying, Take great stones in thy hand—Such as are used as foundation-stones; and hide them in the clay in the brick-kiln—Or furnace. The Vulgate reads, in crypta, quæ est sub muro lateritio, in the hollow place, or vault, which is under the brick wall; and the LXX., ἐν τριπόρῳ, in the place before the gate which is at the entry of Pharaoh's house—

A. M. 3416. the entry of Pharaoh's house in
B. C. 588. Tahpanhes, in the sight of the men
of Judah;

10 And say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will send and take Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, my servant, and will set his throne upon these stones that I have hid; and he shall spread his royal pavilion over them.

11 ^g And when he cometh, he shall smite the land of Egypt, and deliver ^h such as are for death to death; and such as are for captivity

^f Chap. xxv. 9; xxvii. 6; Ezek. xxix. 18, 20. — ^g Chap. xlv. 13; xlvii. 13. — ^h Chap. xv. 2; Zech. xi. 9.

Which, however, might be a great way from the palace itself; the courts of great kings being almost equal to a city, for extent, in ancient times: particularly the palace of Babylon was four miles in compass, according to Diodorus Siculus: in the sight of the men of Judah—Hebrew, אנשים יהודים, literally, of men Jews; which signifies indefinitely some of that nation; not as in our present translation, which seems to imply, that the presence of all the Jewish emigrants was required; for in that case the reading would at least have been, with the definite article prefixed, האנשים היהודים, the men the Jews. see Blaney. Jeremiah was not ordered to place these stones thus in the presence of the Egyptians, who were unacquainted with his prophetic character, but in the sight of the Jews to whom he was sent; at least some of them, who might attest what they had seen to others; in order that, since he could not prevent their going into Egypt, he might bring them to repent of their going.

Verses 10, 11. And say, Thus saith the Lord, I will send Nebuchadrezzar, &c.—God now commands his prophet to expound to the Jews the design of the order given him in the preceding verse. The stones hid in the clay, at the entry of Pharaoh's house, were intended to be a sign that the king of Babylon should make himself master of that royal city, and set his throne in that very place. This minute circumstance is particularly foretold, that, when it was accomplished, they might be put in mind of the prophecy, and confirmed in their belief of the extent and certainty of the divine prescience; to which the smallest and most contingent events are evident. God calls Nebuchadnezzar his servant, because in this instance he should execute God's will, accomplish his purposes, and be instrumental in carrying on his designs. And when he cometh, he shall smite the land of Egypt—Though Egypt has always been a warlike nation, it shall not be able to withstand the king of Babylon; but whom he will he shall slay, and in what way he pleases; and deto captivity; and such as are for the sword to the sword. A. M. 3416. B. C. 588.

12 And I will kindle a fire in the houses of the gods of Egypt; and he shall burn them, and carry them away captives: and he shall array himself with the land of Egypt, as a shepherd putteth on his garment; and he shall go forth from thence in peace.

13 He shall break also the images of Bethshemesh, that is in the land of Egypt; and the houses of the gods of the Egyptians shall he burn with fire.

ⁱ Chap. xlv. 25. — ¹ Heb. statues, or standing images. — ² Or the house of the sun.

live such as are for death to death—See note on chap. xv. 2. Death here signifies the pestilence which the prophet foretels would overspread the country of Egypt by reason of the famine occasioned by sieges and other ravages of war.

Verses 12, 13. And I will kindle a fire in the houses of the gods of Egypt—I will cause the temples of the gods of Egypt to be set on fire, and their images to be consumed, or carried away, as being neither able to save their worshippers nor themselves. God here speaks of himself as the prime mover, or principal agent in this business, no doubt with a design to inculcate this necessary and important lesson, that in the punishing of idolatrous or ungodly nations both the plan is his, and the power of carrying it into execution, whatever instruments he may choose to employ as the subordinate ministers of his providence. And he shall array himself with the land of Egypt—That is, he shall clothe, or enrich himself and his army with the spoils and plunder of the country: or he shall add Egypt to his dominions, and possess himself of the riches of it, with as much ease as the shepherd puts on his garment. So calamities, when they surround men on every side, are compared to a garment, Psa. cix. 19. "The expression shows," says Rollin, "the prodigious ease with which all the power and riches of a kingdom are carried away, when God appoints the revolution." And he shall go forth from thence in peace—None daring or attempting to resist him, or give him any molestation. He shall also break the images of Bethshemesh—Or, the house of the sun, as the word signifies. The LXX. render the clause, καὶ συντρίψει στήλας Ἡλιοπολεως, He shall break in pieces the pillars of Heliopolis, that is, the city of the sun, where, as we learn from Herodotus, lib. ii. c. 59, the Egyptians celebrated a grand festival annually, in honour of the sun, that had a temple there. But בית שמש, the house of the sun, seems rather to mean the temple itself, in which the images of their deity were erected.

CHAPTER XLIV.

We have in this chapter, (1.) A most awakening sermon delivered by Jeremiah to the Jews in Egypt, to reprove them for their obstinate continuance in idolatry, notwithstanding the warnings given them, both by the word and rod of God, and to threaten the judgments of God against them for it, 1-14. (2.) The impudent and impious contempt which the people put upon this admonition, and their declared resolution to persist in their idolatries, in despite both of God and his prophet, 15-19. (3.) The sentence passed upon them for their obstinacy; that they should all be cut off, and perish in Egypt, except a very small number: as a token and earnest of which, the king of Egypt should shortly fall into the hands of the king of Babylon, and be unable any longer to protect them, 20-30.

A. M. 3417.
B. C. 587.

THE word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the Jews which dwell in the land of Egypt, which dwell at ^a Migdol, and at ^b Tahpanhes, and at ^c Noph, and in the country of Pathros, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Ye have seen all the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, and upon all the cities of Judah; and behold, this day they are ^d a desolation, and no man dwelleth therein;

3 Because of their wickedness which they

^a Exod. xiv. 2; Chap. xlv. 14.—^b Chap. xliii. 7.—^c Isaiah xix. 13.—^d Chap. ix. 11; xxxiv. 22.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLIV.

Verse 1. The word which came to Jeremiah—The patience and goodness of God to this remnant of his ancient people are very remarkable; he leaves them not even in their rebellion, but commissions his prophet, whom he had before sent to forbid their going into this idolatrous country, to try if in Egypt they could be brought to repentance and reformation; concerning all the Jews which dwelt at Migdol, and at Tahpanhes, &c.—They were now dispersed into divers parts of the country, and Jeremiah is sent with a message from God to them, which he delivered, either by going about from place to place to them; or when he had many of them together in Pathros, as is mentioned verse 15. We find a place termed Migdol, mentioned Exod. xiv. 2, as situate near the Red sea. "But I do not take this," says Blaney, "to be here intended. Migdol properly signifies a tower, and may, in all probability, have been a name given to different cities in Egypt where there was a distinguished object of that kind. The city of Magdulus is mentioned by Herodotus, Hecatæus, and others, and placed by Antoninus at the entrance of Egypt from Palestine, about twelve miles from Pelusium. This was too far distant from the Red sea to be in the route of the Israelites; but its situation in the neighbourhood of Tahpanhes, or Daphnæ, and its distance from Judea, favour the supposition of its being the Migdol here spoken of. For then, as Bochart observes, we shall find the four places mentioned exactly in the order of their respective distances from that country; 1st, Migdol, or Magdulus; 2d, Tahpanhes, or Daphnæ; 3d, Noph, or Memphis; and lastly, the district of Pathros, or Thebais." Near Memphis stands one of the pyramids which are yet remaining.

Verses 2-5. Ye have seen all the evil that I have

A. M. 3417.
B. C. 587.

have committed to provoke me to anger, in that they went ^e to burn incense, and to ^f serve other gods, whom they knew not, neither they, ye, nor your fathers.

4 Howbeit, ^g I sent unto you all my servants the prophets, rising early and sending them, saying, O, do not this abominable thing that I hate.

5 But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear to turn from their wickedness, to burn no incense unto other gods.

^e Chap. xix. 4.—^f Deut. xiii. 6; xxxii. 17.—^g 2 Chronicles xxxvi. 15; Chap. vii. 25; xxv. 4; xxvi. 5; xxix. 19.

brought on Jerusalem—He refers to the late destruction of it by the king of Babylon: this remnant of the people was a brand plucked out of the burning, and their eyes had been witnesses of the desolations which God had wrought. Because of their wickedness, &c.—As they were eye-witnesses of the effect, so nothing but their unbelief made them strangers to the cause of the divine wrath manifested against them; for God, by his prophets, had continually assured them that the grand cause was their departure from him, the one living and true God, and forsaking his worship for that of idols. To serve other gods, whom they knew not—The sin of their various idolatries was aggravated by this, that they were as much strangers to the idols as to the people with whom they joined in the worship of them, neither they nor any of their fathers having had any proof that these idols had ever done, or were able to do, any thing for their worshippers: compare Deut. xiii. 6, and xxxii. 17. These idols are opposed to the true God, called elsewhere the God of their fathers, who had made himself known to them by so many wonderful works and so many instances of his favour and benignity; and had promised to show the same favour to their posterity, if they continued steadfast in their obedience. I sent, &c., saying, O! do not this abominable thing that I hate—God had given them numberless admonitions and warnings by his prophets, that idolatry in all the species and instances of it was a sin which he hated above all others, and would very dreadfully punish, yet they would not hear so as to yield obedience to him; but still persisted in the commission of this most abominable and absurd iniquity. The Hebrew, אל נא תעש, may be properly rendered, Do not, I pray you, this abominable thing which I hate. Thus the Vulgate, Nolite, oro, facere verbum abo-

A. M. 3417. 6 Wherefore ^h my fury and mine
B. C. 587. anger was poured forth, and was kindled in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem; and they are wasted and desolate, as at this day.

7 Therefore now thus saith the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel; Wherefore commit ye this great evil ⁱ against your souls, to cut off from you man and woman, child and suckling, ^j out of Judah, to leave you none to remain;

8 In that ye ^k provoke me unto wrath with the works of your hands, burning incense unto other gods in the land of Egypt, whether ye be gone to dwell, that ye might cut yourselves off, and that ye might be ^l a curse and a reproach among all the nations of the earth?

9 Have ye forgotten the ^m wickedness of your fathers, and the wickedness of the kings of Judah, and the wickedness of their wives, and your own wickedness, and the wicked-minationis hujuscemodi. Be unwilling, I beseech you, to practise a thing so abominable. The language is as pathetic as it is emphatical.

^h Chap. xlii. 18.—ⁱ Num. xvi. 38; Chap. vii. 19.—^j Heb. out of the midst of Judah.—^k Chap. xxv. 6, 7.—^l Chap. xlii. 18; Verse 12.—^m Heb. wickednesses, or, punishments, &c.

Verses 6, 7. Wherefore my fury, &c., was poured forth, &c.—As if he had said, For these very reasons, their idolatry and contempt of my word by my prophets, the very sins you are now committing, I gave Judah and Jerusalem into the hand of the king of Babylon, and they are, as you see this day, waste and desolate. Wherefore commit ye this great evil? &c.—What sort of prudence is it that influences you to do such actions as these, by which you cannot injure God, but yourselves only? You are now but a few of many; what love can you have for your country while you take courses which will certainly tend to the utter extirpation of those few, so that there shall be none remaining of all the Jews? God designed that this remnant should have remained in Judea, and kept possession of it, when the rest of their brethren were carried away captive, chap. xlii. 10. But by their going into Egypt and defiling themselves with the idolatries of that nation, they provoked God to make an utter destruction of them.

Verses 8–10. Ye provoke me unto wrath with the works of your hands—By making and setting up idols to worship. That ye might cut yourselves off, &c.—This is not to be so taken as if they did these things with a design to cut off themselves and their posterity: but only as signifying that their utter ruin would be the certain consequence of their continuing so to act. Have ye forgotten the wickedness of your fathers? &c.—Have you forgotten what ness of your wives, which they have committed in the land of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem?

10 They are not ⁿ humbled even unto this day, neither have they ^o feared, nor walked in my law, nor in my statutes, that I set before you and before your fathers.

11 ¶ Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, ^p I will set my face against you for evil, and to cut off all Judah.

12 And I will take the remnant of Judah, that have set their faces to go into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, and ^q they shall all be consumed, and fall in the land of Egypt; they shall even be consumed by the sword and by the famine: they shall die, from the least even unto the greatest, by the sword and by the famine: and ^r they shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach.

13 ^s For I will punish them that dwell in the ⁿ Heb. contrite, Psa. li. 17.—^o Prov. xxviii. 14.—^p Lev. xvii. 10; xx. 5, 6; Chap. xxi. 10; Amos ix. 4.—^q Chap. xlii. 15, 17, 22.—^r Chap. xlii. 18.—^s Chap. xliiii. 11.

great wickedness your fathers committed, and what great punishments were in consequence thereof inflicted upon them? We may be truly said to have forgotten that the sight of which, or reflection thereon, makes no such impression upon us as produces a suitable practice. Which they have committed in the land of Judah, &c.—To have practised these things in any place would have been to contract great guilt; but to have done them in the land of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, in the valley of vision, and in the holy city, where there were such means of information and such helps to piety, was still more aggravated and inexcusable wickedness. They are not humbled even unto this day—Neither they nor you are yet properly humbled, and prepared for receiving mercy. Neither have they feared, nor walked in my law—Hence we learn, that reformation and obedience are the proper fruit of true contrition and humiliation; God does not account those to be humbled, but hardened, who are not reformed and made obedient, let their pretended contrition or humiliation be, in outward appearance, what it may.

Verses 11–14. I will set my face against you for evil—See note on chap. xxi. 10. And I will take away, namely, by destruction; the remnant of Judah, &c.—The direful punishments denounced against those who went to Egypt were not denounced because it was a sin in itself for the Jews to leave their country, and seek a securer habitation in Egypt, but because, in so doing, they showed their distrust of God's power or goodness, as if he

A. M. 3417. land of Egypt, as I have punished
B. C. 587.

Jerusalem, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence:

14 So that none of the remnant of Judah, which are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall escape or remain, that they should return into the land of Judah, to the which they ⁴ have a desire to return to dwell there: for ¹ none shall return but such as shall escape.

15 ¶ Then all the men which knew that their wives had burned incense unto other gods, and all the women that stood by, a great multitude, even all the people that dwelt in the land of Egypt, in Pathros, answered Jeremiah, saying,

16 As for the word that thou hast spoken

⁴ Heb. lift up their soul.—¹ Verse 28.—² So Chapter vi. 16.
¹ Num. xxx. 12; Deut. xxiii. 23; Judg. xi. 36; Verse 25.

were not able or willing to protect them in Judea, and also were guilty of disobeying his express commands, and disbelieving his faithful promises, whereby he had engaged to protect them. To which must be further added, the great danger and probability, not to say certainty, there was that they would fall into the idolatry of the Egyptians. Therefore God uttered grievous threatenings against their going thither, that they might be deterred from it. For I will punish them that dwell in the land of Egypt, &c.—See notes on chap. xlii. 15-18. So that none of the remnant of Judah which are gone, &c.—Blaney translates this more agreeably to the Hebrew, thus: "And the remnant of Judah, those who are come into the land of Egypt, with a view to sojourn there, and to return into the land of Judah, &c., shall not have one escaper or survivor; whereas none shall return but escapers." And he observes, "It is evident, from verse 28, that some Jews were to escape the general destruction in Egypt, and to return into their own country, although but a few; and the same thing is implied in the latter sentence of this verse. But the former part of this verse excludes out of the number of the escapers every individual of those that were called properly the remnant of Judah, those that had set their faces to enter Egypt to sojourn there, in opposition to the express command of God, upon a presumption that they knew better than God how to consult their own restoration. The few then who were destined to escape, and to return back to the land of Judah, were to be such as had come into the land of Egypt in a less offensive manner, and happened to be there when the storm burst upon them."

Verse 15. Then all the men and all the women that dwell in Pathros—Which was Upper Egypt; answered Jeremiah, &c.—From this it appears with how much reason it was that God ordered Jeremiah to endeavour to prevent their going into Egypt, since unto us in the name of the LORD, A. M. 3417.

^a we will not hearken unto thee. B. C. 587.

17 But we will certainly do ^t whatsoever thing goeth forth out of our own mouth, to burn incense unto the ⁶ queen ^u of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings unto her, as we have done, we, and our fathers, our kings, and our princes, in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem: for then had we plenty of ⁶ victuals, and were well, and saw no evil.

18 But since we left off to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings unto her, we have wanted all things, and have been consumed by the sword and by the famine.

19 ^x And when we burned incense to the queen of heaven, and poured out drink-offerings

⁵ Or, frame of heaven.—^u Chapter vii. 18.—⁶ Heb. bread.
^x Chap. vii. 18.

the Israelitish women imitated the idolatry of the inhabitants of it, as soon as they came thither, and no people were immersed in a more absurd and shameful idolatry than the Egyptians. It is probable that when the Jewish women perceived the Egyptians to abound in riches and plenty, and to live in peace and security, they foolishly concluded that the gods which the Egyptians worshipped were more powerful, or more beneficent, than Jehovah, whom the Jews worshipped.

Verses 16-19. As for the word thou hast spoken unto us, we will not hearken unto thee—Johanan and the rest (chap. xliii. 5) only denied that God had said such things, and told Jeremiah he had spoken falsely: but now these people rise higher; they acknowledge Jeremiah had spoken to them in the name of the Lord, but, nevertheless, tell him in plain terms they would not obey his word, and indeed this is in the hearts of all sinners that are ruled by their lusts; though they will sometimes pretend that what they hear is not the will of God, but spoken out of malice and prejudice; yet they are preresolved they will not comply with it, let their understandings be never so well informed. But will certainly do whatsoever thing goeth out of our own mouth—That is, that which we have solemnly vowed to perform. Here we have the root of all the disobedience of sinners, their resolution to please themselves, and do their own will, and not in any thing to deny themselves. To burn incense to the queen of heaven—To the moon and the rest of the host of heaven: see the note on chap. vii. 18; and xix. 13. As we have done, we and our fathers, &c.—Their arguments for continuing in this idolatry are, 1st, Custom and antiquity; they and their fathers had practised it. 2d, The example of their kings and princes. 3d, The plenty and prosperity they had while they did so, as if their idols and not Jehovah had been the authors of it. They compared their former condition, before the

A. M. 3417. unto her, did we make her cakes to
B. C. 587. worship her, and pour out drink-offerings unto her, without our ⁷ men?

20 ¶ Then Jeremiah said unto all the people, to the men, and to the women, and to all the people which had given him that answer, saying,

21 The incense that ye burned in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, ye and your fathers, your kings and your princes, and the people of the land, did not the LORD remember them, and came it not into his mind?

22 So that the LORD could no longer bear, because of the evil of your doings, and because of the abominations which ye have committed; therefore is your land ^a a desolation, and an astonishment, and a curse, without an inhabitant, ² as at this day.

23 Because ye have burned incense, and because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed the voice of the LORD, nor walked in his law, nor in his statutes, nor in his testimonies; ^a therefore this evil is happened unto you, as at this day.

24 Moreover, Jeremiah said unto all the people, and to all the women, Hear the word of the LORD, all Judah ^b that are in the land of Egypt:

⁷ Or, husbands.—⁷ Chap. xxv. 11, 18, 38.—² Verse 6.

^a Dan. ix. 11, 12.—^b Chap. xliii. 7; Verse 15.

invasion of Judea and the siege of Jerusalem, with their present state, and argued from their being in prosperity at that time, that they must needs have been then in the right; not considering that it was to be ascribed to the goodness and long-suffering of God waiting for their repentance, as being unwilling to destroy them, or even to bring any great calamity upon them. Besides, though on account of the measure of their iniquity being filled up, they now suffered more grievous calamities than they had ever done before, yet, if they were at all acquainted with the history of former times, they could not but know that idolatry had always brought calamities on their fathers, and that they never were so prosperous as when they worshipped and served Jehovah only.

But since we left off, &c., we have wanted all things—This is their last argument in defence of their idolatry, an argument drawn from the evils that had befallen them since they had left off to worship the host of heaven; thus making their ceasing to commit the sin of idolatry the cause of their sufferings, whereas, in truth, the commission of that and their other sins had been the cause of all the calamities to which they had been exposed. And when we burned incense, &c., did we worship her without our men?—Here the women speak, and allege that their husbands had joined with them in offering incense to the host of heaven, and that it was not done without their privity. “By the law of Moses the men had an independnet power of binding themselves by any religious vow or obligation; but the vows of the women were not binding, without the knowledge and consent of their fathers and husbands; but if the father or husband knew of the vow, and did not signify his dissent at the time, his consent was presumed, and the vow stood firm and irrevocable, Num. xxx. 1–16. This appeal, therefore, to the concurrence of their men must be considered as coming from the female part of the assembly only, who thereby appear to declare that since they were thus authorized by those who alone had a legal right to control them, they should not submit to any other restraint upon their inclinations.”—Blaney.

Verses 20–23. Then Jeremiah said, The incense that ye burned, &c.—In these verses the prophet shows that they interpreted the dispensations of God’s providence toward them in a sense directly contrary to their true intent and meaning. They concluded that their omission of late to burn incense to the queen of heaven was the cause of the calamities which had befallen them; but the prophet shows them that the true cause was, not their leaving off that practice, but their being formerly guilty of it. This their idolatry, with their other sins, did indeed go unpunished a great while: for God was long-suffering toward them, and during the time of his patience it was perhaps, as they said, well with them, and they saw no evil; but at length they became so provoking that, as the prophet tells them, verse 22, the Lord could no longer bear, but began a controversy with them. Upon this, it seems, some of them did in a degree reform their conduct: but their old guilt being uncanceled, and their corrupt inclinations being still the same, God remembered against them the idolatries of their fathers, their kings, and their princes, which they, instead of being ashamed of, gloried in: all these, he intimates, verse 21, came into his mind, with all the abominations which they had committed, verse 22, and all their disobedience to the voice of the Lord, verse 23: all was brought to account; and to punish them for these was their land made a desolation, an astonishment, and a curse, as they saw it to be. Therefore—Not for their late reformation, he assures them, but for their old transgressions, had all that evil happened to them.

Verses 24–28. Jeremiah said, Hear all Judah that are in the land of Egypt—That is, all you men and women that belong to Judah, and are now come to dwell in Egypt; ye and your wives have spoken—The Hebrew word תרברבה, rendered have spoken, is of the feminine gender, and implies that the women were first and principally concerned in this idolatry, and that the men’s guilt lay chiefly in conniving at them, and suffering themselves to be seduced by them; saying, We will surely perform our vows, &c.—They insist on their unlawful vows as obligations in conscience, which could not be dispensed with, just as Herod did on his unlawful oath,

A. M. 3417. 25 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, B. C. 587. the God of Israel, saying; ° Ye and your wives have both spoken with your mouths, and fulfilled with your hand, saying, We will surely perform our vows that we have vowed, to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings unto her: ye will surely accomplish your vows, and surely perform your vows.

26 Therefore hear ye the word of the LORD, all Judah that dwell in the land of Egypt; Behold, ° I have sworn by my great name, saith the LORD, that ° my name shall no more be named in the mouth of any man of Judah in all the land of Egypt, saying, The Lord God liveth.

27 ° Behold, I will watch over them for evil, and not for good: and all the men of Judah that are in the land of Egypt ° shall be consumed by the sword and by the fa- A. M. 3417. mine, until there be an end of them. B. C. 587.

28 Yet ° a small number that escape the sword shall return out of the land of Egypt into the land of Judah; and all the remnant of Judah, that are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall know whose ° words shall stand, ° mine, or theirs.

29 ¶ And this shall be a sign unto B. C. 587. you, saith the LORD, that I will punish you in this place, that ye may know that my words shall ° surely stand against you for evil:

30 Thus saith the LORD; Behold, ° I will give Pharaoh-hophra king of Egypt into the hand of his enemies, and into the hand of them that seek his life; as I gave ° Zedekiah king of Judah into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, his enemy, and that sought his life.

° Verse 15.—° Gen. xxii. 16.—° Ezek. xx. 39.—° Chap. i. 10; xxxi. 28; Ezekiel vii. 6.—° Verse 12.—° Verse 14; Isa. xxvii. 13.

° Verses 17, 25, 26.—° Heb. from me, or them.—° Psalm xxxiii. 11.—° Chap. xlv. 25, 26; Ezek. xxx. 3, &c.; xxx. 21, &c.—° Chap. xxxix. 5.

Matt. xiv. 9: as if, though to burn incense to the queen of heaven were a sin, yet their having vowed to do it were sufficient to justify them in the doing of it; whereas no man can, by his vow, make that lawful to himself, much less his duty, which God had before made sin. Ye will surely accomplish your vows, &c.—You are resolved upon it, and there is no moving you from your resolution. Therefore hear ye the word of the Lord—Hear what is God's resolution. Behold, I have sworn by my great name, saith the Lord—I also have made a solemn vow, in opposition to that wicked one of yours, and have confirmed it by an oath. I have sworn and will not repent: That my name shall no more be named by any man of Judah in the land of Egypt, &c.—“These Jews seem to have joined the worship of the true God with that of idols, as the Samaritans did before them, 2 Kings xvii. 33. Thereupon God declares he will not receive any such polluted worship at their hands, (compare Ezek. xx. 39,) nor suffer his name to be any longer profaned by such hypocrites, but will consume them by a sudden and general destruction”—Lowth. Behold, I will watch over them for evil—God here represents himself as one who would be solicitous and industrious to bring evil upon them, as men, who are so in any business, watch all opportunities for doing it: as if he had said, No opportunity shall be let slip to bring some judgment upon them, until there be an end of them, and they be quite rooted out. Yet a small number that escape the sword shall return, &c.—A very few, next to none in comparison of the great number that shall return out of the land of the Chaldeans: see note on verse 14. And all the remnant of Judah shall know whose words shall stand, mine or theirs—They said they should recover themselves when they returned to worship the queen of heaven. God says they shall hereby ruin themselves: and now the event will show who was in the right. The contest between God and sinners is, whose word shall stand, whose will shall be done, who shall prevail? Sinners say, We shall have peace, though we go on in sin: God says, Ye shall have no peace. And when God judges, he will overcome: his word shall stand, and not the sinner's.

Verses 29, 30. And this shall be a sign unto you—Signs are usually antecedent to the thing signified, as Isa. xxxviii. 7; but here, as Exod. iii. 12, Isa. xxxvii. 30, and Luke. ii. 12, the word is taken, in a larger sense, for a circumstance that should attend the thing signified. It may be observed, however, that although the destruction of these Jews, and that of Pharaoh, were things immediately following each other, yet the latter was in order before the other. I will give Pharaoh-hophra into the hand of his enemies—Pharaoh was a name common, in ancient times, to all the kings of Egypt; but several of them had some additional epithet to distinguish them from the rest. Thus the predecessor of this king was called Pharaoh-nechoh, 2 Kings xxiii. 29. This Pharaoh-hophra appears to have been the same that is called by profane authors Apries; and his unfortunate end, in exact conformity with this prediction, is particularly related by Herodotus, lib. ii. cap. 169, and by Diodorus Siculus, lib. i. p. 43. “His subjects rebelling, he sent Amasis, one of his generals, to reduce them to their duty; but no sooner had Amasis begun to make his speech than they fixed a helmet on his head, and proclaimed him king. Amasis accepted the title, and confirmed the Egyptians in their rebellion; and the greater part of the nation declaring for him, Apries was obliged to retire into Upper Egypt; and the country, being thus weakened by intestine war, was attacked and easily overcome by Nebuchadnezzar, who, on quitting it, left Amasis his viceroy. After Nebuchadnezzar's departure, Apries marched against Amasis, but, being defeated at Memphis, was taken prisoner, carried to Sais, and strangled in his own palace; thus verifying this prophecy." See Rollin's Ancient Hist., vol. i., and Bishop Newton on the Prophecies, vol. i. p. 362.

CHAPTER XLV.

This chapter, though placed at a considerable distance from it, is evidently an appendage to chap. xxxvi. Baruch, as we there learn, had been employed by Jeremiah, as his amanuensis, to write a collection of all those dreadful threatenings which God had denounced by his mouth. This seems to have affected his spirits, and to have alarmed his fears to such a degree, that God judged it proper to encourage and comfort him by letting him know that, although amidst the general calamities of his country he ought not to look for any great matters for himself, yet, in consideration of his services, his own life should be preserved to him by a special providence, in all places to which it might be his lot to go, 1-5.

A. M. 3397. B. C. 607. THE word that Jeremiah the prophet spake unto Baruch the son of Neriah, when he had written these words in a book at the mouth of Jeremiah, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, unto thee, O Baruch;

3 Thou didst say, Wo is me now! for the LORD hath added grief to my sorrow; I fainted in my sighing, and I find no rest. A. M. 3397. B. C. 607. 4 Thus shalt thou say unto him, The LORD saith thus; Behold, ^bthat which I have built will I break down, and that which I have planted I will pluck up, even this whole land.

5 And seekest thou great things for thyself? seek them not: for behold, ^cI will bring evil upon all flesh, saith the LORD: but thy life will I give unto thee ^dfor a prey in all places whither thou goest.

^a Chap. xxxvi. 1, 4, 32. ^b Isa. v. 5. ^c Chap. xxv. 26.

^d Chap. xxi. 9; xxxviii. 2; xxxix. 18.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLV.

Verse 1. The word that Jeremiah spake unto Baruch when he had written, &c.—"This seems to indicate that the exact time of the uttering of this prophecy was between the writing and the publication of the roll. And, perhaps, if Baruch had not received such special assurances of protection, he might not have had resolution enough to have followed the prophet's further directions, and to have read first before all the people, and afterward before the princes, what he had written."—Blaney.

Verses 3-5. Thou didst say, Wo is me now, &c.—"The sorrows which I felt for the threatenings denounced against my country and religion are increased by my own troubles, being sought after by the king's command in order to be put to death:" see chap. xxxvi. 26. The Lord saith, That which I have built will I break down, &c.—The land and people which have so long flourished under the peculiar care of my providence I resolve now to give up to utter destruction: see chap. xxxi. 28. And seekest thou great things for thyself?—Dost thou aspire to honour, dignity, and prosperity, or expect to be exempted from adversity and trouble in a time of great and common calamity? Seek them not—Never think of any thing of the kind; for, behold, I bring evil on all flesh—Upon the whole country where thou livest, and upon all orders and degrees of men therein. But thy life will I give unto thee for a prey—Thy life shall be preserved, but under such circumstances that thou shalt have reason to look on thyself as peculiarly indebted to the divine providence for so singular and extraordinary a favour. See note on chapter xxi. 9, where the same proverbial expression occurs, and is further explained.

CHAPTER XLVI.

This chapter contains two prophecies against Egypt: the first fulfilled immediately after the publication; the other about thirty-four years after. To be more particular: We have here, (1.) A prediction of the defeat of Pharaoh-necho's army, notwithstanding their pompous preparations and sanguine expectations, by the Chaldean forces at Carchemish on the Euphrates, 1-12. (2.) A prophecy of the invasion and conquest of Egypt, by the Chaldeans under Nebuchadnezzar, who should fill the country with terror and confusion, murder its inhabitants, and render it desolate for forty years, 13-26. (3.) A word of comfort is given to the Israel of God in the midst of these calamities, 27, 28.

A. M. 3397.
B. C. 607.

THE word of the LORD which came to Jeremiah the prophet against ^a the Gentiles;

2 Against Egypt, ^b against the army of Pharaoh-necho king of Egypt, which was by the river Euphrates in Carchemish, which Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon smote in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah.

3 ^c Order ye the buckler and shield, and draw near to battle.

4 Harness the horses; and get up, ye horsemen, and stand forth with your helmets; furbish the spears, and put on the brigandines.

^a Chapter xxv. 15.—^b 2 Kings xxxiii. 29; 2 Chronicles xxxv. 29; fulfilled presently.—^c So Chap. li. 11, 12; Nah. ii. 1; iii. 14.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLVI.

Verse 1. The word of the Lord which came to Jeremiah against the Gentiles—This is a general title to the collection of prophecies contained in this and the five following chapters, and refers to the denunciation of God's judgments upon the countries round about Judea, namely, those of whom an enumeration is made chap. xxv. 19–25. To some of these prophecies the date is annexed; in others it is left uncertain. It is evident they were not all delivered at the same time, and they seem to be here out of their proper place. In the Vatican and Alexandrian copies of the Septuagint, they follow immediately after chap. xxv. 13, where express mention is made of the book which Jeremiah had prophesied against all the nations; which book is contained in this and the following chapters. It seems those who collected Jeremiah's writings judged proper, without confining themselves to the order of time, to join together all those prophecies which respected the Gentile nations, and were not immediately connected with the affairs of the Jews.

Verse 2. Against Egypt, against the army of Pharaoh-necho—Pharaoh-necho was king of Egypt in Josiah's time, and it was by his army that Josiah was killed at Megiddo, as is related 2 Kings xxiii. 29, where see the note. That army was then marching under the conduct of Necho against the Medes and Babylonians, who, having by the capture of Nineveh destroyed the Assyrian empire, had become formidable to the neighbouring states. Josiah opposed it in its march through the country, but was defeated, and received a wound in the battle which proved mortal. Necho continued his march after this victory, defeated the Babylonians, took Carchemish, and securing it with a strong garrison, returned into his own country. Nabopolassar, the king of Babylon, observing that all Syria and Palestine had revolted on account of the reduction of Carchemish by the Egyptians, sent his son Nebuchadnezzar with an army to retake that city, and recover the revolted provinces. Necho marched with a powerful army

5 Wherefore have I seen them dismayed and turned away back? and their mighty ones are ¹ beaten down, and are ² fled apace, and look not back: for ³ fear was round about, saith the LORD.

6 Let not the swift flee away, nor the mighty man escape: they shall ^c stumble, and fall toward the north by the river Euphrates.

7 Who is this that cometh up ^d as a flood, whose waters are moved as the rivers?

8 Egypt riseth up like a flood, and his waters are moved like the rivers; and he saith, I will go up, and will cover the earth; I will destroy the city and the inhabitants thereof.

¹ Heb. broken in pieces.—² Heb. fled a flight.—³ Chapter vi. 25; xlix. 29.—^c Dan. xi. 19.—^d Isaiah viii. 7; Chapter xlvii. 2; Dan. xi. 22.

to oppose him; and it appears it was at the time when the Egyptian army lay along the banks of the Euphrates, waiting to oppose the entrance of Nebuchadnezzar into Syria, that this prophecy was delivered, namely, as is here said, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim. The two armies came to an engagement near the city of Carchemish, and the event of the battle proved very disastrous to the Egyptians, who were routed with prodigious slaughter, as is here foretold by the prophet in a very animated style, and with great poetic energy and liveliness of colouring.

Verses 3–6. Order ye the buckler, &c.—In these verses the mighty preparations of the Egyptians for war are described, which causes the prophet, who foresees the defeat, to express, as he does in the next two verses, “his astonishment at an event so contrary to what might have been expected; but he accounts for it by ascribing it to the disposition of the Almighty, who had spread terror all around, and had decreed that neither swiftness nor strength should avail the owners so as to save them from the impending overthrow.”—Blaney. I have seen them dismayed and turned back—God had, in a vision, shown Jeremiah the army of the Egyptians discomfited and fleeing; and their mighty ones—Their most powerful warriors and valiant commanders; are beaten down, and are fled apace—Either fall in the battle, or flee away as fast as they can; for fear is round about—A panic fear hath seized the whole army. Let not the swift flee away—Let them not be able to escape from those that pursue them, but be either killed or taken. They shall stumble, &c., toward the north by the river Euphrates—Which was northward from Egypt, and even from Judea: so Babylon is described as lying northward, being situate upon that river.

Verses 7–10. Who is this that cometh up as a flood—Here the king of Egypt is compared to a mighty river, the Nile, or the Euphrates, when it swells above its banks, and threatens to overwhelm the country with ruin and desolation. And he saith,

A. M. 3397. 9 Come up, ye horses; and rage,
B. C. 607. ye chariots; and let the mighty men come forth: ³ the Ethiopians and ⁴ the Libyans, that handle the shield; and the Lydians, ⁵ that handle and bend the bow.

10 For this is ^h the day of the Lord God of hosts, a day of vengeance, that he may avenge him of his adversaries: and ⁱ the sword shall devour, and it shall be satiate and made drunk with their blood: for the Lord God of hosts ^k hath a sacrifice in the north country by the river Euphrates.

11 ^l Go up into Gilead, and take balm, ^m O

³ Heb. Cush.—⁴ Heb. Put.—⁵ Isa. lxvi. 19.—^h Isa. xlii. 6; Joel i. 15; ii. 1.—ⁱ Deut. xxxii. 42; Isa. xxxiv. 6.—^k Isa. xxxiv. 6; Zeph. i. 7; Ezek. xxxix. 17.

I will go up, and will cover the earth—With my numerous armies; I will destroy the city—Carchemish or Babylon; and the inhabitants thereof—Who shall not be able to withstand the powerful force I bring against them. Thus the prophet represents him as beginning his march with all the ostentation and insolence of presumed success. Come up, ye horses; and rage, ye chariots, &c.—Here he is exhibited calling aloud to the nations of which his army is composed, giving them the signal for action, and rousing them to deeds of desperate valour; but all in vain: for the time is come for God to avenge himself of his ancient foes: they are doomed to slaughter, to fall a bloody sacrifice on the plains of the north. For, adds the prophet, verse 10, this is the day of the Lord God of hosts—That is, as it follows, the day of his vengeance. Hence, the day of the Lord is used in the New Testament to signify the day of judgment, of which all other days of vengeance are the earnest and forerunners. That he may avenge himself of his adversaries—Of the idols of Egypt and their worshippers: the Egyptians were some of the first idolaters, and carried idolatry to its greatest height. And the sword shall devour, it shall be satiate, &c.—These metaphorical expressions signify the very great slaughter which would be made at that time in the Egyptian army. For the Lord God hath a sacrifice, &c.—The slaughter of men in battle, which is by way of punishment for their sins, is called a sacrifice to God, because it makes some kind of satisfaction and atonement to the divine justice. See the margin.

Verses 11, 12. Go up into Gilead, and take balm—Gilead was famous for producing balm and such like healing gums: see note on chap. viii. 22. The prophet, alluding to the custom of men's going thither for relief in dangerous infirmities, ironically advises the Egyptians to try all the methods they can think of to prevent that destruction that threatened them, but he signifies that all their endeavours would be in vain. Compare chap. li. 8. O virgin, the daughter of Egypt—Those cities or countries are called virgins which were never conquered.

virgin, the daughter of Egypt: in vain ^{A. M. 3397.} shalt thou use many medicines; for ^{B. C. 607.} ⁶ thou ⁿ shalt not be cured.

12 The nations have heard of thy shame, and thy cry hath filled the land: for the mighty man hath stumbled against the mighty, and they are fallen both together.

13 ¶ The word that the Lord spake to Jeremiah the prophet, how Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon should come and ^o smite the land of Egypt.

14 Declare ye in Egypt, and publish in Migdol, and publish in Noph and in Tahpanhes:

¹ Chap. viii. 22; li. 8.—^m Isaiah xlvii. 1.—⁵ Heb. no cure shall be unto thee.—⁶ Ezek. xxx. 21.—^o Isa. xix. 1; Chapter xliii. 10, 11; Ezek. xxix.; xxx.; xxxii.; fulfilled about 571.

Egypt was grown great by her conquests, particularly by the former battle at Carchemish, (see verse 2,) and did not apprehend itself to be in any danger of being conquered. The nations have heard of thy shame—Of thy armies being shamefully beaten and running away; for the mighty man hath stumbled against the mighty—When an army is once broken and disordered, multitudes are a hinderance one to another, and one part helps to destroy another. Thus the prophet concludes the first prophecy against Egypt, or, as he expresses it, the daughter of Egypt, by an apostrophe to her, addressing her as a conquered nation, whose wound is pronounced incurable, and disgrace universally known; forasmuch as the number of her warriors served only to augment the general disorder, and more effectually to destroy each other.

Verse 13. The word that the Lord spake, &c.—Here begins the second prophecy against Egypt, the exact time of the delivery of which we have no means of ascertaining; but the desolation foretold in it is undoubtedly the same with that predicted by Ezekiel, chaps. xxix., xxx., xxxi., xxxii. And this came to pass in the twenty-seventh year of Jehoiachin's captivity, that is, the sixteenth year after the destruction of Jerusalem, as may be collected from Ezek. xxix. 17, where Nebuchadnezzar's army is spoken of as having at that time suffered a great deal at the siege of Tyre; on which account the spoils of Egypt are promised them for their wages and indemnification: and the promise was accordingly made good that same year.—Jos. Ant., lib. x. cap. 9.

Verses 14, 15. Publish in Migdol, and in Noph, and Tahpanhes—Concerning these three cities, see note on ch. xlv. 1. The meaning is, publish this prophecy over all the land of Egypt; or these three places are named, because in them the Jews, who went into Egypt with Johanan, were chiefly settled. Say, Stand fast, and prepare thee—Prepare for war, and resolve to keep your ground, and not yield to the enemy: compare verses 2, 3. For the sword shall devour round about thee—The nations are de

A. M. 3397. say ye, ^pStand fast, and prepare
B. C. 607. thee; for ^qthe sword shall devour round about thee.

15 Why are thy valiant men swept away?
they stood not, because the LORD did drive
them.

16 He ^emade many to fall, yea, ^rone fell upon another: and they said, Arise, and let us go again to our own people, and to the land of our nativity, from the oppressing sword.

^p Verses 3, 4. — ^q Verse 10. — ^e Hebrew, multiplied the fallers.
^r Lev. xxvi. 37.

stroyed around you, and you have reason to expect that the sword will next reach you. Why are thy valiant men swept away?—"The Hebrew word אֲבִיר, here rendered valiant, is sometimes spoken of God, as Gen. xlix. 24. Sometimes it is a title given to angels, as Psā. lxxviii. 25; but the LXX. understand it here of Apis, the idol of Egypt, which might properly be said to be conquered when the nation, that had put themselves under his protection, was subdued."—Lowth. And, instead of they stood not, because the Lord did drive them, as we translate the next clause, the LXX. add, ο μοσχος ο εκλεκτος ου ακ εμεινεν, οτι κυριος παρελυσεν αυτον, thy elect calf did not abide, because the Lord debilitated, literally, paralyzed, him. But it is not at all probable that this idol was here intended, but either of the mighty princes of Egypt; or, if the noun be singular, as Blaney understands it, reading, אֲבִירִיךָ, thy mighty one, instead of אֲבִירֶיךָ, thy mighty ones, then the king is probably meant. Neither the king himself, nor his valiant captains, could stand before Nebuchadnezzar and the Chaldean army, because God discomfited them. It was of God to destroy Egypt, and when he works none can hinder him; when he strikes none can stand up against him, or stand before him.

Verses 16, 17. He made many to fall—Or, as the Vulgate renders הרבה כושל, multiplicavit-ruentes, he multiplied those falling, or more literally, the fallers, as in the margin, the word being singular.
Blaney connects this with the next clause, as the LXX. do, and reads the verse thus: "He hath caused many to stumble, yea, to fall; they said therefore one to another, Arise, and let us return to our people, and to our native country, because of the oppressor's sword." These are either the words of the Egyptian allies, resolving to return to their own countries, and not concern themselves any further with the affairs of Egypt; or else they are the words of the remains of the Egyptians, resolving to retire within their own borders, as thinking the Babylonians would not follow them thither. They did cry, Pharaoh king of Egypt is but a noise—He is no more than an empty boaster: he has neglected the opportunities he ought to have laid hold on, and he is not prepared according to his appointment.

17 They did cry there, Pharaoh A. M. 3397.
king of Egypt is but a noise; he hath B. C. 607.
passed the time appointed.

18 As I live, saith the King, ^awhose name is the LORD of hosts, Surely as Tabor is among the mountains, and as Carmel by the sea, so shall he come.

19 O ^tthou daughter dwelling in Egypt, ⁷furnish thyself ^uto go into captivity: for Noph shall be waste and desolate without an inhabitant.

^a Isa. xlviii. 4; xlviii. 2; Chap. xlviii. 15. — ^t Chap. xlviii. 18.
⁷ Heb. make thee instruments of captivity. — ^u Isa. ix. 4.

Verse 18. As I live saith the king, whose name is the Lord of hosts—He, before whom the mightiest kings on earth, though gods to us, are but as grasshoppers; he hath said and sworn what follows; Surely as Tabor, &c.—As surely as Tabor is among the mountains and Carmel by the sea, so surely shall the conqueror of Egypt come. Or, though Egypt were as inaccessible as the top of Tabor, and begirt with the sea like Carmel, yet the enemy should come upon her, and make an entire conquest of her.
Houbigant paraphrases the clause thus, "As much as Tabor overtops all other mountains, so much shall the Chaldeans be superior to the Egyptians; and as the waves of the sea roar in vain at the foot of mount Carmel, so shall the Egyptians waves rage in vain." Blaney understands the clause in nearly the same sense, observing, "Tabor and Carmel were two of the most considerable mountains in the land of Israel. Carmel formed the principal headland all along the sea-coast. Nebuchadnezzar is compared to these on account of his superiority over all others."

Verse 19. O thou daughter dwelling in Egypt— Blaney translates it, O inhabiting daughter of Egypt, observing, that an antithesis seems to be designed between יושבת, inhabiting, and the act of migration, which was to follow. Countries and cities are often represented under the emblem of women, especially in medals and pictures. Furnish thyself to go into captivity—"The expression is ironical, implying that, instead of the rich and goodly furniture wherein she did pride herself, she should be carried away captive, naked and bare, and wanting all manner of conveniences." The Hebrew of this clause seems to be more literally translated in the margin than in the text; the word כלי, there rendered instruments, meaning either the carriages, or the trunks and boxes that were to hold the things to be removed. Blaney reads it, Get ready thy equipage for removing. For Noph shall be waste, &c.
—Noph in particular shall be wholly depopulated and laid waste. This place, called also Memphis, was accordingly laid waste sometime after this, and remained some years in a state of desolation. It was, indeed, afterward rebuilt, but never recovered its ancient splendour.

A. M. 3397. B. C. 607. 20 Egypt is like a very fair ^a heifer, but destruction cometh; it cometh ^b out of the north.

21 Also her hired men are in the midst of her like ^c fatted bullocks; for they also are turned back, and are fled away together: they did not stand, because ^d the day of their calamity was come upon them, and the time of their visitation.

22 ^e The voice thereof shall go like a serpent; for they shall march with an army, and come against her with axes, as hewers of wood.

23 They shall ^f cut down her forest, saith the

^a So Hosea x. 11.—^b Chapter i. 14 p. xlvi. 2; Verses 6, 10.
^c Heb. bullocks of the stall.—^d Psalm xxxvii. 13; Chap. i. 27.
^e Isa. xxix. 4.—^f Isa. x. 34.—^g Judg. vi. 5.

Verses 20, 21. Egypt is like a very fair heifer—"In the foregoing verse the prophet compared Egypt to a delicate young woman. Here he resembles her to a fat and well-favoured heifer. In which comparison, as Grotius not improbably conjectures, there is an allusion to their god Apis, which was a bull, remarkable for his beauty and the fine spots or marks he had about him."—Lowth. But destruction cometh, &c.—The Hebrew is very emphatical, קִרְץ כִּצְפוֹ, kir'atz kitz'po, destruction from the north, it cometh, it cometh. Also her hired men—Her mercenary soldiers; are in the midst of her like fatted bullocks—Bullocks fatted up, and fit for the slaughter: or they are inactive, and as little courageous as fatted bullocks; foreign or hired troops never fighting with such spirit and resolution as those manifest who are defending their own country and property. They did not stand—Namely, in the fight; because the day of their calamity was come—Because the time when God resolved to punish them, and bring calamity upon them, was arrived, even the time of their visitation, as it is expressed chap. i. 27.

Verses 22, 23. The voice thereof shall go like a serpent—"That is, her (Egypt's) voice shall be low and inarticulate through fear. This passage seems to be an imitation of Isa. xxix. 4, where we find the same threat denounced against Jerusalem, namely, Thy speech shall be low out of the dust, and thy voice shall be as one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground. The cause which is assigned is the same in both places, the irresistible attack of powerful enemies."—Dr. Durell. See note on Isaiah xxix. 4. For they shall march with an army—For the Chaldeans shall come with powerful forces; with axes, as hewers of wood—As if they came to fell timber in a wood. They shall cut down her forest—Here Egypt is compared to a forest, either for the multitude of cities and their stately buildings, or of people in that country; and its destruction is described by the metaphor of cutting down the trees of a forest. Though it cannot be searched, &c.—Though the forest be very thick, and the trees thereof innumerable. Because they are more than

LORD, though it cannot be searched; A. M. 3397. B. C. 607. because they are more than ^g the grasshoppers, and are innumerable.

24 The daughter of Egypt shall be confounded; she shall be delivered into the hand of ^h the people of the north.

25 The LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saith; Behold, I will punish the ⁱ multitude ^j of ^k No, and Pharaoh, and Egypt, ^l with their gods, and their kings; even Pharaoh, and all them that trust in him:

26 ^m And I will deliver them into the hand of those that seek their lives, and into the hand of the grasshoppers—Because the army of the Chaldeans shall be as numerous as the inhabitants of Egypt. In other words, though the cities and inhabitants of Egypt be never so numerous and large; yet the Chaldean army shall plunder and destroy them, because their number is proportionable to such an enterprise. Armies are often compared to grasshoppers and such like insects, both for their multitudes, and because they make a general consumption, grasshoppers devouring all before them, wherever they come: see Judg. vi. 5; vii. 12; Joel ii. 4, 5.

^g Chap. i. 15.—^h Or, nourisher.—ⁱ Heb. Amon.—^j Ezek. xxx. 14, 15, 16; Nah. iii. 8.—^k Chap. xlii. 12, 13; Ezek. xxx. 13.—^l Chap. xli. 30; Ezek. xxxii. 11.

Verses 25, 26. Behold, I will punish the multitude of No—Hebrew, אֲמוֹן נֹחַ, Amon of No, which, says Blaney, "is the literal translation, and we need seek for no other." Amon, or Ammon, as the word is generally written, was the name by which the Egyptians called Jupiter, who had a celebrated temple at Thebes, famous for its hundred gates in Homer's time, and supposed to be the same city with No here mentioned. Here Jupiter was worshipped in a distinguished manner, on which account the place was called Diospolis, the city of Jupiter, which name the LXX. have put for No, Ezek. xxx. 14–16. If therefore No be Thebes, or Diospolis, as it seems evident it is, then Ammon of No signifies the deity of the place, the Theban Jupiter, as Herodotus styles him, lib. ii. cap. 42. As, on the other hand, נֹחַ אֲמוֹן, No-ammon, Nah. iii. 8, should be rendered, No of Ammon, which exactly corresponds with the Greek Διοσπολις, or, city of Jupiter. But very different from these is the term, אֶת הַמֶּלֶךְ נֹחַ, used Ezek. xxx. 15, which indeed signifies the multitude, or numerous inhabitants of No; although, from the similitude of the words אֲמוֹן and הַמֶּלֶךְ, Amon and Hamon, our translators, and others besides them, have confounded them together. Some have supposed No to mean Alexandria, the great emporium of Egypt; and the Chaldee and Vulgate have rendered it so. But Alexandria was not built till ages after the time when Jeremiah prophesied: and it does not appear that there had been before any city, at least any considerable one, standing upon the spot which the founder made the object of his choice.

A. M. 3397. Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, B. C. 607. and into the hand of his servants: and ^h afterward it shall be inhabited, as in the days of old, saith the LORD.

27 ¶ ⁱ But fear not thou, O my servant Jacob, and be not dismayed, O Israel: for behold, I will save thee from afar off, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and be in rest and at ease, A. M. 3397. and none shall make him afraid. B. C. 607.

28 Fear thou not, O Jacob my servant, saith the LORD: for I am with thee; for I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have driven thee: but I will not make ^k a full end of thee, but correct thee in measure; yet will I ¹¹ not leave thee wholly unpunished.

^h Ezek. xxix. 11, 13, 14.—ⁱ Isa. xli. 13, 14; xliii. 5; xlv. 2; Chap. xxx. 10, 11.

^k Chap. x. 24; xxx. 11.—¹¹ Or, not utterly cut thee off.

And Pharaoh and Egypt, with their gods and their kings—The same divine vengeance, which falls upon the idol Ammon and his worshippers, shall reach the rest of Egypt with their respective idols and governors. "When an idolatrous nation," says Blaney, "is doomed to destruction, God is said to execute vengeance upon the idols of the country: see chap. xliii. 12, 13. Accordingly, here Ammon of No, the principal deity, and Pharaoh, the principal man, among the Egyptians, are marked out in the first place as the primary objects of divine visitation; then follows, in the gross, Egypt with all her gods, and all her kings; which latter term is explained to include both Pharaoh himself, and those subordinate rulers who were dependant upon him for the rank and authority they held. And afterward it shall be inhabited, as in the days of old—At the end of forty years Egypt was to begin to recover itself, as Ezekiel foretels, chap. xxix. 13.

Verses 27, 28. But fear not thou, O my servant Jacob; for I will make a full end of all the nations whither, &c.—See notes on chap. xxx. 10, 11, from whence these two verses are taken, containing a comfortable promise to the Jews, that God will not make an utter destruction of them as he hath done of several other nations, against which the prophets have denounced his judgments; but will still preserve a remnant of them, to whom he will perform the promises made to their fathers: see also note on chap. xxx. 16, 17.

CHAPTER XLVII.

This chapter contains the short but terrible doom of the Philistines, and of Tyre and Zidon. It is foretold, (1,) That forces from the north should invade and ravage their country in a most terrible manner, 1-5. (2,) That the war should continue long, and be very ruinous, notwithstanding all endeavours to put an end to it, 6, 7.

A. M. 3397. THE word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah the prophet ^a against the Philistines, ^b before that Pharaoh smote ¹ Gaza.

^a Chap. xxv. 20; Ezek. xxv. 15, 16; Zeph. ii. 4, 5.—^b Amos i. 6, 7, 8.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLVII.

Verse 1. The word of the Lord—against the Philistines—"Among the other nations, who were doomed to suffer by the hostilities of Nebuchadnezzar, the Philistines are enumerated, chap. xxv. 20; and the calamities foretold in this present chapter most probably befell them during the long siege of Tyre, when that prince ravaged their country, in order, as it is said, verse 4, to cut off from Tyre and Sidon all chance of assistance from that quarter. But as no history, sacred or profane, has mentioned the taking of Gaza by the king of Egypt, there is no means of ascertaining the precise date of the delivery of this prophecy." Before that Pharaoh smote Gaza—"Some have supposed the Pharaoh here spoken of to be Pharaoh-necho, and that he subdued Gaza after the battle of Megiddo, (2 Kings

2 Thus saith the LORD; Behold, A. M. 3397. ^c waters rise up ^d out of the north, B. C. 607. and shall be an overflowing flood, and shall overflow the land, and ² all that is therein; the xxiii. 29,) when the whole country round submitted to his victorious arms. Others have thought that it was Pharaoh-hophra, who, having marched out of Egypt to the relief of Jerusalem, when besieged by the Chaldeans, in the ninth or tenth year of Zedekiah, thought proper to retire again on the approach of the enemy toward him, (chap. xxxvii. 5, 7,) but, on his return, fell upon Gaza, and pillaged it. All this, however, is no better than mere conjecture."—Blaney.

¹ Heb. Azzah.—^c Isa. viii. 7; Chap. xlv. 7, 8.—^d Chap. i. 14; xlv. 20.—² Heb. the fulness thereof.

Verses 2, 3. Behold, waters rise out of the north—Waters sometimes signify multitudes of people and nations, Rev. xvii. 15; sometimes great and threatening calamities, Psa. lxxix. 1, these waters mean both. By the north, in this prophecy, the country of the Chaldeans is intended, from whence it is here foretold an army should come and overflow the land like

A. M. 3397. city, and them that dwell therein :
B. C. 607. then the men shall cry, and all the inhabitants of the land shall howl.

3 At the ^e noise of the stamping of the hoofs of his strong horses, at the rushing of his chariots, and at the rumbling of his wheels, the fathers shall not look back to their children for feebleness of hands ;

^e Chap. viii. 16 ; Nah. iii. 2.—^f Chap. xxv. 22.—^g Ezek. xxv. 16 ; Amos i. 8 ; ix. 7.—^h Heb. the isle.—ⁱ Gen. x. 14.

a deluge, spreading devastation and destruction everywhere. At the noise of the stamping, &c.—The word שָׁעַתָּה, here rendered stamping, occurs nowhere else in the Hebrew Scriptures. The LXX. render it, ὀρμῆς, impetus, force, rushing along : the Syriac and Chaldee, by words that respectively denote a progressive motion. “But Grotius,” says Blaney, “seems to have expressed it most happily, who has rendered שָׁעַתָּה בְּקוֹל, a quadrupedante sono : having in view, no doubt, that line of Virgil, Æn. viii. 596.

Quadrupedante putrem sonitu quatit ungula campum.

We may therefore render it, At the galloping sound, or, at the sound of the galloping, of the hoofs of his strong horses—Hebrew, אֲכִירִי, of his mighty ones ; namely, horses. At the rushing of his chariots, the rumbling of his wheels—Blaney unites these two particulars in one, and reads, “At the rattling of the multitude of his wheels as he drove along.” The fathers shall not look back to their children—To provide for their safety, or so much as to see what becomes of them ; for feebleness of hands—Their bodily vigour being dissolved, or relaxed, through the impression made by fear on their minds, which shall be such as to incapacitate them from exerting their strength to any efficacious purpose.

Verse 4. To cut off from Tyrus and Zidon every helper, &c.—The siege of Tyre by Nebuchadnezzar was an action famous in the histories of that age, the siege lasting thirteen years. Zidon, was partaker of the same fate with Tyre, both in prosperity and adversity : see Isa. xxiii. 2, 4. And her destruction is joined with that of Tyre by Ezek. chap. xxviii. The remnant of the country of Caphtor—Or, the isle of Caphtor ; called the remnant of the Philistines, Am. i. 8 ; and the remnant of the sea-coast, Ezek. xxv. 16. The expression denotes either a colony transplanted from Caphtor, or else that small remainder of the Philistines, after they had been almost all destroyed in former times, according to the judgments denounced against them by Amos, chap. i. 8, and Isa. xiv. 19, &c., Caphtor, or Caphtorim, were the ancient inhabitants of Palestine : see Deut. ii. 23. The Caphtorim and Casluhim were two neighbouring nations, and nearly related to each other, being both descended from Misraim the father of the Egyptians : see Gen. x. 13, 14 ; which may be the reason why Moses there derives the pedigree of the Philistines from the latter of these two. The an-

4 Because of the day that cometh to A. M. 3397. spoil all the Philistines, and to cut off B. C. 607. from ^f Tyrus and Zidon every helper that remaineth : for the LORD will spoil the Philistines, ^g the remnant of ^h the country of ⁱ Caphtor.

5 ⁱ Baldness is come upon Gaza ; ^k Ashkelon is cut off with the remnant of their valley : how long wilt thou ^l cut thyself ?

ⁱ Amos i. 7 ; Mic. i. 16 ; Zeph. ii. 4, 7 ; Zech. ix. 5.—^k Chap. xxv. 20.—^l Chap. xvi. 6 ; xli. 5 ; xlviii. 37.

cients generally suppose Caphtor to be the same with Cappadocia. These two nations might go out of Egypt, their native soil, and settle themselves in Cappadocia, where they passed under the general appellation of Caphtorim, and afterward return back to their own native country, and settle in Palestine.

Verse 5. Baldness is come upon Gaza ; how long wilt thou cut thyself, &c.—Under great calamities, and for the loss of any near kindred, it was usual for men to express their grief by shaving their heads, and cutting their flesh. Instead of Ashkelon is cut off, &c., Blaney reads, Ashkelon is put to silence, observing, that “silence likewise is expressive of great affliction. Thus Job’s friends are said to have sat with him seven days and seven nights upon the ground without addressing a word to him, because they saw his grief was very great, Job ii. 13. And so the Hebrew word here used, נִדְמָה, is to be understood, (Isa. xv. 1,) of Moab’s being made speechless with grief and astonishment the night that its cities were spoiled : see chap. xlviii. 2.” With the remnant of their valley—Instead of this interpretation, the LXX. read οἱ καταλοιποὶ Ἐνακίμ, the remnant of the Anakims. And this reading may be thought to derive some countenance from what is said Josh. xi. 22. But we shall see reason to prefer the present reading of the text, if we consider the situation of Gaza and Ashkelon, about twelve miles distant from each other, near the sea, in a valley, of whose beauty and fertility an accurate traveller has given the following description : “We passed this day through the most pregnant and pleasant valley that ever eye beheld. On the right hand a ridge of high mountains ; (whereon stands Hebron ;) on the left hand the Mediterranean sea ; bordered with continued hills, beset with variety of fruits. The champaign between, about twenty miles over, full of flowery hills, ascending leisurely, and not much surmounting their ranker valleys ; with groves of olives, and other fruits, dispersedly adorned.”—Sandys’s Travels, book iii. p. 150. The author adds, that in his time, “this wealthy bottom (as are all the rest) was, for the most part, uninhabited, but only for a few small and contemptible villages”—a state of desolation, owing to the oppressions of a barbarous and ill-advised government. But we may easily conceive the populousness that must have prevailed there in its better days, especially if we consider the power which the Philistines once possessed, and the armies they brought into the field ; although their country

A. M. 3397. 6 O thou ^msword of the LORD,
B. C. 607. how long will it be ere thou be quiet? ⁴put up thyself into thy scabbard, rest, and be still.

^m Deut. xxxii. 41; Ezek. xxi. 3, 4, 5.—⁴ Heb. gather thyself.

was scarcely forty English miles in length, and much longer than it was broad.—Blaney.

Verses 6, 7. O thou sword of the Lord—By the sword of the Lord, war is here intended, with which, as a great instrument of calamity and destruction, God punishes the crimes of his enemies, and pleads the cause of his people. Some have understood the prophet as speaking in the words of the Philistines, complaining of the havoc which the sword made among them; but however weary they might be of the war, and desirous of its ceasing, it is not likely they should see the hand of God in it, or term it his sword. The words are rather to be considered as the lamentation of the prophet, (and it is a most pa-

7 ⁵How can it be quiet, seeing the A. M. 3397.
LORD hath ⁿgiven it a charge against B. C. 607.
Ashkelon, and against the sea-shore? there hath he ^oappointed it.

⁵ Heb. how canst thou?—ⁿ Ezek. xiv. 17.—^o Mic. vi. 9.

thetic and animated one,) over the miseries with which God, in his just displeasure, was punishing the nations for their sins. How can it be quiet, seeing the Lord hath given it a charge against Ashkelon, &c.—Here the prophet returns an answer to the foregoing inquiry, importing, that the havoc made by the sword was the effect of God's irreversible purpose and decree. He gives the sword its commission, and it slays when and where he appoints, and continues to destroy a longer or shorter time, as he determines. When it is drawn, it will not be sheathed till it has fulfilled its charge. As God's word, so his rod and his sword shall accomplish that for which he sends them.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

In this chapter, which concerns the Moabites, the prophet, (1.) Foretels, that a dreadful destruction should come upon them, and extend to all parts of their land, 1–6, 8, 21–25, 34: that the Chaldeans should shortly and unexpectedly invade their country, destroy them with great fury, force some to flee away, carry multitudes captive, with their idols, and lay the land desolate, 7–12, 14–16, 40–45. That their joys should be turned into mourning, while their neighbours should bewail their miseries, 17–19, 33–39. (2.) He sets forth the causes of these calamities, namely, their pride, carnal security, and idolatry, 7, 11, 14, 29, 35; and their contempt of, and enmity against God and his people; 20, 27, 30, 42. (3.) Promises their restoration after the Chaldean captivity, 47.

A. M. 3399. A GAINST ^aMoab thus saith the
B. C. 605. LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Wo unto ^bNebo! for it is spoiled; ^cKiriathaim is confounded and taken: ¹Misgab is confounded and dismayed.

^a Isaiah xv. ; xvi. ; Chapter xxv. 21; xxvii. 3; Ezekiel xxv. 9; Amos ii. 1, 2.—^b Numbers xxxii. 38; xxxiii. 47; Isaiah xv. 2.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLVIII.

Verse 1. Against Moab—Hebrew, לְמוֹאָב, To, or, concerning Moab, thus saith the Lord of hosts—This prophecy concerning the Moabites, as also the following which respect the Ammonites, Edomites, and other neighbouring nations, are supposed to have been fulfilled during the siege of Tyre by Nebuchadnezzar: see note on chap. xlvii. 1. Many expressions and passages are found in this chapter which Jeremiah seems to have borrowed from a prophecy of Isaiah, chap. xv., and xvi., concerning a like calamity which befell Moab, in all probability when Shalmaneser, king of Assyria, seized upon their cities and fortresses, and ravaged their country, on his march through it to invade the kingdom of Israel. By comparing the parallel places much light may be mutually thrown upon them. Kiriathaim, 2 ^dThere shall be no more praise A. M. 3399.

of Moab: in ^eHeshbon they have de- B. C. 605.
vised evil against it; come, and let us cut it off from being a nation. Also thou shalt ²be cut down, O Madmen; the sword shall ³pursue thee.

^c Numbers xxxii. 37.—¹ Or, the high place.—^d Isa. xvi. 14.
^e Isa. xv. 4.—² Or, be brought to silence, Isa. xv. 1.—³ Heb. go after thee.

one of the cities of Moab, here mentioned, was given by Moses to the Reubenites, as appears by Josh. xiii. 10, but the Moabites afterward recovered the possession of it. Blaney thinks the word which our translators have rendered Misgab, as if it were the proper name of a city, is rather to be considered as an appellative, especially as it has an article prefixed. He therefore renders it, the high fortress, observing that it may either mean Kiriathaim, before mentioned, or any other high fortress of Moab.

Verses 2–6. There shall be no more praise of Moab—The glory of Moab shall be contemned, as Isaiah speaks, chap. xvi. 14. Every thing for which it was famous shall be destroyed. In Heshbon they have devised evil against it—Heshbon was the capital city of the Moabites: when the Chaldeans made themselves masters of Heshbon, a place of great im-

A. M. 3399. 3 ^f A voice of crying shall be from
B. C. 605. Horonaim, spoiling and great destruction.

4 Moab is destroyed; her little ones have caused a cry to be heard.

5 ^g For in the going up of Luhith ⁴ continual weeping shall go up; for in the going down of Horonaim the enemies have heard a cry of destruction.

6 ^h Flee, save your lives; and be like ⁵ the heath in the wilderness.

7 ¶ For because thou hast trusted in thy works and in thy treasures, thou shalt also be taken: and ^k Chemosh shall go forth into captivity with his ¹ priests and his princes together.

8 And ^m the spoiler shall come upon every city, and no city shall escape: the valley also shall perish, and the plain shall be destroyed, as the LORD hath spoken. A. M. 3399.

B. C. 605.

9 ^a Give wings unto Moab, that it may flee and get away: for the cities thereof shall be desolate, without any to dwell therein.

10 ^o Cursed be he that doeth the work of the LORD ⁶ deceitfully, and cursed be he that keepeth back his sword from blood.

11 ¶ Moab hath been at ease from his youth, and he ^p hath settled on his lees, and hath not been emptied from vessel to vessel, neither hath he gone into captivity: therefore his taste ⁷ remained in him, and his scent is not changed.

12 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will send unto him wanderers that shall cause him to wander, and shall empty his vessels, and break their bottles.

^f Verse 5.—^g Isaiah xv. 5.—⁴ Heb. weeping with weeping.
^b Chap. li. 6.—⁵ Or, a naked tree.—ⁱ Ch. xvii. 6.—^k Num. xxi. 29; Judg. xi. 24; Isa. xlii. 1, 2; Chap. xliii. 12.

¹ Chap. xlix. 3.—^m Chap. vi. 26; Verse 18.—ⁿ Psa. lv. 6; Verse 28.—^o Judges v. 23; 1 Sam. xv. 3, 9; 1 Kings xx. 42.
⁶ Or, negligently.—^p Zeph. i. 12.—⁷ Heb. stood.

portance, they consulted how to carry on their conquests over the rest of the country. Thou shalt be cut down, or, brought to silence, Isa. xv. 1. O Madmen—A city in Moab. Her little ones have caused a cry to be heard—Or, sent forth a cry. Both small and great were involved in this calamity, but the word צער, signifies great as well as little: and the Chaldee paraphrast renders it here lords; which seems to be the sense in which it is used. For in the going up, &c.—The ascent of Luhith is in tears, and their weeping is increased, because, in the descent of Horonaim, the enemies have heard the cry of the sufferers: see Isa. xv. 5. Flee, &c., and be like the heath—Resort to the most solitary places, and continue in obscurity where no enemy can find you out.

Verses 7–10. Chemosh shall go, &c.—Chemosh was the idol of the Moabites, Num. xxi. 29. The valley also shall perish and the plain—Those who live in the country, with their flocks and pastures, shall be involved in the same calamity with the inhabitants of the cities. Give wings to Moab, &c.—It is not a common speed that can deliver him from that imminent danger which threatens him. Cursed be he, &c.—God executes his judgments upon sinners by the ministry of men, and those oftentimes as great sinners as they who suffer by them. He had declared by Jeremiah his purpose of making the Chaldeans his instruments in punishing the Jews and the neighbouring countries: see chap. xxv. 9. And it is here signified, that they would expose themselves to the divine wrath and curse if they spared Moab, and did not execute judgment upon it effectually.

Verses 11, 12. Moab hath been at ease—Or, hath been opulent, as the Chaldee renders שׂאן, from his youth—Moab was an ancient kingdom, and had enjoyed great tranquillity, though a small country and surrounded with potent neighbours. It had now been in a state of peace and prosperity since the time of Shalmaneser, having experienced no particular calamity since the judgment foretold by Isaiah, and inflicted by that prince; so that there were forty years between that affliction and this here spoken of. The comparison between the state of the Moabites and that of wine is elegant, and is kept up with great propriety. All wines, it is said, ought to be kept for some time upon their lees, in order to preserve their strength and flavour; on which account the lees are expressed by a word that signifies the preservers. Wine is apt to be damaged by being drawn off too soon into other vessels. By this allegory, therefore, Moab is represented as having enjoyed singular advantages from having constantly remained in his own country ever since he became a people. And the prophet's words imply, that the Moabites had increased in pride and insolence in proportion to the duration of their national tranquillity and prosperity. Behold, saith the Lord, I will send unto him wanderers—The Chaldean soldiers, that come out of a foreign country. These shall make a prey of him, and carry off as much of his wealth as they can, and spoil the rest. Blaney thinks the allegory begun in the preceding verse, is here continued and accordingly renders צעיר, tilters, observing, that the Chaldeans, who are here designed, “should lower the vessels of Moab, namely, the cities, and empty them; and also break to pieces their bottles or pitchers, that is, destroy the lesser towns and villages, dependant on the cities; to which the bottles, or pitchers, answer, being filled with the redundancy of the larger vessels.”

A. M. 3399. 13 And Moab shall be ashamed of
B. C. 605.

^a Chemosh, as the house of Israel was ashamed of ^b Beth-el their confidence.

14 ¶ How say ye, ^c We are mighty and strong men for the war?

15 ^a Moab is spoiled, and gone up out of her cities, and ^b his chosen young men are ^c gone down to the slaughter, saith ^d the King, whose name is the LORD of hosts.

16 The calamity of Moab is near to come, and his affliction hasteth fast.

17 All ye that are about him bemoan him; and all ye that know his name, say, ^e How is the strong staff broken, and the beautiful rod!

18 ^a Thou daughter that dost inhabit ^b Dibon, come down from thy glory, and sit in thirst;
for ^c the spoiler of Moab shall come upon thee,
and he shall destroy thy strong holds.

19 O ^a inhabitant of ^b Aroer, ^c stand by the way, and espy; ask him that fleeth, and her that escapeth, and say, What is done?

20 Moab is confounded; for it is broken

^a Judges xi. 24; 1 Kings xi. 7.—^b Hosea x. 6.—^c 1 Kings
xii. 29.—^d Isaiah xvi. 6.—^e Verses 8; 9, 18.—^f Heb. the choice of.—^g Chap. i. 27.—^h Chap. xvi. 18; li. 57.—ⁱ Isa.
ix. 4; xiv. 4, 5.—^j Isaiah xli. 7; Chap. xlii. 19.—^k Num.
xxi. 30; Isa. xv. 2.

Verses 13-17. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chemosh, &c.—They shall be disappointed in their expectations of succour from their tutelary idol, as the ten tribes have been in the trust they reposed in the calf they worshipped at Bethel. Moab is spoiled, and gone up out of her cities—The words out of are not in the Hebrew; therefore some render this clause, Moab is spoiled, and the cities to which she ascended; that is, those situated on high eminences. All ye that are about him bemoan him—His calamities are so great as must needs make all who see him, or have heard of his former fame and glory, bewail his misfortunes. How is the strong staff broken—A staff, or rod; is an emblem of authority, and thence comes to signify a kingdom, or government, especially such a one as oppresses its subjects, or neighbours, Isa. ix. 4, and x. 5.

Verses 18-25. Thou daughter that dost inhabit Dibon—Thou that art exalted in pride, and rendered effeminate through luxury: Dibon being one of the chief cities of Moab; come down from thy glory, and sit in thirst—Submit to a mean condition, wherein thou shalt feel the want of all the conveniences of life. The Hebrew language expresses a barren land, which yields no sustenance by a thirsty ground, Psa. lxxiii. 2; Isa. xxxv. 7; Ezek. xix. 13. O inhabitant of Aroer—A town in the borders of Moab; stand by the way and espy, &c.—The prophet describes the great concern and fear that were upon them, which made them hearken to every little report that down: ^f howl and cry; tell ye it in A. M. 3399.

^g Arnon, that Moab is spoiled, B. C. 605.

21 And judgment is come upon ^h the plain country; upon Holon, and upon Jahazah, and upon Mephaath,

22 And upon Dibon, and upon Nebo, and upon Beth-diblathaim,

23 And upon Kiriathaim, and upon Bethgamul, and upon Beth-meon,

24 And upon ⁱ Kerioth, and upon Bozrah, and upon all the cities of the land of Moab, far or near.

25 ^k The horn of Moab is cut off, and his ^l arm is broken, saith the LORD.

26 ¶ ^m Make ye him drunken; for he magnified himself against the LORD: Moab also shall wallow in his vomit, and he also shall be in derision.

27 For ⁿ was not Israel a derision unto thee? ^o was he found among thieves? for since thou spakest of him, thou ¹⁰ skippedst for joy.

^a Verse 8.—^b Heb. inhabitress.—^c Deut. ii. 36.—^d 1 Sam.
iv. 13, 16.—^e Isa. xvi. 7.—^f Numbers xxi. 13.—^g Verse 8.
^h Verse 41; Amos ii. 2.—ⁱ Psa. lxxv. 10.—^j Ezek. xxx. 21.
^k Chap. xxv. 15, 27.—^l Zeph. ii. 8.—^m Chap. ii. 26.—ⁿ Or, movedst thyself.

was stirring. Howl and cry—There will be just cause for a general lamentation. Judgment is come upon the plain country, &c.—The inhabitants of the low grounds have suffered the punishment they deserved. The horn of Moab is cut off—The authority and power of Moab are taken away. This is a metaphorical expression, taken from horned beasts, whose power to defend themselves, and injure other creatures, lies chiefly in their horns. And his arm is broken—His strength is exhausted, the arm of man being the instrument whereby he chiefly discovers his strength.

Verses 26, 27. Make ye him drunken—God's judgments are often represented under the metaphor of a cup of intoxicating liquors: see note on chap. xxv. 15. Moab also shall wallow in his vomit—The judgments which God sends upon him shall expose him to the scorn of his enemies; just as a drunken man is the object of men's laughter and derision. For was not Israel a derision unto thee?—Didst not thou insult over the calamities of the Jews when they were carried away captive? Israel is here put for Judah. Was he found among thieves?—Though the sins of Israel were great in the sight of God, yet, as he had done no injury to the Moabites, there was no reason why they should use him with the same despite and contempt as if he had been a common thief and robber, whom all men think they have a right to abuse. For since thou spakest of him, thou skippedst for joy—This translation, Blaney ob

A. M. 3399. B. C. 605. 28 O ye that dwell in Moab, leave the cities, and, ^p dwell in the rock, and be like ^q the dove that maketh her nest in the sides of the hole's mouth.

29 We have heard the ^r pride of Moab, (he is exceeding proud,) his loftiness, and his arrogancy, and his pride, and the haughtiness of his heart.

30 I know his wrath, saith the LORD; but it shall not be so; ^s his ¹¹ lies shall not so effect it.

31 Therefore ^t will I howl for Moab, and I will cry out for all Moab; my heart shall mourn for the men of Kir-heres.

32 ^u O vine of Sibmah, I will weep for thee with the weeping of Jazer: thy plants are gone serves, seems quite foreign to the purpose, and does not accord with the literal meaning of the Hebrew, כִּרְיָ בְּרִיךְ בּוֹ הַתְּנוּדִי, which, he thinks, may be properly rendered, That thou shouldst insult him with all the power of thy words. The sense then of the sentence will be, "Didst thou find Israel among thieves, coming to rob thee of thy property, that thou shouldst think thyself entitled to break out into all manner of revilings against him? Compare Ezek. xxv. 8; Zeph. ii. 8, 10. Lowth suggests another interpretation, which the words will very well bear, and which agrees with the Chaldee paraphrase, namely, For the words thou hast spoken against him, thou shalt be carried captive. To this purpose also the Vulgar Latin, propter verba tua quæ adversum illum locutus es, captivus diceres.

^p Psalm lv. 6, 7; Verse 9.—^q Cant. ii. 14.—^r Isa. xvi. 6; &c.—^s Isa. xvi. 6; Chap. l. 36.—¹¹ Or, those on whom he stayeth (Heb. his bars) do not right.

Verse 28. Ye that dwell in Moab, leave the cities—The walls of which will not be sufficient to defend you from the sword of the enemy. And dwell in the rock—Hide yourselves in the rocks and caverns of your country. And be like the dove that maketh her nest in the sides of the hole's mouth—That is, on the edge of the precipice, as Blaney interprets the expression, or the brink of destruction. The Moabites are here, therefore, "exhorted to retire for safety to those places where the apprehensions of danger would secure them from the enemy's pursuit. That doves build in the clefts, or natural hollows of rocks, see Cant. ii. 14. Dr. Shaw, in his Travels, p. 162, fol., mentions a city on the African coast, called Haman-et, from the number of wild pigeons that are bred in the cliffs of the adjacent mountains."

Verses 29, 30. We have heard the pride of Moab—The several synonymous terms made use of in this verse are meant to express the great pride and insolence of Moab. Though some of these terms are not found in the parallel passage, (Isa. xvi. 6,) yet in the main they agree therewith; and "while they describe the overweening pride and haughtiness of Moab, and the intemperance of his rage, they intimate the small pretensions he had for such high assuming, either in respect of the extent of his power, over the sea, they reach even to the A. M. 3399. sea of Jazer: the spoiler is fallen upon B. C. 605. thy summer-fruits and upon thy vintage.

33 And ^x joy and gladness is taken from the plentiful field, and from the land of Moab; and I have caused wine to fail from the wine-presses: none shall tread with shouting; their shouting shall be no shouting.

34 ^y From the cry of Heshbon even unto Elealeh, and even unto Jahaz, have they uttered their voice, ^z from Zoar even unto Horonaim, as a heifer of three years old: for the waters also of Nimrim shall be ¹² desolate.

35 Moreover I will cause to cease in Moab,

^t Isa. xv. 5; xvi. 7, 11.—^u Isa. xvi. 8.—^x Isa. xvi. 10; Joel i. 12.—^y Isaiah xv. 4, 6.—^z Isaiah xv. 5; Verse 5. ¹² Heb. desolations.

or his actual performances." I know his wrath—Hebrew, עֲרִירוֹ, his fierce wrath, or rage; but it shall not be so—He shall not be able to execute it, or bring to pass what he thinks to do: his power shall not be equal to his malice. His lies shall not so effect it—Or rather, have not so effected, the verb being in the past time. But this latter part of the sentence seems more properly rendered by Blaney, thus: "But he is not alike," (that is, equal to his wrath and threats,) "in the extent of his ability he is not-alike in performing."

Verses 31–33. Therefore will I howl for Moab—See note on Isa. xv. 5. I will cry out for all Moab—The whole country of Moab: the phrase is the same with whole Palestina, Isa. xiv. 31. For the men of Kir-heres—See note on Isa. xvi. 7, 11. O vine of Sibmah—The expressions here denote the destruction of the fruitful vineyards of Sibmah; the loss of which the neighbouring places of Jazer would have reason to lament. Thy plants are gone over the sea—The vineyards of Sibmah seem to have been of a vast extent, and to have been greatly celebrated: see note on Isa. xvi. 8, 9. And joy and gladness is taken from the plentiful field—The gathering in of the harvest and other fruits of the earth is usually accompanied with great expressions of joy; but there would be no occasion for this in the land of Moab, as the enemy would spoil or carry away their crop and vintage. None shall tread with shouting—They shall not have a vintage left sufficient to excite them to shouts of joy, or to induce them to exhort and encourage one another to labour diligently.

Verses 34–39. From the cry of Heshbon—When Heshbon was taken by the enemy, the cry of the inhabitants reached as far as Elealeh and Jahaz: the same was likewise heard from Zoar to Horonaim. As a heifer of three years old—The meaning undoubtedly is, that the cry of Moab, beginning at Heshbon, was continued on from city to city, till the whole country resounded as with the lowing of a cow that runs from place to place in search of her

A. M. 3399. saith the LORD, ^a him that offereth in
B. C. 605. the high places, and him that burneth incense to his gods.

36 Therefore ^b my heart shall sound for Moab like pipes, and my heart shall sound like pipes for the men of Kir-heres: because ^c the riches that he hath gotten are perished.

37 For ^d every head shall be bald, and every beard ^e clipped: upon all the hands shall be cuttings, and ^f upon the loins sackcloth.

38 There shall be lamentation generally upon all the house-tops of Moab, and in the streets thereof: for I have broken Moab like a vessel wherein is no pleasure, saith the LORD.

39 They shall howl, saying, How is it broken down! how hath Moab turned the ^g back with shame! so shall Moab be a derision and a dismaying to all them about him.

40 For thus saith the LORD; Behold, ^h he shall fly as an eagle, and shall ⁱ spread his wings over Moab.

41 ^j Kerioth is taken, and the strong holds

^a Isa. xv. 2; xvi. 12.—^b Isa. xv. 5; xvi. 11.—^c Isa. xv. 7.
^d Isa. xv. 2, 3; Chap. xlvii. 5.—^e Heb. diminished.—^f Gen.
xxxvii. 34.—^g Chapter xxii. 28.—^h Heb. neck.—ⁱ Deut.
xxviii. 49; Chap. xlix. 22; Dan. vii. 4; Hos. viii. 1; Hab. i. 8.
^j Isa. viii. 8.—^k Verse 24.

calf that has been taken from her. An image singularly expressive: see notes on Isa. xv. 4-6. I will cause to cease in Moab him that offereth in the high places—For an explanation of this and the next verse, see notes on Isa. xvi. 11, 12. For every head shall be bald, &c.—This and all the other expressions of this verse signify the greatness of the afflic-tion, intimated by the manner of mourning, which is such as was used in the greatest calamities: compare Isa. xv. 3. I have broken Moab like a vessel wherein is no pleasure—As earthen vessels, if they are not fit for the use for which they were designed,
are broken to pieces without any concern or regret,
so as never to be repaired; thus have I broken Moab, saith the Lord. They shall howl, saying, How is it broken down!—Hebrew, חתה, broken to pieces, as the same word is twice rendered chap. i. 2. The prophet persists in his allusion to the breaking of an earthen vessel.

Verses 40-44. Behold, he shall fly as an eagle— Conquerors are often compared to eagles and other birds of prey; and the encamping of their armies is represented by the spreading of the wings of such fowls. The mighty men's hearts shall be as the heart of a woman in her pangs—They shall be dismayed at the apprehension of the evils that are coming upon them, and shall lose their wonted courage and resolution. Moab shall be destroyed from being a people—From being a nation or go-are surprised, and ^k the mighty men's hearts in Moab at that day shall be as the heart of a woman in her pangs.

42 And Moab shall be destroyed ^l from being a people, because he hath magnified himself against the LORD.

43 ^m Fear, and the pit, and the snare, shall be upon thee, O inhabitant of Moab, saith the LORD.

44 He that fleeth from the fear, shall fall into the pit; and he that getteth up out of the pit, shall be taken in the snare: for ⁿ I will bring upon it, even upon Moab, the year of their visitation, saith the LORD.

45 They that fled stood under the shadow of Heshbon because of the force: but ^o a fire shall come forth out of Heshbon, and a flame from the midst of Sihon, and ^p shall devour the corner of Moab, and the crown of the head of the ^q tumultuous ones.

46 ^r Wo be unto thee, O Moab! the people of Chemosh perisheth: for thy sons are taken ^s captives, and thy daughters captives.

¹ Or, The cities.—² Isa. xiii. 8; xxi. 3; Chap. xxx. 6; xlix.
22, 24; i. 43; li. 30; Mic. iv. 9.—³ Psa. lxxxiii. 4; Isa. vii. 8.
⁴ Isaiah xxiv. 17, 18.—⁵ Chap. xi. 23.—⁶ Numbers xxi. 28.
⁷ Num. xxiv. 17.—⁸ Heb. children of noise.—⁹ Num. xxi. 29
¹⁰ Heb. in captivity.

vernment, as it was before. Fear, and the pit, and the snare, &c.—These words, and those of the next verse, are taken from Isa. xxiv. 17, 18, where see the notes.

Verses 45, 46. They that fled stood under the shadow of Heshbon, &c.—They that fled for fear of the enemies' forces thought to find shelter and safety in Heshbon, a strong fenced city. Or, instead of, because of the force, the Hebrew מַכָּה may be rendered for want of force, or strength, namely, force of their own to withstand the enemy.
But a fire shall come forth out of Heshbon, and a flame from the midst of Sihon—That is, of the city of Sihon, meaning still Heshbon. When the enemies have possessed themselves of Heshbon, they will quickly spread like fire over the rest of the country.
Thus the prophet fitly applies to the present case the words of an ancient poem made upon Sihon's conquests over Moab, and recited by Moses, Num.
xxi. 27, 28, where see the notes. And shall devour the corner of Moab, and the crown of the head of the tumultuous ones—By the corner may be meant the borders, or extreme parts of the country. So the Hebrew word פֶּתַח signifies, Num. xxxiv. 3; Neh. ix. 22. The nobility, who are the stay and support of the government, are expressed by the crown of the head. By the tumultuous are meant those that are proud and haughty in their state and plenty, and insult over their inferiors. Wo be unto

A. M. 3309. 47 ¶ Yet will I bring again the B. C. 605. captivity of Moab * in the latter days, saith the LORD. Thus far is the A. M. 3309. judgment of Moab. B. C. 605.

* Chapter

xlix. 6, 39.

thee, O Moab!—This verse is likewise taken out of Num. xxi. 19. The people of Chemosh perisheth—People are sometimes denominated from the God they worship: so the Jews were called the people of the Lord, or Jehovah.

Verse 47. Yet will I bring again the captivity of Moab—The Moabites were afterward restored to their country, as appears from Josephus, Antiq.

lib. xiii. c. 17. But these and similar promises of mercy after judgment are chiefly to be understood of the conversion of the Gentiles under the gospel, called the latter days in the prophets. The conversion of idolaters is expressed by returning from their captivity, Ezek. xvi. 53.—Lowth. See also Calmet's Dissertation upon the return of the Moabites, &c.

CHAPTER XLIX.

This chapter contains a collection of prophecies against several of those nations against which Jeremiah received a general commission to declare God's judgments, chap. xxv. 13. (1.) Against the Ammonites, 1–6. (2.) The Edomites, 7–22. (3.) The Syrians, 23–27. (4.) The Arabians of Kedar and Hazor, 28–33. (5.) The Elamites, 34–39. Concerning the time of the fulfilment of these prophecies, see the note on chap. xlviii. 1.

A. M. 3404. CONCERNING ¹ the Ammon-
B. C. 600. ites, thus saith the LORD; Hath Israel no sons? hath he no heir? why then doth ² their king inherit ^b Gad, and his people dwell in his cities?

2 Therefore behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will cause an alarm of war to be heard in ^c Rabbah of the Ammon- A. M. 3404.

ites; and it shall be a desolate heap, B. C. 600.
and her daughters shall be burned with fire: then shall Israel be heir unto them that were his heirs, saith the LORD.

3 Howl, O Heshbon, for Ai is spoiled: cry, ye daughters of Rabbah, ^d gird you with sackcloth;

¹ Or, Against.—Ezek. xxi. 28; xxv. 2; Amos i. 13; Zeph. ii. 8, 9.—² Or, Melcom.

^b Amos i. 13.—^c Ezek. xxv. 5; Amos i. 14.—^d Isa. xxxii. 11; Chap. iv. 8; vi. 26.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLIX.

Verse 1. Hath Israel no sons? Why then doth their king inherit Gad?—Is there no posterity of Israel, that the king of the Ammonites hath taken possession of Gad, as if he had a right to it, and his people dwell in the cities of it? Instead of their king here, Blaney reads Milcom, and Dr. Waterland and Houbigant Malkam, the idol of the Ammonites. "God sorely afflicted those parts of the kingdom of Israel that lay eastward of Jordan, first by Hazael, 2 Kings x. 33; afterward by Tiglath-pileser, chap. xv. 29; and then delivered up the whole kingdom to be carried captive by Shalmaneser, chap. xvii.; after which, it is probable, the Ammonites took occasion to possess themselves of Gad, that lay near their territories. But God's dispossessing the Israelites gave the Ammonites no right to invade their inheritance, (see Zeph. ii. 8,) especially as they had been so tender of the Ammonites' right as not to invade their possessions in their march toward the land of Canaan." See Lowth, and Deut. iv. 19; 2 Chron. xx. 10. It is probable, as the king of Ammon had instigated Ishmael to kill Gedaliah, that the reason which induced Nebuchadnezzar to make war upon the Ammonites was to revenge that murder.

Verse 2. Therefore I will cause the noise of war to be heard in Rabbah, &c.—The principal city of that country. Her daughters shall be burned with fire—That is, the lesser cities, which are reckoned so many daughters to the mother city. Then shall Israel be heir unto them that were his heirs—Hebrew, וירשו את רישו, Possidebit possessores suos, Vulgate, shall possess his possessors; or, as Blaney renders it, shall take to their possessions who have taken to his. "This is understood," says he, "to have been fulfilled when Judas Maccabeus defeated the Ammonites, and took their towns, 1 Mac. v. 6, &c. Zephaniah speaks in like manner, chap. ii. 9, The residue of my people shall spoil them, and the remnant of my people shall possess them. But both prophets may, perhaps, refer to still future times, when Israel shall be finally restored to their own land, as is frequently foretold of them, and not only recover their own ancient possessions, but succeed, likewise, to the vacant possessions of their once hostile neighbours, long since extinct and irrecoverably lost."

Verse 3. Howl, O Heshbon, for Ai is spoiled—This "Ai must be a different city from that taken by Joshua, chap. viii., which lay on the west side of Jordan. Grotius mentions another city, called Gaia by Ptolemy; which, being near Heshbon, the de-

A. M. 3404. lament, and run to and fro by the
B. C. 600. hedges; for ³their king shall go into captivity, and his ^opriests and his princes together.

4 Wherefore gloriest thou in the valleys, ⁴thy flowing valley, O ^fbacksliding daughter? that trusted in her treasures, ^esaying, Who shall come unto me?

5 Behold, I will bring a fear upon thee, saith the Lord God of hosts, from all those that be about thee; and ye shall be driven out every

³ Or, Melcom, 1 Kings xi. 5, 33.—^e Chapter xlviii. 7; Amos
i. 15.—⁴ Or, thy valley floweth away.—^f Chapter iii. 14; vii.
24.—^g Chap. xxi. 13.

struction of it was matter of concern to the neighbouring city." Lament, and run to and fro by the hedges—Try to hide yourselves in the thickets, and remove from one place to another, for fear of being discovered. But by גדרות, here rendered hedges, Blaney thinks, are meant, "those fences or enclosures round the lesser towns, which served to secure them against thieves and robbers, but were not dignified with the name of walls, capable of resisting the attack of a regular enemy." The psalmist, he supposes, distinguishes these from the fortifications of cities, Psalm lxxxix. 40, terming the former גדרותי his fences, and the latter סבצרי, his strong holds, or walled fortresses. According to this interpretation, therefore, the prophet here foretels that "the inhabitants of the lesser towns should run to and fro, like persons distracted with fear, within their enclosures, not daring to step beyond them, lest they should fall in with the enemy, whose approach they dreaded." For their king—Or, Milcom, their idol;
shall go into captivity, and his priests and princes together—"Here the same is said of Milcom," says Blaney, "as was of Chemosh, chap. xlviii. 7, which shows that the word is properly used as the name of the Ammonitish idol."

Verses 4-6. Wherefore gloriest thou in the valleys?—That is, in the riches of thy fat and plentiful valleys, which overflow with abundance of all things; compare Isa. xxviii. 1, 4. Though they be fruitful, yet glory not therein, for, notwithstanding their fertility, they shall be no security to thee against the terror which I shall bring upon thee. Behold, I will bring fear upon thee—When God gives up a people to destruction, he commonly takes from them their usual courage. But the word fear here may denote a hostile army, the cause of fear and terror. And ye shall be driven out every man right forth—That is, so as not to dare to look back, or stop to consider which way to go, but flee for your lives that way which lies next. And none shall gather up him that wandereth—None shall bring him that flees from the enemy to his house, or afford him any shelter or accommodation. And afterward I will bring again the captivity of Ammon. See note on chap.
xlviii. 47.

man right forth; and none shall ga- A. M. 3404.
ther up him that wandereth. B. C. 600.

6 ¶ And ^hafterward I will bring again the captivity of the children of Ammon, saith the LORD.

7 ¶ ⁱConcerning Edom, thus saith the LORD of hosts: ^kIs wisdom no more in Teman? ^lIs counsel perished from the prudent? is their wisdom vanished?

^mFlee ye; ⁿturn back, dwell deep, O inhabitants of ^oDedan; for I will bring the cala-

^h So Verse 39; Chap. xlviii. 47.—ⁱ Ezek. xxv. 12; xxxv.
2; Joel iii. 19; Amos i. 11.—^k Obad. 8.—^l Isa. xix. 11.
^m Verse 30.—ⁿ Or, they are turned back.—^o Chap. xxv. 23.

Verse 7. Concerning Edom—The destruction of Edom, or Idumea, is likewise foretold by Ezekiel, Joel, Amos, and Obadiah: see the margin. Is wisdom no more in Teman—"The eastern part of the world (by which is chiefly meant Arabia and the adjacent countries) was famous for the study of wisdom, or philosophy, as it was called in later times:
see 1 Kings iv. 30. The Edomites put in their claim to this prerogative, as appears from what is said here, and in the parallel place of Obadiah, verse 8, as also from the book of Job, where Eliphaz, one of the disputants, is called the Temanite, as being descended from Teman, Esau's grandson, who gave name to the city or country of Teman, elsewhere mentioned. Is counsel perished from the prudent?
—When God designs a people for destruction, he deprives them of that common prudence and foresight which are requisite for the due management of their affairs."—Lowth. Here Edom, which boasted itself, and whose fame was spread abroad for wisdom and prudence, is described acting as if all its wisdom and prudence were gone.

Verse 8. Flee ye, turn back, dwell deep—"When the Arabs," says Harmer, "have drawn upon themselves such a general resentment of the more fixed inhabitants of those countries that they think themselves unable to stand against them, they withdraw into the depths of the great wilderness, where none can follow them with hopes of success." D'Arvieux tells us, "they will be quite ready to decamp upon less than two hours' warning, and, retiring immediately into the deserts, render it impossible for other nations, even the most powerful, to conquer them, they not daring to venture far into the deserts, where the Arabs alone know how to steer their course, so as to hit upon places of water and forage. Is it not then most probable that the dwelling deep, which Jeremiah here recommends to the Arab tribes, means this plunging far into the deserts, rather than going into deep caves and dens, as Grotius and other commentators suppose?" O inhabitants of Dedan— The Dedanites were Arabians of the posterity of Dedan, a grandson of Abraham, Gen. xxv. 3. They seem by this place to have been, in later times, subdued by the Idumeans, and incorporated with them.

A. M. 3404. mity of Esau upon him, the time that
B. C. 600. I will visit him.

9 If °grape-gatherers come to thee, would they not leave some gleaning-grapes? if thieves by night, they will destroy ⁶till they have enough.

10 ^pBut I have made Esau bare, I have uncovered his secret places, and he shall not be able to hide himself: his seed is spoiled, and his brethren, and his neighbours, and ^ahe is not.

11 Leave thy fatherless children, I will preserve them alive; and let thy widows trust in me.

12 For thus saith the LORD; Behold, ^rthey whose judgment was not to drink of the cup, ° Obad. 5. — ⁶ Heb. their sufficiency. — ^p Mal. i. 3. — ^a Isaiah xvii. 14. — ^r Chap. xxv. 29; Obad. 16.

Verses 9, 10. If grape-gatherers come to thee, &c.—The vintage is not usually gathered so clean but there will be a gleaning left, Isa. xvii. 6; and house-breakers, or thieves, commonly leave something behind. But I have made Esau bare—But the destruction coming upon thee will be so entire that scarcely a remnant shall be preserved. I have uncovered his secret places—I have taken from him every thing that might be a refuge or defence to him, and laid open all the recesses wherein he might conceal himself, or his riches. His seed is spoiled, &c.—The calamity shall also extend to his family, and to all that he has any connection with. And he is not—He is utterly ruined and undone.

Verse 11. Leave thy fatherless children, I will preserve them, &c.—The Chaldee paraphrast understands this of the Jews, to whom the following words do certainly belong, as if it contained God's promise to take care of their families, in that distressed and forlorn state to which the captivity had reduced them. Some, who apply it to the Edomites, understand it as spoken by way of irony, in which light they understand Isa. xvi. 4. "But there is nothing in the context," says Houbigant, "which can lead to this interpretation. I rather understand it as a prophecy; nor was it any thing wonderful that the conquerors should spare the little children and widows, from whom they had nothing to fear; nor that the Edomites should forsake both the one and the other, when compelled to a precipitate flight." Or, it is a promise that God would not wholly destroy the race of Esau, but protect and preserve a remnant of them; and that, at the time when he sent these his judgments on the proud and self-confident, and all their boasted strength was cast down, the weak and helpless should be remembered by him, the Father of mercies.

Verses 12, 13. They whose judgment was not to drink of the cup—Namely, of God's wrath: see note on chap. xxv. 15; have assuredly drunken—The Is-

have assuredly drunken; and art thou A. M. 3404.
he that shall altogether go unpunish- B. C. 600.
ed? thou shalt not go unpunished, but thou shalt surely drink of it.

13 For ^aI have sworn by myself, saith the LORD, that ^tBozrah shall become a desolation, a reproach, a waste, and a curse; and all the cities thereof shall be perpetual wastes.

14 I have heard a ^urumour from the LORD, and an ambassador is sent unto the heathen, saying, Gather ye together, and come against her, and rise up to the battle.

15 For lo, I will make thee small among the heathen, and despised among men.

16 Thy terribleness hath deceived thee, and the pride of thy heart, O thou that dwellest in raelites, God's peculiar people, who, in regard to the gracious promises which he had made to them and to their fathers, the near relation in which they stood to him, and the many pious persons who, from age to age, were found among them, might, in all human appearance, have expected mercy at God's hands; have, nevertheless, suffered dreadful judgments. And art thou he that shall altogether go unpunished?—Is Edom the righteous nation, which, above all others, deserves to be exempted from punishment? There is a peculiar emphasis, says Blaney, in the pronoun הוּא, he, which denotes that Edom was he, the people, to which the punishment was peculiarly due: see note on chap. xxv. 29. I have sworn by myself—I have confirmed my threatening, as I have frequently confirmed my promises, by an oath; that Bozrah shall become a desolation, &c.—Bozrah, one of the chief cities of Idumea, is here put for that country in general, it being usual with the prophets to describe the destruction of a whole nation by the ruin of some one or more of its principal cities: see verse 23; Amos i. 8, 12–14.

° Gen. xxii. 16; Isaiah xlv. 23; Amos vi. 8. — ^t Isa. xxxiv. 6; lxiii. 1. — ^u Obad. 1, 2, 3.

Verses 14–16. I have heard a rumour—Hebrew, שמועה, a report or message, from the Lord, and an ambassador is sent unto the heathen. Obadiah begins his prophecy against Edom in similar words. The prophets, it must be observed, "often represent God as summoning armies, and setting them in array of battle against those people whom he has decreed to destroy. And his stirring up men's spirits to invade such countries, is described here as if he had sent an ambassador to the Chaldeans and their confederates, to engage them in a war against the Idumeans; according to the methods which earthly princes use to engage their allies."—Lowth. For lo, I will make thee small, &c.—I will bring thee low and make thee very contemptible. Thy terribleness hath deceived thee—"Thou hast been formerly terrible to all about thee, and looked upon as impregnable; and the confidence thou hast had in

A. M. 3404. the clefts of the rock, that holdest
B. C. 600. the height of the hill: * though thou shouldest make thy † nest as high as the eagle, ‡ I will bring thee down from thence, saith the LORD.

17 Also Edom shall be a desolation: † every one that goeth by it shall be astonished, and shall hiss at all the plagues thereof.

18 † As in the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah and the neighbour cities thereof, saith the LORD, no man shall abide there, neither shall a son of man dwell in it.

19 † Behold, he shall come up like a lion from † the swelling of Jordan against the habitation of the strong: but I will suddenly make him run away from her: and who is a chosen man, that I may appoint over her? for ‡ who is like me? and who will † appoint me

* Obad. 4.—† Job xxxix. 27.—‡ Amos ix. 2.—§ Chap.
xviii. 16; 1. 13.—§ Gen. xix. 25; Deut. xxix. 23; Chap. 1. 40; Amos iv. 11.—¶ Ch. 1. 44.—¶ Ch. xii. 5.—¶ Exod. xv. 11.

this thy strength hath made thee careless and secure, and thereby given thy enemies an advantage against thee." O thou that dwellest in the clefts, &c.—St.
Jerome, who lived in the neighbourhood, tells us, in his commentary upon Obadiah, "that Idumea was a rocky mountainous country, and that the inhabitants dwelt in caves dug out of the rocks and hills."
Though thou shouldest make thy nest as high as the eagle—The greatest height or strength cannot place thee out of the reach of divine vengeance. The eagle is remarkable for its flying high, and making its nest in very high and inaccessible rocks: see note on Job xxxix. 27, 28.

Verses 17–19. Edom shall be a desolation; every one shall hiss, &c.—See note on chap. xviii. 16. As in the overthrow of Sodom, &c.—A proverbial expression, denoting an utter destruction. Behold, he shall come up like a lion, &c.—This is a description of Nebuchadnezzar's marching with his army against Idumea, whom the prophet compares to a lion coming out of his den near Jordan. When that river swells, in the time of harvest, the lions, that lie in the thickets on the river side, are raised out of their coverts, and infest the country: see note on chap.
xii. 5, and Maundrell's Travels, pp. 81, 82. Against the habitation of the strong—Hebrew, אל נוה איתו, the strong folds, or rough pastures. The LXX.
read εις τονον Αιθαμ, to the place Aitham, considering the word which we render strong as a proper name.
But I will suddenly make him run away from her—
This clause should rather be rendered, I will rouse him up and make him run upon her, the preposition כעל, here rendered from likewise signifying upon, and being so rendered by our translators, 1 Kings
ix. 5. To this purpose the Vulgate, quia subito currere faciam eum ad illam, because I will cause him to run suddenly against her. And who is a

the time? and † who is that shepherd A. M. 3404.
that will stand before me? B. C. 600.

20 † Therefore hear the counsel of the LORD, that he hath taken against Edom; and his purposes, that he hath purposed against the inhabitants of Teman: surely the least of the flock shall draw them out: surely he shall make their habitations desolate with them.

21 † The earth is moved at the noise of their fall, at the cry the noise thereof was heard in the † Red sea.

22 Behold, † he shall come up and fly as the eagle, and spread his wings over Bozrah: and at that day shall the heart of the mighty men of Edom be as the heart of a woman in her pangs.

23 ¶ Concerning Damascus. Hamath is confounded, and Arpad: for they have heard

† Or, convert me in judgment.—† Job xli. 10.—§ Chap. 1. 45.
‡ Chap. 1. 46.—§ Heb. Weedy sea.—† Chap. iv. 13; xlviii. 40, 41.—¶ Isa. xvii. 1; xxxvii. 13; Amos i. 3; Zech. ix. 1, 2.

chosen man that I may appoint over her?—Namely, to spoil and destroy her. What select man shall I employ for this purpose? for it must be one who will do it effectually. Nebuchadnezzar, or his captain-general Nebuzar-adan, seems to be here meant.
For who is like me?—Who is able, like me, to prepare instruments to perform his work? And who will appoint me the time? and who is that shepherd? &c.—Who will challenge me to meet him in the field, as if we were upon equal terms? or what leader or general can enter the lists with me? "The word shepherd often signifies a prince, or commander. But here it is used in opposition to the lion mentioned before; as if he had said, A shepherd may as well encounter a lion as the best appointed warrior contend with the Almighty, or those whom he makes the instruments of his vengeance."—Lowth.

Verses 20–22. Therefore hear the counsel of the Lord—Let them, the Edomites, hear and consider what God hath purposed against them. Surely the least of the flock shall draw them out—By the least of the flock, may be here understood the common soldiers in the Chaldean army, any one of whom,
he says, shall have courage and strength enough to conquer the Idumeans, and draw them to slaughter or captivity. The earth is moved at the noise of their fall—The neighbouring countries are astonished at it. The prophet compares the destruction of Idumea to the fall of a great building, which affrights those that are near it. The noise thereof was heard in the Red sea—The borders of Idumea reached to the Red sea. Behold he shall fly as the eagle—The suddenness and rapidity with which Nebuchadnezzar, or his general, Nebuzar-adan, marched and fell upon Edom, are described in this verse:
see note on chap. xlviii. 40, 41.

Verse 23. Concerning Damascus—"Damascus

A. M. 3404. evil tidings: they are ⁹ faint-hearted; B. C. 600. ¹ there is sorrow ¹⁰ on the sea; it cannot be quiet.

24 Damascus is waxed feeble, and turneth herself to flee, and fear hath seized on her: ^aanguish and sorrow hath taken her, as a woman in travail.

25 How is ^a the city of praise not left, the city of my joy!

26 ^a Therefore her young men shall fall in her streets, and all the men of war shall

⁹ Heb. melted.—¹⁰ Isa. lvii. 20.—¹⁰ Or, as on the sea.—¹⁰ Isa. xiii. 8; Chap. iv. 31; vi. 24; xxx. 6; xlviii. 41; Verse 22.

was the capital of the kingdom of Syria, and had seemingly at this time swallowed up all the other petty sovereignties of that country. Isaiah had before uttered a prophecy concerning it, of a calamitous import, (chap. xvii.,) which had been fulfilled by Tiglath-pileser's taking it, and carrying the people captive to Kir, 2 Kings xvi. 9. Amos also had foretold the same event, chap. i. 3-5. But it had recovered itself after the fall of the Assyrian empire, and is here doomed to suffer again the like calamities from the resentment of Nebuchadnezzar, probably about the same time with the other neighbouring nations: see note on chap. xlviii. 1. Hamath is confounded, and Arpad—Hamath and Arpad are elsewhere joined together: see 2 Kings xviii. 34; xix. 13; Isa. x. 9. Hamath was the capital of a part of Syria, bearing the same name, and which formed once an independent kingdom. It was situate on the northern frontier of the land of Israel, whence we find frequent mention of the entrance of Hamath, Num. xxxiv. 8, &c. The city of Hamath, Josephus tells us, was that which the Macedonians afterward called Epiphania: Ant., lib. i. cap. 6. And Jerome, in his commentary on Isa. x. 9, says the same. Hamath, quam Syri usque hodie Epiphaniam vocant—Aphad, or Arvad, is with good reason held to be the island of Aradus, in the Mediterranean sea; as those who are called רַאדִי, Gen. x. 18, are by the LXX. rendered Αραδιοι, in the Vulgate, Aradii. This island was not far from the shore, and nearly opposite to Hamath.—Blaney. They heard evil tidings—Tidings of the approach of a hostile army; they are faint-hearted—Their courage fails them. Their sorrow is on the sea—Or, as on the sea, namely, when a storm arises and the sea is tempestuous. Houbigant reads, They fluctuate as the sea; they cannot be at rest: compare Isa. lvii. 20, 21. But Blaney renders ראנה נים נכנו, They are melted into a sea of solicitude: observing, "This is a literal translation of the text; and appears to me preferable in sense to any of the interpretations I have hitherto met with."

Verses 24-27. Damascus is waxed feeble—That is, the inhabitants of Damascus. They have lost their ancient courage and valour; they were wont to be formidable to their enemies, but now they flee before them. Fear, or rather, trembling, or, horror, be cut off in that day, saith the LORD of hosts. A. M. 3404. B. C. 600.

27 And I will kindle a ^a fire in the wall of Damascus, and it shall consume the palaces of Ben-hadad.

28 ¶ ^a Concerning Kedar, and concerning the kingdoms of Hazor, which Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon shall smite, thus saith the LORD; Arise ye, go up to Kedar, and spoil ^a the men of the east.

29 Their ^a tents and their flocks shall they

^a Chap. xxxiii. 9; li. 41.—^a Chap. i. 30; li. 4.—^a Amos i. 4. ^a Isa. xxi. 13.—^a Judg. vi. 3; Job i. 3.—^a Psa. cxx. 5.

as רָטַט, properly signifies, hath seized on her, distressed and pangs, Hebrew, צָרָה וְחִבְלֵי, have taken her, as a woman in travail—Great anguish and sorrow are ordinarily expressed by this similitude in the Scriptures. How is the city of praise—That is, a city of fame and renown; not left—Namely, not spared, or left untouched by the enemy. This is thought to be spoken in the person of the king, or some other inhabitant of Damascus. Therefore her young men—Or, surely her young men, as the particle לֹכֶן is rendered chap. v. 2; shall fall in her streets—Or, broad places, as the Hebrew word signifies. A fire shall consume the palaces of Ben-hadad—The name of several kings of Syria.

Verses 28, 29. Concerning Kedar and the kingdoms of Hazor—Kedar is well known to have been one of the sons of Ishmael, Gen. xxv. 13, who settled in Arabia. But of Hazor we find no satisfactory account given by commentators. There is, indeed, a city called Hazor, mentioned Josh. xi. 10, and in other parts of Scripture: but this was in the land of Canaan; whereas the kingdoms of Hazor, here mentioned, were evidently in Arabia, in the neighbourhood, at least, of Kedar. Among the sons of Joktan, however, who were prior to the Ishmaelites in Arabia, and whose descendants are therefore looked on as the only genuine Arabs, we find one whose name was Hazarmaveth, Gen. x. 26-30. And, as by Kedar all the descendants of Ishmael are probably here designed, so all the other branches of the family of Joktan may, in like manner, be included under the general name of Hazor. And perhaps the most probable reason why the Arabians are called a mingled people is, that they were thus made up of the people of different descents; some of them being sprung from Joktan, others from Ishmael, to whom must be added the sons of Abraham by Keturah, who are also said to have been settled in Kedem, or the east country, Gen. xxv. 6, and perhaps other families besides. All these were divided into petty sovereignties under certain chiefs or princes, which explains what is to be understood by the kingdoms of Hazor: see Blaney. Arise ye, go up to Kedar, &c.—Here the prophet foretels that Nebuchadnezzar should conquer these kingdoms, and spoil the men of the East, as the Arabians are called in the Scriptures. Their tents and their flock shall they—Namely, the

A. M. 3404. take away : they shall take to them-
B. C. 600. selves their curtains, and all their vessels, and their camels; and they shall cry unto them, ^t Fear is on every side.

30 ¶ ^u Flee, ¹¹ get you far off, dwell deep, O ye inhabitants of Hazor, saith the LORD; for Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylôn hath taken counsel against you, and hath conceived a purpose against you.

31 Arise, get you up unto ^x the ¹² wealthy nation, that dwelleth without care, saith the LORD, which have neither gates nor bars, which ^y dwell alone.

32 And their camels shall be a booty, and the multitude of their cattle a spoil: and I will ^z scatter into all winds ^a them that are. ¹³ in the utmost corners; and I will bring their calamity from all sides thereof, saith the LORD.

33 And Hazor ^b shall be a dwelling for dragons, and a desolation for ever: ^c there shall no man abide there, nor any son of man dwell in it. A. M. 3404.

B. C. 600.

34 ¶ The word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah the prophet against B. C. 598.

^d Elam in the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, saying,

35 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Behold, I will break ^e the bow of Elam, the chief of their might.

36 And upon Elam will I bring the four winds from the four quarters of heaven, and ^f will scatter them toward all those winds; and there shall be no nation whither the outcasts of Elam shall not come.

37 For I will cause Elam to be dismayed before their enemies, and before them that seek their life: and I will bring evil upon them, even my fierce anger, saith the LORD; ^g and I will send the sword after them, till I have consumed them:

^t Chap. vi. 25; xlv. 5.—^u Verse 8.—¹¹ Heb. fit greatly.
^x Exodus xxxviii. 11.—¹² Or, that is at ease.—^y Numbers xxiii. 9; Deut. xxxiii. 28; Micah vii. 14.—^z Ezekiel v. 10; Verse 36.

^a Chap. ix. 26; xxv. 23.—¹³ Heb. cut off into corners, or, that have the corners of their hair polled.—^b Chap. ix. 11; x. 22;
Mal. i. 3.—^c Verse 18.—^d Chap. xxv. 25.—^e Isa. xxii. 6.
^f Verse 32.—^g Chap. ix. 16; xlviii. 2.

Chaldeans; take away—Their substance consisted in their cattle and their tents, from whence the country itself is called the tents of Kedar, Psa. cxx. 5: with these they removed from place to place for the convenience of pasture. They shall take to themselves their curtains—Those elegant coverings of which their tents were made, and which were much superior to those of any other people. And they shall cry unto them—Hebrew, וקרא, Let them call for, or command, that is, as Blaney renders it, Let them bring upon them terror from every side.

Verses 30–33. Flee ye, get you far off—Hebrew, נרו כהר; Vulgate, Abite vehementer, Go away with eagerness, or, haste. Dwell deep, or, “retire deep for to dwell:” see note on verse 8. Arise, get you up unto the wealthy nation—The prophet here gives the Chaldeans a commission from God to undertake this expedition, and seize upon the wealth of the inhabitants of Hazor; which have neither gates nor bars—Who have never been attacked, and therefore live securely without walls or ramparts for their defence; which dwell alone—Solitarie habitant, dwell solitarily, as Buxtorf renders שכנו בדר. “Their habitations are isolated,” as some interpret it. “They do not live in cities, towns, or villages, where the houses are contiguous; but each family has its mansion apart from the rest, with land about it sufficient for the subsistence of their cattle. In this dispersed state they were, of course, less provided with the means of defending themselves from the incursions of the enemy.” I will scatter into all winds—Into all the quarters of heaven; them that are in the utmost corners—Or, those that inhabit the insulated coast, namely, the peninsula of Arabia: see notes on chap. ix. 26, and xxv. 23.

Verse 34. The word that came to Jeremiah against Elam—Elam we find to have been an independent, and even powerful kingdom, in the days of Abraham, Gen. xiv. 1. “But I am not of opinion with those writers,” says Blaney, “who hold that by Elam, in Scripture, Persia is always meant. There is no doubt but that when the monarchy of Persia was established under Cyrus, Elam was blended into and formed a part of it. But before that time Elam and Persia were two distinct kingdoms: of which this may be admitted for proof, that the kingdom of Persia, if Xenophon may be credited as an historian, was never subdued under the dominion of Nebuchadnezzar, but preserved its liberty in alliance with the Medes. Elam, on the contrary, is not only here prophesied of, as destined to become a part of the Babylonian conquests, but is actually spoken of, (Dan.
viii. 2), as a province of the Babylonish empire;
over which Daniel seems to have presided, having Shushan for the seat of his government. We may therefore conclude Elam to have been, as the name itself would lead us to suppose, the country called by heathen writers Elymais, which Pliny, in conformity with Daniel, describes as separated from Su-siana, by the river Euleus, or Ulay; Nat. Hist., lib.
vi. cap. 31.”

Verses 35–38. Behold, I will break the bow of Elam—The Elamites were famous archers, as this expression intimates, as also Isaiah’s words, chap.
xxii. 6; And Elam bare the quiver. Strabo also says, that the mountainous parts of Elymais bred chiefly

A. M. 3406. 38 And I will ^hset my throne in B. C. 598. Elam, and will destroy from thence the king and the princes, saith the LORD.

^h Chap. xliii. 10.

archers; στρατιώτας τρέφει τοξοτάς τας πλείους, lib. xvi. p. 744. Livy, and other heathen writers, also speak of the Elymæan archers. Upon Elam will I bring the four winds, &c.—I will bring enemies upon Elam from every quarter; and scatter them to every quarter. Wars and commotions are metaphorically denoted by winds. And I will send the sword after them—Even after they are driven out of their own country, my judgments shall pursue them. And I will set my throne in Elam—As Nebuchadnezzar acted under the commission of God, and had authority from him to conquer this and the neighbouring nations, and is called God's servant, the establishing of his power was in effect the setting up of the throne or dominion of Jehovah. —Some, 39 ¶ But it shall come to pass ⁱ in A. M. 3406.

the latter days, that I will bring again B. C. 598.
the captivity of Elam, saith the LORD.

ⁱ Chap. xlviii. 47; Verse 6.

however, think this is spoken of the Persian monarchy, established there by Cyrus, who is expressly called, in Scripture, God's anointed one, whom he had particularly chosen.

Verse 39. In the latter days, I will bring again the captivity of Elam—This is supposed to relate to the times of the Lagi and Seleucidae, when the Elamites recovered their liberty. Or, if we consider what is said in the foregoing verse to relate to Nebuchadnezzar, this may be understood of Cyrus's setting them free from the Babylonish yoke; for we find from Isa. xxii. 6, that the Elamites assisted Cyrus in the conquest of Babylon; and Shushan, the chief city of Elam, was made the metropolis of the Persian empire.

CHAPTER L.

This, and the following chapter, contain a large description of the downfall of Babylon, and the empire of which that city was the seat; intermixed and contrasted with predictions concerning the redemption of Israel and Judah, who were not, like their oppressors, to be finally extirpated, but to survive them, and upon their repentance and conversion to be pardoned and restored. This prophecy follows the rest of those delivered by Jeremiah against the neighbouring countries, according to the method of God's judgments laid down before, chap. xxv. 12, 13, where the prophet declares, that after Nebuchadnezzar and his successors had fulfilled God's purposes, in being executioners of his vengeance upon other countries, they themselves should drink of the same cup. We have in this chapter, (1.) The ruin of Babylon, 1-3; and again, 9-16; and again, 21-32; and again, 35-46. (2.) The redemption of God's people, 4-8; and again, 17-20; and again, 33, 34.

A. M. 3409. THE word that the LORD spake
B. C. 595. ^a against Babylon and against the land of the Chaldeans ¹ by Jeremiah the prophet.

2 Declare ye among the nations, and publish, and ² set up a standard; publish, and conceal not: say, Babylon is taken, ^b Bel is confounded, Merodach is broken in pieces; ^c her idols are confounded, her images are A. M. 3409. broken in pieces. B. C. 595.

3 ^d For out of the north there cometh up ^e a nation against her, which shall make her land desolate, and none shall dwell therein: they shall remove, they shall depart, both man and beast.

4 ¶ In those days, and in that time, saith

^a Isa. xlii. 1; xxi. 1; xlvii. 1. — ¹ Heb. by the hand of Jeremiah.
² Heb. lift up.

^b Isa. xlv. 1; Chap. li. 44. — ^c Chap. xliii. 12, 13. — ^d Chap. li. 48. — ^e Isa. xlii. 17, 18, 20; Verses 39, 40.

NOTES ON CHAPTER L.

Verses 1-3. The word that the Lord spake against Babylon—This prophecy was delivered and sent to Babylon in the fourth year of Zedekiah's reign, as appears from chap. li. 59. Declare ye among the nations—The downfall of Babylon was an event in which many nations were concerned, that empire having been a common oppressor. Set up a standard—To call people together, and impart unto them these good tidings. The destruction of Babylon was likewise a sort of signal to the Jews to assemble together, in order to their return to their own land, the time of their captivity being then to expire. Bel is confounded, Merodach is broken in pieces—When God punishes an idolatrous nation he is said to confound its idols, because they do not bring assistance to their worshippers, nor deliver them out of his hands. Bel is the same with Baal, a name common to the idols of the eastern countries, and at first probably given to some of the heavenly bodies; see note on Isa. xxxix. 1. For out of the north there cometh a nation against her—The Medes, who lay north of Babylon.

Verses 4, 5. In those days—Wherein God shall

A. M. 3409. the LORD, the children of Israel shall
B. C. 595. come, ^f they and the children of Judah together, ^g going and weeping: they shall go, ^h and seek the LORD their God.

5 They shall ask the way to Zion with their faces thitherward, saying, Come and let us join ourselves to the LORD in ⁱ a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten.

^f Hos. i. 11.—^g Ezra iii. 12, 13; Psa. cxxvi. 5, 6; Chapter
xxx. 9; Zech. xii. 10.—^h Hos. iii. 5.—ⁱ Chap. xxxi. 31, &c.; xxxii. 40.—^k Isa. liii. 6; Verse 17; 1 Pet. ii. 25.

begin to execute judgment on Babylon; the children of Israel shall come, &c.—This passage is primarily meant of the return of the Jews from their captivity, upon the destruction of the Babylonish monarchy. Many of the ten tribes, here termed the children of Israel, which had been carried captive into Assyria, hearing that their brethren of the two tribes were permitted and encouraged by Cyrus and his successors to return to their own land, undoubtedly associated themselves with them, and returned also from the several places where they had been settled: see Calmet's Dissertation on the Return of the Ten Tribes. Going and weeping—Weeping, partly with sorrow for the sins which had brought the calamities of the captivity upon them, and partly for joy, that God should show them such mercy as to bring them again to their own country. They shall go and seek the Lord their God—They shall inquire after Jehovah, their own God, and seek his favour, protection, and aid, and shall now have no more to do with idols. Observe, reader, those that seek the Lord must seek him sorrowing; and those that sorrow and are in trouble must seek him, and then their sorrow will soon be turned into joy, for he will be found of those that seek him. We learn from Ezra, chap. iii. 13, that the people both wept and rejoiced aloud at the laying of the foundation of the temple after their return from captivity, and that the noise of the weeping of some was equal to the shouts of joy raised by others. They shall ask the way to Zion—The city of their ancient solemnities; with their faces thitherward—Determined to return to it, now that the ruin of Babylon and the decree of Cyrus had opened the way for their release. The journey, indeed, is long and difficult, and they know not the road, but they will make inquiry concerning it, and trust in God to enable them to surmount all the difficulties and dangers of the way. Reader, wouldst thou arrive at the heavenly Canaan, and dost ask the way thither? Then see that thy face be thitherward, and not toward the world. In these words the prophet seems to allude to the Jews going in companies to Jerusalem at the solemn festivals. Saying, Let us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant—They had broken the covenant which their fathers had made with God, and which had been often solemnly renewed, especially a little time before the captivity, in the days of Josiah; but here they exhort one another to join themselves to him again, by engaging afresh

6 My people hath been ^k lost sheep: A. M. 3409. their shepherds have caused them to B. C. 595.
go astray, they have turned them away on the mountains: they have gone from mountain to hill, they have forgotten their ³ resting-place.

7 All that found them have ^m devoured them:
and ⁿ their adversaries said, ^o We offend not,

¹ Chapter ii. 20; iii. 6, 23.—² Heb. place to lie down in.
^m Psalm lxxix. 7.—ⁿ Chap. xl. 2, 3; Zech. xi. 5.—^o Chap.
ii. 3; Dan. ix. 16.

to be his, and that not for a time merely, but for ever; even in a perpetual, or everlasting covenant. as the Hebrew, בְּרִית עוֹלָם, signifies, and is translated, chap. xxxii. 40; a covenant that must not be broken, and therefore must not be forgotten: for a due remembrance of it will be the means of a due observance of it.

Verses 6, 7. My people hath been lost sheep—All men are compared to sheep that go astray, Isa. liii. 6. Here this character is applied to the Jews, whom God calls his people, because of the ancient covenant made with their fathers. They are said to have been lost, either on account of their captivity, being cast out of the land which God gave them, as sheep are lost out of their pasture, or in respect of their idolatries and other sins. Their shepherds have caused them to go astray—Their civil and ecclesiastical governors have been the principal causes of their sins and miseries: the former, by their wicked commands and example, the latter also by example as well as doctrine. They have turned them away on the mountains—They have turned them aside from the right worship of God, performed at the temple, to sacrifice to idols upon the mountains and high places. He alludes to sheep straying hither and thither, through the windings and turnings of the mountains. They have gone from mountain to hill—From one species of idolatry to another. They have forgotten their resting place—Or, their fold, namely, they have forgotten me, in whose love and service, in whose favour, protection, and care they could only find rest, safety, and comfort. All that found them have devoured them—They have been a prey to their enemies on all sides. And their adversaries said, We offend not—"In making them captives. Jeremiah introduces the Chaldeans speaking thus by the truest prosopopœia; for it could not be but the Chaldeans must have known those things which the prophets had foretold concerning the future captivity of the Jews; Nebuchadnezzar is a witness, who gave his captains orders to preserve Jeremiah:" see Houbigant. Because they have sinned against the Lord, the habitation of justice—A refuge and protection for those that are just and good, and consequently one that would not have cast off the Jews if they had not first forsaken him. This interpretation supposes God to be here called, The habitation of justice, which he undoubtedly is, but whether the Chaldeans would term him so may be a question. Others, therefore, think the preposition in is under

A. M. 3409. because they have sinned against
B. C. 595. the LORD, ^a the habitation of justice, even the LORD, ^a the hope of their fathers.

8 ^a Remove out of the midst of Babylon, and go forth out of the land of the Chaldeans, and be as the he-goats before the flocks.

9 ¶ ^a For lo, I will raise and cause to come up against Babylon an assembly of great nations from the north country: and they shall ^a set themselves in array against her; from thence she shall be taken: their arrows shall be as of a mighty ^a expert man; ^a none shall return in vain.

10 And Chaldea shall be a spoil: ^a all that spoil her shall be satisfied, saith the LORD.

11 ^a Because ye were glad, because ye rejoiced, O ye destroyers of my heritage, because ye are grown ^a fat^z as the heifer at grass, and ^a bellow as bulls;

12 Your mother shall be sore con- A. M. 3409. founded; she that bare you shall be B. C. 595.
ashamed: behold, the hindermost of the nations shall be a wilderness, a dry land, and a desert.

13 Because of the wrath of the LORD it shall not be inhabited, ^a but it shall be wholly desolate: ^a every one that goeth by Babylon shall be astonished, and hiss at all her plagues.

14 ^a Put yourselves in array against Babylon round about: all ye ^a that bend the bow, shoot at her, spare no arrows: for she hath sinned against the LORD.

15 Shout against her round about: she hath ^a given her hand: her foundations are fallen, ^a her walls are thrown down: for ^a it is the vengeance of the LORD: take vengeance upon her; ^a as she hath done, do unto her.

16 Cut off the sower from Babylon, and him that handleth the ^a sickle in the time of har-

^a Psa. xc. 1; xci. 1.—^a Psa. xxii. 4.—^a Isaiah xlviii. 20; Chap. li. 6, 45; Zech. ii. 6, 7; Rev. xviii. 4.—^a Chap. xv. 14; li. 27; Verses 3, 41.—^a Verses 14, 29.—^a Or, destroyer.
^a 2 Sam. i. 22.—^a Rev. xvii. 16.—^a Isa. xlvii. 6.—^a Heb. big, or, corpulent.—^a Hos. x. 11.

^a Or, neigh as steeds.—^a Chapter xxv. 12.—^a Chap. xlix. 17.—^a Verse 9; Chap. li. 2.—^a Chap. xlix. 35; Verse 29.
^a 1 Chron. xxix. 24; 2 Chron. xxix. 8; Lam. v. 6; Ezek. xvii. 18.—^a Chap. li. 58.—^a Chap. li. 6, 11.—^a Psa. cxxxvii. 8; Verse 29; Rev. xviii. 6.—^a Or, scythe.

stood, making this the aggravation of the Jews' sins, that they were committed in a land which ought to have been a habitation of justice. Thus it is said, (Isa. xxvi. 10,) that the wicked man will deal unjustly in a land of uprightness.

Verse 8. Remove out of the midst of Babylon—An exhortation often used by the prophets on this subject: see the margin. Some learned men suppose that this exhortation relates to the siege of Babylon carried on by Darius Hystaspes in the fifth and sixth years of his reign. Before which time God had warned the Jews, by the Prophet Zechariah, (chap. ii. 6, 7,) to flee out of Babylon, and to deliver themselves from the miseries that should befall that city during the siege: see Dr. Prideaux. And be as the he-goats before the flocks—"Let every one strive to lead the way to others, and give them an example of speedily obeying God's call, without showing any fondness to the place, or the idolatries there practised."

Verses 9-11. For, lo, I will raise against Babylon, &c.—See verse 41, and chap. li. 27. From thence, or, as מִשָּׁם, may be rendered, immediately, she shall be taken. Their arrows, &c.—The Medes and Persians were famous for the use of the bow. And Chaldea shall be a spoil—To all her destroyers, who shall enrich themselves by plundering her. All that spoil her shall be satisfied—Namely, with spoil and plunder, for Chaldea, with Babylon its metropolis, was, at that time, the richest country in the world. Because ye were glad, &c.—They rejoiced at the ruin of the Jews, a sin laid also to the charge of the Edomites, Obad. 12. Though the Chaldeans were the executioners of God's judgments upon the Jews, yet he punished them, because they were influenced in what they did purely by their own ambition and covetousness, and acted with inhumanity and cruelty toward the conquered, though Providence directed their cruelties and oppressions, to the fulfilling its own ends and purposes. In like manner, God threatens to punish the king of Assyria after he had been the executioner of his judgments upon Jerusalem. Because ye are grown fat, &c.—The insolence and rudeness of oppressors are often compared to the wantonness of full-fed cattle.

Verses 12-16. Your mother shall be sore confounded—Namely, Babylon the metropolis, or mother-city of the empire. Or, your country shall be ashamed of you, her children, who are not able to defend her. Behold, the hindermost of the nations, &c.—The translation of this clause in the Vulgate seems much preferable to ours, Ecce novissima erit in gentibus, et deserta, invia, et arens, behold, she shall be the hindermost of the nations, a wilderness, desolate and dry. Because of the wrath of the Lord, it shall not be inhabited—See this illustrated in the notes on Isa. xlii. 19-22. Every one that goeth by Babylon shall be astonished—See note on chap. xviii. 16. For she hath sinned against the Lord—She hath been in a remarkable manner an enemy to God's truth and people. This may be especially applied to mystical Babylon: see verses 29-31. Shout against her round about—As conquerors do when a city is taken. She hath given her hand—That is, she hath surrendered herself: she hath submitted and promised obedience to the conqueror. The phrase occurs in the same sense Lam. v. 6 and also 1 Chron. xxix. 24, where see the margin. Thus,

A. M. 3409. vest: for fear of the oppressing sword
B. C. 595. ⁱ they shall turn every one to his people, and they shall flee every one to his own land.

17 ¶ Israel is ^k a scattered sheep; ^l the lions have driven him away: first ^m the king of Assyria hath devoured him; and last this ⁿ Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon hath broken his bones.

18 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will punish the king of Babylon and his land, as I have punished the king of Assyria.

19 ^o And I will bring Israel again to his

A. M. 3409.
B. C. 595. habitation, and he shall feed on Carmel and Bashan, and his soul shall be satisfied upon mount Ephraim and Gilead.

20 In those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, ^p the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, and they shall not be found: for I will pardon them ^q whom I reserve.

21 ¶ Go up against the land ^r of Merathaim, even against it, and against the inhabitants of ^s Pekod: ^t waste and utterly destroy after them, saith the LORD, and do ^u according to all that I have commanded thee.

ⁱ Isaiah xlii. 14; Chap. li. 9.—^k Verse 6.—^l Chap. ii. 15.
^m 2 Kings xvii. 6.—ⁿ 2 Kings xxiv. 10, 14.—^o Isa. lxx. 10;
Chap. xxxiii. 12; Ezek. xxxiv. 13, 14.—^p Chap. xxxi. 34.

^q Isa. i. 9.—^r Or, of the rebels.—^s Ezek. xxiii. 23.—^t Or, visitation.—^u 2 Samuel xvi. 11; 2 Kings xviii. 35; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 23; Isa. x. 6; xlv. 28; xlviii. 14; Chap. xxxiv. 22.

dare manus, to give the hands, in Latin, signifies to yield; and most probably alludes to the act of the vanquished, who, throwing down his arms, and stretching forth his defenceless hands, acknowledges himself to be in the victor's power; her foundations are fallen—Namely, the foundations of her walls, laid in a marshy soil, and surrounded with a deep ditch full of water, to the undermining power of which they were continually exposed: see Herodot. lib. i. cap. 178. Cut off the sower from Babylon—“Babylon resembled a country walled in rather than a city; the walls, according to Herodotus, being sixty miles in compass. Within this large circuit a great deal of ground was cultivated with corn. So that enough grew within the walls to support the inhabitants during a long siege.”—See Prideaux's Connections, page 187. Or, by Babylon here, may be understood, not the city only, but the whole province. They shall turn every one to his people—This is spoken of the allies of the Babylonians.

Verse 17. Israel is a scattered sheep—See note on verse 6. The lions have driven him away—As a lion coming among a flock of sheep scatters them one from another; so have these foreign invaders, enemies cruel as lions, served my people. First, the king of Assyria hath devoured him—Namely, Shalmaneser, who carried away the ten tribes into captivity, whence they never in general returned. And last this Nebuchadrezzar hath broken his bones—Hath entirely ruined Judah and Jerusalem, hath destroyed or carried captive the whole nation.

Verse 18. Behold, I will punish the king of Babylon, and his land—God may justly punish those who do the things that he hath commanded them to do, if they do them not in that manner in which he directs, or, if what they do be not done in obedience to his command, but for the satisfaction of their own lusts: which was the case, as with the king of Assyria, Isa. x. 5-7, so also with the king of Babylon; as I have punished the king of Assyria—Some refer this to the punishment of the Assyrians, in the destruction of Sennacherib and his army, in the time of Hezekiah; but the prophet seems rather to speak of a destruction of Assyria which followed the carrying of the ten tribes into captivity, and therefore may most probably be understood of the destruction of Nineveh, the chief seat of the Assyrian empire, by Nebuchadrezzar, and Assuerus or Astyages, as it is related in Tobit, chap. xiv. 15. At the taking of this great city, foretold by Jonah, Nahum, and Zephaniah, Chynadanus, the last king of the Assyrian race, was killed; and the seat and title of the empire removed to Babylon, which was no longer called the Assyrian, but the Babylonian monarchy. See Dr. Prideaux, pages 47, 48.

Verses 19, 20. I will bring Israel again to his habitation—I will take care of Israel as a shepherd does of his flock, and bring them back to their ancient habitations, and to their former peace and plenty. By Israel here is meant the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, the Levites and some Israelites who joined with them, after the carrying away of the ten tribes. “As several parts of this prophecy,” says Lowth, “relate to that mystical Babylon whose destruction is foretold Rev. xviii., so these promises of grace and favour to the Jewish nation are chiefly to be understood of the general restoration of that people, which we may expect after the downfall of the anti-christian empire.” In those days the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none—That is, I will be perfectly reconciled to them, as if they had never offended. The Hebrew language often expresses the utter ceasing of any thing by seeking and not finding it. This promise seems principally to respect the times of the gospel, and the remnant of the Jews that shall be saved according to the election of grace: compare chap. xxxi. 34, and xxxiii. 8; Rom. xi. 5, 26, 27.

Verse 21. Go up against the land of Merathaim, and against Pekod—Although these two words מרתים, Merathaim, and פקוד, Pekod, are considered by our translators as proper names; and the latter is so understood by the Chaldee paraphrast: yet all the other ancient versions agree in representing the former word as an appellative, and the latter as a verb. The former, which is the dual number of מרה, marah, may signify either bitterness, or rebellion; and Blaney thinks that “Babylon is called the land

A. M. 3409. 22 ^a A sound of battle is in the land,
B. C. 595. and of great destruction.

23 How is ^u the hammer of the whole earth cut asunder and broken! how is Babylon become a desolation among the nations!

24 I have laid a snare for thee, and thou art also taken, O Babylon, ^x and thou wast not aware: thou art found, and also caught, because thou hast striven against the LORD.

25 The LORD hath opened his armory, and hath brought forth ^y the weapons of his indignation: for this is the work of the Lord God of hosts in the land of the Chaldeans.

26 Come against her ¹⁰ from the utmost border, open her store-houses: ¹¹ cast her up as heaps, and destroy her utterly: let nothing of her be left.

27 Slay all her ^z bullocks; let them go down to the slaughter: wo unto them! for their day is come, the time of ^a their visitation.

28 The voice of them that flee and escape out of the land of Babylon, ^b to declare in A. M. 3409.

Zion the vengeance of the LORD our B. C. 595.
God, the vengeance of his temple.

29 Call together the archers against Babylon: ^c all ye that bend the bow, camp against it round about; let none thereof escape: ^d recompense her according to her work; according to all that she hath done, do unto her: ^e for she hath been proud against the LORD, against the Holy One of Israel.

30 ^f Therefore shall her young men fall in the streets, and all her men of war shall be cut off in that day, saith the LORD.

31 Behold, I am against thee, O thou ¹² most proud, saith the Lord God of hosts: for ^g thy day is come, the time that I will visit thee.

32 And ¹³ the most proud shall stumble and fall, and none shall raise him up: and ^h I will kindle a fire in his cities, and it shall devour all round about him.

^a Chap. li. 54.—^b Isa. xiv. 6; Chap. li. 20.—^c Chap. li. 8, 31, 39, 57; Dan. v. 30, 31.—^d Isa. xlii. 5.—^e Heb. from the end.—^f Or, tread her.—^g Psa. xxii. 12; Isa. xxxiv. 7; Chap. xlii. 21.

^a Chap. xlviii. 44; Verse 31.—^b Chap. li. 10, 11.—^c Verse 14.—^d Verse 15; Chap. li. 56; Rev. xviii. 6.—^e Isa. xlvii. 10.—^f Chap. xlix. 26; li. 4.—^g Heb. pride.—^h Verse 27. ¹³ Heb. pride.—^b Chap. xxi. 14.

of bitterness, or of redoubled bitterness here, because it had proved such to the Jewish nation, whose country had been ruined, and the people held in slavery there." Accordingly he translates the verse as follows: "Against the land of bitterness go up; upon it, and upon its inhabitants visit, O sword, and utterly destroy their posterity, saith Jehovah, and perform according to all that I have charged thee." The command seems to be directed to Cyrus and his confederates.

Verses 22-24. A sound of battle is in the land—That is, in the land of Chaldea. How is the hammer of the whole earth broken!—That oppressive empire that smote the nations with a continual stroke, as is said Isa. xiv. 6, and brought them under subjection to it. I have laid a snare for thee; and thou art also taken, O Babylon—Cyrus took the city by surprise and in an unexpected manner, entering it, by draining the river Euphrates, at a time when the walls were entire, the city full of provisions, and the people in high spirits, and in a state of the utmost security, dreading no such event. According to Herodotus, part of the city was taken before those who dwelt in the midst of it knew any thing about it; so that with propriety they might be said to be caught as in a snare. Because thou hast striven against the Lord—The reason of this unexpected ruin coming on this great people was their sinning against the Lord: see verse 14; here called a striving against him, as indeed all sin is.

Verses 25-32. The Lord hath opened his armory, &c.—God hath raised up enemies to subdue the Chaldeans, namely, Cyrus and his confederates, and hath furnished them with all the means necessary for such an undertaking. Come against her from the utmost border—From distant parts, namely, from the Caspian and Euxine seas. Cast her up as heaps—The marginal rendering seems preferable; Tread her, trample over her, as heaps of ruins; or tread her as the corn is trodden down when it is thrashed. Slay her bullocks—That is, Her strong men, as the Vulgate and the Chaldee interpret the expression. Wo unto them, for their day is come—The time in which they are to be punished. The voice of them that escape, to declare in Zion, &c.—This may either foretel that some of the Babylonians would flee as far as Judea for refuge, and there publish what had befallen Babylon, or, which seems more likely, that some of those Jews or proselytes to the Jewish religion in Chaldea, who were more than ordinarily zealous for the welfare of God's church and people, would be ready, upon the first news of the taking of Babylon, to bring the glad tidings to Judea, that God had avenged his people, and executed his judgments on those who destroyed his temple, and profaned the holy vessels of it: see chap. li. 51; Dan. v. 1, 2, 3, 5, 30. Call together the archers—See verses 9, 14. Recompense her according to her work—This is applied to mystical Babylon, Rev. xviii. 6, which, when fulfilled, will be a manifest token of the righteous judgment of God, as St. Paul speaks, 2 Thess. i. 5, at which all good men ought to rejoice, and give glory to God when they see it effected. For she hath been proud

A. M. 3409. 33 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts ;
B. C. 595. The children of Israel and the children of Judah were oppressed together : and all that took them captives held them fast ; they refused to let them go.

34 ⁱ Their Redeemer is strong ; ^k the LORD of hosts is his name : he shall thoroughly plead their cause, that he may give rest to the land, and disquiet the inhabitants of Babylon.

35 ¶ A sword is upon the Chaldeans, saith the LORD, and upon the inhabitants of Babylon, and ^l upon her princes, and upon ^m her wise men.

ⁱ Rev. xviii. 8.—^k Isa. xlvii. 4.—^l Dan. v. 30.—^m Isa. xlvii. 13.—ⁿ Isa. xlv. 25 ; Chap. xlviii. 30.—^o Or, chief stays.—^p Heb. bars.—^q Chap. xxv. 20, 24 ; Ezek. xxx. 5.

against the Lord—Hath exalted herself against God, saying, I am, and there is none besides me, Isa. xlvii. 7, 8, where see the notes. Therefore shall her young men fall in the streets—Xenophon relates, lib. vii., that when Gobryas and Gadates, two of Cyrus's generals, with their soldiers, had got into the city, they marched directly toward the palace, killing all they met, and, having surprised the guards, cut them in pieces, and slain the king himself, they, without difficulty, made themselves masters of the palace. I will kindle a fire in his cities—This may be meant of the destruction made in the Babylonian territories, in the several expeditions Cyrus undertook against that monarchy before the taking of Babylon.

Verses 33, 34. Israel and Judah were oppressed together—Not together with respect to times, for there was a distance of one hundred and fifty years between the time of Israel's and Judah's being carried away captive ; nor by the same enemy ; Israel being carried away by the Assyrians, Judah by the Chaldeans. Together here signifies no more than that they were both oppressed, or alike oppressed. And all that took them captives held them fast—Were determined not to release them. The prophet seems here to intimate, that as their enemies were not only very powerful, but fully resolved to detain them in captivity, his predictions of their deliverance might seem to some but vain words, never likely to be fulfilled. Hence he adds, in the next verse, Their Redeemer is strong—Or, their Avenger, as the word also signifies. He that has a right to them will claim his right, and make good his claim. He is stronger than their enemies who hold them fast, and can, with infinite ease, overpower all their force, and baffle all their subtlety, and put strength into his own people, though they may be very weak. The Lord of hosts is his name—And he will answer his name, and make it appear that he is what his people call him. He shall thoroughly plead their cause—Hebrew, רִיב אֶת רִיבָם, pleading he will plead it, plead it with jealousy, and effectually plead it and carry it ; that he may give rest to the land—

36 A sword is ⁿ upon the ¹⁴ liars ; ¹⁵ A. M. 3410. and they shall dote : a sword is upon B. C. 594.
her mighty men ; and they shall be dismayed.

37 A sword is upon their horses, and upon their chariots, and upon all ^o the mingled people that are in the midst of her ; and ^p they shall become as women : a sword is upon her treasures ; and they shall be robbed.

38 ^q A drought is upon her waters ; and they shall be dried up : for it is the land of ^r graven images, and they are mad upon their idols.

39 ^s Therefore the wild beasts of the desert with the wild beasts of the islands shall dwell

^p Chap. li. 30 ; Nah. iii. 13.—^q Isa. xlv. 27 ; Chap. li. 32, 36 ; Rev. xvi. 12.—^r Verse 2 ; Chap. li. 44, 47, 52.—^s Isa. xiii. 21, 22 ; xxxiv. 14 ; Chap. li. 37 ; Rev. xviii. 2.

To his people's land, rest from all their enemies round about ; or, to the earth, as אָרֶץ more properly signifies, namely, rest from the oppressions of the Babylonish empire ; and disquiet—Or, cause to tremble, as some render דָּרְגִין, the inhabitants of Babylon—Because they have disquieted his people, and caused them to tremble, for whose honour and comfort he is jealous.

Verses 35–37. A sword is upon the Chaldeans—That is, there shall come a sword upon them. Upon Babylon and her princes—Who were slain together with their king, Belshazzar, at a feast, chap. li. 39 ; Dan. v. 2–30. And upon her wise men—The Chaldeans were famous for their skill in astrology, and other arts of divination ; and yet the learned in those sciences were not able to foresee or prevent the dangers coming upon themselves in the common calamity. A sword is upon the liars—Upon the diviners, or the pretenders to the knowledge of future events ; and they shall dote—They shall be proved to be foolish and ignorant, by things happening directly contrary to what they had thought and said. Thus Isaiah, speaking of the same kind of men, says, He (namely, God) frustrateth the tokens of the liars, and maketh diviners mad. A sword is upon all the mingled people—Upon her auxiliaries, made up of several nations : see Ezek. xxx. 5. And they shall become as women—Fearful, and having neither courage nor any thing else manly in them. A sword is upon her treasures, &c.—Her treasures shall be a prey to such as come with sword in hand to rifle them : as Solon said to Cressus, who, by way of ostentation, showed him his treasures, “Sir, if any one come that has better iron than you, he will be master of all your gold.”—Lowth.

Verses 38–40. A drought is upon all her waters—Our translators, after the example of the Vulgate and others, have rendered דָּוָה, a drought, here, whereas they have translated it a sword in the preceding verses, as supposing, it seems, that a sword has nothing to do with waters. But they might very properly have rendered it a sword here also : for this term is used metaphorically, to denote

A. M. 3409. there, and the owls shall dwell there—
B. C. 595. in: ^tand it shall be no more inhabited for ever; neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation.

40 ^uAs God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah and the neighbour cities thereof, saith the LORD; so shall no man abide there, neither shall any son of man dwell therein.

41 ^vBehold, a people shall come from the north, and a great nation, and many kings shall be raised up from the coast of the earth.

42 ^vThey shall hold the bow and the lance: ^vthey are cruel, and will not show mercy: ^vtheir voice shall roar like the sea, and they shall ride upon horses, every one put in array, like a man to the battle, against thee, O daughter of Babylon.

43 The king of Babylon hath heard the report of them, and his hands waxed feeble:

^t Isa. xiii. 20; Chap. xxv. 12.—^u Gen. xix. 25; Isa. xiii. 19; Chap. xlix. 18; li. 26.—^v Verse 9; Chap. vi. 22; xxv. 14; li. 27; Rev. xvii. 16.—^v Chap. vi. 22.—^v Isa. xiii. 18.

either the instrument of divine vengeance generally, or the operations and effects of war in particular; in either of which senses it may be applied to waters as well as to treasures. And the allusion here is evidently to the stratagem of Cyrus, who drained off the waters of the Euphrates, which ran through the city of Babylon, by means of which his troops, by night, marched along the bed of the river into the heart of the city, and surprised it. For it is the land of graven images, &c.—This vengeance comes upon them, because they have been the great encouragers and supporters of idolatry. It may be remarked, that the executioners of the divine judgments were the Persians, who, in opposition to the Sabians, (whose notions the Chaldeans embraced,) followed the ancient discipline of the magi, or wise men among them, and had neither altars nor images; as is attested by Strabo and Herodotus: see Prideaux's Connections, p. 177, and Lowth. And they are mad upon their idols—See note on Isa. lvii. 5. They may well be termed mad who make a god of any creature, and especially those who worship images which their own hands have made. Therefore the wild beasts of the desert, &c.—Blaney renders this clause, Therefore shall wild cats, with jackals dwell, the daughters of the ostrich also shall dwell in her; and refers to Bochart in justification of the propriety of his translation. Com-

^b anguish took hold of him, and pangs ^{A. M. 3409.} as of a woman in travail. ^{B. C. 595.}

44 ^cBehold, he shall come up like a lion from the swelling of Jordan unto the habitation of the strong: but I will make them suddenly run away from her: and who is a chosen man that I may appoint over her? for who is like me? and who will ¹⁶appoint me the time? and ^dwho is that shepherd that will stand before me?

45 Therefore hear ye ^ethe counsel of the LORD, that he hath taken against Babylon; and his purposes, that he hath purposed against the land of the Chaldeans: surely the least of the flock shall draw them out: surely he shall make their habitation desolate with them.

46 ^fAt the noise of the taking of Babylon the earth is moved, and the cry is heard among the nations.

^a Isa. v. 30.—^b Chap. xlix. 24.—^c Chap. xlix. 19.—¹⁶ Or. convent me to plead.—^d Job xli. 10; Chap. xlix. 19.—^e Isa. xiv. 24; Chap. li. 11.—^f Rev. xviii. 9.

pare this passage with the parallel one, Isa. xiii. 19–22, where see the notes.

Verses 41–46. Behold, a people shall come from the north—Namely, the Medes; and a great nation—That is, who are a great nation; for this is no more than an explicative of the foregoing sentence. And many kings—Namely, the kings of the Persians, Armenians, Hyrcanians, Cadusians, and others who fought under Cyrus's banner, as allies or friends to him. Their voice shall roar like the sea—The noise of an army is fitly compared to the roaring of the sea when it rages and is tempestuous. Every one put in array—In exact and firm order, as if the whole host were but one man. The king of Babylon hath heard, &c.—Belshazzar was of himself a weak and dissolute prince, and was soon routed in the field; and so dismayed that he shut himself up in Babylon. Behold, he shall come up like a lion—See notes on chap. xlix. 19–21, where we have applied unto Edom what is here spoken against Babylon. At the noise of the taking of Babylon the earth is moved, and the cry is heard, &c.—These words are intended to express the greatness of the destruction of Babylon, which should be such as should make all that part of the world to shake and tremble; and the nations, whether near or far remote, should be astonished at the downfall of so great a city and potent an empire.

CHAPTER LI.

The prophet in this chapter proceeds with the prediction of the fall of Babylon: in the description of which he enlarges much for the encouragement of the pious captives, whose deliverance depended upon it, and was to be the result of it. Here is, (1.) The record of Babylon's doom, with the particulars of it, intermixed with the grounds of God's controversy with her, many aggravations of her fall, and great encouragements given from thence to the Israel of God, that suffered such hard things by her, 1-58. (2.) The representation and ratification of this by Seraiah's sinking a copy of these predictions in the river Euphrates, near Babylon, after he had read it to the Jewish captives there, 59-64.

A. M. 3409.
B. C. 595.

THUS saith the LORD; Behold, I will raise up against Babylon, and against them that dwell in the ¹ midst of them that rise up against me, ^a a destroying wind;

2 And will send unto Babylon ^b fanners, that shall fan her, and shall empty her land: ^c for in the day of trouble they shall be against her round about.

3 Against him that bendeth ^d let the archer bend his bow, and against him that lifteth himself up in his brigandine: and spare ye not her young men; ^e destroy ye utterly all her host.

4 Thus the slain shall fall in the land of the Chaldeans, ^f and they that are thrust through in her streets. A. M. 3409.

B. C. 595.

5 For Israel hath not been forsaken, nor Judah of his God, of the LORD of hosts; though their land was filled with sin against the Holy One of Israel.

6 ^g Flee out of the midst of Babylon, and deliver every man his soul: be not cut off in her iniquity; for ^h this is the time of the LORD's vengeance; ⁱ he will render unto her a recompense.

7 ^k Babylon hath been a golden cup in the LORD's hand, that made all the earth drunken:

¹ Heb. heart.—^a 2 Kings xix. 7; Chap. iv. 11.—^b Chap. xv. 7.
^c Chap. i. 14.—^d Chap. i. 14.—^e Chap. i. 21.

^f Chapter xlix. 26; i. 30, 37.—^g Chapter i. 8; Rev. xviii. 4.
^h Chap. i. 15, 28.—ⁱ Chap. xxv. 14.—^k Rev. xvii. 4.

NOTES ON CHAPTER LI.

Verses 1, 2. Behold, I will raise up against Babylon—Darius and Cyrus, who came against Babylon, came by a divine instinct. God excited their spirits to accomplish his purpose against that idolatrous city, and the oppressive government which had its seat there. Against them that dwell in the midst—Hebrew, in the heart; of them that rise up against me—That is, in the centre of the country of mine adversaries, which by a circumlocution means the same as Babylon itself. A destroying wind—See note on chap. iv. 11, where the prophet describes the Chaldean army coming up for the destruction of Judea under the same metaphor. The Chaldeans had been like a destroying, blasting wind to the Jews, and now the Medes and Persians are to be like one to them. And will send unto Babylon fanners—Enemies who shall drive them away as chaff is driven away by the fan; or those who shall disperse her forces, and empty or spoil her land of all its riches, &c. This image is frequently made use of by the Hebrew prophets, to represent the ease with which the Almighty disperses and destroys his enemies: see notes on chap. xv. 7; Isa. xxi. 10; xli. 16. For in the day of trouble they shall be against her, &c.—Or, as the words may be rendered, When they shall come round her on every side in the evil (or adverse) day.

Verses 3-5. Against him that bendeth let the archer bend—See chap. i. 14; and against him that lifteth up himself in his brigandine—Or, coat of mail: suffer not them who are skilful in using the bow, or armed in coats of mail, to avail themselves any thing of their skill or their armour, but oppose them with superior skill and force. Thus the slain shall fall in the land of the Chaldeans—There seems to be a transposition of words in this sentence, the sense certainly being, Thus the Chaldeans shall fall down slain to the earth. For Israel hath not been (or rather, shall not be) forsaken, nor Judah of his God—"Though God was justly displeased with his people, yet he would not cast them off utterly, or deprive them of his protection, though he would do so to those that were the rod in his hand, to chastise and scourge his people."

Verses 6, 7. Flee out of the midst of Babylon, &c.—God's people are here exhorted to flee out of Babylon with all haste, as Lot did out of Sodom, lest they should be consumed in the iniquity of that place: see chap. i. 8. Babylon hath been a golden cup in the Lord's hand—In what sense Babylon is called a cup may be seen by comparing chap. xxv. 15. Her greatness and glory enticed and drew in many nations to be confederate with her, in hopes of enriching or aggrandizing themselves; but thereby they drew down destruction upon themselves. They thought to drink, or be in alliance with the Babylonians, was drinking out of a golden cup, but it proved to them a deadly draught. For she was a splendid instrument of vengeance, ordained by God against them; and as they all had suffered by her, so they are all here represented as glorying over her, and rejoicing when her turn of suffering came. By making all the earth drunken, is meant either making all the neighbouring nations act foolishly, and contrary to true wisdom and prudence, or the causing them, as it were, to stagger and fall through the terror and astonishment, the confusion and dismay, which God's judgments should produce among them: see note on chap. xxv. 15. We may observe further here, that this golden cup is said to be in the Lord's hand, to signify that these things had been brought about by the divine providence, and that God had used Babylon as an instrument to bring the nations to that condign punishment which they had deserved.

A. M. 3409. ¹the nations have drunken of her
B. C. 595. wine; therefore the nations ^mare mad.

8 Babylon is suddenly ⁿfallen and destroyed:
^ohowl for her; ^ptake balm for her pain, if so be she may be healed.

9 We would have healed Babylon, but she is not healed: forsake her, and ^qlet us go every one into his own country: ^rfor her judgment reacheth unto heaven, and is lifted up even to the skies.

10 The LORD hath ^sbrought forth our righteousness: come, and let us ^tdeclare in Zion the work of the LORD our God.

11 ^uMake ^vbright the arrows; gather the shields: ^xthe LORD hath raised up the spirit

¹ Rev. xiv. 8.—^m Ch. xxv. 16.—ⁿ Isa. xxi. 9; Rev. xiv. 8; xviii. 2.—^o Chap. xlvi. 20; Rev. xviii. 9, 11, 19.—^p Chap.
xlv. 11.—^q Isaiah xlii. 4; Chapter l. 16.—^r Rev. xviii. 5.
^s Psa. xxxvii. 6.—^t Chap. l. 28.—^u Chap. xlv. 4.

Verses 8, 9. Babylon is suddenly fallen—It was one of the aggravations of the punishment of Babylon, that her destruction came upon her suddenly and unexpectedly. Howl for her, &c.—So the kings, the merchants, and other factors, are described as lamenting the destruction of mystical Babylon, Rev.
xviii. 9, 11, 17–19. Take balm for her pain—Use your utmost endeavours, and try every thing you can to save her from destruction. This is spoken ironically, implying her ruin to be irrecoverable. We would have healed Babylon, but she is not healed— Some think “this is spoken in the name of God’s prophets, and the other witnesses of his truth, importing that they had sufficiently testified against her errors and idolatries, but that she was irreclaimable; and therefore that it was time for all the lovers of truth to depart out of her, lest they should be involved in her punishments.” But it is more probable that the nations which had been subject to Babylon, and were her allies, are the speakers here, declaring that they had assisted her to the utmost of their power, and had endeavoured to support her sinking cause, but all in vain, nothing which they had done or could do availing to save her from destruction. And therefore, as her case was desperate, it was time for them to shift for themselves, and to leave Babylon to its fate, since it seemed to be the decree of Heaven that it should fall. Those who have written of the downfall of Babylon relate, that when its affairs seemed to grow desperate, it was deserted by most of its allies, few or none of them persevering to lend it any assistance. Her judgment reacheth unto heaven—That is, her sin, bringing down God’s judgments; and is lifted up even to the skies—It comes to the ears of even God himself, and engages him to take account of it and punish her.

Verse 10. The Lord hath brought forth our righteousness—Hath made manifest the equity of our cause, revenged the wrongs we have suffered, of the kings of the Medes: ^yfor his ^zdevice is against Babylon, to destroy it; because it is ^zthe vengeance of the LORD, the vengeance of his temple.

12 ^aSet up the standard upon the walls of Babylon, make the watch strong, set up the watchmen, prepare the ^bambushes: for the LORD hath both devised and done that which he spake against the inhabitants of Babylon.

13 ^bO thou that dwellest upon many waters, abundant in treasures, thine end is come, and
the measure of thy covetousness.

14 ^cThe LORD of hosts hath sworn ^dby himself, saying, Surely I will fill thee with men, ^eas with caterpillars; and they shall ^flift ^gup a shout against thee.

^a Heb. pure.—^x Isaiah xliii. 17; Verse 28.—^y Chap. l. 45.
^z Chapter l. 28.—^z Nah. ii. 1; iii. 14.—^z Heb. lies in wait.
^b Rev. xvii. 1, 15.—^c Chap. xlix. 13; Amos vi. 8.—^d Heb. by his soul.—^d Nah. iii. 15.—^e Heb. utter.—^e Chap. l. 15.

and shown ours to be the true religion, by bringing such remarkable judgments upon our enemies.
Come, and let us declare in Zion, &c.—Therefore let us give glory to him in the assemblies of his church, and in the most public manner imaginable.
This is spoken in the persons of the captive Jews.

Verses 11, 12. Make bright the arrows, gather the shields—Hebrew, מלאו השלטים, fill the quivers.
Thus the LXX., πληροῦτε τὰς φαρέτρας, with whom agree the Vulgate, Castalio, and others. The meaning is, Prepare all the instruments of war to defend yourselves, ye Babylonians, for you will have need of them all. The Lord hath raised up the spirit of the kings of the Medes—Neriglissar, king of Babylon, having formed an alliance against the Medes, Cambyses sent his son Cyrus with an army of thirty thousand Persians to join the Medes, commanded by Cyaxares, king of Media, Cyrus’s uncle; called in Scripture, Darius the Mede. It was properly his army that made the expedition against the Babylonians, Cyrus being employed as his general.
Persia was then a small part of the empire of Media, and of little account till Cyrus advanced its reputation; and even then it was called the kingdom of the Medes and Persians, the Medes having still the preference: see Xenophon’s Cyropæd., lib. i. and Lowth. Set up the standard upon, or rather, before the walls of Babylon; and proceed to take all the necessary steps to distress her, and make yourselves masters of her: for the Lord hath both devised, &c.—For God will both favour your undertaking, and will enable you to accomplish it.

Verses 13–19. O thou that dwellest upon many waters—The river Euphrates ran through the midst of Babylon, and there was a prodigious lake of water on one side of the city, besides other lesser waters near it, so that it was in a manner encompassed with waters. Many waters do likewise signify mystically the many people over which this

A. M. 3409. 15 ^f He hath made the earth by his
B. C. 595. power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and ^g hath stretched out the heaven by his understanding.

16 ^h When he uttereth his voice, there is a ⁱ multitude of waters in the heavens; and ^j he causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth: he maketh lightnings with rain, and bringeth forth the wind out of his treasures.

17 ^k Every man ^l is brutish by his knowledge; every founder is confounded by the graven image: ^m for his molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them.

18 ⁿ They are vanity, the work of errors:
in the time of their visitation they shall perish.

19 ^o The portion of Jacob is not like them;
for he is the former of all things: and Israel is the rod of his inheritance: the LORD of hosts is his name.

20 ^p Thou art my battle-axe, and weapons of war: for ^q with thee will I break in pieces the nations, and with thee will I destroy kingdoms;

^f Gen. i. 1, 6; Chapter x. 12.—^g Job ix. 8; Psalm civ. 2; Isaiah xl. 22.—^h Chapter x. 13.—ⁱ Or, noise.—^j Psalm cxxxv. 7.—^k Chapter x. 14.—^l Or, is more brutish than to know.—^m Chap. i. 2.

was the reigning city: see Rev. xvii. 15. Abundant in treasures—Not only enriched by traffic, but by the conquest and spoil of many nations. Thine end is come, and the measure of thy covetousness—God has set bounds to thy covetousness, which it shall not pass over: thou shalt no more increase in wealth, but an end shall be put to all thy designs of this sort. The Lord of hosts hath sworn by himself—The Lord, who is well able to make his words good, hath sworn by himself, for he could swear by no greater, saying, Surely I will fill thee with men as with caterpillars—Or, locusts, as, according to Bochart, the word פְּלִי properly signifies. Armies are often compared to caterpillars, locusts, and such like devouring insects. He hath made the earth by his power, &c.—It is he who, by his immense power, has made all these wonderful things which we see about us, and adorned and settled them by his wisdom, that has pronounced this concerning Babylon: and therefore you need not be doubtful respecting its accomplishment, since he who could create these mighty works, can certainly, whenever he pleases, effect what is infinitely more easy, the ruin of Babylon. But for an elucidation of this, and the four following verses, see notes on chap. x. 12–16.

Verses 20–24. Thou art my battle-axe, &c.—Cyrus, or rather the army of the Medes and Persians, seems to be intended here; compare verses 11,

A. M. 3409
B. C. 595. 21 And with thee will I break in pieces the horse and his rider; and with thee will I break in pieces the chariot and his rider;

22 With thee also will I break in pieces man and woman; and with thee will I break in pieces ^p old and young; and with thee will I break in pieces the young man and the maid;

23 I will also break in pieces with thee the shepherd and his flock; and with thee will I break in pieces the husbandman and his yoke of oxen; and with thee will I break in pieces captains and rulers.

24 ^q And I will render unto Babylon and to all the inhabitants of Chaldea all their evil that they have done in Zion in your sight, saith the LORD.

25 Behold, I am against thee, ^r O destroying mountain, saith the LORD, which destroyest all the earth: and I will stretch out my hand upon thee, and roll thee down from the rocks, ^s and will make thee a burnt mountain.

26 And they shall not take of thee a stone for a corner, nor a stone for foundations; ^t but

^m Chap. x. 15.—ⁿ Chap. x. 16.—^o Isaiah x. 5, 15; Chapter i. 23.—^p Or, in thee, or, by thee.—^q So 2 Chron. xxxvi. 17.
^r Chapter i. 15, 29.—^s Isaiah xiii. 2; Zech. iv. 7.—^t Rev. viii. 8.—^u Chap. i. 40.

12; as elsewhere the instrument of God's vengeance is called a sword, a rod, a scourge. This army, with Cyrus, their general, God here says he will make use of for destroying the whole power of the Babylonish empire, and all orders and degrees of men in it, as he had formerly made that empire the executioner of his judgments upon other countries, chap. i. 23. "Or else," says Lowth, "the words may be understood of the church, and imply, that God will destroy all those earthly powers and kingdoms which are adversaries to his truth and people, in order to establish and advance his church. This will be fulfilled at the fall of mystical Babylon, when God's kingdom shall break in pieces all the kingdoms of the earth, in the destruction of that remnant of the fourth monarchy, according to Daniel's prophecy, chap. ii. 44.²³ And I will render unto Babylon all their evil (see verse 11, and chap. i. 28) that they have done in Zion, in your sight—This may either refer to the evil done at Jerusalem and in Judea, by the Chaldeans, in the sight of God's people, or to the open and public manner in which judgment would be executed on Babylon.

Verses 25, 26. Behold, I am against thee, O destroying mountain—Babylon was situate in a plain, but is called a mountain here, by reason of its superiority and eminence above all other places; and perhaps also on account of its lofty walls, pa-

A. M. 3409. thou shalt be ^adesolate for ever, saith
B. C. 595. the LORD.

27 ^aSet ye up a standard in the land, blow the trumpet among the nations, ^xprepare the nations against her, call together against her ^ythe kingdoms of Ararat, Minni, and Ashchenaz; appoint a captain against her; cause the horses to come up as the rough caterpillars.

28 Prepare against her the nations with ^zthe kings of the Medes, the captains thereof, and all the rulers thereof, and all the land of his dominion.

29 And the land shall tremble and sorrow;

^a Heb. everlasting desolations.—^u Isa. xlii. 2.—^x Chap. xxv. 14.—^y Chapter I. 41.—^z Verse 11.—^z Chapter I, 13, 39, 40;

laces, and other edifices; and it has the epithet of destroying, on account of its being the cause of the destruction of many nations. Or, the words הר המכזית may properly be rendered, mountain of corruption, a name given by way of reproach to the mount of Olives, after it was defiled by idolatry, 2 Kings xxiii. 13, where see the note. The same appellation is here given to Babylon, because it was the seat of idolatry; which was derived from thence into other countries under its government and jurisdiction. This is remarkably true of mystical Babylon. I will roll thee down from the rocks—That is, from thy strong holds. I will dismantle all thy walls and forts, and then set thee on fire, (see verses 58, 59,) so that thou shalt appear like a great mountain burning. "Earthquakes were frequent in Palestine, and the sacred writers have embellished their writings with repeated allusions to this terrible phenomenon. The prophet here compares a powerful nation, doomed to destruction, to a ruinous mountain, or rather a volcano, which would soon be consumed, and involve other mountains in its ruins." And they shall not take of thee a stone—There shall not be left in thee a stone fit to be used in any principal part of a building, either for a foundation or for a corner-stone. This seems to be spoken figuratively, and to signify that they should no longer have kings and governors taken from among themselves, but should be under the dominion of foreigners.

Verses 27–29. Set ye up a standard—blow the trumpet—These were common signals for assembling armies together. Call together the kingdoms of Ararat, Minni, and Ashchenaz—These were countries under the dominion of the Medes. The two former probably the greater and lesser Armenia, and the latter a part of Phrygia, near the Hellespont: so Bochart thinks. And that both Armenians and Phrygians composed part of the army which Cyrus led against Babylon, may be seen in Xenophon, Cyropæd., lib. iii. and lib. vii. Appoint a captain against her—Appoint a proper person, who has skill, courage, and conduct, to command and direct all these nations. Such was Cyrus, who for every purpose of the LORD shall ^ato ^bbe performed against Babylon, ^ato ^bmake the land of Babylon a desolation without an inhabitant.

30 The mighty men of Babylon have forborne to fight, they have remained in their holds: their might hath failed; ^bthey became as women: they have burned their dwelling-places; ^cher bars are broken.

31 ^dOne post shall run to meet another, and one messenger to meet another, to show the king of Babylon that his city is taken at one end, Verse 43.—^b Isa. xix. 16; Chap. xlviii. 41; 1. 37.—^c Lam. ii. 9; Amos i. 5; Nah. iii. 13.—^d Chap. I. 24.

was accordingly appointed to this purpose. Cause her horses to come up as the rough caterpillars—Or, the rough locusts, as Bochart renders it, who observes, that there are some insects of that kind rough and hairy. Blaney reads, bristled locusts. Locusts represent horses, not only in their swiftness, but likewise in the shape of their heads, and Joel ii. 4, Rev. ix. 7, they are said to have the appearance of horses and horsemen. Prepare against her the kings of the Medes—The several princes or viceroys of the provinces belonging to the Median empire, with their people. All princes and governors are called kings in the Hebrew language. The land shall tremble and sorrow—An expression commonly used to express the confusion of the inhabitants under some great calamity. For every purpose of the Lord shall be performed, &c.—See notes on chap. I. 16–40.

Verses 30–32. The mighty men of Babylon have forborne to fight: they have remained, &c.—"The year before the siege of Babylon, Cyrus overthrew Belshazzar in battle, whereupon his army retreated within the walls, where they were shut up by him and besieged. Afterward, when Cyrus entered the city, he ordered public proclamation to be made, that all persons should keep within their houses, and whoever was found abroad should be put to death; and threatened to set their houses on fire, if any offered to hurt the soldiers from the tops of their houses." They became as women—Timorous, and without courage. They have burned their dwelling-places—The enemy have burned their houses. Her bars are broken—All her fortresses, and what she confided in as her chief defence against the enemy. One post shall run to meet another—Messengers shall run from different parts, and so fall in with one another, all carrying the same intelligence to the same person, that the city was taken on the part every one came from. This is a very natural description of what may be supposed to happen on a city being taken by surprise in the middle of the night; for, as fast as the alarm spread, people would be posting away with the news from all parts to the head-quarters. The translation of the last clause,

A. M. 3409. 32 And that ^athe passages are
B. C. 595. stopped, and the reeds they have burned with fire, and the men of war are affrighted.

33 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; The daughter of Babylon is ^flike a thrashing-floor, ^git¹⁰ is time to thrash her:
yet a little while, ^hand the time of her harvest shall come.

34 Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon hath ⁱdevoured me, he hath crushed me, he hath made me an empty vessel, he hath swallowed me up like a dragon, he hath filled his belly with my delicates, he hath cast me out.

^a Chapter l. 38.—^f Isaiah xxi. 10; Mic. iv. 13; Amos i. 3.
^g Isa. xli. 15; Hab. iii. 12.—¹⁰ Or, in the time that he thrasheth her.—^h Isaiah xvii. 5; Hosea vi. 11; Joel iii. 13; Rev. xiv.
15, 18.—ⁱ Chap. l. 7.

to show the king of Babylon that his city is taken at one end, is not accurate: the word כִּצְרָה does not mean at one end, for one is not in the text, but at the extremity. It may not be improper to observe further here, that though it seems unusual to say that one messenger runs to meet another, to acquaint any one with the same news, the usual expression in such a case being, that one messenger follows upon the heels of another; yet, in this matter, this unusual way of speaking was exactly descriptive of the fact;
for Babylon being taken by a party of soldiers entering by the channel of the Euphrates at each extremity of the city, the messengers who carried the news to the king at his palace would actually run toward and meet each other at or near the palace, as they came from opposite quarters, to acquaint him that his city was taken at the extremities; for we cannot but suppose that people would run from each end of the city to the palace as soon as Cy-rus's men entered. The passage in the original has great beauty and sublimity, which, however, is almost lost in our translation. Houbigant seems to give it its due force, rendering the verbs in the present tense, and omitting the connecting particles, which greatly augments its energy, thus: "Courier comes to meet courier—messenger meets messenger —to inform the king of Babylon that his city is taken at the extremity, that the passages are stopped, [or surprised, see verse 41.] that fires are burning among the reeds, that the men of war are terrified." The passages here mentioned "were most probably the entrances into the city from the river side, which were secured by gates that ought, as Herodotus observes, to have been fast barred, which, if it had been done, would have effectually frustrated the attempt of the enemy; but being left open and unguarded, on account of the public festivity, the assailants were in possession of those entrances, and in the heart of the city, before the besieged were aware of it." The word אֲנָחַי, here rendered reeds, properly signifies marshes or lakes; and the phrase

35 ¹¹The violence done to me and ^{A. M. 3409.} to my ¹²flesh be upon Babylon, shall ^{B. C. 595.} the ¹³inhabitant of Zion say; and, My blood upon the inhabitants of Chaldea, shall Jerusalem say.

36 Therefore thus saith the LORD; Behold, ^kI will plead thy cause, and take vengeance for thee; ^land I will dry up her sea, and make her springs dry.

37 ^mAnd Babylon shall become heaps, a dwelling-place for dragons, ⁿan astonishment, and a hissing, without an inhabitant.

38 They shall roar together like lions: they shall ¹⁴yell as lions' whelps.

¹¹ Heb. My violence.—¹² Or, remainder.—¹³ Heb. inhabitress.—^k Chapter l. 34.—^l Chapter l. 38.—^m Isa. xlii. 22; Chapter l. 39; Rev. xviii. 2.—ⁿ Chapter xxy. 9, 18.—¹⁴ Or, shake themselves.

here seems to import, that the enemies had burned up all the outworks belonging to the marshy grounds about the river Euphrates.—Lowth.

Verse 33. The daughter of Babylon is like a thrashing-floor—God's people have been sorely bruised and trodden under foot by the Babylonians, as corn in a thrashing-floor: see note on Isa. xxi. 10.
It is time to thrash her—It is time for her to feel the miseries she has made others suffer. The word thrash often signifies to subdue by force and power.
Yet a little while and the time of her harvest shall come—There shall be a clear riddance made of her inhabitants and their treasures, as the harvest clears the fields, and leaves them empty and bare. By her harvest may be meant the slaughter and spoiling of her inhabitants; and by the thrashing, or treading, which follows the harvest, the destruction of the city itself.

Verses 34, 35. Nebuchadrezzar hath devoured me—Zion and Jerusalem, which are both expressed in the next verse, are the speakers here, and the words contain a pathetic description of the calamities brought upon the Jews by Nebuchadnezzar and his forces, who, after they had devoured the wealth and laid waste the beauty of Judea, then turned the inhabitants out of it, and led them captives into a strange land. The violence done to me and my flesh be upon Babylon—Let God return upon her the violence she has done to me and to my children.
Our nearest relations are called our flesh in Scripture. This imprecation is very similar to that in Psa. cxxxvii. 8, where see the note.

Verses 36-39. Thus saith the Lord, I will plead thy cause—This is, as it were, God's answer to the prayers and imprecations of the Jewish people, mentioned in the two foregoing verses. I will dry up her sea, and make her springs dry—This some think is spoken figuratively, meaning, I will exhaust her multitudes of people, and dry up all those sources from whence she derived her immense wealth and power. But this was literally fulfilled in Cyrus's

A. M. 3409. 39 In their heat I will make their
B. C. 595. feasts, and ° I will make them drunken, that they may rejoice, and sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith the LORD.

40 I will bring them down like lambs to the slaughter, like rams with he-goats.

41 How is ° Sheshach taken! and how is the praise of the whole earth surprised! how is Babylon become an astonishment among the nations!

42 † The sea is come up upon Babylon: she is covered with the multitude of the waves thereof.

° Ver. 57.—† Chap. xxv. 26.—‡ Isa. xiii. 29; Chap. xlix. 25;
Dan. iv. 30.—§ Isa. viii. 7, 8.—|| Chap. i. 39, 40; Ver. 29.

draining the river, and thereby gaining an entrance into the city. All great waters are called seas in the Hebrew language. And Babylon shall become heaps—See note on chap. i. 39, 40. They shall roar together like lions, &c.—This is either expressive of their grief and anguish of mind, or else the prophet describes the revels and riotous noise which they made upon the night of that public festival in which the city was taken: see below. In their heat I will make their feasts—Or, I will supply them with drink, as Blaney renders מִשְׁתֵּיָהֶם, observing, that all the ancient versions give the word that sense, and that it agrees with the use of it, Dan. i. 8, 10, 16. And I will make them drunken—I will suffer them to give a loose to joy in their feasts, and to be intoxicated with wine: God is frequently said in Scripture to do those things which he permits to be done. Or the words may be taken figuratively, as signifying, While they are feasting I will prepare for them another cup to drink, namely, that of my fury and indignation. History informs us that Babylon was taken at a time when the Babylonians were so engaged in feasting and revelling, and so intoxicated with liquor, that the gates leading down to the river, which used to be shut every night, were left open, which gave a free passage to Cyrus and his army into the city. That they may rejoice and sleep a perpetual sleep—That, in the midst of their jollity and security, they may sleep the sleep of death.

Verses 41–43. How is Sheshach taken!—That Babylon is meant by Sheshach is certain; but why it is so called is yet matter of doubt: see note on chap. xxv. 26. Some indeed have supposed that it is called so from a goddess of that name, which the Babylonians worshipped, and which is supposed by Calmet to have been the same with the moon; but of these things there does not appear to be satisfactory proof. How is the praise of the whole earth surprised—Babylon was esteemed the wonder of the world, for the height, breadth, and compass of its walls, the palaces and hanging gardens belonging to it, for the temple of Belus, for the banks and facing of the river, and the artificial lakes and canals 43 ° Her cities are a desolation, a dry A. M. 3409.

land, and a wilderness, a land where- B. C. 595.
in no man dwelleth, neither doth any son of man pass thereby.

44 † And I will punish Bel in Babylon, and I will bring forth out of his mouth that which he hath swallowed up: and the nations shall not flow together any more unto him: yea, ‡ the wall of Babylon shall fall.

45 § My people, go ye out of the midst of her, and deliver ye every man his soul from the fierce anger of the LORD.

46 And || lest your heart faint, and ye fear

† Isa. xlvii. 1; Chap. i. 2.—‡ Verse 58.—§ Verse 6; Chap.
i. 8; Rev. xviii. 4.—|| Or, let not.

made for the draining of it, and for its riches and greatness. The sea is come up upon Babylon, &c.—A numerous army, or a vast multitude of people, carrying all before them like an inundation. Her cities are a desolation—All the lesser cities, within the territories of Babylon, are become an uninhabited, uncultivated desert: see note on Isa. xiii. 20.

Verse 44. And I will punish Bel in Babylon—The heathen ascribed the honour of all their successes to their idols; and, upon any great victory, offered the best part of the spoils to their gods, and deposited them in their temples, as a grateful acknowledgment that the success was owing to their assistance. So Nebuchadnezzar, upon every victory over the Jews, carried away part of the furniture of the sanctuary and put it in the temple of his idol: see 2 Chron. xxxvi. 7; Dan. i. 2. The restoring of the holy vessels to their right owner, and to their former use, is what is here foretold by bringing forth out of his mouth that which he hath swallowed, which was done by Cyrus, upon his proclamation for rebuilding the temple, Ezra i. 7. But the full accomplishment of this prediction Dr. Prideaux places in Xerxes' demolishing the temple of Belus, and plundering it of its vast wealth, which, from Diodorus Siculus's account of it, he computes to amount to twenty-one millions of our money: see his Connect., pp. 100, 101. And the nations shall not flow together any more unto him—There shall be no more costly presents brought by foreign nations unto the temple of Bel, as a compliment to that monarchy; just as, under the Roman empire, people that were conquered by it, sent golden crowns to Jupiter Capitolinus: see Lowth.

Verses 45, 46. My people, go ye out of the midst of her, &c.—See note on chap. i. 8. And lest your heart faint, and ye fear for the rumour, &c.—“Lest the rumours of new forces, ready to join themselves to the Babylonians, dishearten you, and make you despair of seeing so great an empire subdued by any human power.” A rumour shall come one year, and after that in another year—This seems to be an idiomatic phrase, denoting that terrifying rumours should continue year after year. And in

A. M. 3409. ^y for the rumour that shall be heard in the land; a rumour shall both come one year, and after that in another year shall come a rumour, and violence in the land, ruler against ruler.

47 Therefore behold, the days come, that ^z I will ¹⁶ do judgment upon the graven images of Babylon: and her whole land shall be confounded, and all her slain shall fall in the midst of her.

48 Then ^a the heaven and the earth, and all that is therein, shall sing for Babylon: ^b for the spoilers shall come unto her from the north, saith the LORD.

49 ¹⁷ As Babylon hath caused the slain of Israel to fall, so at Babylon shall fall the slain of all ¹⁸ the earth.

50 ^c Ye that have escaped the sword, go away,

^y 2 Kings xix. 7.—^z Chap. l. 2; Verse 52.—¹⁶ Heb. visit upon.—^a Isa. xlv. 23; xlix. 13; Rev. xviii. 20.—^b Chap. l. 3, 41.—¹⁷ Or, Both Babylon is to fall, O ye slain of Israel, and stand not still: remember the LORD A. M. 3409. afar off, and let Jerusalem come into B. C. 595. your mind.

51 ^d We are confounded, because we have heard reproach: shame hath covered our faces; for strangers are come into the sanctuaries of the LORD's house.

52 Wherefore behold, the days come, saith the LORD, ^e that I will do judgment upon her graven images: and through all her land the wounded shall groan.

53 ^f Though Babylon should mount up to heaven, and though she should fortify the height of her strength, yet from me shall spoilers come unto her, saith the LORD.

54 ^g A sound of a cry cometh from Babylon, and great destruction from the land of the Chaldeans:

with Babylon, &c.—¹⁸ Or, the country.—^c Chapter xlv. 28. ^d Psa. xlv. 15, 16; lxxix. 4.—^e Verse 47.—^f Chap. xlix. 16; Amos ix. 2; Obad. 4.—^g Chap. l. 22.

these words the prophet, by God's direction, gives signs or tokens to the captive Jews, whereby they might know the exact time when Babylon should be taken, and, consequently, when they should remove from the city into some other place, that they might not be terrified, and induced to quit the city before there was any occasion for their doing so; and he acquaints them that there should come a rumour one year, namely, of Cyrus's preparations against the Babylonians; and that the next year there should be another rumour, namely, as we may suppose, of Cyrus's march into Asia, and his victories there, and of his drawing nearer and nearer to Babylon every day. And violence in the land, ruler against ruler—"It is possible," says Blaney, "that the contests between the adverse powers of Babylon and Media, during which the dominions of the former were subjected to the miseries of foreign invasion, may alone be here intended. But Berosus, the Chaldean historian, as cited by Josephus, Contra Apion, lib. i., gives an account of civil violences and disorders that were committed in the land after the death of Nebuchadnezzar, whose son, Evil-merodach, was, after a short reign, murdered, and his throne usurped by one of his subjects. The usurper's son, who succeeded him, was also murdered in his turn, and the kingdom restored to the lawful heir; and all this happened in the course of a few years previous to the foreign invasion. These therefore, I think, are more likely to be the violence in this passage alluded to, and introduced as the forerunners of still greater devastations."

Verses 47-49. Therefore behold, or rather, Then soon, the days come that I will do judgment upon the graven images, &c.—That is, cause the statues of the gods of Babylon to be broken to pieces, or carried away. Then the heaven and the earth, &c., shall sing for Babylon—The angels in heaven, and many nations of the earth, shall rejoice and praise God for the just punishment brought upon Babylon. So at Babylon shall fall, or rather, Through Babylon have fallen, as נפלו should be rendered, the slain of all the earth—The reason is here assigned why the heavens and the earth, and all that are therein, should rejoice at the fall of Babylon, because not only the people of Israel, but of the whole earth, likewise had been greatly annoyed, oppressed, and diminished by the power of that ambitious nation.

Verses 50, 51. Ye that have escaped the sword—Namely, the sword which wasted Babylon. Go away, stand not still—This is spoken to the Jews, who, attending to the advice given them, verse 45, withdrew from Babylon in time, and so escaped the sword by which they otherwise might have fallen. And here they are advised to flee still farther and farther off; but amidst all to remember their native country, and in particular Jerusalem, and the God they had worshipped there; and to pray for the restoration of the city and temple; and that he would avenge himself of the Babylonians for laying them in ruins. We are confounded, because we have heard reproach—The prophet here represents the words or thoughts of the pious exiles, when they heard the Babylonians speaking of Jehovah with contempt, and deriding them for worshipping him, who could not, they said, deliver his city and temple out of their hands, or preserve them from being destroyed. For strangers are come into the sanctuaries of the Lord's house—The word sanctuaries, in the plural, is likewise used Psa. lxxiii. 17, though our English reads there, sanctuary. Probably the several courts of the temple are meant by sanctuaries.

Verse 53. Though Babylon should mount up to heaven—Though Babylon were built upon the most

A. M. 3409. 55 Because the LORD hath spoiled
B. C. 595.

Babylon, and destroyed out of her the great voice: when her waves do roar like great waters, a noise of their voice is uttered:

56 Because the spoiler is come upon her, even upon Babylon, and her mighty men are taken, every one of their bows is broken: ^b for the LORD God of recompenses shall surely requite.

57 ⁱ And I will make drunk her princes, and her wise men, her captains, and her rulers, and her mighty men: and they shall sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith ^k the King, whose name is the LORD of hosts.

^b Psa. xciv. 1; Chap. l. 29; Ver. 24.—ⁱ Ver. 39.—^k Chap. xlv. 18; xlviii. 15.—¹⁹ Or, The walls of broad Babylon.

lofty and inaccessible mountain, and though it were made as strong as nature and art could make it, yet still I would cause it to be spoiled.

Verses 55-57. Because the Lord hath spoiled Babylon, and destroyed out of her the great voice—"When cities are populous, they are of course noisy: see Isa. xxii. 2. Silence is therefore a mark of depopulation; and in this sense we are to understand God's destroying, or taking away out of Babylon, the great noise, which, during the time of her prosperity, was constantly heard there, 'the busy hum of men,' as the poet very expressly calls it. In this manner the mystical Babylon is threatened, Rev. xviii. 22, 23. Compare chap. vii. 34; xvi. 9; xxv. 10."—Blaney. Every one of their bows is broken—Their strength is quite broken, and they cannot defend themselves, or hurt their enemies. I will make drunk her princes and her wise men, &c.—I will permit her princes, her commanders, and directors to be intoxicated, so that they shall neglect what should be done for their defence, and thereby be slain.

Verse 58. The broad walls of Babylon shall be utterly broken, &c.—That the walls of Babylon were of a prodigious height and thickness, Herodotus tells, who says, they were 200 cubits high, and 50 cubits in breadth, lib. i. cap. 178. "We are astonished," says Bishop Lowth, in his note on Isa. xiii. 19, "at the accounts which ancient historians of the best credit give, of the immense extent, height, and thickness of the walls of Nineveh and Babylon; nor are we less astonished, when we are assured by the concurrent testimony of modern travellers, that no remains, not the least traces, of these prodigious works, are to be found. Our wonder will, I think, be moderated in both respects, if we consider the fabric of these celebrated walls, and the nature of the materials of which they consisted. Buildings in the East have always been, and are to this day, made of earth or clay mixed, or beat up with straw, to make the parts cohere, and dried only in the sun. This is their method of making bricks. The walls of the city were built of the earth, digged out of the spot, and dried upon the place; by which means both the ditch and the wall were at once formed; the former furnishing materials for the latter. That the walls

58 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; A. M. 3409.
B. C. 595.

¹⁹ The ¹ broad walls of Babyon shall be utterly ²⁰ broken, and her high gates shall be burned with fire; and ^m the people shall labour in vain, and the folk in the fire, and they shall be weary.

59 ¶ The word which Jeremiah the prophet commanded Seraiah the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, when he went ²¹ with Zedekiah the king of Judah into Babylon in the fourth year of his reign. And this Seraiah was a ²² quiet prince.

60 So Jeremiah wrote in a book all the evil

¹ Verse 4.—²⁰ Or, made naked.—^m Hab. ii. 13.—²¹ Or, on the behalf of.—²² Or, prince of Menucha, or, chief chamberlain.

of Babylon were of this kind is well known; and Berossus expressly says, (apud Joseph. Antiq. x. 11,) that Nebuchadnezzar added three new walls, both to the old and new city, partly of brick and bitumen, and partly of brick alone. A wall of this sort must have a great thickness in proportion to its height, otherwise it cannot stand. The thickness of the walls of Babylon is said to have been one-fourth of their height; which seems to have been no more than was absolutely necessary." Her high gates shall be burned, and the people shall labour in vain, &c.—If the Chaldeans take never so much pains to quench the fire, it shall be to no purpose; and all their efforts to preserve their empire and city shall be as insignificant as if men wrought in the fire, which immediately destroys all the fruits of their labours. The words may be better translated, "And the people have laboured for a thing of naught, and the folks have wearied themselves for that which shall be fuel for the fire;" that is, the works which have been erected with such incredible labour and expense, shall be a prey to the flames.

Verse 59. The word which Jeremiah commanded Seraiah, when he went with Zedekiah—The Hebrew בלכתו את צדקיהו, is rendered by the LXX., οτι επορευετο παρα Σεδεκιου, when he went from Zedekiah, on his behalf, or by virtue of his commission; which seems to be the meaning of the clause; for we have no reason to suppose that Zedekiah went in person to Babylon at that time. Instead of, This Seraiah was a quiet prince, as our translators render מנוחה שר, the LXX. read, ἀρχιεπισκοπος, a prince, or chief master of gifts, which Blaney interprets to mean, chief of the embassy, or who had the principal charge of the present sent from Zedekiah to the king of Babylon, judging, that in these words is specified the business on which Seraiah was sent. He was employed to carry the present, or customary tribute, which Zedekiah was obliged to pay to the king of Babylon, in acknowledgment of his subjection and vassalage.

Verses 60-62. So Jeremiah wrote in a book—Namely, in the two foregoing chapters; all the evil that should come upon Babylon—This was done that it might be known even in Babylon itself that

A. M. 3409. that should come upon Babylon, even
B. C. 595. all these words that are written against Babylon.

61 And Jeremiah said to Seraiah, When thou comest to Babylon, and shalt see, and shalt read all these words ;

62 Then shalt thou say, O LORD, thou hast spoken against this place, to cut it off, that ⁿ none shall remain in it, neither man nor beast, ⁿ Chap. i. 3, 39 ; Verse 29.—²³ Heb. desolations.

Jeremiah had foretold the destruction of that city, six years before the Babylonians destroyed Jerusalem. And Jeremiah said, When thou shalt see and read all these words—This is probably to be understood, not of a mere private reading of them by himself, but of his reading them to the Jews in Babylon, (namely, those that had been carried thither in Jehoiakim's captivity,) to comfort them under their exile, and, perhaps, in the hearing of some of the Babylonians themselves. Then shalt thou say—Looking up to God, and making a solemn protestation of the divine authority, and unquestionable certainty, of that which thou hast read ; O Lord, thou hast spoken against this place—And I believe what thou hast spoken. Thou hast passed sentence upon Babylon, and it shall be executed. This is like the angel's protestation, Rev. xix. 9, concerning the destruction of the New Testament Babylon, These are the true sayings of God : and Rev. xxi. 6, These words are true and faithful. To cut it off, that none shall remain in it, &c.—Though Seraiah and the captive Jews see Babylon flourishing, yet, having read this prophecy, they must foresee Babylon falling, and by virtue of this foresight, must learn neither to envy its pomp nor fear its power. Thus, reader, when we observe what this world is, how glittering are its shows, and how flattering its proposals, let us read in the book of the Lord, that its fashion passeth away, and that it shall shortly be cut off, and made desolate for ever, and we shall learn to look upon it with a holy contempt, and to die to all its false glories and illusive joys.

but that it shall be ²³ desolate for ever. A. M. 3409.
B. C. 595.

63 And it shall be, when thou hast made an end of reading this book, ^o that thou shalt bind a stone to it, and cast it into the midst of Euphrates :

64 And thou shalt say, Thus shall Babylon sink, and shall not rise from the evil that I will bring upon her : ^p and they shall be weary. Thus far are the words of Jeremiah.

^o Rev. xviii. 21.—^p Verse 58.

Verses 63, 64. And thou shalt bind a stone to it, and cast it into the midst of Euphrates—The prophets, as we have seen, frequently gave sensible representations of the judgments they foretold : see chap. xix. 10. This now given was a significant emblem of Babylon's sinking irrecoverably under the judgments here denounced against her : compare Rev. xviii. 21. This threatening was in a literal sense fulfilled by Cyrus's breaking down the head or dam of the great lake, which was on the west side of the city, in order to turn the course of the river that way ; for no care being afterward taken to repair the breach, the whole country round it was overflowed. And the prophecy of Isaiah, chap. xiv. 23, foretelling that the country of Babylon should become a possession for the bittern and pools of water, was literally fulfilled.—Prideaux and Lowth. And they shall be weary—This clause, expressed by one word in the Hebrew, namely, יָעִיִּי, is not to be met with in the translation of the LXX., “nor does it appear to me,” says Blaney, “to be authentic, notwithstanding the concurrence of the later versions and MSS. The sense is entire and complete without it ; and the addition serves only to cause perplexity and confusion. The word seems to have been added by some transcriber, whose eye was caught by it at the close of the preceding paragraph, verse 58,” where the same word occurs. Thus far are the words of Jeremiah—Here the prophecies of Jeremiah end : the following chapter being added by some other hand, either in the lifetime of Jeremiah, and by his consent, or after his death.

CHAPTER LII.

This chapter contains a brief history of the captivity, nearly the same, word for word, as it is related in the second book of Kings, chap. xxiv. 18–20, and chap. xxv., with some few additions. Some have supposed it placed here as a proper introduction to the book of Lamentations. But more probably the design was, by immediately subjoining this historical narrative of the desolations of the Jewish nation to the predictions of Jeremiah concerning them, to give a nearer view of the exact accomplishment of the divine word of prophecy. That this narrative could not be added by Jeremiah is manifest, not only by the last clause of the preceding chapter, but also by this consideration, that a great part of it is a repetition of what he himself had related in the xxxixth and xlth chapters of his prophecy. As therefore it must have been subjoined by some other person, it is most probable it was done by Ezra, who is commonly supposed to have revised the sacred writings after the return of the Jews from Babylon, and to have collected them into one body. We have here, (1.) The reign of Zedekiah rendered unhappy by his sins and punishments, 1–3. (2.) The besieging and taking of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans, 4–7. (3.) The severe usage which Zedekiah and his princes met with from Nebuchadnezzar, 8-11. (4,) The destruction of the temple and the city 12-14. (5,) The carrying away of the people into captivity, 15, 16, with an account of the numbers of those carried away, 28-30. (6,) The taking away of the plunder of the temple, 17-23. (7,) The murder of the two chief priests and seventy-two other persons of rank in cold blood, by Nebuchadnezzar at Riblah, 24-27. (8,) King Jehoiachin is released and honoured after Nebuchadnezzar's death, as an earnest of the deliverance of the Jews, 31-34.

A. M. 3415. ZEDEKIAH was^a one and twenty
B. C. 599. years old when he¹ began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem.
And his mother's name was Hamutal the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah.

2 And he did that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD, according to all that Jehoiakim had done.

3 For through the anger of the LORD it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, till he had cast them out from his presence, that Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon.

B. C. 590. 4 ¶ And it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came, he and all his army against Jerusalem, and pitched against it, and built forts against it round about.

5 So the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of King Zedekiah.

B. C. 589. 6 And in the fourth month, in the ninth day of the month, the famine was sore in the city, so that there was no bread for the people of the land.

7 Then the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled, and went forth out of the city by night by the way of the gate between the two walls, which was by the king's garden;

(now the Chaldeans were by the city A. M. 3416. round about;) and they went by the B. C. 588.
way of the plain.

8 ¶ But the army of the Chaldeans pursued after the king, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho; and all his army was scattered from him.

9 ° Then they took the king, and carried him up unto the king of Babylon to Riblah, in the land of Hamath; where he gave judgment upon him.

10 ^d And the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes: he slew also all the princes of Judah, in Riblah.

11 Then he ² put out the eyes of Zedekiah;
and the king of Babylon bound him in ³ chains, and carried him to Babylon, and put him in ⁴ prison till the day of his death.

12 ¶ ° Now in the fifth month, in the tenth day of the month, ^f which was the nineteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, ^g came Nebuzar-adan, ^h captain ⁶ of the guard, which ⁷ served the king of Babylon, into Jerusalem.

13 And burned the house of the LORD, and the king's house; and all the houses of Jerusalem, and all the houses of the great men, burned he with fire:

14 And all the army of the Chaldeans, that

^a 2 Kings xxiv. 18.—¹ Heb. reigned.—^b 2 Kings xxv. 1-27;
Ch. xxxix. 1; Zech. viii. 19.—^c Ch. xxxii. 4.—^d Ezk. xii. 13.
^e Heb. blinded.—² Or, fetters.—^f Heb. house of the wards.

^g Zech. vii. 5; viii. 19.—^f Verse 29.—^h Chapter xxxix. 9.
⁶ Or, chief marshal.—⁶ Heb. chief of the executioners, or, slaugh-termen. And so verse 14, &c.—⁷ Heb. stood before.

NOTES ON CHAPTER LII.

Verses 1-11. Zedekiah was one and twenty years old—The first three verses of this chapter are word for word the same with 2 Kings xxiv. 18-20, where see the notes; and for the six following verses, see those on 2 Kings xxv. 1-6. Where he gave judgment upon him—Namely, for rebelling against him when he had taken an oath of allegiance to him. Of Nebuchadnezzar's slaying the sons of Zedekiah, putting out his eyes, binding him with chains, &c., see note on 2 Kings xxv. 7.

Verses 12, 13. Now in the fifth month—This gave occasion to that solemn fast of the fifth month, observed in the times of the captivity: see Zech. vii. 3-5; viii. 19. In the tenth day of the month—In the parallel place, 2 Kings xxv. 8, we read, on the seventh day. This difference some attempt to reconcile, by supposing that the one place may speak of the day Nebuzar-adan set out from Riblah, and the other of the day that he arrived at Jerusalem; or else, that he came on the seventh, but did not set fire to the building till the tenth. "But it is more likely," says Blaney, "to have arisen from some mistake of the transcriber, perhaps, in setting down then umbers at full length, which were expressed by numeral letters in the old copies. And in this instance such a mistake might easily happen between the ⁷ and the ¹⁰, of which the first stands for seven, the latter for ten." And burned the house of the Lord—After it had stood, says Josephus, four hundred and seventy years; but Archbishop Usher reckons it only four hundred and twenty-four years from the laying of the first foundation by Solomon: see note on 2 Kings xxv. 9.

A. M. 3416. were with the captain of the guard,
B. C. 588. brake down all the walls of Jerusalem round about.

15 ^h Then Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carried away captive certain of the poor of the people, and the residue of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to the king of Babylon, and the rest of the multitude.

16 But Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard left certain of the poor of the land for vine-dressers and for husbandmen.

17 ¶ ⁱ Also the ^k pillars of brass that were in the house of the LORD, and the bases, and the brazen sea that was in the house of the LORD, the Chaldeans brake, and carried all the brass of them to Babylon.

18 ^l The caldrons also, and the ⁸ shovels, and the snuffers, and the ⁹ bowls, and the spoons, and all the vessels of brass wherewith they ministered, took they away.

19 And the basins, and the ¹⁰ fire-pans, and the bowls, and the caldrons, and the candle-sticks, and the spoons, and the cups; that which was of gold, in gold, and that which was of silver, in silver, took the captain of the guard away.

^h Chapter xxxix. 8, 9.—ⁱ Chap. xxvii. 19.—^k 1 Kings vii. 15, 23, 27, 50.—^l Exodus xxvii. 3; 2 Kings xxv. 14, 15, 16.
⁸ Or, instruments to remove the ashes.—⁹ Or, basins.—¹⁰ Or, censers.—^m 1 Kings vii. 47.—¹¹ Heb. their brass.

Verses 17–20. Also the pillars of brass, &c., the Chaldeans brake—See note on 2 Kings xxv. 13. The temple was rifled of its riches and furniture at several times. The first was when Nebuchadnezzar came up against Jehoiakim, Dan. i. 2. The second time was at the captivity of Jehoniah, chap. xxvii. 19; 2 Kings xxiv. 13; and now at the final destruction of the city and temple they made a clear riddance of all its ornaments. And twelve brazen bulls that were under the bases—Or rather, which were instead of bases, to support the brazen sea, (1 Kings vii. 25,) the Hebrew word תחת, in other places, signifying instead, or, in the place of another. So the LXX. understand it here.

Ver. 21–23. The height of one pillar was eighteen cubits—The same account is given of the height of these pillars, 1 Kings vii. 15: but in 2 Chron. iii. 15, it is said, that both the pillars made thirty-five cubits; which two texts may be easily reconciled by allowing one cubit for the basis. And a fillet of twelve cubits—So that the diameter was almost four cubits. The thickness whereof was four fingers—The pillar being hollow, the thickness of the work that encompassed the hollow space was four fingers over. There were ninety and six pomegranates on 20 The two pillars, one sea, and A. M. 3416.

B. C. 588. twelve brazen bulls that were under the bases, which King Solomon had made in the house of the LORD: ^m the ¹¹ brass of all these vessels was without weight.

21 And concerning the ⁿ pillars, the height of one pillar was eighteen cubits; and a ¹² fillet of twelve cubits did compass it; and the thickness thereof was four fingers: it was hollow.

22 And a chapter of brass was upon it; and the height of one chapter was five cubits, with net-work and pomegranates upon the chapters round about, all of brass. The second pillar also and the pomegranates were like unto these.

23 And there were ninety and six pomegranates on a side; and ^o all the pomegranates upon the net-work were a hundred round about.

24 ¶ And ^p the captain of the guard took Seraiah the chief priest, ^q and Zephaniah the second priest, and the three keepers of the ¹³ door:

25 He took also out of the city a eunuch, which had the charge of the men of war; and seven men of them that ¹⁴ were near the king's ⁿ 1 Kings vii. 15; 2 Kings xxv. 17; 2 Chronicles iii. 15.

¹² Hebrew, thread.—^o 1 Kings vii. 20.—^p 2 Kings xxv. 18.
^q Chapter xxi. 1; xxix. 25.—¹³ Heb. threshold.—¹⁴ Heb. saw the face of the king.

a side—Or, toward every wind, as Blaney very properly renders רוחה. “In 1 Kings vii. 42, and 2 Chron. iv. 13, it is said, there were four hundred pomegranates for each net-work or wreath. The mode of expression here is different, but amounts to exactly the same. For divide the two pillars into four quarters, according to the four winds; and let ninety-six pomegranates stand opposite to each of the four winds upon the two pillars; the whole number in front of the four winds, taken together, will be three hundred and eighty-four. But they were in four rows, two on each pillar, and in each row must have been four angular pomegranates, that could not be said to be opposite to any of the four winds, consequently, sixteen angular ones in the four rows; which sixteen being added to three hundred and eighty-four, make up the number of pomegranates in all four hundred; that is, a hundred in a row of wreathen work round about.”

Verses 24, 25. And the captain of the guard took Seraiah the chief priest—1 Chron. vi. 14, he was the father of Ezra; Ezra vii. 1. And Zephaniah the second priest—See note on chap. xxix. 26; 2 Kings xxv. 18. And the three keepers of the door—These were not the ordinary porters, who were

A. M. 3416. person, which were found in the city ;
B. C. 598. and the ¹⁵ principal scribe of the host, who mustered the people of the land ; and three-score men of the people of the land, that were found in the midst of the city.

26 So Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard took them, and brought them to the king of Babylon to Riblah.

27 ¶ And the king of Babylon smote them, and put them to death in Riblah in the land of Hamath. Thus Judah was carried away captive out of his own land.

B. C. 600. 28 ¶ ^{}This is the people whom Nebuchadrezzar carried away captive : in the ^{}seventh year [†]three thousand Jews and three and twenty :

¹⁵ Or, scribe of the captain of the host.—[†] 2 Kings xxiv. 2.
^{*} 2 Kings xxiv. 12.—[†] 2 Kings xxiv. 14.

taken from among the Levites, but were priests who stood at the door to receive the offerings of the people, and thus were keepers of the sacred treasury, an office of high trust and consideration : see 2 Kings
xii. 9, and xxiii. 4. He took also out of the city a eunuch—An officer : so it is in the parallel place, 2 Kings xxv. 19, where, instead of seven men, we read five. Josephus agrees with the reading here.
And the principal scribe of the host—The muster-master-general, as we style him, or secretary of war.
And threescore men that were in the midst of the city —Of whom see note on 2 Kings xxv. 19.

Verses 28–30. This is the people whom Nebuchadrezzar carried away captive—“These verses are not inserted in 2 Kings xxv. Nor are they to be found here, according to the Roman and Alexandrian editions of the LXX. ; but in the Complutensian they are, and in two MSS. collated by Dr. Grabe ;
also in Theodotion’s version in the Hexapla. All the other ancient versions acknowledge them ; and they are not omitted in any of the collated Hebrew MSS. ; so that there is no doubt of their being genuine. But are we to conclude from them, that the whole number of the Jews, whom Nebuchadnezzar, in all his expeditions, carried into captivity, was no more than four thousand six hundred ? This cannot be true, for he carried away more than twice that number at one time ; which is expressly said to have been in the eighth year of his reign, 2 Kings xxiv.
12–16. Before that time he had carried off a number of captives from Jerusalem in the first year of his reign, among whom were Daniel and his companions, Dan. i. 3–6. And of these Berosus, the Chaldean historian, speaks, as cited by Josephus, Ant., lib. x. cap. 11. These are confessedly not taken notice of here. And as the taking and burning of Jerusalem are in this very chapter said to have been in the fourth and fifth months of the 19th year of Nebuchadnezzar, those who were carried into captivity, at the date of those events, cannot possibly be

29 ^u In the eighteenth year of Nebu- A. M. 3442 chadrezzar he carried away captive B. C. 590 from Jerusalem eight hundred thirty and two ¹⁶ persons :

30 In the three and twentieth year ^{About} of Nebuchadrezzar, Nebuzar-adan the B. C. 585.
captain of the guard carried away captive of the Jews seven hundred forty and five persons :
all the persons were four thousand and six hundred.

31 ¶ ^{*}And it came to pass in the ^{About} seven and thirtieth year of the capti- B. C. 562.
vity of Jehoiachin king of Judah, in the twelfth month, in the five and twentieth day of the month, that Evil-merodach king of Babylon in the first year of his reign [†]lifted up the ^u Verse 12 ; Chapter xxxix. 9.—¹⁶ Heb. souls.—^{*} 2 Kings

xxv. 27, 28, 29, 30.—[†] Gen. xl. 13, 20.

the same with those that are said to be carried away either in the 18th or 23d year of that prince. Nor indeed is it credible, that the number carried away at the time the city was taken, and the whole country reduced, could be so few as eight hundred and thirty-two. Here then we have three deportations, and those the most considerable ones, in the 1st, the 8th, and 19th years of Nebuchadnezzar, sufficiently distinguished from those in his 7th, 18th, and 23d years. So that it seems most reasonable to conclude, with Archbishop Usher, that by the latter three the historian meant to point out deportations of a lesser kind, not elsewhere noticed in direct terms in Scripture.”—Blancy.

Verses 31, 32. In the seven and thirtieth year of the captivity of Jehoiachin, &c.—This note of time confirms the observation formerly made, namely, that the Scripture computation of the beginning of Nebuchadnezzar’s reign anticipates that of the Babylonians by two years, which two years he reigned with his father : see note on chap. xxv. 1. In the five and twentieth day of the month, Evil-merodach lifted up the head of Jehoiachin—Released him out of prison, where he had lain thirty-seven years, and advanced him. In the parallel place, 2 Kings xxv.
27, where see the notes, we read, the seven and twentieth day of the month, which difference between the two passages, Lowth thinks may be reconciled, by supposing that his advancement was resolved upon the 25th day, but not brought to pass till the 27th. In the first year of his reign—Hebrew, בשנת כילברו, literally, in the year of his reign, or kingdom, that is, the year coincident with the beginning of it, from whence the date is taken. So that the word first is virtually implied in the phrase. Spake kindly unto him, and set his throne above the throne of kings—See 2 Kings xxv. 28–30. This clause may perhaps be more properly rendered, Set his seat above the seat of the kings, which may easily be understood to signify, that the king of Babylon showed

A. M. 3442. head of Jehoiachin king of Judah,
B. C. 562. and brought him forth out of prison.

32 And spake ¹⁷ kindly unto him, and set his throne above the throne of the kings that were with him in Babylon.

33 And changed his prison garments: * and

¹⁷ Heb. good things with him. — * 2 Sam. ix. 13.

him more respect and honour than he did to any of the other captive princes, by placing him nearest to himself: see Esth. iii. 1. "It is probable," says Blaney, "the phrase may have proceeded from the custom of placing cushions for persons of more than ordinary distinction in the place allotted them to sit in." See Harmer, chap. vi. observ. 26.

Verses 33, 34. And changed his prison garments—This has been considered by some an act of generosity in Evil-merodach, giving the captive king new garments, more suitable to his royal dignity than those he wore in prison. But Blaney thinks "it was rather the act of Jehoiachin himself, who, out of respect to the king of Babylon's presence, and to mark his just sense of the favour shown him, no longer neglected his person and dress, as when a prisoner, and in affliction, but put on new apparel more adapt-he did continually eat bread before him all the days of his life. A. M. 3442.

B. C. 562.

34 And for his diet, there was a continual diet given him of the king of Babylon, ¹⁸ every day a portion until the day of his death, all the days of his life.

¹⁸ Heb. the matter of the day in his day.

ed to the change in his circumstances. So Joseph, when he was sent for out of prison to appear before Pharaoh, first shaved himself, and changed his raiment, Gen. xli. 14. David did the same after he had ceased mourning for his child, before he went into the house of God, 2 Sam. xii. 20. Mr. Harmer, (chap. vi. obs. 44, 45,) observes, both that to change the garments often is in the East a mark of respect in visiting; and also that the putting on of new clothes is thought by those people to be very requisite, and indeed almost necessary, for the due solemnization of a time of rejoicing." And there was a continual diet given him of the king—As it appears from the preceding verse that Jehoiachin himself sat at the king of Babylon's own table, this seems to have been an allowance for the maintenance of his attendants and family.

LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAH.

ARGUMENT.

THIS book has no title in the Hebrew, but, like the five books of Moses, takes its name from the first word of it, אֵיכָה, Echah, How. The Jewish commentators, however, entitle it, as the Greeks, Latins, our translators, and others do, Lamentations; an appellation expressive of the subject matter of it, the prophet lamenting in it, and that most pathetically, the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple, the desolation of Judea, and the captivity of God's ancient people. Some indeed, and those men of eminence in literature, have supposed that the death of Josiah is the chief subject of these mournful poems, and that these are the lamentations mentioned 2 Chron. xxxv. 25, as being composed by Jeremiah on that occasion. But, as Blaney justly observes, "whatever is become of those lamentations, these cannot possibly be the same; for their whole tenor, from beginning to end, plainly shows them not to have been composed till the destruction of Jerusalem and its temple, and the depopulation of the country by the transmigration of all its inhabitants; which events are not at all described in the style of prophetic prediction, but are alluded to and bewailed as what had been already fully accomplished. And that this was the most ancient opinion held concerning them, appears from the introductory title prefixed to the Greek version of the LXX., and from thence, probably, transmitted to the Latin Vulgate:" (see note on verse 1 :) but "the internal evidence is sufficient to ascertain both the date and the occasion of these compositions; nor can we admire too much the full and graceful flow of that pathetic eloquence, in which the author pours forth the effusions of a patriotic heart, and piously weeps over the ruins of his venerable country." "Never," says an unquestionable judge of these matters, "was there a more rich and elegant variety of beautiful images and adjuncts arranged together within so small a compass, nor more happily chosen and applied. What can be more elegant and poetical than the image of the city, which was formerly the pride of nations, sitting by herself, absorbed in grief, and a widow; deserted by her friends, betrayed by her relations, stretching out her hands in vain, and finding no one to comfort her? What can be more elegant than the image of the ways of Zion, which are represented as grieving, and demanding the celebration of their solemn festivals? But if we should produce all the beautiful passages, we should be obliged to transcribe the whole poem." See Bishop Lowth, de Sacra Poesi Hebræorum, Prælec. xxii. Indeed, as has been observed, the prophet's peculiar talent lay in working up and expressing the passions of grief and pity; and, unhappily for him, as a man and a citizen, he met with a subject but too well calculated to give his genius its full display.

These Lamentations of Jeremiah are very properly distributed into five chapters, each of them containing a distinct elegy, consisting of twenty-two periods, or stanzas, according to the number of letters in the Hebrew alphabet; although it is in the first four chapters only that the several periods begin, acrostic-wise, with the different letters following each other in alphabetical order. By this contrivance the metre is more precisely marked and ascertained, particularly in the third chapter, where each period contains three verses, which have all the same initial letter. The first two chapters in like manner consist of triplets, excepting only the seventh period of the first, and the nineteenth of the second, which have each a supernumerary line. The fourth chapter resembles the three former in metre, but the periods are only couplets. In the fifth chapter the periods are couplets, but of a considerably shorter measure. See Blaney.

CHAPTER I.

The prophet begins this his first elegy with mourning over the sad change of condition which his country had experienced; at the same time sorrowfully confessing, that all her miseries were of her own procuring; the result of national wickedness and rebellion against God, 1-11. In the midst of the discourse he, on a sudden, withdraws himself from view, and leaves Jerusalem to continue the complaint which she makes, (1,) To friends, entreating their compassionate consideration, 12-17. (2,) To God, justifying his righteous procedure in their affliction, but humbly soliciting, from his divine compassion, that comfort and redress which she found it in vain to look for from any other quarter. 18-22.

A. M. 3416.
B. C. 588.

HOW doth the city sit solitary, that was full of people! ^a how is she become as a widow! she that was great among the nations, and ^b princess among the provinces, how is she become tributary!

2 She ^c weepeth sore in the ^d night, and her

^a Isa. xlvii. 7, 8. — ^b Ezra iv. 20. — ^c Jer. xlii. 17. — ^d Job
vii. 3; Psa. vi. 6. — ^e Verse 19; Psa. cxxxvii. 7; Jer. iv. 30;

NOTES ON CHAPTER I.

Verse 1. How doth the city sit solitary—The short history of the desolations of the Jewish nation, contained in the fifty-second chapter of Jeremiah, formerly stood as a preface to the Lamentations; but, instead of it, the Greek and Latin copies have a short introduction, which may be thus translated: "And it came to pass after that Israel had been carried away captive, and Jerusalem was become desolate, that Jeremiah sat weeping, and lamented with this lamentation over Jerusalem, and said," How, &c. The book being undoubtedly poetical, as a specimen of the kind of poetry which it contains, the reader is here presented with Blaney's translation of the first stanza.

"How does she sit solitary, the city that was full of people! She is become as a widow, that was great among the nations! She that was sovereign over provinces, is become tributary!"

Jerusalem is here represented as a weeping female, sitting solitary on the ground without any attendant or comforter, the multitude of her inhabitants being dispersed or destroyed. It is remarkable, that in times similar to this, that is, in the reign of the Emperor Vespasian, a coin was struck, on which Judea is represented under the image of a woman sitting in tears beneath a palm-tree. How is she become as a widow! &c.—Cities are commonly described as the mothers of their inhabitants, and their kings and princes as their husbands: so, when they are bereaved of these, they are said to be widows and childless. Thus Jerusalem, having lost her king and people, and being forsaken of her God, who was in a peculiar sense a husband to her, is here represented as sitting alone in that pensive melancholy condition. She that was great among the nations, &c.—The kings of Judah, in their flourishing state, extended their conquests over the Philistines, Edomites, and other neighbouring countries; and by thus enlarging their dominions, greatly advanced the power of the metropolis of their kingdom. But now, being under subjection to the king of Babylon, and forced to pay tribute to him, she was made no more account of than any other city under the same yoke: see Calmet and Lowth.

Verse 2. She weepeth sore in the night—In the Hebrew, according to the idiom of that language, it is, Weeping she weepeth, which our old English version renders She weepeth continually. The expression, in the night, is interpreted by some to signify her condition was so unhappy that, though oppressed with calamities, she did not dare to utter her complaints, unless secretly in the night, for fear tears are on her cheeks: ^e among all ^{A. M. 3416.}

her lovers ^f she hath none to comfort ^{B. C. 588.} her: all her friends have dealt treacherously with her, they are become her enemies.

3 ^g Judah is gone into captivity because of affliction, and ^h because of great servitude:

xxx. 14; Ezra xxv. 3-15; Obad. 10-14. — ^f Verses 9, 16, 17, 21. — ^g Jer. lii. 27. — ^h Heb. for the greatness of servitude.

of irritating her enemies. Among all her lovers she hath none to comfort her—Those nations that courted her alliance in the time of her prosperity, or those allies, whose friendship she courted by sinful compliances, have forsaken her in her affliction, and joined with her enemies in insulting over her. "Several of the neighbouring princes sent their ambassadors to Zedekiah, Jer. xxvii. 3, &c., to engage him, as appears from the context, to join them in a confederacy against the power of the king of Babylon. But they not only universally failed, and deserted Judah in the time of need, but most of them turned against her, and took a malignant pleasure in aggravating her misfortunes." See Blaney and the margin.

Verse 3. Judah is gone into captivity because of affliction, &c.—Her miseries have received their finishing stroke in a total captivity among, and bondage to, heathen and infidels, because of the oppression exercised by her rulers and others, and the servitude to which they obliged their subjects and inferiors. This is the interpretation adopted by the Chaldee paraphrast, who represents the Jews as having been carried into captivity, in retaliation of their having oppressed the widows and the fatherless among them, and prolonged illegally the bondage of their brethren who had been sold for slaves. But, as the word לָקַח, here used, does not necessarily signify to go into captivity, but often to remove, or go into exile, whether voluntarily or by compulsion; Blaney thinks that "a voluntary migration of the Jews is here intended, many of whom, previous to the captivity, had left their country, and retired into Egypt and other parts, to avoid the oppressions and servitude that they had reason to apprehend from the Chaldeans, who had invaded, or were about to invade, their land. Either of these senses," however, he observes, "is competent; and the interpretation according to them will be found to suit perfectly with the subsequent members of the period." She findeth no rest—No satisfaction of mind, no settled place of abode, no remission of labour, terror, and suffering; but, deprived of all peace and comfort, is continually exposed to every insult and outrage, and to all manner of oppressions and vexations. All her persecutors—Or pursuers, rather; overtook her between the straits—That is, all her enemies have taken the opportunity of her being in a difficult and distressed condition, to oppress and injure her. The expression is metaphorical, taken from those who hunt their prey, which they are wont to drive into some strait and difficult passage, from whence it cannot escape.

A. M. 3416. ^b she dwelleth among the heathen,
B. C. 588. she findeth no rest: all her persecutors overtook her between the straits.

4 The ways of Zion do mourn, because none come to the solemn feasts: all her gates are desolate: her priests sigh, her virgins are afflicted, and she is in bitterness.

5 Her adversaries ⁱ are the chief, her enemies prosper; for the LORD hath afflicted her ^k for the multitude of her transgressions: her ^l children are gone into captivity before the enemy.

6 And from the daughter of Zion all her beauty is departed: her princes are become like harts that find no pasture, and they ^{A. M. 3416.} are gone without strength before the ^{B. C. 588.} pursuer.

7 Jerusalem remembered in the days of her affliction and of her miseries all her ² pleasant things that she had in the days of old, when her people fell into the hand of the enemy, and none did help her: the adversaries saw her, and did mock at her sabbaths.

8 ^m Jerusalem hath grievously sinned; therefore she ³ is removed: all that honoured her despise her, because ⁿ they have seen her nakedness: yea, she sigheth, and turneth backward.

^b Deut. xxviii. 64, 65; Chap. ii. 9.—ⁱ Deut. xxviii. 43, 44.
^k Jer. xxx. 14, 15; Daniel ix. 7, 16.—^l Jer. lii. 28.—³ Or, desirable, Verse 10.

^m 1 Kings viii. 46.—³ Hebrew, is become a removing, or, wandering.—ⁿ Jeremiah xiii. 22, 26; Ezekiel xvi. 37; xxiii. 29; Hosea ii. 10.

Verses 4-6. The ways of Zion do mourn—The highways leading to Zion, which used to be thronged with people going to the solemn feasts before the Lord, now, as it were, mourned on account of no persons travelling in them for that purpose. All her gates are desolate—The gates of Jerusalem, or of the temple: few or none passing through them, the city and country being depopulated; and there are no longer any courts of judicature, or assemblies of people, held in her gates. Her priests sigh—Because no victims, or other oblations, are offered, the temple and altar being destroyed. Her virgins are afflicted—Her calamities afflict the young as well as the old, and persons of all ages and ranks are in bitterness. Her adversaries are the chief—Her enemies have got the advantage over her, and she is become their vassal. This was a judgment that Moses threatened to them if they proved disobedient, Deut. xxviii. 43; namely, that their enemies should be the head, and they the tail. For the Lord hath afflicted her—Hath fulfilled his threatenings, denounced in case of disobedience. For the multitude of her transgressions—The procuring, provoking cause of all her calamities: for whoever may be made the instruments, God is the author of all these troubles: it is the Lord that has afflicted her, and he has done it as a righteous judge, because of her transgressions, which have been very many as well as very great. Hence her children, her inhabitants, are gone into captivity before the enemy—Are forced into slavery by the Chaldeans, as cattle are driven in herds by them that sell them. And from the daughter of Zion all her beauty is departed—All the glory of God's sanctuary, and the comely order of his worship, and all the beauty of holiness. Her princes are like harts, &c.—That upon the first alarm betake themselves to flight, and make no resistance: they are become dispirited, have lost their courage, given way and fled before their enemies.

Verse 7. Jerusalem remembered in her affliction and misery. The word מַיִרִיחַ, here rendered misery, frequently signifies banishment and captivity. The LXX. render it ἀποστροφῶν, rejections, or expulsions; all her pleasant things—All her former riches and glory, and the various benefits she enjoyed from God's favour and protection, particularly the honour and happiness of having his peculiar presence in the temple, and among his people, and the manifestation he gave of his will by the prophets. Nothing is more natural than for persons, who have fallen into adversity, to recollect the advantages they had formerly possessed, and to feel an aggravation of their sufferings in proportion to the greatness of the contrast. The adversaries saw her, and did mock at her sabbaths—Not considering the excellent uses those days were designed for; namely, to give men a proper degree of relaxation from labour; leisure to attend upon the service of God, and learn the duties of religion; and to celebrate the creation of the world, that wonderful effect of infinite wisdom, power, and goodness, which can never be sufficiently extolled. The heathen writers, it must be observed, commonly ridicule the Jews' celebration of their sabbaths as a mark of their sloth and idleness.

Verses 8, 9. Jerusalem hath grievously sinned—Hebrew, חָטְאָה חַטָּאָה, in sinning hath sinned, or hath sinned sin: that is, sinned wilfully and deliberately; hath sinned that sin which of all others is the abominable thing which the Lord hates, the sin of idolatry. The sins of Jerusalem, which makes such a profession of worshipping and serving the true God, and therefore of obeying his will, and enjoys such privileges, are of all others the most grievous sins. Therefore she is removed—The greatest part of her inhabitants are either carried away captive to Babylon, or are fled for refuge and safety to some of the neighbouring nations. Blaney translates this clause, Therefore hath she been as one set apart for unclean, instead of לְנִידָה, a word that occurs nowhere else, reading לְנִידָה, after nineteen MSS., which signifies a woman in her state of separation. All that honoured her, despise her—She hath made herself vile, and therefore is justly vilified. Because they have seen her nakedness—Have seen her deprived of all her

A. M. 3416. 9 Her filthiness is in her skirts; she
B. C. 589. ° remembereth not her last end; therefore she came down wonderfully: ° she had no comforter. O LORD, behold my affliction: for the enemy hath magnified himself.

10 The adversary hath spread out his hand upon ° all her ° pleasant things: for she hath seen that ° the heathen entered into her sanctuary, whom thou didst command that ° they should not enter into thy congregation.

11 All her people sigh, ° they seek bread; they ° Deuteronomy xxxii. 29; Isaiah xlvii. 7.—° Verses 2, 17, 21.—° Verse 7.—° Or, desirable.—° Jer. li. 51.—° Deut.

xxiii. 3; Neh. xiii. 1.

strength and glory. As she had defiled herself with idolatry, (called spiritual adultery in Scripture,) so God has ordered her to be exposed to shame like a common harlot. Yea, she sightheth and turneth backward—As ashamed to be seen in such a despicable condition, destitute of all those things which constituted her former glory. Her filthiness is in her skirts—She carries the marks of her sins in the greatness of her punishments. She remembereth not her last end—Reflects not on what is still further coming upon her. “The plain meaning of this,” says Blaney, “taken out of metaphor, seems to be,
that although evident marks of her pollution appeared about her, and the land was defiled by her sinfulness, even to its utmost borders, she had no thought or consideration of what must be the consequence of all this at the last.” Therefore she came down wonderfully—She was brought low, and humbled in an extraordinary manner having sinned grievously, verse 8, she was degraded and punished wonderfully. Observe, reader, grievous sins bring wondrous ruin; there are some workers of iniquity for whom is prepared a strange and uncommon punishment.

Verse 10, 11. The adversary hath—Or rather,
did, spread his hand upon all her pleasant things —Hebrew, כחכררה, her desirable things, namely, her riches, and what else she most desired to preserve. She hath seen the heathen entered into her sanctuary, &c.—She saw heathen nations, whom thou hadst forbidden even to be admitted into thy congregation, (as being uncircumcised,) enter into the sanctuary farther than ever her own people themselves were permitted to go. The Chaldeans entered into the inmost part of the sanctuary, even into the holy of holies, into which none of the Jews, except the high-priest, were ever allowed to enter. All her people sigh, they seek bread—He probably refers to the time of the invasion of the country by the Chal-deans, and the siege of Jerusalem, when the whole body of the people were in a sad condition, and, in a land that ordinarily flowed with milk and honey, were at a loss for bread to eat. They have given their pleasant things for meat to relieve the soul—
They have parted with their riches and all their desirable things to purchase bread to sustain their lives.
See, O Lord, and consider—This is a prayer of Je-have given their pleasant things for A. M. 3416 meat ° to relieve the soul: see, O LORD, B. C. 589. and consider; for I am become vile.

12 ¶ ° Is it nothing to you, all ye that ° pass by? behold, and see ° if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow, which is done unto me, wherewith the LORD hath afflicted me in the day of his fierce anger.

13 From above hath he sent fire into my bones, and it prevaieth against them: he hath ° spread a net for my feet, he hath turned me

° Jer. xxxviii. 9; lii. 6; Chap. ii. 12; iv. 4.—° Or, to make the soul to come again.—° Or, it is nothing.—° Heb. pass by the way.—° Dan. ix. 12.—° Ezek. xii. 13; xvii. 20.

rusalem to God for relief; for I am become vile—
That is, miserable and contemptible.

Verse 12. Is it nothing to you? &c.—The Vulgate reads this clause without an interrogation, thus:
*Ovos omnes qui transit per viam attendite, videte,
&c. O all ye, who pass by the way, observe, see,
&c.* Lowth also and Blaney prefer reading it in a similar way; the former thus: O all ye that pass by; or, O! I appeal to all you that pass by: and the latter, O that among you, all ye that pass by the way, ye would look and see, &c. Our translation, however, is more agreeable to the Hebrew, and certainly more expressive and emphatical. The prophet speaks in the name of Jerusalem, or of the Jewish Church, still represented as a woman in misery, sitting by the way-side, and calling to travellers that passed by to have compassion on her, suggesting to them that hers was no ordinary affliction, nor the visitation of a common and ordinary providence, but the effect of the Lord's fierce anger, a most severe though just chastisement. The intention of the passage is to show that the calamities brought on the Jews, as the punishment of their idolatries and other crimes, ought to be observed and maturely considered by people of all nations, that from their miseries they might learn how dangerous it was to provoke the God of Israel by such practices; which he would not overlook in any people, not even in those that stood in the nearest relation to him, but would assuredly punish them: and to signify to the Babylonians themselves in what danger they stood by despising and setting at naught this only living and true God. But the prophet does not address them by name, nor speak more pointedly, lest he should irritate them still more against his already too miserable countrymen. “These words are often quoted in speaking of our Lord's sufferings, and they are capable of a striking accommodation thereto:
but it should be recollected that this is only an accommodation, and not the real meaning of the sacred writer.”—Mr. Scott: who adds, “The address is so exquisitely pathetic, that no comment can possibly do justice to it.”

Verses 13–16. From above hath he sent fire into my bones—Calamities as consuming and as afflictive as fire in the bones. He hath spread a net for my feet

A. M. 3416. back: he hath made me desolate
B. C. 588. and faint all the day.

14 ^y The yoke of my transgressions is bound by his hand: they are wreathed, and come up upon my neck: he hath made my strength to fall, the LORD hath delivered me into their hands, from whom I am not able to rise up.

15 The LORD hath trodden under foot all my mighty men in the midst of me: he hath called an assembly against me to crush my young men: ^z the LORD hath trodden ⁸ the virgin, the daughter of Judah, as in a wine-press.

16 For these things I weep; ^a mine eye, mine eye runneth down with water, because ^b the comforter that should ⁹ relieve my soul A. M. 3416 is far from me: my children are deso- B. C. 588.

late, because the enemy prevailed.

17 ^o Zion spreadeth forth her hands, and ^d there is none to comfort her: the LORD hath commanded concerning Jacob, that his adversaries should be round about him: Jerusalem is as a menstruous woman among them.

18 ¶ The LORD is ^e righteous; for I have ^f rebelled against his ¹⁰ commandment: hear, I pray you, all people, and behold my sorrow: my virgins and my young men are gone into captivity.^g

19 I called for my lovers, but ^h they deceived

^y Deut. xxviii. 48.—^z Isa. lxiii. 3; Rev. xiv. 19, 20; xix. 15.
^o Or, the wine-press of the virgin, &c.,—^a Jer. xiii. 17; xiv. 17;
Chap. ii. 18.—^b Verses 2, 9.

⁹ Heb. bring back.—^c Jer. iv. 31.—^d Ver. 2, 9.—^e Neh. ix. 33; Dan. ix. 7, 14.—^f 1 Sam. xii. 14, 15.—¹⁰ Heb. mouth.
^g Verse 2; Jer. xxx. 14.

—Hath brought me into a most miserable condition, in which I am so entangled that I cannot extricate myself nor escape from it. Thus the prophet teaches Jerusalem to look beyond the Babylonians, and to see the sin-avenging hand of God in her sufferings. As if he had said, It is God himself that hath sent these evils upon me; he hath stirred up my enemies against me, and they are no more than the rod of his anger. The yoke of my transgressions is bound by his hand, &c.—He has, as it were, gathered my iniquities and the iniquities of my people together, and made a yoke of them to put upon me, so that I am weighed down by them, and by the judgments inflicted on account of them. They are wreathed, and come up upon my neck—My punishments are twisted with my sins as cords to make them strong: I have a complication of judgments upon me, sword, famine, pestilence, captivity; and they are not only prepared for my neck, but are already put upon it. He hath made my strength to fall, &c.—All my valiant men, the strength of my nation, is broken, and I am so fallen that I am not able to rise again. The Lord hath trodden under foot all my mighty men, &c.—The destruction which is made by war is frequently expressed by treading under foot: see note on Jer. l. 26. He hath called an assembly against me to crush, &c.—Instead of those solemn assemblies that were wont to be called together in the midst of me by the sound of trumpet, to celebrate my solemn feasts, God hath called an assembly of Chaldeans to lay me in ruins, and crush my people. The Lord hath trodden the daughter of Judah as in a wine-press—That people, which was formerly chosen by Jehovah, and secured against all violent attempts by his immediate and almighty protection, he has now given up to the fury of their enemies, to afflict them with such severity that their blood has been shed in the streets of Jerusalem as wine from the wine-press. For these things I weep, &c.—For these sore afflictions, and for my sins which have caused them, and for these tokens of divine wrath which I see in them I weep so plentifully, and am in such distress, that mine eye runneth down with water, because the comforter that should relieve my soul—Namely, God; is far from me—Hath withdrawn himself, is departed from me in displeasure, and beholds me afar off. My children are desolate—The other cities of Judah, under Jerusalem, the mother city, or my people, are wasted, destroyed, and made desolate, because the enemy hath prevailed—And effected his purpose.

Verse 17. Zion spreadeth forth her hands—She extendeth her hands as a suppliant praying for relief and consolation. And there is none to comfort her—None who can, or are even inclined to do it. The Lord hath commanded, &c.—That is, it came to pass by God's command, that the surrounding nations were the adversaries of Jacob. We meet with a similar form of expression Psa. lxviii. 11, The Lord gave the word, great was the company of those that published it. Jerusalem is as a menstruous woman—She is become loathsome and filthy in the eyes of her former friends, like women separated from the congregation in the time of their legal uncleanness.

Verses 18, 19. The Lord is righteous, for I have rebelled, &c.—He does me no wrong in dealing thus with me, nor can I charge him with any injustice. Observe, reader, whatever the troubles are which God is pleased to inflict upon us, we must own that in them he is righteous: we neither know him nor ourselves, if we do not acknowledge this. Jerusalem owns the equity of God's actions by confessing the iniquity of her own. Hear, I pray you, all people—See note on verse 12. My virgins and my young men are gone into captivity—Thus it is said, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 17, that the Chaldeans had “no compassion upon young men or maidens.” I called for my lovers, but they deceived me—They proved like the brooks in summer to the thirsty traveller, Job vi. 15. The Egyptians and her other allies are intended, who made court to her in her prosperity, and promised her assistance, but in the day of her adversity and necessity were alienated from her, and

A. M. 3416. me: my priests and mine elders gave
B. C. 588. up the ghost in the city, ^b while they sought their meat to relieve their souls.

20 Behold, O LORD; for I am in distress:
my ⁱ bowels are troubled; my heart is turned within me; for I have grievously rebelled: ^k abroad the sword bereaveth, at home there is as death.

21 They have heard that I sigh: ^l there is

^b Ver. 11.—ⁱ Job xxx. 27; Isa. xvi. 11; Jer. iv. 19; xlviii. 36; Chap. ii 11; Hos. xi. 8.—^k Deut. xxxii. 25; Ezek. vii. 15.

cast her off. Thus we are commonly deceived and disappointed in those creatures that we set our hearts upon, and put our trust in. Happy they that have made God their friend, and keep themselves in his love, for he will not deceive them! My priests and mine elders gave up the ghost in the city—The famine hath consumed the most honourable as well as the meaner people. While they sought their meat to relieve their souls—While they went about seeking for bread to keep them alive. The LXX. add, καὶ ἐξ εὐπορίας, and found none, with whom the Syriac agrees. But no such words appear in the Hebrew copies, although the thing is implied, for they would not have died if they had found what they sought.

Verse 20. Behold, O Lord, for I am in distress—Take cognizance of my case, and use such means for my relief as thou pleasest. It is a matter of comfort to us, that the troubles which oppress our spirits are perfectly known to God, and that his eye is continually upon them. Abroad the sword bereaveth, at home there is as death—Thus was Moses's prediction, Deut. xxxii. 25, fulfilled, The sword without, and terror within, shall destroy both the young man and the virgin, the suckling also, with the man of gray hairs. Virgil describes a similar scene, when he says,

“————— Crudelis ubique

Luctus, ubique pavor, et plurima mortis imago.”

ÆN. ii. 368.

“All parts resound with tumults, complaints, and fears;
And grisly death in sundry shapes appears.”

DRYDEN.

By death, in this clause, the pestilence is meant, as in Jer. xv. 2, where see the note: death acting, as it were, in propria persona, in its own proper person, and not by the instrumentality of another, as when a person is slain by the sword. So our great poet, in his description of a lazar-house,

“————— Despair

”Tended the sick, busiest from couch to couch;

none to comfort me: all mine ene- A. M. 3416.
mies have heard of my trouble; they B. C. 588.
are glad that thou hast done it: thou wilt bring ^m the day that thou hast ⁿ called, and they shall be like unto me.

22 ⁿ Let all their wickedness come before thee;
and do unto them^r as thou hast done unto me for all my transgressions: for my sighs are many, and ^o my heart is faint.

^l Verse 2.—^m Isaiah xliii., &c.; Jer. xlv. &c.—ⁿ Or, pro claimed.—^a Psal. cix. 15.—^o Chap. v. 17.

And over them triumphant death his dart Shook —————.”

PARADISE LOST, book xi. l. 489, &c.

Instead of, At home there is as death, Lowth proposes reading, there is certain death, observing, that the particle of similitude in the Scriptures sometimes implies a strong affirmation, as John i. 14, We beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, meaning such a glory as could belong to none but the Son of God.

Verses 21, 22. They have heard that I sigh—The nations contiguous to me, Egypt and others, that before pretended to be my friends and allies, have been no strangers to my bitter afflictions, which have forced sighs from me; but there is none to comfort me—None of them can or will relieve my distress, but abandon me as in a desperate situation. They are glad that thou hast done it—They have even expressed gladness at the calamities that have befallen me; and they please themselves with the thought that thou our God, of whose favour and protection we used to boast, shouldst forsake us, and give us up as a prey to our enemies. Thou wilt bring the day that thou hast called, &c.—The day when thou wilt execute thy judgments upon the Babylonians, and our other enemies and false friends, will certainly come at the time thou hast determined for that purpose. “We have here again the like turn of phrase as in the first line of this period; for the meaning evidently is, that the enemies of Jerusalem would in the end find little cause for their triumph, since the same Almighty Being, who had caused her evil day to come, had declared that, after a while, they should also suffer the like fate. Thou that hast brought the day [of adversity upon me] hast pronounced, that they shall become even as I”—Blaney. Let all their wickedness come before thee—Let it appear that though thou hast chastened us for our sins, our enemies have still greater ones to answer and be punished for.

CHAPTER II.

In this chapter the prophet proceeds in giving a melancholy detail of the dire effects of the divine anger, in the subversion of both the civil and religious constitution of the Jews, and in that extreme wretchedness and distress, to which individuals of every denomination were thereby reduced, 1–9. He represents the elders, the virgins, and other inhabitants of Jerusalem, as lamenting over the unparalleled miseries of their country, and charges her prophets with having betrayed her into ruin by their false and flattering suggestions, 10-14. He describes the astonishment of passengers on viewing the desolated condition of Jerusalem, 15-17. They call out to her to implore God's compassion for the removal of those heavy judgments, which, in the height of his displeasure, he had brought upon her, 18, 19. Her manifold miseries are referred to the compassion and consideration of God, 20-22.

A. M. 3416.
B. C. 588.

HOW hath the LORD covered the daughter of Zion with a cloud in his anger, ^a and cast down from heaven unto the earth ^b the beauty of Israel, and remembered not ^c his footstool in the day of his anger!

2 The LORD hath swallowed up all the habitations of Jacob, ^d and hath not pitied: he hath thrown down in his wrath the strong holds of the daughter of Judah; he hath ^e brought them down to the ground: ^f he hath polluted the kingdom and the princes thereof.

3 He hath cut off in his fierce anger all the horn of Israel: ^g he hath drawn back his right hand from before the enemy, ^h and he burned against Jacob like a flaming fire, which devour-eth round about.

^a Matt. xi. 23.—^b 2 Sam. i. 19.—^c 1 Chronicles xxviii. 2; Psalm xcix. 5; cxxxii. 7.—^d Verses 17, 21; Chapter iii. 43.
^e Heb. made to touch.—^f Psal. lxxxix. 39.—^g Psal. lxxiv. 11.
^h Psal. lxxxix. 46.

NOTES ON CHAPTER II.

Verse 1. How hath the Lord covered the daughter of Zion with a cloud—Changed her condition for the worse, and turned the light of her prosperity into the darkness of adversity. And cast down, &c., the beauty of Israel—The temple and all its glory. And remembered not his footstool in the day of his anger—Hath not spared even the ark itself, the footstool of the shekinah, or divine glory, which was wont to appear, sitting, as it were, enthroned upon the mercy-seat, between the cherubim: see the margin.

Verses 2-4. The Lord hath swallowed up the habitations, &c.—Without showing any pity or concern for them. He hath thrown down the strong holds, &c.—Hath suffered the enemies to batter down their fortifications to the ground. He hath polluted the kingdom, &c.—"He hath shown no regard for the kingdom which himself had settled upon the family of David, but involved the royal family in one common destruction with the rest of the people. The expression is much the same with that of Psal. lxxxix. 39, Thou hast profaned his crown by casting it to the ground."—Lowth. He hath cut off, &c., all the horn of Israel—Namely, their strength and glory, and especially their kingly dignity. He hath drawn back his right hand, &c.—He hath withdrawn his wonted assistance, and given us up into the hands of our enemies. Or, as Blaney rather thinks, the right hand of Israel may be here intended, namely, his exertions of strength represented as rendered ineffectual by God, or turned away from obstructing the progress of the enemy; "just as God says, Jer. xxi. 4, that he would turn as an adversary, and slew ²all ¹that were pleasant to the eye in the tabernacle of the daughter of Zion: he poured out his fury like fire.

4 ^h He hath bent his bow like an ^{A. M. 3416.} enemy: he stood with his right hand ^{B. C. 588.}

5 ^k The LORD was as an enemy: he hath swallowed up Israel, ¹ he hath swallowed up all her palaces: he hath destroyed his strong holds, and hath increased in the daughter of Judah mourning and lamentation.

6 And he hath violently ^m taken away his ³ tabernacle, ⁿ as if it were of a garden: he hath destroyed his places of the assembly: ^o the LORD hath caused the solemn feasts and sabbaths to be forgotten in Zion, and hath de-

^h Isa. lxiii. 10; Verse 5.—^a Heb. all the desirable of the eye.
ⁱ Ezek. xxiv. 25.—^k Verse 4; Jeremiah xxx. 14.—² Kings xxv. 9; Jer. lii. 13.—^m Psalm lxxx. 12; lxxxix. 40; Isa. v. 5.
³ Or, hedge.—ⁿ Isa. i. 8.—^o Chap. i. 4; Zeph. iii. 18.

aside the weapons of war that were in the hands of the Jews, so as to prevent their hindering the Chaldean army from entering the city." He burned against Jacob round about—God hath consumed them, not on this or that part merely, but everywhere, as a fire which seizes a house, or a heap of combustible matter, on all sides at once. He hath bent his bow like an enemy, &c.—God, whom by their sins they had provoked, and made their enemy, behaved himself as such toward them, bending his bow, as it were, and stretching out his right hand to destroy them. And slew all that were pleasant to the eye—The chief in worth and dignity; those who were in the flower of their age, the joy and delight of their parents. He poured out his fury like fire—Which devours all before it, without any discrimination.

Verses 6, 7. He hath violently taken away his tabernacle as of a garden—The Vulgate reads, dissipavit, quasi hortum, tentorium suum; he hath dissolved, broke in pieces, scattered, or laid waste, his tent as a garden. Thus also Houbigant: that is, he hath destroyed the temple, the place of his residence, and of our religious assemblies, as if it had been no better than a tent or cottage set up in a garden, or vineyard, just while the fruit was gathering, and then to be taken down again. This interpretation of the original text, which is, וַיִּסָּח כֶּן שָׁכֵן, supposes שָׁכֵן to be written for כֶּן, words exactly alike in sound, though not always in sense, and frequently put the one for the other. But, as the former, from שָׁךְ, to hedge, originally signifies his hedge, many think the most proper rendering of the Hebrew, and the true sense of the passage is, as in the

A. M. 3416. spised in the indignation of his anger
B. C. 588. the king and the priest.

7 The LORD hath cast off his altar, he hath abhorred his sanctuary, he hath ⁴ given up into the hand of the enemy the walls of her palaces; ² they have made a noise in the house of the LORD, as in the day of a solemn feast.

8 The LORD hath purposed to destroy the wall of the daughter of Zion: ¹ he hath stretched out a line, he hath not withdrawn his hand from ⁵ destroying: therefore he made the rampart and the wall to lament; they languished together.

9 Her gates are sunk into the ground; he hath destroyed and ¹ broken her bars: ² her king and her princes are among the Gentiles: ³ the law is no more: her ⁴ prophets also find no vision from the LORD.

⁴ Heb. shut up.—² Psa. lxxiv. 4.—³ 2 Kings xxi. 13; Isa. xxxiv. 11.—⁵ Heb. swallowing up.—¹ Jer. li. 30.—² Deut. xxviii. 36; 2 Kings xxiv. 15; xxv. 7; Chapter i. 3; iv. 20. ¹ 2 Chron. xv. 3.—² Psa. lxxiv. 9; Ezek. vii. 26.

margin, He hath taken away his hedge as of a garden; that is, he hath withdrawn his protection, and left us exposed to the mercy of our enemies. He hath destroyed his places of the assembly—This translation, as also that of the Vulgate, understands this as a repetition of the former clause; but, as sixty MSS. and one edition, instead of נִקְרָא, read מִקְרָא at large, Blaney takes the congregation of Jehovah to be intended, rather than the place of their assembly, and renders the words, He hath destroyed his congregation, namely, the people of Israel, the vineyard, which he had heretofore kept under his special protection. The Lord hath caused the solemn feasts, &c., to be forgotten—Or rather, as שָׁכַח is more properly rendered, hath forgotten the solemn feasts, &c., that is, “holds those services no longer in esteem, but slights and disregards them:” compare Isa. i. 14, 15. And hath despised the king and the priest—Hath shown no regard for either of those honourable offices, but hath suffered the kingdom to be destroyed, and the temple to be laid waste. He hath abhorred his sanctuary—It had been defiled with sin, that only thing which he hates, and for the sake of that he hath abhorred it, though he had formerly delighted in, and called it his rest for ever, Psa. cxxxii. 14. They have made a noise in the house of the Lord, &c.—“Instead of the joyful sound of praises and thanksgivings to God, such as used to be solemnly performed in the temple at the public festivals, there was nothing to be heard there but the noise of soldiers, and the rudeness of infidels, profaning that sacred place, and insulting the true God, who was worshipped there: compare Psalm lxxiv. 4.”—Lowth.

Verses 8, 9. The Lord hath purposed to destroy the wall of Zion—The word wall is here to be taken in a metaphorical sense, for the strength and secu-

10 The elders of the daughter of A. M. 3416.
Zion ¹ sit upon the ground, and keep B. C. 588.

silence; they have ² cast up dust upon their heads: they have ³ girded themselves with sackcloth: the virgins of Jerusalem hang down their heads to the ground.

11 ¹ Mine eyes do fail with tears, ² my bowels are troubled, ³ my liver is poured upon the earth, for the destruction of the daughter of my people; because ⁴ the children and the sucklings ⁵ swoon in the streets of the city.

12 They say to their mothers, Where is corn and wine? when they swooned as the wounded in the streets of the city, when their soul was poured out into their mother's bosom.

13 What thing shall I take to witness for thee? ¹ what thing shall I liken to thee, O daughter of Jerusalem? What shall I equal to rity of the city. He hath stretched out a line, &c.—Called emphatically, Isa. xxxiv. 11, קוֹ תָרוּ, the line of confusion or devastation, being designed to mark out the extent of what was to be pulled down. For the instruments designed for building are in some places applied to destroying, because men sometimes mark out those buildings they intend to demolish. Thus, 2 Kings xxi. 13, God says, I will stretch over Jerusalem the line of Samaria, and the plummet of the house of Ahab: see likewise Amos vii. 7, 8. Therefore he made the rampart, &c., to lament—Made their walls and ramparts feeble, ready to shake like a man under some languishing distemper, who had no strength left. Her gates are sunk into the ground, &c.—The gates of Jerusalem are destroyed and covered over with rubbish, and the bolts of the gates are broken. Her king and her princes are among the Gentiles—Zedekiah and the nobles of Judah, who were not slain, are in a state of miserable captivity. The law is no more—It is no longer read and expounded; the priests and the Levites, whose office it is to instruct the people, being dispersed among the heathen; and that part of the law which respects the public worship of God, being rendered impracticable by the temple's being destroyed. Her prophets also find no vision from the Lord—The prophets are either dead, or in a state of captivity, and these latter are not favoured with divine revelations as they were wont to be, and so cannot resolve the doubts of those who come to them for advice.

¹ Job ii. 13; Isa. iii. 26; Ch. iii. 28.—² Job ii. 12.—³ Isa. xv. 3; Ezek. vii. 18; xxvii. 31.—⁴ Psa. vi. 7; Chap. iii. 48. ⁵ Chap. i. 20.—⁶ Job xvi. 13; Psalm xxii. 14.—⁷ Verse 19; Chap. iv. 4.—⁸ Or, faint.—⁹ Chap. i. 12; Dan. ix. 12.

Verses 10–13. The elders, &c., sit upon the ground, and keep silence—These and the other expressions of this and the two following verses betoken the deepest mourning and sorrow. Mine eyes do fail with tears—My sight is become dim with weeping. My bowels are troubled—As they were when he foresaw

A. M. 3416. thee, that I may comfort thee, O virgin daughter of Zion? for thy breach is great like the sea: who can heal thee?

14 Thy prophets have seen vain and foolish things for thee: and they have not discovered thine iniquity, to turn away thy captivity; but have seen for thee false burdens and causes of banishment.

15 All that pass by, clap their hands at thee; they hiss and wag their head at the daughter of Jerusalem, saying, Is this the city these calamities coming, Jer. iv. 19, 20. My liver is poured upon the earth—My vitals seem to be dissolved, and have lost all their strength. "That the mental passions," says Blaney, "have a considerable influence upon the habit of the body in various instances, is a fact not to be questioned. And experience daily shows, that a violent uneasiness of mind tends greatly to promote a redundancy and overflowing of vitiated bile. The liver is the proper seat of the bile, where its secretions are carried on. Hence the prophet's meaning in this place seems to be, that he felt as if his whole liver was dissolved and carried off in bile, on account of the copious discharge brought on by continual vexation and fretting. Job expresses the same thing, chap. xvi. 13, where he says, He poureth out my gall upon the ground." Because the children and sucklings swoon in the streets—For want of sustenance. As the wounded—As those who are not presently despatched, but die a lingering death. What thing shall I take to witness for thee?—What instance can I bring of any calamity like thine, that such an example may be some mitigation of thy complaints. For thy breach is great, like the sea, &c.—The breach made in thee is like the breaking in of the sea that overflows a whole country, where no stop can be put to the inundation.

^a Jer. ii. 8; v. 31; xiv. 14; xxiii. 16; xxvii. 14; xxix. 8, 9; Ezek. xiii. 2.—^s Isa. lviii. 1.—^h 1 Kings ix. 8; Jer. xviii. 16; Nah. iii. 19.—⁷ Heb. by the way.—ⁱ Ezek. xxv. 6.

Verse 14. Thy prophets have seen vain and foolish things—The prophets, to whom thou didst choose to hearken, and whom thou didst believe, rather than those whom God sent to reveal his will, came and told thee idle tales, the fancies of their own minds, deluding thee with hopes of not being carried into captivity, or of a speedy return therefrom. They have not discovered thine iniquity, &c.—They have not given thy people a just sense of their iniquities, in order that, by being humbled and brought to true repentance, they might avert God's judgments, but they have rather flattered them in their sins, and thereby have hastened on their ruin: see the margin. But have seen for thee false burdens—They have amused thee with false and fallacious prophecies, and that even after, as well as before, they were carried into captivity; (see Jer. xxix. 8, &c.) and causes of banishment—Hebrew, כְּדֹחַ, of casting out, of expulsion, as the word properly signifies:

that men call ¹The Perfection of beauty, The Joy of the whole earth? ^{A. M. 3416. B. C. 588.}

16 All thine enemies have opened their mouth against thee: they hiss and gnash the teeth: they say, We have swallowed her up: certainly this is the day that we looked for; we have found, we have seen it.

17 The Lord hath done that which he had devised; he hath fulfilled his word that he had commanded in the days of old: he hath thrown down, and hath not pitied: and he hath that is, their pretended revelations, promising peace, and giving hopes of impunity to thy people continuing in sin, were so far from profiting thee, that they were in a great measure the causes of thy captivity. Why prophecies are termed מְשָׁאוֹת, burdens, see notes on Isa. xiii. 1, and Jer. xxiii. 33.

^k 2 Kings xix. 21; Psalm xlv. 14.—¹ Psalm xlviii. 2; 1. 2. ^m Job xvi. 9, 10; Ps. xxii. 13; Chap. iii. 46.—ⁿ Ps. lvi. 2. ^o Ps. xxxv. 21.—^p Lev. xxvi. 16; Deut. xxviii. 15.—^q Ver. 2.

Verse 15. All that pass by clap their hands at thee; they hiss, &c.—These were gestures of derision, whereby the enemies of the Jews expressed a satisfaction in their calamities; saying, Is this the city that men call The Perfection of beauty—Or, perfect in beauty, as Blaney renders כְּלִילֵת יָפִי; The Joy of the whole earth—Such was the light in which the Jews had viewed Jerusalem, and such was the language in which they had been wont to speak of it. And it was at least a pardonable partiality in them, which led them to pass these encomiums upon it, and to suppose that all strangers would be equally delighted with its beauty as they themselves were. It was the metropolis of their nation, and the city their God had chosen to put his name there. There was his magnificent temple, and there the symbols of his divine presence, and the administration of the ordinances of his worship. Thither the whole nation resorted, according to his appointment, to celebrate their solemn feasts: and there those feasts were observed with all the magnificence of religious joy. It is no wonder, therefore, that they esteemed it the perfection of beauty, and a place in which the whole earth ought to delight.

Verses 16, 17. All thine enemies have opened their mouths against thee—As if they were ready to devour thee: see the margin. Or they have opened them in scoffs, reproaches, and insults. They hiss and gnash their teeth—In scorn and derision. They say, We have swallowed her up—Namely, Jerusalem. They triumph in their success against her, and in the rich prey they have got in making themselves masters of her. Certainly, this is the day we have looked for—Which we have expected and longed to see. Thus the enemies of the church are apt to take its disasters for its ruin, and to triumph in them accordingly; but they will find themselves deceived, for the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. The Lord hath done that which he had devised—Our destroyers could have had no

A. M. 3416. caused thine enemy to ^rrejoice over thee, he hath set up the horn of thine adversaries.

18 Their heart cried unto the LORD, O ^awall of the daughter of Zion, ^tlet tears run down like a river day and night: give thyself no rest; let not the apple of thine eye cease.

19 Arise, ^acry out in the night: in the beginning of the watches ^xpour out thy heart like water before the face of the LORD: lift up thy hands toward him for the life of thy young children, ^ythat faint for hunger ^zin the top of every street.

20 ¶ Behold, O LORD, and consider to whom

^r Psalm xxxviii. 16; lxxxix. 42.—^a Verse 8.—^t Jeremiah xiv. 17; Chapter i. 16.—^x Psalm cxix. 147.—^y Psalm lxii. 8.—^z Verse 11.—^z Isaiah li. 20; Chapter iv. 1; Nahum iii. 10.

power against us, unless it had been given them from above: they were but the sword in God's hand. And he hath not surprised us by these providences: he gave us notice before hand what he would do if we were disobedient, and he hath done no more than what he threatened long since. He hath fulfilled his word which he had commanded—Hath verified and made good his declarations uttered in days of old—Namely, by Moses, Lev. xxvi. 16–31; Deut. xxviii. 15–49. He hath set up the horn of thine adversaries—Hath advanced their power and glory.

Verses 18, 19. Their heart cried unto the Lord—"The same," says Blaney, "are the speakers here who are said to have made the foregoing remarks concerning the distressed condition of Jerusalem, namely, the passengers, (verse 15,) whose hearts, being deeply affected with what they saw, urged them to break forth into the following passionate exclamation, addressed to the daughter of Zion." O wall of the daughter of Zion—The Vulgate reads the verse, Clamavit cor eorum ad Dominum, super muros filice Sion, Deduc quasi torrentem lacrymas per diem et noctem; non des requiem tibi, neque taceat pupilla oculi tui: "Their heart hath cried unto the Lord concerning the walls of the daughter of Zion, Cause thy tears to descend, like a torrent, night and day; give thyself no rest, nor let the apple of thine eye be silent." As the wall and rampart are said to lament, (verse 8,) because their ruins were objects of lamentation; so here the ruined wall, including the ruined city and its inhabitants, is called upon, by a beautiful prosopopœia, to mourn and weep over the desolations of that place which God had chosen for his peculiar residence, and to entreat him to take compassion on its miseries. The original expression, rendered the apple of thine eye, is literally the daughter of thine eye; by which Blaney thinks is meant, not the pupil, but the tear, which, he says, may, with great propriety and elegance, be termed the daughter of the eye from which thou hast done this. ^aShall the women eat their fruit, and children ^aof a span long? ^bshall the priest and the prophet be slain in the sanctuary of the LORD?

21 ^aThe young and the old lie on the ground in the streets; my virgins and my young men are fallen by the sword; thou hast slain them in the day of thine anger; ^dthou hast killed, and not pitied.

22 Thou hast called as in a solemn day ^amy terrors round about, so that in the day of the LORD's anger none escaped or remained: ^fthose that I have swaddled and brought up, hath mine enemy consumed.

^a Leviticus xxvi. 29; Deuter. xxviii. 53; Jeremiah xix. 9; Chapter iv. 10; Ezek. v. 10.—^b Or, swaddled with their hands.—^c Chap. iv. 13, 16.—^d 2 Chron. xxxvi. 17.—^e Chap. iii. 43.—^f Psa. xxxi. 13; Jer. vi. 25; xlv. 5.—^f Hosea ix. 12, 13.

it issues. Arise, cry out in the night—Do not cease thy prayers and supplications even in the night season. In the beginning of the watches—The Jews divided the night, first into three, and in after ages into four watches: see Judg. vii. 19; Matt. xiv. 25. Pour out thy heart like water before the Lord—Offer up thy earnest prayers with tears to the throne of grace; and send up thy very soul, and thy most devout affections along with them: see Psa. lxii. 8; 1 Sam. vii. 6. Lift up thy hands for the life of thy young children—That they at least may be spared; (see verse 11;) that faint in the top of every street—See the margin. The expression seems to mean the same as in every street.

Verses 20–22. Behold, O Lord, to whom thou hast done this—To thy people, for whom thou hast formerly expressed so much tenderness and affection. Jerusalem seems to be here introduced speaking. Shall the women eat their fruit—We find by comparing this verse with chap. iv. 10, that God brought upon them that terrible judgment which he had denounced against them, if they continued to provoke him, namely, that they should eat the flesh of their own sons and daughters. See the margin. And children of a span long—Hebrew, וּבְנֵי שֵׁפָרַיִם, rendered in the margin, swaddled with their hands, and by the LXX., νηπια θηλαζόντα μαστες, infants sucking the breasts. Shall the priest and the prophet be slain in the sanctuary of the Lord?—Shall thy ministers be slain, and that in thy sanctuary? We learn from this, 1st, That the Chaldeans spared no character, no, not the most distinguished; even the priest and the prophet, who, of all men, one would think, might have expected protection from heaven, and veneration on earth, yet they were slain; not abroad in the field of battle, where they would have been out of their place, as Hophni and Phinehas were, but in the sanctuary of the Lord, the place of their business, and which they hoped would have been a refuge to them. 2d, They spared no age, no, not those who, by reason of their tender or decrepit age, were exempted from taking up the sword; for the young and the old lay on the ground slain in the streets. 3d, They spared no sex, the virgins and the young men fell by the sword. In the most barbarous military executions that we read of, the virgins were spared and made part of the spoil, but here they were put to the sword as well as the young men. We learn, 4th, That this was the Lord's doing; he suffered the sword of the Chaldeans to devour thus without distinction; he slew them in the day of his anger—Namely, his anger for their many and aggravated sins. Thou hast called, as in a solemn day—A day of awful retribution; my terrors round about—

As my people were wont to be called together from all parts on solemn days, when they were to meet at Jerusalem for thy service; so now, by thy providence, my terrible enemies are by thee called together to slay thy people in that holy city in which they were wont to worship thee. So that none escaped nor remained—That is, few or none. Those that I have swaddled, and brought up, hath mine enemy consumed—As if they had been brought forth for the murderer, like lambs for the butcher, Hosea ix. 13. Zion, that was a mother to them all, laments to see those that were brought up in her courts, and under the tuition of her oracles, thus made a prey of and destroyed.

CHAPTER III.

In this chapter the prophet seems to have had it in view to instruct his countrymen in the lesson of conducting themselves properly under adversity. To this end, (1,) He sets himself forth as an example of the most severe and trying afflictions, 1–20. (2,) He points out the inexhaustible mercies of God as the never-failing source of his consolation and hope, 21–24. (3,) He exhorts others to patience and quiet resignation under the like circumstances, showing that God is ever gracious to those that wait on him; that he is prone to pardon and pity, and takes no delight in afflicting mankind; but turns away with disgust from all acts of oppression and malignant cruelty, 25–36. (4,) He asserts the divine supremacy in the dispensations of good and evil, and argues that no man has a right to complain when he is punished according to his deserts. He therefore recommends it to his fellow-sufferers, to examine themselves, and to turn to God with contrite hearts, sincerely deploring the sinfulness of their conduct, which had provoked the divine justice to treat them with such extraordinary severity, 37–47. (5,) He professes himself to be deeply affected with the calamities of his country, 48–54. But (6,) calling to mind the desperate circumstances from which he had heretofore been rescued by the divine aid, he declareth his hope, that the same good Providence would frustrate the malice of his present enemies, and turn the scornful reproach they had cast upon him to their own confusion, 55–66. The construction of this chapter, as has been intimated in the general argument, differs from that of the two preceding. It consists indeed of twenty-two stanzas, according to the number of letters in the Hebrew alphabet: but every stanza is divided into three parts, or verses, each of which begins with the same Hebrew letter; the first three verses with Aleph, the next three with Beth, &c. And in one instance the order of the letters varies from that which is observed in the rest of the chapter.

A. M. 3416. I AM the man that hath seen af-
B. C. 588. fliction by the rod of his wrath.

2 He hath led me, and brought me into darkness, but not into light.

3 Surely against me is he turned: he turneth his hand against me all the day.

4 ^a My flesh and my skin hath he A. M. 3416.
made old; he hath ^b broken my bones. B. C. 588.

5 He hath builded against me, and compassed me with gall and travail.

6 ^c He hath set me in dark places, as they that be dead of old.

^a Job xvi. 8.—^b Psa. li. 8; Isa. xxxviii. 13; Jer. i. 17.

^c Psa. lxxxviii. 5, 6; cxliii. 3.

NOTES ON CHAPTER III.

Verses 1, 2. I am the man that hath seen affliction—I myself have suffered affliction in this time of public calamity. He speaks, probably, with a particular regard to the ill treatment he had met with in the discharge of his prophetic office. Some indeed suppose that he speaks in this and the subsequent verses, to verse 21, in the character of the people, but so many passages manifestly refer to his own personal troubles, that such an interpretation seems very improbable. He hath brought me into darkness, but not into light—Light is often used in Scripture for happiness or comfort, and darkness for affliction and misery. The prophet's meaning is, that God had been pleased to exercise him with calamity. Perhaps he refers especially to his being put into the dungeon and the stocks, and to the state of darkness and distress which his mind was in during these trials.

Verses 3–7. Surely against me is he turned—The course of his providence toward me is quite altered. He was formerly kind and gracious, but now exercises an afflicting hand against me, and that not occasionally, or for a short time, but continually, all the day. The phrase, He turneth his hand against me, is equivalent to that which occurs Isa. i. 25, I will turn thy hand upon thee, where see the note. My flesh, &c., hath he made old—He-

A. M. 3416. 7 ^d He hath hedged me about that
B. C. 588.

I cannot get out; he hath made my chain heavy.

8 Also ^e when I cry and shout, he shutteth out my prayer.

9 He hath enclosed my ways with hewn stone, he hath made my paths crooked.

10 ^f He was unto me as a bear lying in wait, and as a lion in secret places.

11 He hath turned aside my ways, and ^g pulled me in pieces: he hath made me desolate.

12 He hath bent his bow, and ^h set me as a mark for the arrow.

^d Job iii. 23; xix. 8; Hosea ii. 6.—^e Job xxx. 20; Psalm xxii. 2.—^f Job x. 16; Isa. xxxviii. 13; Hos. v. 14; xiii. 7, 8. ^g Hos. vi. 1.—^h Job vii. 20; xvi. 12; Psa. xxxviii. 2.—ⁱ Job vi. 4.—^j Heb. sons.

orew, כלה, hath wasted, caused to decay. See notes on Job xvi. 8; Psa. xxxi. 10, and xxxii. 3. He hath broken my bones—The anguish I feel in my mind is as painful to me as if all my bones were broken. He hath builded against me—He hath blocked me up in a strait place; he has so enclosed me with calamities that there is no escaping them; and compassed me with gall, &c.—Hath filled me with grief and anguish of mind, which is no less bitter than gall to the mouth. He hath set me in dark places, &c.—He hath confined me to a dungeon where no light enters; and I am secluded from human society, as if I were out of the world. He probably refers to the pit of the prison into which he was cast by the command of Zedekiah. He hath hedged me about—See verse 5, and the margin. He hath made my chain heavy—He hath made my bondage, or my imprisonment, grievous.

Verse 8. Also when I cry and shout—When, under a conviction that, in my present distressed condition, I cannot deliver myself, and that no creature can deliver me, I make application to God in prayer for deliverance, and am serious, fervent, and importunate in my addresses to him; he shutteth out my prayer—Refuses to hearken to it, or give me any ease or relief; Hebrew, שתק, the same as סתם, he hath obstructed my prayer; “hath barred my prayer from approaching him.”—Blaney. Thus sometimes God seems to be angry even against the prayers of his people, Psa. lxxx. 5. And their case is deplorable indeed when they are denied, not only the benefit of an answer, but the comfort of acceptance.

Verses 9–13. He hath enclosed my way with hewn stone—He hath not only hedged it up with thorns, Hos. ii. 6, but stopped it up with a stone wall which cannot be broken through; so that my paths are made crooked—That is, I traverse to and fro, to the right hand and to the left, to try to get forward, but I am still turned back. Observe, reader, if we walk in the crooked ways of sin, crossing or swerving 13 He hath caused ⁱ the ^j arrows of A. M. 3416.

his quiver to enter into my reins. B. C. 588.

14 I was a ^k derision to all my people; and ^l their song all the day.

15 ^m He hath filled me with ⁿ bitterness, he hath made me drunken with wormwood.

16 He hath also broken my teeth ^o with gravel-stones, he hath ^p covered me with ashes

17 And thou hast removed my soul far off from peace: I forgot ^q prosperity.

18 ^r And I said, My strength and my hope is perished from the LORD;

19 ^s Remembering mine affliction and my misery, ^t the wormwood and the gall.

^k Jeremiah xx. 7.—^l Job xxx. 9; Psa. lxi. 12; Verse 63. ^m Jer. ix. 15.—ⁿ Heb. bitterness.—^o Prov. xx. 17.—^p Or, rolled me in the ashes.—^q Hebrew, good.—^r Psalm xxxi. 22. ^s Or, Remember.—^t Jer. ix. 15.

from God's laws, it is just with God to make us walk in the crooked paths of affliction, crossing our designs and breaking our measures. He was unto me as a bear lying in wait—Surprising me with his judgments; and as a lion in secret places—So that which way soever I went, I was in continual fear of being attacked, and could never think myself safe. He hath turned aside my ways—Hath blasted all my counsels and ruined my projects; (see above on verse 9;) and pulled me in pieces—Hath torn and gone away, Hos. v. 14. He hath made me desolate—Deprived me of all society, and of all comfort in my soul. He hath bent his bow—That bow, which was ordained against the church's persecutors, is bent against her sons. He hath set me as a mark for his arrows—Which he aims at, and is sure to hit: so that the arrows of his quiver enter into my reins—And give me an inward and mortal wound.

Verses 14–19. I was a derision to all my people—To all the wicked among them, who made themselves merry with the prophet's griefs and the public judgments; and their song all the day—Hebrew, נגינתם, their instrument of music. The word, says Blaney, “is commonly rendered their song; but I rather think it means a subject upon which they played, as upon a musical instrument, for their diversion.” He hath filled me with bitterness—A bitter sense of these calamities. God has access to the spirit, and can so imbitter it, as thereby to imbitter all enjoyments; as when the stomach is foul, whatever is eaten becomes acid in it. He hath made me drunken with wormwood—That is, so intoxicated me with the sense of my afflictions, that I know not what to say or do. He hath broken my teeth with gravel-stones—Hath mingled gravel with my bread, so that my teeth are broken with it, and what I eat is neither pleasant nor nourishing. He hath covered me with ashes—As mourners were wont to be; or, as some render רכפישני אפר, he hath laid me low, or made me wallow in ashes, namely, because of great sorrow and grief. These expressions imply the height

A. M. 3416. 20 My soul hath them still in remembrance, and is ⁶ humbled in me. B. C. 588.

21 This I ⁷ recall to my mind, therefore have I hope.

22 ¶ ⁸ It is of the LORD's mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not.

23 They are new ⁹ every morning: great is thy faithfulness.

24 The LORD is my ¹⁰ portion, saith my soul; therefore will I hope in him.

⁶ Heb. bowed.—⁷ Heb. make to return to my heart.—⁸ Mal. iii. 6.—⁹ Isa. xxxiii. 2.—¹⁰ Psa. xvi. 5; lxxiii. 26; cxix. 57; Jer. x. 16.

of misery; that he received no comfort or refreshment from any thing. I said, My strength, my hope is gone—I even began to despair of God's mercy; remembering my affliction—Reflecting on all the miseries and hardships I had suffered. Without doubt it was his infirmity to think and speak thus, (Psa. lxxvii. 10,) for with God there is everlasting strength, and he is his people's never-failing hope, whatever they may suspect to the contrary.

Verses 21–23. This I recall to my mind, &c.—Here the prophet begins to suggest motives of patience and consolation: as if he had said, I call to mind the following considerations, and thereupon I conceive hope and comfort. And surely they are such as afford a sufficient ground for trusting in God under the severest trials. It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed—It is not clear that this is the exact sense of the Hebrew, in which there is nothing for it is of. The LXX. translate the verse, τα ελεη κυριου, οτι εκ εξελυπε με. The mercies of the Lord, because they have not left, or do not leave, me: that is, I rely on, and derive hope and consolation from, the mercies of the Lord, which still continue to prevent and follow me. Because his compassions fail not—Ου συντελεσθησαν, are not finished, exhausted, or brought to an end. They are new every morning: great, &c.—Thy mercies are renewed to us every day, one following another; and thy faithfulness in performing them is as great as thy goodness in promising them. God's mercy and truth, or fidelity, are usually joined together. Blaney connects these three verses thus: "This I revolve in my heart, therefore will I have hope; the mercies of Jehovah, that they are not exhausted, that they fail not; new are his compassions every morning; great is thy faithfulness." According to our translation the prophet represents himself as calling to mind that, as a sinner, he deserved to be cut off, and delivered up to future punishment, and should certainly have been thus destroyed but for the mercies of God; while his people, for their sins, would have been so totally consumed that no remnant of them would have been left. "As, however, the Lord had mercifully spared him, and had not utterly destroyed them; as his compassions were plenteous and unfailing, and every morning renewed to him, 25 The LORD is good unto them that ¹¹ wait for him, to the soul that seeketh him. A. M. 3416. B. C. 588.

26 It is good that a man should both hope and ¹² quietly wait for the salvation of the LORD.

27 ¹³ It is good for a man that he bear the yoke in his youth.

28 ¹⁴ He sitteth alone, and keepeth silence, because he hath borne it upon him.

29 ¹⁵ He putteth his mouth in the dust; if so be there may be hope.

¹¹ Psa. cxxx. 6; Isa. xxx. 18; Mic. vii. 7.—¹² Psa. xxxvii. 7. ¹³ Psalm xc. 12; cxix. 71.—¹⁴ Jeremiah xv. 17; Chap. ii. 10. ¹⁵ Job xlii. 6.

in the continuance of his life, and many unmerited benefits; and as God had given many precious promises to Israel, and to every believer, and, in his great faithfulness, had always performed them to those who trusted in them; so he found there was yet encouragement to hope, and to exercise patience and repentance in expectation of returning comfort."—Scott.

Verses 24–26. The Lord is my portion, saith my soul—An interest in the favour and love of God, and his presence with me, my heart tells me, is the best inheritance. And, possessing these, I have that which is sufficient to balance all my troubles, and make up all my losses. For, while portions on earth are empty and perishing things, God is an all-sufficient and durable portion, a portion for ever. Therefore will I hope in him—I will stay myself upon him, and encourage myself in him, when all other supports and encouragements fail me. Observe, reader, it is our duty and interest to make God the portion of our souls, and then to enjoy and take comfort in him as such, in the midst of afflictions and lamentations. The Lord is good unto them that wait for him—To them that patiently wait his time; when he shall judge it a proper season to afford them comfort and deliverance; and who, in the mean while, apply themselves to him by prayer and humiliation. It is good—It is our duty, and will be our unspeakable comfort and satisfaction; that a man should hope and quietly wait, &c.—To hope that it will come, though the difficulties that lie in the way of it seem insuperable; to wait till it does come, though it be long delayed; and while we wait to be quiet and silent, not quarrelling with God, or making ourselves uneasy, but acquiescing in the divine disposal.

Verses 27–30. It is good for a man that he bear the yoke in his youth—That he be inured betimes to bear those useful restraints which may give him a right sense of the duty which he owes to God, and the obedience he ought to pay to his laws. For the prophet's expression is very applicable to the yoke of God's commands; it is good for us to take that yoke upon us in our youth; we cannot begin too soon to be religious; it will make our duty the more acceptable to God, and easy to ourselves, if we engage in it when we are young. Here, however, the prophet

A. M. 3416. 30 ^aHe giveth his cheek to him
B. C. 588. that smiteth him: he is filled full with reproach.

31 ^bFor the LORD will not cast off for ever:

32 But though he cause grief, yet will he have compassion according to the multitude of his mercies.

^a Isa. l. 6; Matt. v. 39.—^b Psa. xciv. 14.—^c Ezek. xxxiii.
11; Heb. xii. 10.

seems to speak chiefly of the yoke of affliction; many have found it good to bear this yoke in their youth; it has made those humble, and serious, and spiritually minded, who otherwise would have been proud, unruly, and as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke. If it be asked, when we bear this yoke so that it is really good for us to bear it? we have the answer in the following verses: 1st, When we are sedate and quiet under our afflictions; when we sit alone and keep silence; retire into privacy that we may converse with God, and commune with our own hearts, silencing all discontented, distrustful thoughts, and laying our hand upon our mouth, as Aaron, who, under a severe trial, held his peace. When those that are afflicted in their youth accommodate themselves to their afflictions, and study to answer God's end in afflicting them, then they will find it good for them to bear it; for it yields the peaceable fruit of righteousness to them that are exercised thereby. 2d, When we are humble and patient under affliction; he gets good by the yoke, that not only lays his hand upon his mouth in token of submission to the will of God in the affliction, but puts his mouth in the dust in token of sorrow, shame, and self-loathing at the remembrance of sin, and as one perfectly reduced and reclaimed, and brought, as it were, to lick the dust, Psa. lxxii. 9. And we must thus humble ourselves, if so be there may be hope. If there be any way to acquire and secure a good hope under our afflictions, as, blessed be God, there is, it is this way, and while we look for it we must own ourselves utterly unworthy of it. 3d, When we are meek and gentle toward those that are the instruments of our trouble, and manifest a forgiving spirit. He gets good by the yoke that gives his cheek to him that smiteth him, and rather turns the other cheek, than returns the second blow. He that can bear contempt and reproach, and not render railing for railing, and bitterness for bitterness; that when he is filled with reproach, keeps it to himself, and does not retort it upon them that filled him with it, but pours it out before the Lord, Psa. cxxiii. 4; he shall find it good to bear the yoke, and it shall turn to his spiritual advantage. The sum is, if tribulation work patience, that patience will work experience, and that experience a hope that maketh not ashamed.

Verses 31–33. The Lord will not cast off for ever—The truly penitent that put their trust in him, and sincerely desire and seek reconciliation with him:

33 For ^che doth not afflict ^ewill- A. M. 3416.
ingly, nor grieve the children of men. B. C. 588.

34 To crush under his feet all the prisoners of the earth,

35 To turn aside the right of a man before the face of ^dthe Most High,

36 To subvert a man in his cause, ^dthe LORD ¹⁰approveth not.

^e Hebrew, from his heart.—^d Or, a superior.—^d Hab. i. 13.
¹⁰ Or, seeth not.

though he may for a time appear to estrange himself from them, yet he will certainly return to them. Though he cause grief—Though, as a prudent parent, he may see reason to chastise his people by affliction, yet as a kind and tender Father, who pitieth his children in misery, according to the multitude, the unspeakable greatness and abundance of his mercies, he will have compassion upon them. For he doth not afflict willingly—Hebrew, מלכו, from his heart, that is, of his own mere motion, without cause given him by the persons afflicted; or freely and with pleasure; nor grieve the children of men—Much less his own children. Hence judgment is called his strange work, and exercising mercy and loving-kindness his delight.

Verses 34–36. To crush under his feet, &c.—In these verses certain acts of tyranny, malice, and injustice are specified, in the practice of which men are prone to indulge themselves one toward another, but which the divine goodness is far from countenancing or approving by any similar conduct. By the prisoners of the earth, or of the land, as the words may be properly rendered, Blaney thinks are meant the poor insolvent debtors, whom their creditors among the Jews, as well as in other nations, were empowered to cast into prison, and to oblige to work out their debts; a power too often exerted with great rigour and inhumanity: see Isa. lviii. 3; Matt. xviii. 30, 34. To turn aside the right of a man—To prevent his obtaining, or to deprive him of, his just rights; before the face of the Most High—In the presence of the just and holy God, and under his all-seeing eye, who takes particular notice of all acts of injustice, and will severely punish them. The word מלכו, here used, undoubtedly often means the most high God, and is so understood here, both by the LXX. and the Vulgate. Many commentators, however, prefer the marginal reading, a superior, understanding thereby a magistrate. And Blaney thinks it cannot here mean God, because, “though a person may be made to suffer greatly by having his judgment turned aside, that is, by being calumniated and misrepresented before an earthly superior, yet all such malicious attempts must fail and come to nothing where God is the judge, who cannot be deceived or imposed upon.” This is certainly true: but it does not appear that the prophet referred to this circumstance, but rather to the effrontery and daring wickedness of those who could be guilty of such injustice, when they knew they

A. M. 3416. 37 ¶ Who is he ^o that saith, and it
B. C. 589. cometh to pass, when the LORD com-mandeth it not?

¶ Psa. xxxiii. 9.—¶ Job ii. 10; Isa. xlv. 7; Amos iii. 6.

were before the omnipresent God, and that his eye was upon them, thus, as it were, bidding him defiance. To subvert a man in his cause—That is, to prevent his having justice done him, in a law-suit or controversy, by any undue interference; as by bearing or suborning false witness, or exerting any kind of influence in opposition to truth and right: the Lord approveth not—Hebrew, לא ראה, seeth not: that is, hates such conduct, and turns away his face from it with abhorrence and disgust. Thus we read, Hab. i. 13, Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil; and canst not look on iniquity. The general sense of the passage is, as God takes no pleasure in oppressing the poor and helpless, so neither will he suffer any men to escape unpunished that are guilty of such acts of injustice and cruelty, who never consider that all the wrongs they do are committed in the sight of the Supreme Judge of the world; and although for a time he thinks fit to prosper such oppressors, yet, in due time, he will call them to a severe account for their wickedness.

Verses 37, 38. Who is he that saith—That commands an event to take place, or predicts that it shall take place, and it cometh to pass accordingly, when the Lord commandeth not?—Or who designs a thing, and brings his designs to effect, when the Lord is against him? “Haughty tyrants may boast of their power as if they were equal to Omnipotence itself; but still it is God’s prerogative to bring to pass whatever he pleases, without any let or impediment, only by speaking, or declaring his purpose, that the thing should be done, as he did at the beginning of the creation: see Psa. xxxiii. 7. And as he makes men the instruments of his vengeance when he sees fit, so he can restrain their cruelty whenever he pleases.”—Lowth. Out of the mouth of the Most High proceedeth not evil and good?—Do not calamities, as well as prosperous events, happen by God’s will and pleasure? The sum is: Nothing comes to pass in the world but by the disposal of the divine providence, which is directed by infinite wisdom, justice, and goodness. The inspired writer seems to be arguing himself and the people of God into a quiet submission to the divine will in their afflictions, from the consideration of the hand of God in them.

Verse 39. Wherefore, &c.—The prophet here seems to check and blame himself for the complaints he had made in the former part of the chapter, wherein he appeared to reflect upon God as unkind and severe. And from the doctrine of God’s sovereign and universal providence, which he had asserted in the last two verses, he draws this inference, Wherefore doth a living man complain? a man for the punishment of his sins?—No calamity or trouble befalls us, but what is the due reward of our sins; and is designed as a chastisement for them, in order to our purification and amendment, or for the trial 38 Out of the mouth of the Most High proceedeth not evil and good? A. M. 3416. B. C. 589.

39 ¶ Wherefore doth a living man ¹¹ complain,

¶ Prov. xix. 3.—¹¹ Or, murmur.

of our grace, and in order to the exercise and increase of it. If we view our afflictions in this light, it will prevent all murmuring and repining against the providence of God. We shall learn to be patient and resigned under his chastising hand, and even thankful that he condescends to correct and try us for our profit, and by preserving us alive in the body still gives us space for repentance. “There seems,” says Blaney, “to be a peculiar emphasis laid on the words living, [living,] and man, [man,] in this passage. נבר is said to denote a man, because of his excellence and superiority over all other earthly beings. While a man therefore lives, and is possessed of those privileges of his nature, whatever he undergoes must be less than his sins have deserved, because death, which implies the loss of all those privileges, is the allotted wages of sin.” Mark well, reader, though we may pour out our complaints before God, we must never complain against or of God. How cogent are the reasons here suggested against such a conduct! We are men, let us herein show ourselves men. Shall a man complain? Shall a reasonable creature act contrary to all reason, and an immortal being forget or disregard his immortality? Shall he be so insensible of the value of the privileges of his nature, and of his obligations to God for them, as to abuse them to God’s dishonour, instead of using them to his glory? Shall he take upon him to censure or call in question the dispensations of infinite wisdom, justice, and goodness toward him, and act as if he thought he knew better than his Maker what is good for him? Shall a living man complain—a man who has a thousand times forfeited his life, with all the blessings of it, but to whom it is still continued, and with it many of its comforts, and particularly the means of attaining life everlasting—a hope, or a foundation whereon to build a hope, of felicity and glory for ever? A man for the punishment of his sins? A punishment infinitely less than his sins have deserved? and a punishment, or chastisement, rather, which the omniscient God knows to be absolutely necessary to bring him to repentance and reformation, if he will by any means whatever be brought thereto? Surely, reader, if we be suffering for our sins, instead of spending our time in complaining and repining, we ought to be employed in repenting and reforming, and, that we may have at least one evidence that God is reconciled to us, we should endeavour to reconcile ourselves to his holy and gracious will. Or, to consider the matter in another point of view: Are we punished for our sins? It is then our wisdom to submit, and kiss the rod; for if we still walk contrary to God, he will punish us still seven times more, for when he judgeth he will overcome; but if we accommodate ourselves to him, though we be chastened of the Lord, we shall not be condemned with the world.

A. M. 3416. ^b a man for the punishment of his
B. C. 588. sins?

40 Let us search and try our ways, and turn again to the LORD.

41 ⁱ Let us lift up our heart with our hands unto God in the heavens.

42 ^k We have transgressed and have rebelled: thou hast not pardoned.

43 Thou hast covered with anger, and persecuted us: ^l thou hast slain, thou hast not pitied.

44 Thou hast covered thyself with a cloud, ^m that our prayer should not pass through.

^b Mic. vii. 9.—ⁱ Psa. lxxxvi. 4.—^k Dan. ix. 5.—^l Chap. ii. 2, 17, 21.—^m Verse 8.—ⁿ 1 Cor. iv. 13.—^o Chap. ii. 16.

Verses 40, 41. Let us search and try our ways—This will be a more reasonable and profitable employment than that of complaining and murmuring against the providence of God. Let us search what our ways have been, and try whether they have been right and good or not. Let us examine our tempers, words, and works, and consider what they have been, whether agreeable or contrary to the holy will of God. Let us try our ways, that by them we may try ourselves: for we are to judge of our state and character, not by our faint wishes, good intentions, transient resolutions, or even warm affections, but by our steps; and not by one particular step, but by our ways, our whole conduct; the ends we aim at, the rules we go by, and the agreeableness or contrariety of the temper of our minds, and the tenor of our lives to those ends and those rules. When we are in affliction it is peculiarly seasonable to consider our ways, (Hag. i. 5.) that what is amiss may be repented of, and amended for the future, and so we may answer the intention of the affliction. We are apt, in times of public calamity, to reflect upon other people's ways, and lay blame upon them, whereas our business is to search and try our own ways: we have work enough to do at home; we must each of us say, What have I done? what have I contributed to the public distress? That we may each of us mend one, then we shall all be mended. And let us turn again to the Lord—Namely, by a sincere conversion, even to him who is turned against us, and from whom we have turned; to him let us turn by repentance, reformation, and faith, as to our owner and ruler. This particular must accompany the former, and be the fruit of it; therefore we must search and try our ways, that we may turn from the evil of them to God; this was the method David took, who says, Psa. cxix. 59, I thought on my ways, and turned my feet into thy testimonies. Let us lift up our heart, &c.—Let us apply ourselves unto God by prayer, without which we shall attempt in vain to take the preceding advice. Without supernatural light from him we shall search and try our ways to little purpose: we shall still remain unacquainted with ourselves, and shall pass a false judgment on our character and conduct; and without his renew-

45 Thou hast made us as the ^a off- A. M. 3416.
scouring and refuse in the midst of B. C. 588.
the people.

46 ^o All our enemies have opened their mouths against us.

47 ^p Fear and a snare is come upon us, ^q desolation and destruction.

48 ^r Mine eye runneth down with rivers of water for the destruction of the daughter of my people.

49 ^s Mine eye tricketh down, and ceaseth not, without any intermission,

^p Isa. xxiv. 17; Jer. xlviii. 43.—^q Isa. li. 19.—^r Jer. iv. 19; ix. 1; xiv. 17; Chap. ii. 11.—^s Psa. lxxvii. 2; Chap. i. 16.

ing grace we shall not be turned to him effectually. Now for these blessings we must make application to him in fervent prayer, lifting up our hearts with our hands, and pouring out our souls with our words, in confident expectation of receiving what we ask.

Verses 42–47. We have transgressed, &c.—Here the prophet shows what will be the effect of a proper searching and trying of our ways; we shall be convinced of our sinfulness and guilt: and he here teaches us that confession of sin must accompany petition for the pardon of it. For he that would find mercy must confess as well as forsake his sins, Prov. xxviii. 13; 1 John i. 9. Thou hast not pardoned—That is, as the expression seems here to mean, thou hast not removed the judgments brought upon us for our sins. Thou continuest to punish us according to the just desert of our transgressions. Thou hast covered with anger—Either, thou hast covered thyself with anger, hast covered thy face, so as not to look upon us to move thy pity; or, which is more probably the sense, thou hast covered, that is, overwhelmed, us with thy wrath. Thou hast slain, thou hast not pitied—Thou hast pursued us to a fatal ruin, without showing us any pity. Thou hast covered thyself, &c., that our prayer should not pass through—Whereas in our distress we had no other resource but to apply to thee for help, thou didst so hide thy face and withdraw thyself from us, that we could have no access to thee or intercourse with thee. The expression is metaphorical, and signifies no more than that God would not hear their prayers in their distress. Thou hast made us the offscouring, &c.—That is, thou hast made us extremely contemptible in the eyes of all nations, so that they value us no more than the sweepings of their houses, or the most vile refuse, or contemptible things imaginable. All our enemies have opened their mouths—That is, to mock, scoff, and reproach us. Fear and a snare is come upon us—That is, all manner of misery: see the margin.

Verses 48–51. Mine eye runneth down with rivers of water—In this and the three following verses the prophet shows that the misfortunes of his country constituted no small part of his personal affliction. Mine eye affecteth my heart—Hebrew, עולל עולל

A. M. 3416. 50 Till the LORD ^t look down, and
B. C. 588. behold from heaven.

51 Mine eye affecteth ¹² my heart ¹³ because of all the daughters of my city.

52 Mine enemies chased me sore, like a bird, ^u without cause.

53 They have cut off my life ^x in the dungeon, and ^y cast a stone upon me.

54 ^a Waters flowed over my head; then ^a I said, I am cut off.

55 ¶ ^b I called upon thy name, O LORD, out of the low dungeon.

56 ^c Thou hast heard my voice: hide not thine ear at my breathing, at my cry.

57 Thou ^d drewest near in the day that I

^t Isaiah lxiii. 15.—¹² Heb. my soul.—¹³ Or, more than all.
^u Psalm xxxv. 7, 19; lxix. 4; cix. 3; cxix. 161.—^x Jeremiah xxxvii. 16; xxxviii. 6, 9, 10.—^y Dan. vi. 17.—^a Psalm lxix.
2; cxxiv. 4, 5.—^b Psalm xxxi. 22; Isaiah xxxviii. 10, 11;
Verse 18.

לנפשי, preys upon my soul, as the Vulgate renders the expression, that is, my grief wears out my health and strength; because of all the daughters of my city—On account of the sufferings of the inhabitants of my city.

Verses 52–58. Mine enemies chased me sore— “The prophet in this, and the following verses, describes his own sufferings, when his enemies seized him and put him into the dungeon, Jer. xxxvii. 16; xxxviii. 6. He compares them to a fowler in pursuit of a bird; so, saith he, they sought all opportunities to take an advantage against me, and to deprive me of my life and liberty: and this they did without any provocation given on my part. So the word נִלְכַּד, without cause, signifies.”—Lowth.
They have cut off my life—I was not only sequestered from all human society, like a dead man, but in apparent danger of losing my life in the dungeon.
And their laying a stone upon the entrance of that dark pit resembled the burying me alive. Waters flowed over my head; then I said, &c.—When I sunk down into the mire in this dungeon, I despaired of my life, just as if I had been sinking over head in a river. I called upon thy name, O Lord—I had recourse to thee, O Jehovah, in my distress; out of the low dungeon—As Jonah out of the whale’s belly.
Observe, reader, though we be cast into ever so low a dungeon of calamity and trouble, we may from thence find a way of access to God in the highest heavens. Thus the psalmist, Out of the depths have I cried unto thee, Psa. cxxx. 1. Hide not thine ear at my breathing, at my cry—So he terms his prayer.
It was his breathing toward God, and after God.
Prayer is the breath of the new man, drawing in the air of grace in petitions, and returning it in praises;
it is both the evidence and maintenance of the spiritual life. Some read it, at my gasping; when I lay gasping for life, and ready to expire, and thought I was breathing my last, then thou tookest cognizance called upon thee: thou saidst, Fear A. M. 3416.

not. B. C. 588.

58 O LORD, thou hast ^e pleaded the causes of my soul; ^f thou hast redeemed my life.

59 O LORD, thou hast seen my wrong:
^g judge thou my cause.

60 Thou hast seen all their vengeance and all their ^h imaginations against me.

61 Thou hast heard their reproach, O LORD, and all their imaginations against me;

62 The lips of those that rose up against me,
and their device against me all the day.

63 Behold their ⁱ sitting down, and their rising up; ^k I am their music.

64 ^l Render unto them a recompense, O LORD,

^b Psa. cxxx. 1; Jonah ii. 2.—^c Psa. iii. 4; vi. 8; xviii. 6; lxvi. 19; cxvi. 1.—^d James iv. 8.—^e Psa. xxxv. 1; Jer. li.
36.—^f Psa. lxxi. 23.—^g Psa. ix. 4; xxxv. 23.—^h Jer. xi.
19.—ⁱ Psalm cxxxix. 2.—^k Verse 14.—^l Psalm xxviii. 4; Jer. xi. 20; 2 Tim. iv. 14.

of my distressed case. Thou drewest near in the day that I called upon thee—That is, thou didst graciously assure me of thy presence with me, and didst give me to see thee nigh unto me, whereas I had thought thee to be at a distance from me. Thou saidst, Fear not—This was the language, 1st, of God’s prophets, preaching to them not to fear, Isa.
xli. 10, 13; 2d, of his providence, preventing those things which they were afraid of; and, 3d, of his grace, quieting their minds, and making them easy, by the witness of his Spirit with their spirits, that they were his people still, though in distress, and therefore ought not to fear. Thou hast pleaded the causes of my soul—That is, as it follows, Thou hast redeemed my life, hast rescued it out of the hands of those that would have taken it away, hast saved it when it was ready to be swallowed up; thou hast given me my life for a prey.

Verses 59–63. O Lord, thou hast seen my wrong
—Here the prophet adverts to his present sufferings, and the ill usage he met with, concerning which he appeals to God; as if he had said, ‘Thou hast seen that I have done no wrong at all, but that I suffer a great deal. He that knows all things knew, 1st, The malice they had against him; thou hast seen, says he,
all their vengeance—How they desire to do me a mischief, as if it were by way of reprisal for some great injury I had done them. 2d, The designs and projects they had laid to do him a mischief. Thou hast seen, verse 60, and again, verse 61, Thou hast heard, all their imaginations against me, both their desires and their devices to ruin me; these, whether they show themselves in word or deed, are perfectly known to thee. 3d, The contempt and calumny wherewith they loaded him, all that they spoke slightly, and all that they spoke reproachfully of
him. Thou hast heard their reproach, verse 61;
all the ill characters they give me, laying to my charge things that I know not, all the methods that

A. M. 3416. according to the work of their hands.
B. C. 588. 65 Give them ¹⁴ sorrow of heart, thy curse unto them.

¹⁴ Or, obstinacy of heart.

they use to make me odious and contemptible, even the lips of those that rose up against me, verse 62; the contumelious language they use whenever they speak of me. Behold, their sitting down, &c.—That is, Behold at all times, whether they sit down or rise up, I am made the subject of their merriment, and their laughing-stock.

Verses 64-66. Render to them a recompense, &c.—See note on Jer. xi. 20. The verbs in these verses are not in the imperative mood, but all in the future

66 Persecute and destroy them in A. M. 3416.
anger ^m from under the ⁿ heavens of B. C. 588.
the LORD.

^m Deut. xxv 19; Jer. x. 11.—ⁿ Psalm viii. 3.

tense, and certainly should have been so rendered, as indeed they are by the LXX., Ἀποδώσεις αυτοῖς ἀνταπόδομα Κυρίου—Ἀποδώσεις αυτοῖς—κα, διας μὴ μοχθῶν. Σὺ αὐτοὺς καταδιώξεις ἐν ὀργῇ, καὶ ἐξαιλώσεις αὐτοὺς ὑποκαθῶν τὴν ὕμνην Κυρίου. Thou wilt render unto them a recompense, O Lord—Thou wilt render unto them the grief of my heart. Thou wilt persecute them in wrath, and destroy them from under the heaven, O Lord. Thus also the Vulgate, Blaney, and many others.

CHAPTER IV.

In this chapter, (1.) The prophet contrasts, in various affecting instances, the wretched and deplorable circumstances of the Jewish nation, with the flourishing state of their affairs in former times, 1-12. (2.) He ascribes the unhappy change principally to the profligacy of their priests and prophets, which had drawn upon them the universal abhorrence of God and man, 13-16. (3.) The people proceed with lamenting their hopeless condition, and, in a particular manner, the captivity of their sovereign, 17-20. (4.) The judgment of Edom is foretold, together with a final cessation of Zion's calamities, 21, 22.

A. M. 3416. HOW is the gold become dim! how B. C. 588. is the most fine gold changed!
the stones of the sanctuary are poured out ^a in the top of every street.

2 The precious sons of Zion, comparable to fine gold, how are they esteemed ^b as earthen pitchers, the work of the hands of the potter!

3 Even the ¹ sea-monsters draw out the breast, they give suck to their young ones: the daughter of my people is become cruel,

^a Chapter ii. 19.—^b Isaiah xxx. 14; Jer. xix. 11; 2 Cor. iv. 7.
¹ Or, sea calves.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IV.

Verses 1, 2. How is the gold become dim—"How is the glory of the temple obscured! The sanctuary, which was overlaid with gold, (2 Chron. iii. 8,) now lies in ruins; and the stones of it are not distinguished from common rubbish." It is probable that the prophet, in these words, alluded to the priests, princes, and chief persons of the country, who, though they might have been compared to the pillars, or corner-stones of that sacred building, yet were now involved in the same common destruction with the meanest of the people. The precious sons of Zion, comparable to fine gold—Those that in honour and worth exceeded others as much as fine gold doth other metals, are now disgraced and set at naught.

Verses 3-5. Even the sea-monsters draw out the breast—The very dragons have drawn out the ^c like the ostriches in the wilderness. A. M. 3416.

4 ^d The tongue of the sucking child B. C. 588.
cleaveth to the roof of his mouth for thirst:
^e the young children ask bread, and no man breaketh it unto them.

5 They that did feed delicately are desolate in the streets: they that were brought up in scarlet ^f embrace dunghills.

6 For the ² punishment of the iniquity of the daughter of my people is greater than the pun-

^c Job xxxix. 14, 16.—^d Psalm xxii. 15.—^e Chapter ii. 11, 12.
^f Job xxiv. 8.—² Or, iniquity.

breast: so Blaney. Even these fierce and destructive animals are not so unnatural as to neglect the care of their young ones; whereas the women of Jerusalem have been reduced to that miserable necessity as to disregard their children, as the ostrich does her eggs. The tongue of the sucking child, &c.—Such was the scarcity of food, that the women had not nourishment sufficient to produce milk to enable them to give suck to their infants, and when the children begged for bread the parents had none to give them. They that did feed delicately embrace dunghills—Lie down on dunghills, and seek about them in hopes to pick up something to eat.

Verse 6. For the punishment, &c., is greater than the punishment of Sodom—The fate of Sodom was less deplorable than that of Jerusalem; for Sodom was destroyed in an instant; but Jerusalem endured a long siege, and suffered all the miseries of famine,

A. M. 3416. ishment of the sin of Sodom, that
B. C. 588. was ^goverthrown as in a moment, and no hand stayed on her.

7 Her Nazarites were purer than snow, they were whiter than milk, they were more ruddy in body than rubies, their polishing was of sapphire:

8 Their visage is ³blacker ^hthan a coal; they are not known in the streets: ¹their skin cleaveth to their bones; it is withered, it is become like a stick.

9 They that be slain with the sword are better than they that be slain with hunger: for these ⁴pine away, stricken through for want of the fruits of the field.

^g Gen. xix. 25.—³ Heb. darker than blackness.—^h Chap. v.
10; Joel ii. 6; Nah. ii. 10.—¹ Psa. cii. 5.—⁴ Heb. flow out.
² Chapter ii. 20.—¹ Isaiah xlix. 15.—^m Deuteron. xxviii. 57; sickness, and hostile arms. In Sodom all were destroyed together, and none left to mourn in bitterness of soul the sad loss of their dearest friends; in Jerusalem many survived to mourn the deplorable fate of their friends and country, and to suffer the ignominy and miseries of captivity. The original of the last clause, לֹא חָלוּ בָהּ יָדַי, is rendered by the LXX., καὶ οὐκ ἐπνεύσαν ἐν αὐτῇ χεῖρας, they did not cause hands to labour, or be weary, in her: and by Blaney, nor were hands weakened in her.

Verses 7-9. Her Nazarites were purer than snow
—It seems the word, נִזְרִית, ought not to be translated here Nazarites, or those who were separated by a vow to God; but princes, or chief men: so Waterland understands the word, as also Blaney, who renders it, her nobles. We find the same term applied to Joseph, as one separated, or distinguished in eminence and dignity above his brethren, Gen. xlix. 26. By being purer than snow, and whiter than milk, seems to be intended the whiteness of their skin, or the fairness of their complexion;
and by their being more ruddy in body than rubies, or brighter than pearls, as אֲדָמָה כְּפִנִינִי, may be rendered, their high state of health may be meant.
Their visage is blacker than a coal—The famine, and other hardships which they have endured, have altered their complexion, and made them look dry and withered. They that be slain with the sword are better, &c.—That is, their case is preferable to that of those slain with hunger; for these pine away, &c.—That is, they waste away and perish by slow degrees, and, before they quite expire, suffer great misery. Stricken through for want of the fruits of the field—Pierced with far more exquisite pain through want of sustenance, than if they had been run through with the sword.

Verses 10, 11. The hands of the pitiful women have soddened their own children—The affection of a mother toward her children is the strongest of all natural affections, and yet the famine hath forced that tender sex to divest themselves of it, and to boil

10 ^kThe hands of the ¹pitiful wo- A. M. 3416.
men have soddened their own children: B. C. 588.
they were their ^mmeat in the destruction of the daughter of my people.

11 The Lord hath accomplished his fury; ⁿhe hath poured out his fierce anger, and ^ohath kindled a fire in Zion, and it hath devoured the foundations thereof.

12 The kings of the earth, and all the inhabitants of the world, would not have believed that the adversary and the enemy should have entered into the gates of Jerusalem.

13 ^pFor the sins of her prophets, and the ini-quities of her priests, ^qthat have shed the blood of the just in the midst of her,

2 Kings vi. 29.—ⁿ Jer. vii. 20.—^o Deut. xxxii. 22; Jer. xxi.
14.—^p Jer. v. 31; vi. 13; xiv. 14; xxiii. 11, 21; Ezek. xxii.
26, 28; Zeph. iii. 4.—^q Matt. xxiii. 31, 37.

and eat their own children. Thus was the prophecy of Moses, Deut. xxviii. 53, 57, most awfully fulfilled; where see the notes, and on chap. ii. 20. The Lord hath accomplished his fury, &c.—God's anger hath effected an entire destruction, so as not to leave one stone upon another.

Verses 12. The kings of the earth, &c., would not have believed—“The city was so well fortified, and had been so often miraculously preserved by God from the attempts of its enemies, that it seemed incredible that it should at last fall into their hands.”— Lowth.

Verses 13. For the sins of her prophets, &c.—That is, of the false prophets, to whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem chiefly hearkened; and the iniquities of her priests—Who bore rule by their means, Jer. v.
31; and instead of discountenancing and reproving sin in the people, as was their indispensable duty, were themselves guilty of many flagrant acts of injustice, oppression, and violence; insomuch that, as is here attested, they even shed the blood of the just in the midst of Jerusalem, the holy city; that is, the blood of God's prophets, and of those that adhered to them. The priests and false prophets were then the ringleaders in persecution, as in Christ's time the chief priests and scribes were the men that incensed the people against him, who otherwise would have persisted in their hosannas. This was the sin which the Lord would not pardon, (2 Kings xxiv.
4.) and which, above all others, brought utter destruction upon that city. Not that the people were innocent; no, while the prophets prophesied falsely, and the priests abused the power which their own office and the doctrine of these prophets gave them, the people loved to have it so, and it was, partly at least, to please many of them that the prophets and priests acted as they did. But the blame is chiefly laid upon them who should have taught the people better, should have reproved and admonished them, and told them what would be the end of such conduct: of the hands, therefore, of those

A. M. 3416. 14 They have wandered as blind
B. C. 588. men in the streets, ²they have polluted themselves with blood, ⁵so ⁶that men could not touch their garments.

15 They cried unto them, Depart ye; ⁶*it is* unclean; depart, depart, touch not: when they fled away and wandered, they said among the heathen, They shall no more sojourn there.

16 The ⁷anger of the LORD hath divided them; he will no more regard them: ⁸they respected not the persons of the priests, they favoured not the elders.

17 As for us, ⁹our eyes as yet failed for our

^r Jer. ii. 34. — ^s Or, in that they could not but touch. — ^t Num.
xix. 16. — ^u Or, ye polluted. — ^v Levit. xiii. 45. — ^w Or, face.
^x Chap. v. 12. — ^y 2 Kings xxiv. 7; Isa. xx. 5; xxx. 6, 7; Jer.

watchmen who did not give them warning was their blood required. Indeed, the ecclesiastical men were the chief cause of both the first and last destruction of Jerusalem. And so they are of the destruction of most other places that come to ruin through their neglect of their duty, or their encouraging others in their wicked courses; which shows us both how great a blessing to a people a godly, conscientious ministry is, and how great an evil a ministry is which is otherwise.

Verses 14-16. They have wandered as blind men in the streets—They strayed from the paths of righteousness, and were blind to every thing that was good, but to do evil they were quick-sighted; they have polluted themselves with blood—The blood of the saints and servants of the Lord; so that men could not touch their garments—But they would be legally polluted; and there were so many of them, that a man could not walk in the streets but he must touch some of them. They cried unto them, Depart ye: it is unclean—Or, ye polluted, depart, &c. “When they fled to save their lives, they could find no safe retreat, but every body shunned and avoided them as polluted; and used the same words to express their abhorrence of this defilement of such persons, whose office it was to cleanse and purify others, as the lepers were by the law obliged to pronounce upon themselves, and cry, Unclean, unclean: see Lev. xiii. 45. The bloody garments of the priests called to remembrance the innocent blood which had been shed by their hands, (verse 13,) when people saw their sin thus retaliated upon them.”—Lowth. They said among the heathen, They shall no more sojourn there—Even the heathen themselves looked upon them as polluted persons, unworthy of living in Judea, or attending on the worship of God in his temple. And they concluded that such impious wretches would never be restored to their native country, but would continue always vagabonds. The anger of the Lord hath divided them—“God, in his just displeasure, hath scattered and dispersed them into foreign countries, where no vain help: in our watching we have A. M. 3416.

watched for a nation that could not B. C. 588.
save us.

18 ¹They hunt our steps, that we cannot go in our streets: our end is near, our days are fulfilled; for ²our end is come.

19 Our persecutors are ³swifter than the eagles of the heaven: they pursued us upon the mountains, they laid wait for us in the wilderness.

20 The ⁴breath of our nostrils, the anointed of the LORD, ⁵was taken in their pits, of whom we said, Under his shadow we shall live among the heathen.

xxxvii. 7; Ezek. xxix. 16. — ^y 2 Kings xxv. 4, 5. — ^z Ezek.
vii. 2, 3, 6; Amos viii. 2. — ^a Deut. xxviii. 49; Jer. iv. 13.
^b Gen. ii. 7; Ch. ii. 9. — ^c Jer. lii. 9; Ezek. xii. 13; xix. 4, 8.

respect will be given to their characters.” This seems to be the language of their enemies, triumphing over them, as discerning that their God was provoked with them, and would have no more regard to them. And therefore these heathen no more respected the persons of their priests or elders, but considered them as peculiarly guilty, and deserving of their abhorrence and execration.

Verse 17. As for us, &c.—The prophet, after having digressed in the last five verses to make observation on the wickedness of those who had been the principal cause of the national ruin, here returns again to the lamentable description of the particulars. Our eyes as yet failed for our vain help—The help of the Egyptians, which they had expected in vain. In our watching we have watched—We have long waited with eager desire and expectation; for a nation that could not save us—For succours from a people who at last have wofully disappointed us.

Verses 18-20. They hunt our steps that we cannot go in our streets—The Chaldeans, employed in the siege, are so close upon us, that we cannot stir a foot, nor look out at our doors, nor walk safely in the streets. Our end is near—The end of our church and state; we are just at the brink of the ruin of both. Nay, our days are fulfilled, our end is come—We are utterly undone; a fatal, final period is put to all our comforts; the days of our prosperity are fulfilled, they are numbered and finished. Our persecutors are swifter than the eagles—God has brought upon us that judgment which he threatened by Moses, of bringing a nation against us as swift as the eagle flieth, Deut. xxviii. 49. Such were the horsemen of the Chaldean army. We could nowhere escape them, neither by fleeing to the mountains, nor by hiding ourselves in the valleys. The wilderness is in other places put for the lower, or pasture grounds. The breath of our nostrils, the anointed of the Lord, &c.—Our king, who was the very life of us; was taken in their pits—In those toils his enemies had laid for him. Some have sup-

A. M. 3416. 21 ¶ Rejoice and be glad, O B. C. 588. daughter of Edom, that dwellest in the land of Uz; ^dthe cup also shall pass through unto thee: thou shalt be drunken, and shalt make thyself naked.

^e Like Eccles. xi. 9.—^d Jeremiah xxv. 15, 16, 21; Obad. 10.
^e Isaiah xl. 2.

posed that the prophet speaks this of Josiah, but it seems more probable that Zedekiah is meant, and his being taken prisoner and led into captivity is here alluded to. Of whom we said, Under his shadow we shall live among the heathen—As long as he was safe, we had some hopes of being protected, and of preserving some face of government, although we were carried away into a foreign country. The protection a king affords his subjects is often, in Scripture, compared to the shelter of a great tree, which is a covert against storms and tempests: see Ezekiel xvii. 23, and xxxi. 6; Daniel iv. 12.

Verses 21, 22. Rejoice and be glad, O daughter of Edom—A sarcastical expression, as if the prophet had said, Rejoice while thou mayest, O Edom, over the calamities of the Jews; but thy joy shall not last long, for in a little time it shall come to thy 22 ^e The ^g punishment of thine iniquity is accomplished, O daughter of Zion; he will no more carry thee away into captivity: ^fhe will visit thine iniquity, O daughter of Edom; he will ^gdiscover thy sins.

^e Or, Thine iniquity.—^f Psalm cxxxvii. 7.—^g Or, carry thee captive for thy sins.

turn to feel God's afflicting hand; the cup of affliction shall pass unto thee: see Jer. xlix. 7, &c. The punishment of thine iniquity is accomplished, O daughter of Zion, &c.—It was usual for the prophets, when they denounced God's judgments against any heathen nation, at the same time to give gracious promises to Israel; thereby importing that God would never cast off the Jewish people utterly, as he did other nations, but would in due time extend his mercy toward them. He—Namely, God; will no more carry thee away—Or, rather, suffer thee to be carried; into captivity—“These and such like expressions, if they be understood in a strict, literal sense, must relate to the final restoration of the Jews.”—Lowth. He will discover thy sins—He will manifest how great thine iniquities have been, by the remarkable judgments wherewith he will punish thee.

CHAPTER V.

In the Syriac, Vulgate, and Arabic versions, this chapter is entitled, The prayer of Jeremiah. But no such title appears in the Hebrew copies, or in the LXX. It is rather a memorial, representing, in the name of the whole body of Jewish exiles, the many and grievous hardships they groaned under, and humbly entreating God to commiserate their wretchedness, and to restore them once more to his favour, and to their ancient prosperity. More particularly, it contains, (1.) A remonstrance of the present calamitous state of God's people in their captivity, 1–16. (2.) A protestation of their concern for God's sanctuary, as that which lay nearer their hearts than any secular interest of their own, 17, 18. (3.) An humble supplication to God, and exhortation with him, for the return of his mercy, 19–22. The chapter may be considered as an epilogue, or conclusion, well adapted to the contents of the preceding chapters.

A. M. 3416. REMEMBER, ^a O LORD, what is
B. C. 588. come upon us: consider, and behold ^b our reproach.

2 ^c Our inheritance is turned to strangers, our houses to aliens.

3 We are orphans and fatherless, our mothers are as widows.

^a Psa. lxxxix. 50, 51.—^b Chap. ii. 15; Psa. lxxix. 4.—^c Psa. lxxix. 1.—^d Heb. cometh for price.

NOTES ON CHAPTER V.

Verses 1–6. Consider, and behold our reproach—Which we suffer from the heathen nations. Our inheritance is turned to strangers—Namely, to the Babylonians and others, to whom our lands are given. We are orphans and fatherless—All the chief men being carried away to Babylon, lest they should make any fresh attempts to shake off the Babylonian yoke, all that were left in Judea were poor

4 We have drunken our water for money; our wood ¹ is sold unto us.

5 ^d Our ² necks are under persecution: we labour, and have no rest.

6 ^e We have given the hand ^f to the Egyptians, and to the Assyrians, to be satisfied with bread.

^d Deut. xxviii. 48; Jer. li. 14.—^e Heb. On our necks are we persecuted.—^f Gen. xli. 2; Jer. l. 15.—^g Hos. xii. 1.

people, destitute of almost every thing. We have drunk our water for money, &c.—When our country was in our own possession, we had free use of water and wood, both which we are now forced to buy. Our necks are under persecution—We are become slaves to our enemies, who make us labour incessantly. We have given the hand to the Egyptians, &c.—We have been obliged to stretch out our hands to the Egyptians and Assyrians for bread to

A. M. 3416. 7 ^a Our fathers have sinned, and
B. C. 583. ^a are not; and we have borne their iniquities.

8 ⁱ Servants have ruled over us: there is none that doth deliver us out of their hand.

9 We gat our bread with the peril of our lives because of the sword of the wilderness.

10 Our ^k skin was black like an oven because of the ³ terrible famine.

11 ¹ They ravished the women in Zion, and the maids in the cities of Judah.

12 Princes are hanged up by their hand;
^m the faces of elders were not honoured.

13 They took the young men ⁿ to grind, and the children fell under the wood.

^g Jer. xxxi. 29; Ezek. xviii. 2.—^h Gen. xlii. 13; Zech. i. 5.
ⁱ Neh. v. 15.—^k Job xxx. 30; Psalm cxix. 83; Chapter iv. 8.
^l Or, terrors, or, storms.—^m Isa. xlii. 16; Zech. xiv. 2.—ⁿ Isa.
xlvii. 6; Chap. iv. 16.—^o Judg. xvi. 21.—^p Job xix. 9; Psa. lxxxix. 39.

support us. Whether the expression here used implies their begging it of them, or buying it with money, is not quite plain.

Verses 7–10. Our fathers have sinned, and are not—Death hath secured our fathers from these evils, though they had sinned; but the punishment they escaped, we suffer in the most grievous degree: see note on Jer. xxxi. 29. The expression, is not, or,
are not, is often used of those who are departed out of this world, Gen. xlii. 13. Servants have ruled over us—Servants to the great men among the Chal-deans, and other strangers, are become our masters, Neh. v. 15. We gat our bread with the peril of our lives, &c.—It was at the hazard of our lives that we brought in the grain out of the fields, on account of the robbers who infested the country. Blaney thinks that the prophet refers here to the incursions of the Arabian free-booters, who, he supposes, might not be improperly styled, the sword of the wilderness, to whose depredations the people, on account of their weak and helpless state, were continually exposed, while they followed their necessary business.
Our skin was black like an oven—Famine and other hardships changed the very colour of our countenances.

Verses 12–16. Princes are hanged up by their hand—By the hand of their enemies. They took the young men to grind—To grind at the mill was the common employment of slaves, Exod. xi. 5. The children fell under the wheel—They made children turn the handle of the mill till they fell down through weariness: so some explain it with relation to the former part of the verse. But the expression may be understood of making them carry such heavy burdens of wood that they fainted under the load.
The elders have ceased from the gate—The elders no more sit in the gates of the cities, to administer justice to every one, and keep things in order. The young men from their music—Those songs of mirth and joy which used to be heard in our nation are

14 The elders have ceased from the A. M. 3416 gate, the young men from their music. B. C. 588.

15 The joy of our heart is ceased; our dance is turned into mourning.

16 ^o The ⁴ crown is fallen from our head: wo unto us, that we have sinned!

17 For this ^p our heart is faint; ^q for these things our eyes are dim.

18 Because of the mountain of Zion, which is desolate, the foxes walk upon it.

19 Thou, O LORD, ^r remainest for ever; ^s thy throne from generation to generation.

20 ^t Wherefore dost thou forget us for ever,
and forsake us ^u so long time?

21 ^v Turn thou us unto thee, O LORD, and ⁴ Hebrew, The crown of our head is fallen.—^p Chapter i. 22.

^q Psa. vi. 7; Chapter ii. 11.—^r Psalm ix. 7; x. 16; xxix. 10;
xc. 2; cii. 12, 26, 27; cxlv. 13; Hab. i. 12.—^s Psalm xlv. 6.
^t Psa. xliii. 1.—^u Heb. for length of days?—^v Psa. lxxx. 3, 7, 19; Jer. xxxi. 18.

heard no longer. The joy of our heart is ceased— Since the enemy came in upon us like a flood, we have been strangers to all comfort. Our dance is turned into mourning—Instead of leaping for joy, as formerly, we sink and lie down in sorrow. This may refer especially to the joy of their solemn feasts:
this was now turned into mourning, which was doubled on their festival days, in remembrance of their former delights and comforts. The crown is fallen from our head—At their feasts, at their marriages, and other seasons of festivity, they used to crown themselves with flowers. The prophet most probably alludes to this custom, as we may gather from the preceding verses. The general meaning is, “All our glory is at an end, together with the advantages of being thy people, and enjoying thy presence, by which we were distinguished from the rest of the world.”—Lowth.

Verses 17, 18. For this our heart is faint—And sinks under the load of its own heaviness. Our eyes are dim—See on chap. ii. 11. Our spirits fail us, and we are almost blind with weeping. Because of the mountain of Zion—The holy mountain, and the temple built upon it. Nothing lies with so heavy a load upon the spirits of good people, as that which threatens the ruin of religion, or weakens the interest thereof: and it is a mark of our possessing saving grace, if we can appeal to God that we are more concerned for his cause than for any temporal interests of our own. The Jews had polluted the mountain of Zion with their sins, and therefore God justly made it desolate; which he did to such a degree that the foxes walked upon it, as freely and commonly as they did in the woods. It is lamentable indeed when the mountain of Zion is made a portion for foxes, Psa. lxxiii. 10.

Verses 19–22. Thou, O Lord, remainest for ever
—Though, for our sins, thou hast suffered these calamities to befall us, and our throne, through thy righteous providence, is thrown down; yet thou art

A. M. 3416. we shall be turned; renew our days
B. C. 588. as of old.

⁶ Or, For wilt thou

still the same God that thou ever wast: thy power is not diminished, nor thy goodness abated. Thou still governest the world, and orderest all the events of it, and shalt rule it, and superintend its affairs, for ever and ever. Thou art, therefore, always able to help us, and art thou not as willing as able? Is it possible thou shouldst be unmindful of the promises which thou hast made to thy people? Our hope, therefore, is still in thee, unto whom we look for mercy and deliverance. Wherefore dost thou forget us, &c.—Wherefore dost thou act toward us, in the dispensations of thy providence, as if thou hadst forgotten us, and forsaken us, and that for a long time? Turn thou us unto thee, O Lord—Turn us unto thyself from our sins and idols, by a sincere repentance and thorough conversion; and we shall be turned—Effectually and lastingly turned to thee, so as to turn from thee no more. Renew our days as of old—Restore us to that happiness and prosperity which we formerly enjoyed. But thou hast utterly rejected us—Hebrew, כִּי אָמַר כָּאֵם מֵאֲסַתְנוּ, which, it seems, should rather be rendered, For surely thou hast cast us off, &c., the prophet, in this verse, assigning the reason of the preceding application. For God's having rejected his people, and expressed great indignation against them, was the cause and ground 22 ⁶ But thou hast utterly rejected A. M. 3416.

us; thou art very wroth against us. B. C. 588.

utterly reject us?

of their pleading with him, and praying thus earnestly to be restored to his favour and the enjoyment of their ancient privileges. The Jewish rabbins, because they would not have the book to conclude with the melancholy words of this verse, repeat after them the prayer of the preceding verse, namely, Turn thou us unto thee, &c., a prayer which we cannot too frequently, or too fervently, address to God, for ourselves and others. And surely the fervent zeal with which the prophet beseeches the Lord to have compassion on his people, should excite us, at all times, to pray earnestly to him, especially for the protection, safety, and prosperity of his church, and the supply of all its wants, whether it be exposed to persecutions and sufferings on the one hand, or the assaults of infidelity, impiety, and vice on the other. We may learn also, from this humble and earnest prayer of the prophet for the restoration of the Jewish nation, that, when God corrects us, and afflicts us, even with the greatest severity, we must not despond or restrain prayer before him, but have recourse to him by true repentance and faith, and implore his pardoning mercy and renewing grace, as the only way to obtain the light of his countenance, and a restoration to our former state of peace, tranquillity, and comfort.

THE BOOK

OF THE

PROPHET EZEKIEL.

ARGUMENT.

EZEKIEL, being the son of Buzi, of the house of Aaron, was consequently a priest, as well as a prophet. He was carried to Babylon, with many other Jews, in Jehoiachin's captivity, and therefore dates his prophecies by the years of that captivity. He began his prophetic office in the fifth year after it, and continued to prophesy about twenty years, namely, from the year of the world 3409 to 3430. His name, happily expressive of his character, signifies the power, strength, or courage of God. It appears he did not reside at or near Babylon, but by the river Chebar, many miles north of that city, great numbers of the captives being placed there. These, his fellow-exiles, as St. Jerome observes in his preface to this book, being disposed to repine at their condition, as more wretched, they supposed, than that of their brethren who had been suffered to remain in Judea; a principal part of the prophet's design seems to have been to check these murmurings, by removing the cause of them, and showing them how preferable their circumstances were to those of their countrymen who had not yet been carried into captivity as they had been. For this purpose he sets before them that terrible scene of calamities which God was about to bring upon Judea and Jerusalem, which should end in the utter destruction of the city and temple; recounting and painting, in strong and lively colours, the heinous provocations of the Jews, which were bringing down these heavy judgments upon them. Jeremiah, it must be observed, was at the same time employed to the like purpose at Jerusalem, in persuading the inhabitants left there, and in the other parts of Judea, not to think themselves more the favourites of God than their brethren who had been carried into captivity, for that more grievous calamities would soon befall them, while those who were at present captives should experience God's peculiar favour and protection. But these prophets were neither of them duly regarded by those to whom they addressed themselves; for the Jews who remained in Judea gave no credit to Jeremiah's predictions against them, but thought meanly of those who had been carried into captivity, and believed themselves to be the peculiar favourites of God, and that they only should possess the land of Canaan, while their captive brethren should be for ever excluded from it. And the Prophet Ezekiel was little more regarded by those in captivity; for, notwithstanding all his declarations, they murmured against God, and thought themselves more hardly dealt by than their brethren who remained in their own land.

Although some frivolous objections, grounded on gross mistakes, have been started against the authenticity of this book, the prophecies contained in it, which have been very surprisingly fulfilled, and are fulfilling at this day, are a demonstration both of its truth, and that it was written by inspiration of God; especially the prophecies concerning Tyre and Egypt, chapters xxvi.—xxxii. And as to the many predictions contained in it, which are not yet fulfilled, relating to the restoration of Israel, and the triumphs of the church over all her enemies, these, upon a careful investigation, will be found to coincide so entirely with many parts of Isaiah's and Daniel's prophecies, and those contained in the Revelation by St. John, that we can neither doubt their being given by divine inspiration, nor that they will be fulfilled at the proper season.

It appears from many parts of Ezekiel's writings that, exclusive of his prophetic gift, he was a man of considerable learning and talents. "He had great erudition and genius," says Grotius, in the Introduction to his Commentary on this prophet, "so that, setting aside his gift of prophecy, which is incomparable, he may deservedly be compared with Homer on account of his beautiful conceptions, his illustrious comparisons, and his extensive knowledge of various matters, particularly of architecture." Rapin, in his Treatise on Eloquence, calls his style THE TERRIBLE, as having something in it which strikes the reader with a holy dread and astonishment. Bishop Lowth's character of him is as follows: "Ezekiel is inferior to Jeremiah in elegance, but is equal to Isaiah in sublimity, though in a different species of the sublime. He is bold, vehement, tragical, and deals very much in amplification. His sentiments are lofty, animated, poignant, and full of indignation. His images are fertile, magnificent, and sometimes rather bordering on indelicacy. His diction is sounding, grave, austere, rough, and sometimes uncultivated. He abounds in repetitions, not for the sake of beauty or grace, but from vehemence and indignation. Whaever his subject be, he keeps it always in his eye, without the least deviation, and is so much taken up with it that he has scarcely any regard to order or connection. In other things he may perhaps be exceeded by the other prophets; but in that species for which he was particularly turned, that is, in force, impetuosity, weight, grandeur, no writer ever equalled him. His diction is clear enough; almost all his obscurity arises from his subjects. His visions are particularly obscure; which, however, as in Hosea, Amos, and Zechariah, are delivered in a plain and historical narration. The greater part of this book, but especially the middle of it, is poetical: but some passages are so rough and unpolished, that we are frequently at a loss to what species of writing we ought to refer them."—De Sacra Poesi Hebræorum, Prælec. xxi. A learned German professor, Eichhorn, quoted by Bishop Newcome, having, in his Introduction to the Old Testament, spoken of Ezekiel as a writer "distinguished by much originality; adding dignity to his relations, by lively fictions of his inexhaustible imagination;" and as "creating great artificial images, and by such means new worlds;" and having represented the prophet's first two visions as being "accurately polished with much art," and therefore "could not possibly be an unpremeditated work;" the bishop, with a reference to these sentiments, delivers his own judgment of Ezekiel as follows: "I do not consider him as the framer of those august and astonishing visions, and of those admirable poetical representations, which he committed to writing; but as an instrument in the hands of God, who vouchsafed to reveal himself through a long succession of ages, not only in divers parts, constituting a magnificent and uniform whole, but also in divers manners, as by a voice, by dreams, by inspiration, and by plain or enigmatical vision. If he is circumstantial in describing the wonderful scenes which were presented to him in the visions of God, he should be regarded as a faithful representer of the divine revelations for the purpose of information and instruction; and not as exhausting an exuberant fancy, in minutely filling up an ideal picture. It is probable that Buzi, his father, had preserved his own family from the taint of idolatry; and had educated his son, for the priestly office, in all the learning of the Hebrews, and particularly in the study of their sacred books. Josephus says, that he was a youth at the time of his captivity; and his first revelation was made to him only five years after that period. This is a season of life when a fervour of imagination is natural in men of superior endowments. His genius led him to amplification; like that of Ovid, Lucan, and Juvenal, among the Roman poets; though he occasionally shows himself capable of the austere and concise manner, of which the seventh chapter is a remarkable instance. But the Divine Spirit did not overrule the natural bent of his mind. Variety is thus produced in the sacred writings. Nahum sounds the trumpet of war, Hosea is sententious, Isaiah sublime, Jeremiah pathetic, Ezekiel copious. This diffuseness of manner in mild and affectionate exhortation, this vehement enlarging on the guilt and consequent sufferings of his countrymen, seems wisely adapted to their capacities and circumstances; and must have had a forcible tendency to awaken them from their lethargy." It has been observed, as an apology for the roughness and incorrectness which appear in the style of this prophet, "that he lived in an age when the beauty, purity, and majesty of the Hebrew language were upon the decline, and that it would argue a great absurdity to expect the vigour of youth in the imbecilities of old age."—See Michaelis's Notes, p. 110. St. Jerome hath more than once observed, that the beginning and latter part of this prophecy are more than ordinarily difficult and obscure, and may justly be reckoned among the things in Scripture which are δυσνόητα, hard to be understood.

In the first three chapters, Ezekiel describes a wonderful vision, whereby God confirmed and instructed him in his prophetic office. In the following chapters, to the twenty-fifth, he describes the horrible sins of the Jews, especially of those remaining in Jerusalem and Judea, and their approaching punishments. From thence to the thirty-third chapter he foretels the ruin of many neighbouring nations who were enemies to the Jews, as the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Edomites, the Philistines, the Tyrians, Sidonians, and Egyptians. From the thirty-third to the fortieth chapter, the murmurings and hypocrisies of the Jews, who were captives in Chaldea, are severely censured, with an exhortation to true repentance, and to a firm expectation of an approaching salvation; in which not only the deliverance from the Babylonish captivity, but the far greater deliverance of all the world from the bondage of sin and ignorance by Jesus Christ, was signified. In the last nine chapters is related a grand vision of the building of a new temple.

The liberty with which Ezekiel treated the idolatry of his countrymen is said to have so highly irritated the chief of them, as to have occasioned his being put to death: and in the time of Epiphanius it was a current opinion that his remains were deposited in the same sepulchre with those of Shem and Arphaxad; that his tomb was then to be seen; and that the Jews kept a lamp burning in it; who likewise pretended that they had this prophecy written by the prophet's own hand which they read every year on the day of expiation.—Calmet's Preface to this book.

CHAPTER I.

We have here, (1.) An account of Ezekiel, and of the date and place of his call to the prophetic office, 1-3. (2.) A vision granted him of a whirlwind, great cloud, fire, and four living creatures coming out of the midst of it, 4, 5. (3.) A description of them, and of their motions, 6-14. (4.) Of wheels moved by them, and of the whole being directed by God, 15-25. (5.) Of the glory of God, as in our nature, enthroned above them, 26-28.

A. M. 3409.
B. C. 595.

NOW it came to pass in the thirtieth year, in the fourth month, in the fifth day of the month, as I was among the ¹captives ^aby the river of Chebar, that ^bthe heavens were opened, and I saw ^cvisions of God.

2 In the fifth day of the month, which was

¹ Heb. captivity.—^a Verse 3; Chapter iii. 15, 23; x. 15, 20, 22; xliii. 3.—^b So Matt. iii. 16; Acts vii. 56; x. 11; Rev. xix. 11.—^c Chap. viii. 3.

NOTES ON CHAPTER I.

Verse 1. Now it came to pass in the thirtieth year—It is very uncertain from whence this computation of time commences. But the most probable opinion seems to be that which the Chaldee paraphrast, Archbishop Usher, Dr. Prideaux, and other learned men adopt: namely, that these thirty years are to be reckoned from the time when Josiah and all the people of Judah entered into that solemn covenant mentioned 2 Kings xxii. 3; and when the book of the law was found by Hilkiah the priest, which was in the eighteenth year of Josiah, from which date, it appears, to the fifth year of the captivity, were thirty years. This being an event which put the Jewish state upon a new trial, was certainly sufficiently remarkable to render the time when it took place an era proper to be dated from. Accordingly, from the same period learned men compute the forty years of Judah's transgression, mentioned chap. iv. 6. In the fourth month—Thammuz, which nearly corresponds to our July; as I was among the captives—Carried away by Nebuchadnezzar, with King Jehoiachin, 2 Kings xxiv. 14. Thus the godly are sometimes involved in the same outward calamities which befall the wicked. By the river Chebar—Which river Ammianus calls Aboras, and Ptolemy, Chaboras. It flows into the east side of the Euphrates at Circesium, or Carchemish, nearly two hundred miles northward of Babylon. On this river, at Tel-abib and other places, Nebuchadnezzar planted his Jewish captives, probably to cultivate waste lands, or to carry on some manufacture for the benefit of their victors. This was the scene of Ezekiel's prophecies, which were continued through the course of twenty-two years. Here he was ⁱⁿ in body, though in visionary representation he was sometimes taken to Jerusalem: see Bishop Newcome.

The heavens were opened—As a prelude to a heavenly vision. The appearance of the heavens, as it were, opening, seems, in this and such like cases, to have been represented first to excite attention to the vision that was to follow: see Matt. iii. 16. And I saw visions of God—It is probable that the captive Jews had been left some time without prophets or visions from God, which might supply the want the fifth year of ^d King Jehoiachin's A. M. 3409. captivity, B. C. 595.

3 The word of the LORD came expressly unto ² Ezekiel the priest, the son of Buzi, in the land of the Chaldeans by the river Chebar; and ^e the hand of the LORD was there upon him.

4 ¶ And I looked, and behold, ^fa whirlwind

^d 2 Kings xxiv. 12, 15.—^e Heb. Jehezkel.—^f 1 Kings xviii. 46; 2 Kings iii. 15; Chap. iii. 14, 22; viii. 1; xl. 1.—^g Isa. xxi. 1; Jer. xxiii. 19; xxv. 32.

of the more ordinary means of instruction; at length, however, God raised them up a prophet in their captivity, to whom he first revealed himself by an extraordinary vision, as he had done to Isaiah, chap. vi., to Jeremiah, chap. i., to Abraham, Acts vii. 2, and to many others of his servants, in order, as it were, to open and settle a correspondence, and a satisfactory way of intercourse, so that there needed not afterward a vision upon every fresh revelation made to them.

Verses 2, 3. In the fifth year of King Jehoiachin's captivity—This was of course the fifth year of Zedekiah, who succeeded Jehoiachin. And as the city and temple were destroyed in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, (2 Kings xxv. 2,) it follows that this vision appeared to Ezekiel six years before that event. The Hebrew writers, it must be observed, use several computations of the beginning of the Babylonish captivity: see the note on Jer. xxv. 11. That under Jehoiachin, wherein Ezekiel was made a captive, is the computation he always follows in the succeeding parts of his prophecy. The word of the Lord—This expression signifies any sort of revelation, whether by a vision, such as is related in the following verses, or by a voice, as chap. ii. 3; came expressly—Hebrew, היה הרה, being was, or, in coming came, that is, came assuredly; unto Ezekiel—It came with such clearness and conviction that he could neither doubt of its divine authority, mistake its import, nor question his being appointed to the prophetic office; the priest—Being of the family of Aaron, he was a priest by birth, and was now made a prophet by an extraordinary call. In the land of the Chaldeans—In the worst places God can raise up instruments for the service of his church. And the hand of the Lord was there upon him—He felt sensible impressions of a divine power closing his senses to external objects, opening his eyes to see the visions, opening his ears to hear the voice, and his heart to receive both. When the hand of the Lord goes along with his word, then it becomes effectual.

Verse 4. I looked—I very diligently surveyed the things which were represented to me in the vision, and behold a whirlwind—Denoting the indignation and judgments of God; a quick, impetuous, and

A. M. 3409. came ² out of the north, a great cloud, B. C. 595. and a fire ³ infolding itself, and a brightness was about it, and out of the midst thereof as the colour of amber, out of the midst of the fire.

5 ^h Also out of the midst thereof came the likeness of four living creatures. And ⁱ this was their appearance; they had ^k the likeness of a man.

6 And every one had four faces, and every one had four wings.

7 And their feet were ⁴ straight feet; and the sole of their feet was like the sole of a calf's foot; and they sparkled ¹ like the A. M. 3409. colour of burnished brass. B. C. 595.

8 ^m And they had the hands of a man under their wings on their four sides; and they four had their faces and their wings.

9 ⁿ Their wings were joined one to another; ^o they turned not when they went; they went every one straight forward.

10 As for ^p the likeness of their faces, they four ^q had the face of a man ^r and the face of a lion, on the right side: ^s and they four had the face of an ox on the left side; ^t they four also had the face of an eagle.

² Jer. i. 14; iv. 6; vi. 1.—³ Heb. catching itself.—^h Rev. iv. 6, &c.—ⁱ Chap. x. 8, &c.—^k Verse 10; Chap. x. 14, 21. ⁴ Heb. a straight foot.—¹ Dan. x. 6; Rev. i. 15.

^m Chap. x. 18, 21.—ⁿ Verse 11.—^o Verse 12; Chap. x. 11. ^p Rev. iv. 7.—^q Num. ii. 10.—^r Num. ii. 3.—^s Num. ii. 18. ^t Num. ii. 25.

irresistible vengeance: see the margin. It is described here as coming out of the north, because, as has been before observed, the Chaldean army, by which the judgment was to be executed, would, for convenience of forage and water, march first northward, and then turn about toward Judea, so that they did, strictly speaking, come into it from the north. A great cloud—It is usual to express any great trouble by a great, dark cloud hanging over people's heads. And here, in particular, it seems to signify the calamity coming on Judea by the Chaldean invasion. And a fire infolding itself—A fire appearing in folds, like one wreath within another. This was indicative of God's avenging justice, for God is described in Scripture as a consuming fire, when he comes to execute his judgments upon sinners: see Deut. iv. 24. And a brightness was about it—Clear discoveries of God's holiness and justice, which, it is thus signified, would be made manifest in what was about to be done. Out of the midst thereof as the colour of amber—Rather, as the appearance of amber. "There was a bright pellucid appearance."—Newcome. But Bochart shows that ηλεκτρον, the word used in the LXX., signifies not only amber and crystal, but a metal compounded of gold and silver, or of gold and brass; and thinks that the last, called χαλκολιβανον, Rev. i. 15, best suits this place. This seems to have been a symbolical representation of the Jewish people; for as this compound metal was not consumed in the fire, so the Jews were not to be wholly destroyed by the grievous calamities they were to be involved in, but to come out purer from the furnace of affliction, as gold and brass out of the fire.

Verses 5, 6. Out of the midst thereof came the likeness of four living creatures—Termed cherubim, chap. ix. 3, and x. throughout. These seem to have been a hieroglyphical representation of the holy angels, attendants on the king of glory, and the ministers of his providence, as well when he executes judgments on sinners, as when he confers benefits on his people. They were four, probably to denote that they were employed in all the four quarters of the world. They had the likeness of a man—"They had the human stature." So Houbigant. Or, as others interpret the phrase, "for the greatest part they appeared in the human shape." This was to signify that they were intelligent and rational creatures, of which that form is to us the token. But each of them had four faces, which were probably emblems of their endowments and characters. "The face of a man implied that they possessed knowledge, foresight, prudence, compassion, and philanthropy; that of a lion intimated their boldness and force in executing the will of God; that of an ox denoted strength, unwearied diligence, and perseverance; and that of an eagle, spiritual sagacity and heavenly affections, by which they soared aloft above all created objects, to the uncreated source of holiness and felicity."—Scott. And every one had four wings—By which seems to be signified the activity and speed with which they executed God's commands in all parts of the world.

Verses 7-10. And their feet were straight feet—Emblematical probably of simplicity and uprightness, or of the steadiness of their obedience. And the sole of their feet like the sole of a calf's foot—To signify their firmness and constancy in performing the divine will. Or, as some think, the soles of their feet, being divided, like those of calves and other clean animals, might be emblematical of their perfect purity and holiness. And they sparkled like the colour of burnished brass—To signify their zeal in God's service, or that the glory of God should shine forth, or be made manifest in their actions. And they had the hands of a man—To show their power and ability to perform with speed what was enjoined them; or, that they did all things orderly, distinctly, and quickly; the hands of a man being most aptly made, of any thing we know, for performing any artificial operations. And by these hands being under their wings might be signified that their works were invisible and unknown to man, and done without any ostentation. They four had their faces and their wings—This is a repetition of what had been said before, in order that it might be more noticed. Their wings were joined one to another—

A. M. 3409.
B. C. 595.

11 Thus were their faces : and their wings were ⁵ stretched upward ; two wings of every one were joined one to another, and ^u two covered their bodies.

12 And ^x they went every one straight forward ; ^y whither the spirit was to go, they went ; and ^z they turned not when they went.

13 As for the likeness of the living creatures, their appearance was like burning coals of fire, ^a and like the appearance of lamps : it went up

⁶ Or, divided above.—^u Isa. vi. 2.—^x Verse 9 ; Chapter x. 22.
^y Verse 20.—^z Verses 9, 17.—^a Rev. iv. 5.

To signify their perfect agreement in the speedy execution of God's will ; and that all the acts which God performs by the ministry of his angels are admirably consistent, and agreeing with each other, and adapted to the purpose intended to be brought to pass. They turned not when they went—They were immediately ready to do the work assigned them without any delay or hinderance, and they proceeded directly on in one and the same undeviating course ; were constant and persevering in performing the divine will, without being turned aside therefrom by any obstacle whatever. They four had the face of a man, &c.—See note on verse 6.

Verses 11, 12. Their wings were stretched upward—That is, two wings of each, namely, in a posture of flying, to show that they were always actively employed in executing God's commands. Some unite this clause with the preceding, and render the whole, Their faces and their wings were stretched upward, namely, denoting a posture of attention, as if they were hearkening to the voice of God's words, as angels are represented Psa. ciii. 20. Two wings of every one were joined one to another, &c.—Of the two living creatures in front, and of the two behind, the right wing of one reached to the left wing of the other, the extremities of the expanded inner wings forming an arch. In Isa. vi. 2, and Rev. iv. 6, each of the seraphim has six wings assigned him, whereas the living creatures here have each but four ; the reason of which is, that in those places these appearances are described as making use of two of their wings to cover their faces, out of reverence to the divine presence, before which they stand and worship : whereas, here they are supposed to be actively employed as ministers of the Divine Providence, in executing his counsels in all parts of the world. And two covered their bodies—To signify, perhaps, that we men are not able to understand the nature of angels. Whither the spirit was to go, they went—Without any dispute or delay : the Spirit of God directed all their motions : and all their ministrations were as truly unconstrained and free, as they were subservient to God's designs in his providential government of the church and the world. They turned not when they went—They looked not back ; they turned not out of the way ; they ceased not till they had completed their course.

Verses 13, 14. As for the likeness of the living and down among the living creatures ; A. M. 3409.

and the fire was bright, and out of B. C. 595.
the fire went forth lightning.

14 And the living creatures ^b ran and returned ^c as the appearance of a flash of lightning.

15 Now as I beheld the living creatures, behold ^d one wheel upon the earth by the living creatures, with his four faces.

16 ^e The appearance of the wheels and their work was ^f like unto the colour of a beryl : and creatures—Their colour, or aspect ; their appearance was like burning coals—They were inflamed by the Spirit of God with a holy zeal for his glory, and with indignation against impenitent sinners. This might also be intended as a symbolical declaration, that after the long patience of God, all things now tended to vengeance, and the executing of his judgments upon the Jews ; for executing which he would use these angels as ministers. And like the appearance of lamps—This probably signified, that the uprightness of the divine justice should shine forth, or be made manifest in these judgments. It went up and down among the living creatures—That is, the fire moved itself up and down. Milton's expression, (Paradise Lost, vi. 756,) is, "And careering fires between." That is, fires which ran swiftly, and, as it were, tilted at each other : emblematical of the terrible effects of the ministry of these living creatures on the objects of divine vengeance. Out of the fire went forth lightning—Significative of the irresistible force of the divine judgments, and the terrible and sudden destruction to be produced by them. And the living creatures ran and returned as a flash of lightning—With inexpressible velocity : the swiftness of their motions every way resembled flashes of lightning. "They ran to do their work, and execute their orders," says Henry, "and then returned to give an account of what they had done, and receive new instructions. They ran into the lower world, to do what was to be done there : and when they had done, returned as a flash of lightning, to the upper world, to the vision of God. Thus we should be in the affairs of this world : though we run into them, we must not repose in them, but our souls must presently return like lightning to God, their rest and centre."

^b Zech. iv. 10.—^c Matt. xxiv. 27.—^d Chap. x. 9.—^e Chap. x. 9, 10.—^f Dan. x. 6.

Verses 15, 16. Now as I beheld, &c.—The prophet here proceeds to relate what he saw besides the living creatures, which he had described in the foregoing verses. Behold one wheel upon the earth beside the living creatures—By each of the living creatures stood one wheel, so that they were four in number, according to the number of the living creatures. While he was contemplating the glory of the former vision, this other was presented to him : wherein the dispensations of providence are compared to the wheels of a machine, which all contribute to the regular motion of it. The shape of

A. M. 3409. they four had one likeness : and their
B. C. 595. appearance and their work was as it were a wheel in the middle of a wheel.

17 When they went, they went upon their four sides : ^ε and they turned not when they went.

18 As for their rings, they were so high that ^ε Verse 12.—^ε Or, strakes.

wheels, and their fitness for continual motion, aptly represent the constant revolution of human affairs under the conduct of providence, which orders, governs, and changes. Sometimes one spoke of the wheel is uppermost, sometimes another. "Those persons or communities which to-day are at the top of the wheel, may to-morrow be at the bottom, beyond all human expectation or prevention; yet in the midst of apparent confusion, and while every thing seems hurried on by blind chance, or fatal necessity, the most perfect regularity is observed, and the changes are directed by as fixed laws as those which regulate the motions of the wheels."—Scott. The prophet's seeing the wheels upon the earth was intended to denote, that the vision related to the affairs of this world; and the wheels being said to be beside the living creatures, which attended to direct their motions, manifests, that all inferior creatures are, and move, and act, as the Creator, by the ministration of angels, directs and influences them: visible effects are managed and governed by invisible causes. The appearance of the wheels—That is, their colour, for it is plain that is here intended; and their work—Their workmanship, form, or figure, as the word מְעֵשֶׂה is repeatedly used, 1 Kings vii. 17, &c., all that was wrought, whether engraved or otherwise, was of one colour; was like unto the colour of a beryl—A gem of a bluish green; and called in the text here Tarshish, probably from the place whence it came. The colour intended is azure, or that of the blue sky mixed with a bright green: see Dan. x. 6. Probably the wisdom, justice, and goodness of God's providential government may be here signified by this beautiful colour of the wheels. They four had one likeness—They were the same for dimensions, colour, frame, and motion, to indicate that there is a consistency and uniformity in all the dispensations of Divine Providence. Their appearance, &c., was as it were a wheel in the middle of a wheel—This may be explained two ways; either, 1st, That there were smaller wheels connected with, and put in motion by the larger, an emblematical representation of the connection of causes and effects; or, 2d, That they crossed one another in the middle, to signify the unsearchableness of the divine dispensations, and the intricacy of the affairs of this world, which seem to cross and thwart each other; but yet all move under the superintendence of infinite wisdom, justice, and goodness.

Verses 17, 18. When they went—Namely, the wheels; they went upon their four sides—The wheels being supposed spherical as a globe, by an they were dreadful; and their ^ε rings A. M. 3409. were ^h full of eyes round about them B. C. 595.

four.

19 And ⁱ when the living creatures went, the wheels went by them: and when the living creatures were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up.

^h Chap. x. 12; Zech. iv. 10.—ⁱ Chap. x. 16, 17.

exact framing of two wheels one in the other, the four semicircles, which were in two whole wheels, may well be taken for these four sides on which these wheels moved, and such a wheel will readily be turned to all points of the compass. An expressive emblem this of that divine providence which extends alike easily to every part and thing; and, like a wheel or globe, has no beginning, ending, or separation, but is a circumference including the whole of things, and equally acts more or less in every place and part. And they turned, or returned, not when they went—That is, they never returned, or went backward, till they came to the end of their course; but proceeded on in one straight course and unbent line of direction. So firm and sure are the methods, so unalterable and constant the purposes of God, and so invariable the obedience and observance of holy angels. So subject to the will of God are all second causes, and so surely does the Divine Providence always accomplish its ends. Thus God speaks of his word and decree, Isa. lv. 11: It shall not return unto me void, but shall accomplish that which I please. 'To return by the way that he went, is a proverbial speech, signifying a man's missing his aim, or not accomplishing his designs: see 1 Kings xiii. 9; 2 Kings xix. 33. As for their rings, or fellos—Namely, the circumference of the wheels; they were so high that they were dreadful—Their circuit was so vast as to impress a fear on the beholder. This implied the vast compass of providence, which, as we read, Wisd. viii. 1, reacheth from one end to another mightily, or, as St. Paul expresses it, the height and depth both of the wisdom and knowledge of God, how unsearchable his judgments are, and his ways past finding out, Rom. xi. 33. And their wings were full of eyes round about them four—That is, every one of the four wheels; and so were also the living creatures themselves: see chap. x. 12, to signify the great wisdom and foresight which direct all the dispensations of Divine Providence. How fitly do the wheels, their motion, their height, their eyes, and the form, appearance, motions, wings, and eyes of the living creatures express the height and depth, the unsearchableness, wisdom, and vigilance of the Divine Providence!

Verses 19-21. When the living creatures went, the wheels went by them—The living creatures and the wheels moved in concert, to show with what readiness and alacrity all the instruments of providence concur in carrying on its great designs and purposes; and that second causes here below act

A. M. 3409. 20 ^k Whithersoever the spirit was to go, they went, thither was their spirit to go; and the wheels were lifted up over against them: ^l for the spirit ^o of the living creature was in the wheels.

21 ^m When those went, these went; and when those stood, these stood: and when those were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up over against them: for the spirit ^o of the living creature was in the wheels.

22 ⁿ And the likeness of the firmament upon the heads of the living creature was as the colour of the terrible crystal, stretched forth over their heads above.

23 And under the firmament were their

^k Verse 12. — ^l Chap. x. 17. — ^o Or, of life. — ^m Verses 19, 20; Chap. x. 17. — ⁿ Or, of life. — ^o Chap. x. 1.

under the superintendence and conduct of God and his holy angels. When the living creatures were lifted up, &c., the wheels were lifted up—By the wheels being lifted up with the living creatures, may be signified, that the dispensations of God on earth, where the wheels were first seen, are connected with the things of heaven, and are all appointed and directed with a reference to the concerns of God's church, and of the spiritual and heavenly world. Whithersoever the Spirit was to go—Namely, the Spirit of God; they went—They punctually observed his conduct, and obeyed his influence. Their wills were directed by his will. And the wheels were lifted up over against them—Proportionably to the lifting up of the living creatures. The wheels, inferior agents, and second causes, act in unison with, and under the influence of, these angelic ministers of the divine will. For the spirit of the living creatures was in the wheels—Both the wheels and the living creatures were actuated by one and the same spirit. An undiscerned, yet divine, mighty, wise, and ever-living power and energy, influenced all, and governed all. When those went, these went—This is only a repetition of what is contained in the foregoing verse.

Verses 22-25. And the likeness—The appearance or resemblance; of the firmament—The expanse, as the word signifies. Upon the heads of the living creatures—And, of course, of the wheels connected with them; was as the colour of the terrible crystal—For splendour, purity, and solidity. All that was above these creatures and wheels was beautiful, majestic, and glorious, insomuch that none could behold it without being dazzled and astonished at it: it could not but impress the mind of every beholder with veneration, solemnity, and awe, and therefore it is said to be terrible. And under the firmament—Below, at a great distance; were their wings straight—That is, the living creatures stood with their wings stretched out, ready for motion. The one toward the other—Prepared to concur in all their motions and actings. Every one had two, which wings straight, the one toward the other: every one had two, which covered on this side, and every one had two, which covered on that side, their bodies.

24 ^o And when they went, I heard the noise of their wings, ^p like the noise of great waters, as ^q the voice of the Almighty, the voice of speech, as the noise of a host: when they stood, they let down their wings.

25 And there was a voice from the firmament that was over their heads, when they stood, and had let down their wings.

26 ^r And above the firmament that was over their heads was the likeness of a throne, ^o Chapter x. 5. — ^p Chapter xliii. 2; Daniel x. 6; Rev. i. 15. ^q Job xxxvii. 4; Psa. xxix. 3, 4; lxviii. 33. — ^r Chap. x. 1.

covered on this side and on that side—On the right hand and on the left. The sense seems to be the same with that of verse 11, denoting that two of the wings of each living creature were stretched upward, to express their readiness to obey the divine commands; and with the other two they covered their bodies: see note on verse 11. And when they went—Were executing the commands of God; I heard the noise of their wings like the noise of great waters—Denoting “the terribleness of the judgments which they were to execute upon Jerusalem and the whole Jewish nation.” As the voice of the Almighty—It resembled great and dreadful thunder. The voice of speech like the noise of a host—Like the confused murmur of an army, intending the army of the Babylonians. All these noises signified that the commands which God had given, or was now giving, to these ministering spirits, were of a dreadful nature. When they stood—When they presented themselves before God, having performed their office; they let down their wings—Put themselves in a posture of hearkening to God's voice, and as it were quietly waited to receive his commands. And there was a voice, &c., when they stood—The Vulgate seems to give the sense of this verse more exactly, thus: Cum fieret vox super caput eorum, stabant et submittebant alas suas: when there was a voice over their heads they stood, &c., namely, in an attentive posture.

Verses 26, 27. Above the firmament was the likeness of a throne—Namely, the throne of God. God having given his prophet emblems of his attendants and ministers, while he was coming forth in the chariot of his power and justice, to execute judgment, and of the mysterious dispensations of his providence toward his church and the world, he now proceeds to discover to him some glimpses of his divine glory. The prophet does not say that he saw a real throne, but only the likeness of a throne, emblematical, doubtless, of God's sovereign power and dominion over all creatures, whether in heaven or on earth. God is described in Scripture as dwell-

A. M. 3409. "as the appearance of a sapphire-B. C. 595. stone: and upon the likeness of the throne was the likeness as the appearance of a man above upon it.

27 "And I saw as the colour of amber, as the appearance of fire round about within it, from the appearance of his loins even upward, and from the appearance of his loins even downward, I saw as it were the appear-

* Exodus xxiv. 10. —† Chapter viii. 2. —" Revelation iv. 3;
x. 1.

ing in light, and clothing himself with it. So the throne of God is here described as made up of light resembling the colours and brightness of a sapphirestone. And upon the likeness of the throne, as the appearance of a man—"When Moses and the elders saw the God of Israel, Exod. xxiv. 8, or the glory of God, as the Targum explains it, they saw no determinate figure, but an inconceivably resplendent brightness, that they might not think God could be represented by any image. But in this vision the form and shape of a man are directly represented to Ezekiel, as a prelude or figure of the incarnation." This, indeed, was doubtless the ever-blessed and only-begotten Son of God, who was in due time to assume human nature, and in that nature to be the visible image and representative of his invisible Father, whom no man hath seen, or can see, 1 Tim. vi.
16; John i. 18. He had appeared to Isaiah in glory, to constitute him a prophet, and he now appears to Ezekiel for the same purpose: see note on Isaiah vi. 1, and compare John xii. 37-41. He appears also as the Lawgiver and King of Israel, to vindicate his own honour, punish his rebellious subjects, and give warning by his prophet, ere he executed his just but severe indignation. And I saw as the colour of amber—See note on verse 4. As the appearance of fire—Said to be a fire infolding itself, verse 4. Round about within it—Namely, within the amber, to signify that Christ's executing of judgment outwardly proceeded from his zeal for the glory of God and his indignation against sin. From the appearance of his loins even upward—Denoting, as some interpret it, his divine nature: and from the appearance of his loins even downward—Signifying his human nature. I saw, as it were, the appearance of fire—The general sense seems to be, that Christ, considered in his whole person, as God and man, is full of indignation against sin, and sinners continuing in sin, and is glorious in both his natures, and in all his proceedings: see 2 Thess. i. 8. And it had brightness round about—Majesty, justice, and unstained holiness shine round about him. In this colour does Christ appear to the Jews; he that would ance of fire, and it had brightness A. M. 3409 round about. B. C. 595.

28 "As the appearance of the bow that is in the cloud in the day of rain, so was the appearance of the brightness round about.

* This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the LORD. And when I saw it,
"I fell upon my face, and I heard a voice of one that spake.

* Chap. iii. 23; viii. 4. —" Chap. iii. 23; Dan. viii. 17; Acts
ix. 4; Rev. i. 17.

have visited them, clothed with the garments of salvation, now put on the garments of vengeance, expressed by such metaphors.

Verse 28. As the appearance of the bow that is in the cloud—The Hebrew future, יִהְיֶה, is here fre-quentative, and should be rendered, Is wont to be in the cloud, in the day of rain, so was the appearance of the brightness—The meaning is, In the brightness, or light, that was about what I saw, was the appearance of the rainbow. The rainbow, as we learn from Gen. ix. 12, &c., was appointed as a sign or symbol of God's covenant of mercy with men: therefore an appearance of a rainbow in this vision signified that amidst his severe judgments God would remember mercy, and not forget his covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; one part of which was, that their posterity should not become extinct, but should always remain; so that this appearance gave an assurance that the Jewish nation should not be wholly destroyed, though it should suffer very grievous judgments. And inasmuch as this vision was an evident representation of the Word that was to be made flesh, whose incarnation was to be the foundation of God's covenant of mercy with mankind, a rainbow, the symbol and token of mercy, was a very fit attendant on such a glorious vision. This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord—This is a description of that glorious vision wherein Jehovah appeared to me, and whereby he made manifest his attributes and perfections. The prophet terms it, not the appearance of the glory, but of the likeness of the glory.
&c., because the full discovery of the glory of God to any human creature is not consistent with the state of mortality, Exod. xxxiii. 20-23, but is reserved for the life to come, 1 Cor. xiii. 12; 1 John iii. 2. And when I saw it I fell upon my face—Through a re-verential sense of God's majesty, and his own frailty and meanness; or struck down with fear and astonishment before such glory. And I heard a voice of one that spake—They that are first humbled are most prepared to hear the voice of God, whether of instruction or consolation, Matt. v. 4, and xi. 28.

CHAPTER II.

Ezekiel, being prepared by his vision, is here, (1,) Ordained a prophet to deliver God's messages to the Jewish captives in Chaldea, represented as very stubborn and rebellious, 1-5. (2,) He is cautioned not to be afraid of them, however mischievous, 6. (3,) Instructed to declare to them precisely what God should dictate to him, which is represented by a roll full of mournful contents given him to eat, 7-10.

A. M. 3409. B. C. 595. AND he said unto me, Son of man, ^astand upon thy feet, and I will speak unto thee.

2 And ^bthe spirit entered into me when he spake unto me, and set me upon my feet, that I heard him that spake unto me.

3 And he said unto me, Son of man, I send thee to the children of Israel, to a rebellious ¹nation that hath rebelled against me: ^cthey and their fathers have transgressed against me, even unto this very day.

4 ^dFor they are ²impudent children and stiff-hearted. I do send thee unto them; and thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith A. M. 3409.

the Lord God. B. C. 595.

5 ^eAnd they, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear, (for they are a rebellious house,) yet ^fshall know that there hath been a prophet among them.

6 ¶ And thou, son of man, ^gBe not afraid of them, neither be afraid of their words, though ³briers ^hand thorns be with thee, and thou dost dwell among scorpions: ⁱbe not afraid of their words, nor be dismayed at their looks, ^kthough they be a rebellious house.

7 ^lAnd thou shalt speak my words unto

^a Dan. x. 11.—^b Chap. iii. 24.—^c Heb. nations.—^d Jer. iii. 25; Chap. xx. 18, 21, 30.—^e Chap. iii. 7.—^f Heb. hard of face.—^g Chap. iii. 11, 26, 27.—^h Chap. xxxiii. 33.

^e Jer. i. 8, 17; Luke xii. 4.—^g Or, rebels.—^h Isa. ix. 18; Jer. vi. 28; Micah vii. 4.—ⁱ Chapter iii. 9; 1 Peter iii. 14.
^k Chap. iii. 9, 26, 27.—^l Jer. i. 7, 17.

NOTES ON CHAPTER II.

Verses 1, 2. And he—Who sat upon the throne, the Son of God, whose messenger Ezekiel is here appointed to be to the Jewish captives now in Chaldea; said unto me, Son of man—A title ninety-five times, at least, given to Ezekiel, in this prophecy, in order, as most commentators suppose, to put him in mind of his frailty and mortality, and to keep him humble, amidst so many divine visions and revelations vouchsafed him from God: see Psa. viii. 4. Stand upon thy feet—Arise, fear not, and put thyself into a posture of attending to what I shall say to thee. And with this command God sent forth a power, enabling him to arise and stand. And the spirit entered into me—The same spirit which actuated the living creatures and the wheels; when he spake unto me—While he was speaking the words, or, as soon as they were spoken.

Verses 3-5. I send thee to the children of Israel—God had for many ages been sending to them his servants the prophets, but to little purpose: they were now sent into captivity for abusing God's messengers; and yet even there God raises up and sends a prophet among them, to try if their ears were open to receive instruction, now they were holden in the cords of affliction. To a rebellious nation—Hebrew, גוים, nations, the prophet's commission extending to the dispersed Israelites, as well as the captive Jews, as also to the Jews still in Judea, to whom most of his predictions and reproofs related, and whom his writings would reach, in the order of Divine Providence. They and their fathers have transgressed against me—From age to age they had rebelled against him, and were now as much inclined to do so as ever. They are impudent children, and stiff-hearted—The Hebrew, קשין לב, פנים וחזק, may be more significantly rendered,

They are children impudent in their countenance, and hardened in their hearts. "They are so far hardened in their wickedness as to have cast off all shame, and even the very outward show of modesty." And whether they will hear, &c.—Whether they will regard what is said by thee or not, they shall know that there hath been a prophet, &c.—They that obey shall know by the good I will do them; those that will not, by the evil which I will bring upon them. So that the event, answering to thy predictions, shall render thy authority unquestionable, and them inexcusable for not hearkening to the warnings thou hast given them.

Verses 6-8. And thou, be not afraid of them—"The prophets and messengers of God are often exhorted to take courage, and are promised a proportionable assistance in the discharge of their office, without fearing any man's person, or standing in awe of any man's greatness."—Lowth. Neither be afraid of their words—Their accusations, threats, or whatever else a malicious heart can suggest to the tongue. Though briers and thorns be with thee—Though thou art among such as study to vex and torment thee. Briers, usually running up among thorns, are a very fit emblem of the frowardness and keenness of sinners against God and his prophets, and therefore wicked and persecuting men are often denoted by this expression in the prophetic writings. And thou dost dwell among scorpions—Among men that are malicious and revengeful, and as dangerous and hurtful as the worst of serpents. Nor be dismayed at their looks—Wherewith they would brow-beat thee. They that would do any thing to purpose in the service of God, must not fear the faces of men. And thou shalt speak my words unto them—Do not forbear or desist from speaking to them what I have given thee in charge to speak,

A. M. 3409. them, ^m whether they will hear, or
B. C. 595. whether they will forbear: for they are ⁴ most rebellious.

8 But thou, son of man, hear what I say unto thee; Be not thou rebellious like that rebellious house; open thy mouth, and ^a eat that I give thee.

^m Verse 5.—⁴ Heb. rebellion.—^a Rev. x. 9.

let them threaten and behave as they will, for thou shalt not receive any hurt from them, whether they pay regard to thee as a prophet or not. But thou, hear what I say unto thee—Obey when thou hearest. Those that would speak from God to their fellow-creatures, must be sure first to hear from God themselves, and then must be obedient to his voice. Be not thou rebellious, &c.—That is, do not refuse to go on this errand, or to deliver the message where-with I send thee; do not fly off, as Jonah did, for fear of offending thy countrymen. If ministers, whose office it is to reprove sinners, connive at sin, and gratify sinners, either not showing them their wickedness, or not setting before them the fatal consequences of it, for fear of displeasing them, and exposing themselves to their ill will, they hereby make themselves partakers of their guilt, and are rebellious like them. If people will not do their duty in reforming, yet let ministers do theirs in re-proving, and this will yield them comfort on reflection, whatever the success may be. Open thy mouth, and eat that I give thee—Receive into thy mind and heart, meditate upon, and digest the things which I reveal to thee. God's words were to sink into him, 9 ¶ And when I looked, behold, ^o a ^a hand ^a was sent unto me; and lo, ^p a ^a roll of a book ^a was therein;

A. M. 3409.
B. C. 595.

10 And he spread it before me; and it was written within and without: and there was written therein lamentations, and mourning, and wo.

^o Chap. viii. 3; Jer. i. 9.—^p Chap. iii. 1.

that he might faithfully deliver them to others. The knowledge of divine truths is often expressed in Scripture by the metaphors of eating, digesting, and being nourished by bodily food: see Isa. lv. 1, 2; John vi. 27.

Verses 9, 10. Behold a hand was sent unto me—I saw a hand stretched out toward me, as from that divine person who appeared to me in the shape of a man. And lo, a roll of a book was therein—Where-in were contained the contents of the following prophecy. And he spread it before me—That I might understand the contents of it. And it was written within and without—The ancient books were rolled on cylinders of wood or ivory, and usually the writing was only on the inside; but this was written on both sides, both that which was innermost when it was rolled up, and on the outside also, which signified that the prophecy contained a long series of events. And there was written therein lamentations, and mourning, and wo—It contained predic-tions and revelations of impending calamities, and divers terrible judgments coming on the Jewish nation, and giving great cause for bitter sorrow and lamentation.

CHAPTER III.

In this chapter we have the further preparation of the prophet for the work to which God called him. (1.) His eating of the roll that was presented to him in the close of the foregoing chapter, 1-3. (2.) Further instructions and encouragements are given him, to the same purpose with those in the foregoing chapter, 4-11. (3.) Amidst great rushing and noise, and in much perplexity and anguish, he is carried by a mighty impulse of God's Spirit to those that were to be his hearers, 12-15. (4.) A further explication of his office and business as a prophet is given him, under the similitude of a watch-man, 16-21. (5.) In a new vision, similar to the former, he is ordered to go and shut himself up in his house, and is struck dumb, and informed that God would restrain or restore his speech as he pleased, 22-27.

A. M. 3409. MOREOVER he said unto me,
B. C. 595. Son of man, eat that thou find-est; ^a eat this roll, and go speak unto the house of Israel.

^a Chapter

NOTES ON CHAPTER III.

Verses 1-3. Son of man, eat that which thou find-est—Chaldee, that which is given thee. Eat this roll—Receive into thy mind and heart, as certain and important truth, what is written therein: see note on chap. ii. 8, 9. So I opened my mouth, &c.— 2 So I opened my mouth, and he ^a caused me to eat that roll.

A. M. 3409.
B. C. 595.

3 And he said unto me, Son of man, cause thy belly to eat, and fill thy bowels with this

ii. 8, 9.

In my vision I thought I readily complied with God's command, and ate the roll which he ordered me to eat. This was a sort of symbolical introduction of Ezekiel to the prophetic office, whereby he was fitted for, and enabled to discharge it. Thus Isaiah was in a vision fitted for it, by having his

A. M. 3409. roll that I give thee. Then did I ^beat
B. C. 595. it; and it was in my mouth ^cas honey for sweetness.

4 ¶ And he said unto me, Son of man, go, get thee unto the house of Israel, and speak with my words unto them.

5 For thou art not sent to a people ¹of a strange speech and of a hard language, but to the house of Israel;

6 Not to many people ²of a strange speech and of a hard language, whose words thou canst not understand. ³Surely, ^dhad I sent thee to them, they would have hearkened unto thee.

7 But the house of Israel will not hearken unto thee; ^efor they will not hearken unto me: ^ffor all the house of Israel are ⁴impudent and hard-hearted.

8 Behold, I have made thy face strong against

^b Revelation x. 9; Jer. xv. 16.—^c Psal. xix. 10; cxix. 103.
¹ Heb. deep of lip, and heavy of tongue, and so Verse 6.—² Heb. deep of lip, and heavy of language.—³ Or, If I had sent thee, &c., would they not have hearkened unto thee?—^d Matt. xi. 21, 23.
^e John xv. 20.

mouth touched with a live coal, taken from the altar by one of the seraphim; and Jeremiah, by having his mouth touched seemingly by the hand of God. And he said, Cause thy belly to eat—The mouth is the proper instrument for eating, but when food is digested, the belly is said to eat. As the belly often signifies in Scripture the mind, or secret thoughts, the expression here denotes the laying up this prophecy in his memory, and thoroughly considering and laying to heart its contents. And it was in my mouth as honey for sweetness—I took delight in having God's secret counsels communicated to me, and in delivering his commands to my brethren; and was pleased with the hopes of being an instrument of the conversion and amendment at least of some of them. But when he afterward understood of what heavy tidings he was to be the messenger, and what predictions and denunciations of divine judgments and wrath he was to deliver to the people, and that he would be hated and persecuted on this account, his mind was filled with grief and anguish. Thus when St. John took the little book out of the angel's hand, and ate it up, (Rev. x. 10,) though at first it was sweet as honey in his mouth, as soon as he had eaten it his belly was bitter; on which Bishop Newton remarks, "The knowledge of future things at first was pleasant, but the sad contents of the little book afterward filled his soul with sorrow."

Verses 5-8. Thou art not sent to a people of a strange speech—It would be a great addition to the burden of thy office if thou wert sent, as Jonah was, as a prophet to a foreign nation, and to a people whose language thou couldest not understand, nor they thine. Not to many people of a strange speech, their faces, and thy forehead strong ^{A. M. 3409.} against their foreheads. ^{B. C. 595.}

9 ¶ As an adamant, harder than flint have I made thy forehead: ^bfear them not, neither be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house.

10 Moreover he said unto me, Son of man, all my words that I shall speak unto thee receive in thy heart, and hear with thine ears.

11 And go, get thee to them of the captivity, unto the children of thy people, and speak unto them, and tell them, ⁱThus saith the Lord God; whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear.

12 Then ^kthe spirit took me up, and I heard behind me a voice of a great rushing, saying, Blessed be the glory of the Lord from his place.

13 I heard also the noise of the wings of the living creatures that ⁵touched one another, and

^f Chapter ii. 4.—^g Heb. stiff of forehead and hard of heart. ^h Isa. i. 7; Jer. i. 18; xv. 20; Micah iii. 8.—ⁱ Jer. i. 8, 17; Chapter ii. 6.—^j Chapter ii. 5, 7; Verse 27.—^k Verse 14; Chapter viii. 3; 1 Kings xviii. 12; 2 Kings ii. 16; Acts viii. 39.
^l Heb. kissed.

&c.—God seems, as it were, to hint here that the time would come when he should order his messengers to go to many people of a strange speech, and should find those who would obey him in this. The apostles, evangelists, and other first preachers of the gospel, were sent to such a people, or rather to all nations, however difficult and strange their language was. Surely, had I sent thee to them, they would have hearkened, &c.—And yet, in all appearance, even a strange nation, who could not understand thy words plainly, or without the greatest difficulty, would have hearkened to thy preaching sooner than the house of Israel, so corrupt are they become. Behold, I have made thy face strong, &c.—Do but thou obey me in what I command thee, and I will give thee courage and firmness proportionable to the hardness and insolence of those thou hast to deal with.

Verses 11-13. Go to them of the captivity—Namely, those made captives with thyself in the reign of King Jehoiachin. Then the spirit took me up—Carried me from the place where I was before, when I saw the vision mentioned chap. i. 3, 4, to my countrymen and fellow-captives. And I heard behind me a voice of a great rushing—Emblematical, probably, of the great commotions and troubles he was to foretel, and which were to ensue. Or he means a great sound, arising from many articulate voices joined together, and pronouncing the following words: Blessed be the glory of the Lord—Praised be the gloriously holy and just God, or adored be the displays of his glory in all his dispensations. This sound seems to have been that of a chorus of angels, approving of and celebrating the judgments

A. M. 3409. the noise of the wheels over against
B. C. 595. them, and a noise of a great rushing.

14 So ¹ the spirit lifted me up, and took me away, and I went ⁶ in bitterness, in the ⁷ heat of my spirit; but ^m the hand of the LORD was strong upon me.

15 ¶ Then I came to them of the captivity at Tel-abib, that dwelt by the river of Chebar, and ⁿ I sat where they sat, and remained there astonished among them seven days.

16 And it came to pass at the end of seven days, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

17 ° Son of man, I have made thee ^p a watch-

¹ Verse 12; Chapter viii. 3.—⁶ Heb. bitter.—⁷ Heb. hot anger.—^m 2 Kings iii. 15; Chapter i. 3; viii. 1; xxxvii. 1. ⁿ Job ii. 13; Psa. cxviii. 1; Jer. xxiii. 9; Hab. iii. 16.

of God; from his place—"Whatever place God honours with his especial presence is equivalent to his temple, and there the angels always attend upon his Divine Majesty to give him the honour due unto his name: see Gen. xxviii. 13-19. The words imply, that though God should forsake his temple, and destroy the place that was called by his name, yet his presence would make a temple of every place, and multitudes of the heavenly host would always be ready to do him service." Also the noise of the wings of the living creatures, and of the wheels over against them—To signify that both angels and all inferior instruments were busy at work to execute judgment according to their commission; and that the wheels of providence moved in concert with the wings of the living creatures, or the efforts of angels, to accomplish the divine purposes.

Verse 14. So the spirit lifted me up and took me away—Caught me up into the air, and carried me, (as Philip was carried away from the eunuch,) and brought me to the place where I was to deliver my message, the place where the captive Jews were settled in great numbers: compare 1 Kings xviii. 12; 2 Kings ii. 16; Acts viii. 39. I went in bitterness, &c.—I went in grief and anguish of mind, on account of the grievous things I was to declare to them, and the offence I foresaw I should give, and the opposition and ill treatment I should meet with. But the hand of the Lord was strong upon me—Urging and impelling, as well as empowering me to execute my commission.

Verse 15. Then I came to them of the captivity—To those of my countrymen who were captives, at Tel-abib. The prophet was before at some distance from this place, though on the same river, and these therefore must have been a distinct colony of captives from those mentioned chap. i. 1, 3: see verse 23 of this chapter. And I sat where they sat—This translation is according to the Vulgate, sedē, ubi illi sedebant. But Bishop Newcome renders the Hebrew, I dwell where they dwell; that is, I took up my residence among them; and remained there astonished seven days—"Having my spirit wholly man unto the house of Israel: there—A. M. 3409. fore hear the word at my mouth, and B. C. 595.

give them warning from me.

18 When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man ^a shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thy hand.

19 Yet if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity; ^r but thou hast delivered thy soul.

° Chapter xxxiii. 7, 8, 9.—^p Isaiah lii. 8; lvi. 10; lxii. 6; Jer. vi. 17.—^a Chap. xxxiii. 6; John viii. 21, 24.—^r Isaiah xlix. 4, 5; Acts xx. 26.

cast down and amazed, under the apprehension of these terrible judgments, which were to come upon my nation, and of which I was to be the messenger: see the margin. Seven days was the space of time appointed for mourning.—Lowth. But the Vulgate, instead of astonished, reads mærens, mourning; and some render the clause, I remained there among them solitary seven days: supposing the meaning to be, that the prophet stayed that time among them, without saying any thing particular to them, or acquainting them that he was appointed to the prophetic office, in order that he might observe their actions and manner of life, and so might the better know how to address them in the discharge of his office, and what reproofs it would be most proper to give them.

Verses 16-19. And at the end of seven days—During which time the prophet had sufficient opportunity to observe their manners and prevailing vices; the word of the Lord came to me—Informing me more particularly what my office was, and what the duty of that office. Son of man, I have made thee a watchman, &c.—Prophets have the title of watchmen given them; because, like watchmen placed on towers to discern and give notice of any dangers that may be approaching, they, by their prophetic spirit, were enabled to foresee the evils coming upon the ungodly, and were bound to give people timely notice, that they might avoid them by true repentance and reformation. When I say—By the threatenings of my word, or by my spirit exciting thee to give seasonable and necessary reproofs and warnings; unto the wicked—Any wicked person whatever, poor or rich, mean or mighty. Thou shalt surely die—Both temporally and eternally, unless thy sincere repentance prevent this destruction; and thou givest him not warning—As thy office indispensably requires thee to do; the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity—Shall depart this life in a state of sin and guilt, and be condemned to those punishments to which temporal death translates sinners; for his ignorance will not procure him impunity. But his blood will I require at thy hand—

A. M. 3409.
B. C. 595.

20 Again, When a ^arighteous man doth turn from his ^arighteousness, and commit iniquity, and I lay a stumbling-block before him, he shall die; because thou hast not given him warning, he shall die in his sin, and his righteousness which he hath done shall not be remembered; but his blood will I require at thy hand.

21 Nevertheless, if thou warn the righteous man, that the righteous sin not, and he doth not sin, he shall surely live, because he is warned; also thou hast delivered thy soul.

22 ¶ ^a And the hand of the LORD was there upon me; and he said unto me, Arise, go forth ^a into the plain, and I will there talk with thee.

23 Then I arose, and went forth into the plain: and behold, ^a the glory of the LORD stood there, as the glory which I ^a saw by the river of Chebar: ^a and I fell on my face.

24 Then ^a the spirit entered into me, and set me upon my feet, and spake with me, and said unto me, Go, shut thyself within thy house.

25 But thou, O son of man, behold, ^b they shall put bands upon thee, and shall bind thee with them, and thou shalt not go out among them:

26 And ^c I will make thy tongue cleave to the roof of thy mouth, that thou shalt be dumb, and shalt not be to them ^a a reprover: ^d for they are a rebellious house.

27 ^e But when I speak with thee, I will open thy mouth, and thou shalt say unto them, ^f Thus saith the Lord God; He that heareth, let him hear; and he that forbeareth, let him forbear: ^g for they are a rebellious house.

^a Chapter xviii. 24; xxxiii. 12, 14.—^b Heb. righteousnesses.
^c Verse 14; Chapter i. 3.—^d Chap. viii. 4.—^e Chap. i. 28.
^f Chap. i. 1.—^g Chap. i. 28.—^h Chap. ii. 2.—ⁱ Chap. iv. 8.

^a Chap. xxiv. 27; Luke i. 20, 22.—^b Heb. a man reproving.
^c Chap. ii. 5, 6, 7.—^d Chap. xxiv. 27; xxxiii. 22.—^e Verse 11.—^f Verses 9, 26; Chapter xii. 2, 3.

"Thou shalt be accountable for the loss of his soul, just as a man's blood is laid to the charge of him who is any way accessory to his death." Yet if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not—But still go on in his trespasses, unawakened and unreformed; he shall die, but thou hast delivered thy soul—Thou shalt be clear from the guilt of being accessory to his destruction.

Verses 20, 21. Again, When a righteous man—One truly righteous, and devoted to the love and service of God in heart and life; one whose person is justified, whose nature is renewed, and whose practice is conformed to God's holy will; doth turn from his righteousness and commit iniquity—Which the Scriptures show to be very possible, and experience and observation demonstrate to be a case not uncommon. And I lay a stumbling-block before him—Such a temptation to sin as he might have resisted, but to which, nevertheless, he yielded, and by which he was overcome. The word ככשול, here rendered stumbling-block, sometimes signifies ruin, as chap. xviii. 30. Therefore some render this clause, And I cause iniquity to become his ruin; he shall die—Shall perish in his sin; and his righteousness shall not be remembered—Shall be of no advantage to him; shall stand him in no stead for the preventing of punishment. But his blood will I require at thy hand—See on verse 18. Nevertheless if thou warn the righteous man—That he may not be drawn aside by bad examples, or any other temptation, to forsake the ways of piety and virtue. And he doth not sin—But continues conscientiously to walk in God's ordinances and commandments blameless. He shall surely live—In the favour of God here, and in his kingdom hereafter. Also thou hast delivered thy soul—Both the warner and the warned escape destruction.

Verses 22-27. And the hand of the Lord was there upon me—Namely, at Tel-abib. I felt a divine power acting upon me as before: see on chap. i. 3. And he said, Arise, go forth into the plain—Withdraw from the multitude, and retire to a place more private, and fit for contemplation, and the reception of divine communications. Then I arose—As I was commanded; and the glory of the Lord stood there—The same glorious vision and representation of God's majesty, which I had seen before, (chap. i. 28,) were manifested to me again. Then the spirit entered into me—The spirit, power, or influence of God came upon me in an extraordinary manner; and set me upon my feet—Raised me up after I had fallen on my face; and spake with me—This should be rendered, And he spake with me, for the verb ירברב is in the masculine gender. The spirit or power, which now entered into him, is distinguished from the divine glory, or Shechinah, which the prophet saw, as it is also very plainly chap. ii. 2. And said, Go, shut thyself within thy house—From public view, and to receive further instructions. Or, as some think, symbolically to represent the siege of Jerusalem. Behold, they shall put bands upon thee—The LXX. read ἵνα δέδωται ἐπὶ σε δεσμοί, καὶ ἀσσοῦσι σε ἐν αὐτοῖς, bands shall be put upon thee, and they shall bind thee with them. So also the Vulgate. Some think this was done by the captive Jews at Tel-abib, and that they bound him as a criminal, and disturber of the peace, in order to the punishing of him. Others suppose his domestics bound him, as thinking him out of his right mind. But it is more probable, comparing this passage with chap. iv. 8, that the meaning is, as Bishop Newcome observes, that his friends or servants bound him by his order; namely, more fully to express the shutting up of the Jews in Jerusalem by the siege. And thou shalt not go out among them—Thou shalt not go abroad among the people, but continue thus shut up. And thou shalt be dumb—For some space of time I will withhold revelations from thee, and thou shalt say nothing to the people by way of admonition or reproof. For they are a rebellious house—They are an obstinate, refractory people, who will give no heed to thy words. But when I speak with thee—Or, when I have spoken to thee; that is, revealed to thee the knowledge of what is to come, or have communicated to thee what I intend to be declared to them;

I will open thy mouth—Give thee the power of speaking such things to them as it is my pleasure should be set before them. He that heareth, let him hear—This is the last warning I shall give them, and they must take it as such, and either give heed to and obey what is said to them, and so avoid the impending evil; or neglect it at their peril, and take the consequence which shall follow. These words, it seems, were spoken to Ezekiel only, and are not any part of the message which he was to deliver to the people.

CHAPTER IV.

In this chapter, to try the faith of those Jewish captives who regarded Jerusalem with affection and a pious disposition, and to rebuke the presumption of those false prophets and their votaries, who expected a speedy return to it, Ezekiel, by a figure, warns them of its approaching calamities. (1.) He represents the close siege of it, and the fortifications that should be raised against it, by besieging a portraiture of it, lying three hundred and ninety days on his left, and forty on his right side, thus declaring of how long continuance those sins were, which God visited upon that people, 1-8. (2.) The famine which should rage in the city and among the captives is represented by his eating coarse bread, baked in a very mean and disagreeable manner, so long as this typical representation lasted, 9-17.

A. M. 3409. B. C. 595. THOU also, son of man, take thee a tile, and lay it before thee, and portray upon it the city, even Jerusalem.

2 And lay siege against it, and build a fort against it, and cast a mount against it; set the camp also against it, and set ¹ battering rams against it round about.

3 Moreover take thou unto thee ² an iron pan, and set it for a wall of iron between thee and the city: and set thy face against it, and it shall be besieged, and thou shalt lay siege against it. ^{A. M. 3409. B. C. 595.} ^a This shall be a sign to the house of Israel.

4 Lie thou also upon thy left side, and lay the iniquity of the house of Israel upon it: according to the number of the days that thou shalt lie upon it, thou shalt bear their iniquity.

¹ Or, chief leaders, Chap. xxi. 22.—² Or, a flat plate, or, slice.

^a Chap. xii. 6, 11; xxiv. 24, 27.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IV.

Verse 1. Take a tile, &c., and lay it before thee—The prophets often foreshadowed impending judgments by significant emblems, which usually strike more powerfully than words. So Jeremiah was commanded to go down to the potter's house, and observe how frequently vessels were marred in his hands, (chap. xviii.) and to take one of those earthen vessels and break it in the sight of the elders of the Jews, (chap. xix.) that they might thereby be sensibly taught the greatness of God's power, and their own frailty. So here God commands Ezekiel to take a tile, or such a slate as mathematical lines, or figures, are usually drawn upon, and there to make a portraiture of Jerusalem, thereby to represent it as under a siege. We may observe, that God often suited prophetic types and figures to the genius and education of the prophets themselves: so the figures which Amos makes use of are generally taken from such observations as are proper to the employment of a shepherd, or a husbandman. Ezekiel had a peculiar talent for architecture, therefore several of his representations are suitable to that profession. And they that suppose the emblem here made use of to be below the dignity of the prophetic office, may as well accuse Archimedes of folly for making lines in the dust: see Lowth.

Verses 2, 3. And lay siege against it—Make a portraiture of a siege, and of such warlike instruments as are used in sieges, figuring every thing just as when an army lies before a place with an intention of taking it. Moreover, take thou an iron pan—Or rather, an iron plate, probably such as cakes were baked on. "This," says Bishop Newcome, "may denote the strong trenches of the besiegers, or their firmness and perseverance in the siege; or, according to others, that there was an iron wall between the besieged and God, whom the prophet represented;" namely, the sins of the people, which separated between them and God, and prevented him from showing them mercy.

Verses 4-6. Lie thou also, &c.—"In his own house, chap. iii. 24. This was to be his posture, not without intermission, but in the exercise of his prophetic office, during that part of each day, when the people were likely to observe his conduct."—Bishop Newcome. Upon thy left side—The left side, as being the least respectable, signified Israel, or the

A. M. 3409. 5 For I have laid upon thee the B. C. 595. years of their iniquity, according to the number of the days, ³ three hundred and ninety days: ^b so shalt thou bear the iniquity of the house of Israel.

6 And when thou hast accomplished them, lie again on thy right side, and thou shalt bear
the iniquity of the house of Judah forty days:
I have appointed thee ⁴ each day for a year.

7 Therefore thou shalt set thy face toward

^a About B. C. 975. Beginning from 1 Kings xii. 13; ending about B. C. 585.

ten tribes: the right side, as being most honoured, the tribes of Judah and Benjamin; or, as it is generally expressed, the kingdom of Judah. Ezekiel's lying on one side for a long time together, signified the great patience of God in bearing with the sins of Israel. And lay the iniquity of the house of Israel upon it: according to the number of the days, &c.
—From the days that I shall order thee to lie upon thy left side thou shalt understand how many years I have borne with their iniquity, for each day was to signify a year: see verse 6. Thou shalt bear their iniquity—Thou shalt, in the way of a sign or symbol, suffer for their iniquity, namely, in lying so long upon one side. Or, thou shalt presignify the punishment which they shall bear. For I have laid upon thee the years of their iniquity—This verse explains the former: I have pointed out the number of years wherein apostate Israel sinned against me.
According to the number of days, three hundred and ninety days—"This number of years will take us back, with sufficient exactness, from the year in which Jerusalem was sacked by Nebuchadnezzar to the first year of Jeroboam's reign, when national idolatry began in Israel."—Bishop Newcome. Some, however, rather suppose that the years are meant which intervened between the falling of Solomon into idolatry, and the carrying away of the ten tribes by Shalmanezar, at which time they entirely ceased to be a nation or people of themselves, and were wholly dispersed and mixed with other nations.
Thou shalt bear the iniquity of Judah forty days—
So many years there were from the time when King Josiah entered into a solemn covenant to serve and worship God, (from whence their future idolatry received a great aggravation,) to the destruction of the city and temple. I have appointed thee each day for a year—Days frequently stand for years in the prophetical accounts of time.

Verses 7, 8. Thou shalt set thy face toward the siege of Jerusalem—Thou shalt look toward Jerusalem, or toward the portraiture of it upon the tile, with a threatening countenance, as men do toward the city which they are besieging. And thine arm shall be uncovered—Or, stretched out, as the Vulgate reads it. Their habits were anciently so contrived, that their right arms were disengaged from their upper garments, that they might be the more ready for action. So ancient statues and coins represent the siege of Jerusalem, and thine arm A. M. 3409.

B. C. 595. shall be uncovered, and thou shalt prophesy against it.

8 ° And behold I will lay bands upon thee, and thou shalt not turn thee ⁵ from one side to another, till thou hast ended the days of thy siege.

9 ¶ Take thou also unto thee wheat, and barley, and beans, and lentils, and millet, and ⁶ fitches, and put them in one vessel, and make thee bread thereof, according to the ^b Num. xiv. 34.—⁴ Hebrew, a day for a year, a day for a year.

^c Chap. iii. 25.—⁵ Heb. from thy side to thy side.—⁶ Or, spelt.

heroes with their right arms bare, and out of the sleeves of their garments. Thus God is said to make bare his arm, Isa. lii. 10, where he is represented as subduing his adversaries, and bringing salvation to his people. And thou shalt prophesy against it— Thou shalt signify by these signs what shall happen to it. And, behold, I will lay bands upon thee—See chap. iii. 25. God is said to do what was done in consequence of his command. And thou shalt not turn thee from one side to another—This may mean, that the Lord would powerfully enable, and even constrain him to lie quietly in the posture appointed him, till the days were accomplished, in the sense explained in note on verse 4, this being intended to signify that the Chaldeans should continue the siege, and should be, as it were, fixed and fastened there, as by bonds, till the city was taken. This evidently seems to have been a real transaction, and not a vision, otherwise it does not appear how it could have been a sign to the people; for how could any thing be a sign to them, of which they were not eye-witnesses? Till thou hast ended the days of thy siege—"The three hundred and ninety days, mentioned verses 5 and 9, it seems, were designed,
not only to signify the years of Israel's sin, but the continuance of the siege of Jerusalem. That siege lasted, from the beginning to the end of it, seventeen months, as appears from 2 Kings xxv. 1-4. But the king of Egypt, coming to relieve the city, was the occasion of raising the siege for some time, as appears from Jer. xxxvii. 3. So that it may reasonably be gathered from the authority of the text, joined to the circumstances of the story, that the siege lasted about thirteen months, or three hundred and ninety days."

Verse 9. Take thou also wheat and barley, &c.—
In times of scarcity it is usual for people to mix a great deal of the coarse kinds of grain with a little of the better sort, to make their provisions last the longer. This Ezekiel was commanded to do, to signify the scarcity, and the coarse fare the inhabitants should have in the siege of the city. Three hundred and ninety days thou shalt eat thereof—During which time the siege lasted: see verse 8. The forty days, mentioned verse 6, seem not to be brought into this account. These, denoting Judah's sin of forty years' continuance, being superadded to the three hundred and ninety days of the siege, may signify

A. M. 3409. number of the days that thou shalt B. C. 595. lie upon thy side; three hundred and ninety days shalt thou eat thereof.

10 And thy meat which thou shalt eat shall be by weight, twenty shekels a day: from time to time shalt thou eat it.

11 Thou shalt drink also water by measure, the sixth part of a hin: from time to time shalt thou drink.

12 And thou shalt eat it as barley cakes, and thou shalt bake it with dung that cometh out of man, in their sight.

13 And the LORD said, Even thus ^d shall the children of Israel eat their defiled bread

^d Hos. ix. 3.—^e Acts x. 14.—^f Exod. xxii. 31; Lev. xi. 40;
xvii. 15.—^g Deut. xiv. 3; Isa. lxx. 4.

the days spent in spoiling and desolating the city and temple, and carrying away the remnant of the people. Jerusalem was taken on the ninth day of the fourth month, Jer. lii. 6; and on the tenth day of the fifth month the temple was burned, verse 12;
and so we may reasonably conjecture by the eighteenth of that month, which was the fortieth from the taking of the place, the whole city was burned, and the few Jews who were left were carried into captivity: see Lowth.

Verses 10–12. And thy meat shall be by weight twenty shekels, &c.—In sieges it is common to stint every one to a certain allowance, by which means they can guess how long their provisions will last:
twenty shekels is but ten ounces; a short allowance for a day's sustenance. From time to time shalt thou eat of it—This shall be thy daily allowance during the whole three hundred and ninety days.
Thou shalt drink also water by measure—In sieges it is usual for the enemy to cut off the water from coming into the cities which they besiege, as much as they can, which produces a scarcity of it; the sixth part of a hin—Which is about a pint and a half of our measure. Thou shalt eat it as barley cakes—Such as people make in haste, when they have not time for preparing a set meal: see Exod.
xii. 39. This represents the hurry and disorder which would be occasioned by the siege. And thou shalt bake it with dung—To signify the scarcity of all kinds of fuel. Sir J. Chardin, in his MS. quoted by Harmer, tells us, “the eastern people always used cow-dung for baking, boiling a pot, and dressing all kinds of victuals that are easily cooked; especially in countries that had but little wood.” And D’Arvieux, “complaining that one sort of Arab bread smells of smoke, and tastes of the cow-dung used in baking it, informs us, that the peasants often make use of the same fuel, and that all who live in villages where there is not plenty of wood, are very careful to stock themselves with it; the children,” he says, “gather up the dung, and clap it against a wall to dry, from whence the quantity that is necessary for baking, or warming themselves, is taken from time among the Gentiles, whither I will ^{A. M. 3409.} drive them. ^{B. C. 595.}

14 Then said I, “Ah Lord God! behold, my soul hath not been polluted: for from my youth up even till now have I not eaten of ^f that which dieth of itself, or is torn in pieces; neither came there ^g abominable flesh into my mouth.

15 Then he said unto me, Lo, I have given thee cow's dung for man's dung, and thou shalt prepare thy bread therewith.

16 ¶ Moreover he said unto me, Son of man, behold, I will break the ^h staff of bread in Jerusalem: and they shall ⁱ eat bread by weight,

^h Lev. xxvi. 26; Psal. cv. 16; Isa. iii. 1; Chap. v. 16; xiv. 13.
ⁱ Verse 10; Chap. xii. 19.

to time.”—Harmer, chap. iv. observ. 20, vol. i. According to Dathius, quoted by Bishop Newcome, the dung of camels, as well as that of cows or oxen, was also “often used by the easterns as fuel for preparing their food.” But the command here given to the prophet, to use human dung, expressed the greatest necessity, and was terribly significant of the extremities which the inhabitants of Jerusalem should undergo during the siege, no nation making use of that offensive kind of fuel.

Verse 13. Even thus shall the children of Israel eat their defiled bread among the Gentiles—The prophet, speaking above of eating and drinking by weight and measure, foretells the famine in Jerusalem; now in the bread baked with dung is also pre-signified the unclean bread which the children of Israel were to eat among the Gentiles. For their circumstances in their captivity would not permit them to observe the rules of their law relating to unclean meats; and they would be constrained to partake of meats, part of which had been offered to idols. Compare Hos. ix. 1–3; Dan. i. 8. Bread is often used in the Hebrew for all sorts of food.

Verses 14, 15. Then said I, Ah, Lord God, &c.— He deprecates this, and entreats it may not be enjoined him. Behold, my soul hath not been polluted
—I have always carefully observed the distinction between meats clean and unclean: I beseech thee, command me not now to eat any thing so contrary to my former practice. Neither came their abominable flesh into my mouth—The Hebrew word, פגול, abominable, is used of such meats as were forbidden
by the law, as the learned reader may see, Lev. vii.
18, and xix. 7; Isa. lxxv. 4. Then he said, Lo, I have given thee cow's dung, &c.—This indicated, that even the pious would suffer greatly during the siege of Jerusalem; and that all the circumstances of things would admit of, would be a very small distinction between them and the wicked; for Ezekiel, God's prophet, could only obtain the exchange of a somewhat less offensive kind of fuel for one extremely offensive.

Verses 16, 17. Behold, I will break the staff of

A. M. 3409. and with care; and they shall ^k drink
B. C. 595. water by measure, and with astonishment:

^k Verse 11.

bread in Jerusalem—I will cause a scarcity of bread in Jerusalem, 2 Kings xxv. 3; and deprive it of the chief support of man's life. And they shall eat their bread by weight and with care—Here we have a declaration of the meaning of what the prophet was ordered to do, verses 10 and 11. It was intended to signify, that during the siege, the people of Jerusalem should eat their food very sparingly, and with great anxiety, for fear they should not be able 17 That they may want bread and A. M. 3409.

water, and be astonished one with B. C. 595.
another, and ^l consume away for their iniquity.

^l Lev. xxvi. 39; Chap. xxiv. 23.

to get a further supply, when what they had was consumed. That they may want bread and water—Or, so that they shall want bread and water: and be astonished one at another—Shall look upon one another astonished at each other's ghastly, meager countenances, or at the greatness of their calamities; and consume away, &c.—And pine away with hunger and hardships, on account of their wickedness.

CHAPTER V.

In this chapter, (1.) The destruction of the Jews, still remaining in Judca and Jerusalem, in various ways, is represented by the cutting, burning, and scattering of Ezekiel's hair, 1-4. (2.) The Jews, particularly those of Jerusalem, are charged with ungrateful and unparalleled contempt of God's laws, profanation of God's ordinances, and defilement of his temple with idols, 5-7, 11. (3.) On account hereof, and answerably to Ezekiel's sign, great wrath is threatened, 8-10; and a variety of miseries issuing in their reproach and ruin, 12-17.

A. M. 3410. AND thou, son of man, take thee a
B. C. 594. sharp knife, take thee a barber's razor, ^a and cause it to pass upon thy head and upon thy beard: then take thee balances to weigh, and divide the hair.

2 ^b Thou shalt burn with fire a third part in the midst of ^c the city, when ^d the days of the siege are fulfilled: and thou shalt take a third part, and smite about it with a knife: A. M. 3410. and a third part thou shalt scatter B. C. 594.

in the wind; and I will draw out a sword after them.

3 ^e Thou shalt also take thereof a few in number, and bind them in thy ^f skirts.

4 Then take of them again, and ^g cast them into the midst of the fire, and burn them in the

^a Leviticus xxi. 5; Isa. vii. 20; Chap. xlii. 20.—^b Verse 12.
^c Chap. iv. 1.

^d Chap. iv. 8, 9.—^e Jeremiah xl. 6; lii. 16.—^f Heb. wings.
^g Jer. xli. 1, 2; xlii. 14.

NOTES ON CHAPTER V.

Verse 1. Take thee a sharp knife, take thee a barber's razor—The latter expression explains the former; and cause it to pass upon thy head, &c.—Hair being then accounted an ornament, and baldness a token of sorrow, therefore shaving denoted calamity or desolation. "Among the Arabs," says Harmer, chap. vi. observ. 23, "there cannot be a greater stamp of infamy than to cut off any one's beard: and many among them would prefer death to this kind of punishment. And as they would think it a grievous calamity to lose it, so they carry things so far as to beg for the sake of it, 'By your beard, by the life of your beard, do.' In like manner some of the benedictions are, 'God preserve your blessed beard, God pour his blessings on your beard.' And when they would express their value for a thing, they say, 'It is worth more than his beard.' I never had so clear an apprehension, I must confess, as after I had read these accounts, of the intended energy of that thought of Ezekiel, where the inhabitants are compared to the hair of the prophet's head and beard. The passage seems to signify, that though the inhabitants of Jerusalem had been dear to God, as the hair of an eastern beard to its owner, yet that they should be taken away and consumed, one part by pestilence and famine, another part by the sword, and a third by the calamities of an exile." See note on 2 Sam. x. 4. And then take the balances, &c.—A symbol of God's justice, as the razor was of his wrath; to weigh and divide the hair—What the prophet is here commanded to do was by way of another emblematical representation of what was to happen to the inhabitants of Judca and Jerusalem. The hair signified the Jewish people; shaving the hair with a razor, the divine vengeance; the weighing of the hair in the balances, the divine equity, which metes out to every one what is just and right; the dividing of the hair, the punishments allotted to different persons of them.

Verses 2-4. Thou shalt burn a third part in the midst of the city—In the midst of that portraiture of the city, which the prophet was commanded to make, chap. iv. 1. This signified the destruction of the inhabitants within the city by famine and pestilence; for both famine and pestilence may be said to

A. M. 3410. fire: for thereof shall a fire come
B. C. 594. forth into all the house of Israel.

5 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God; This is Jerusalem; I have set it in the midst of the nations and countries that are round about her.

6 And she hath changed my judgments into wickedness more than the nations, and my statutes more than the countries that are round about her: for they have refused my judgments and my statutes, they have not walked in them.

7 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because ye multiplied more than the nations that are round about you, and have not A. M. 3410. walked in my statutes, neither have B. C. 594.

kept my judgments, neither have according to the judgments of the nations that are round about you;

8 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I, even I, am against thee, and will execute judgments in the midst of thee in the sight of the nations.

9 ^hAnd I will do in thee that which I have not done, and whereunto I will not do any more the like, because of all thine abominations.

§ Jer. ii. 10, 11; Chap. xvi. 47.

^h Lam. iv. 6; Dan. ix. 12; Amos iii. 2.

burn, as they make great havoc, and consume as fast as fire. Thou shalt take a third part, and smite about it with a knife—To show that a third part of the inhabitants should be slain with the sword; either in the sallies they made out of the city against the enemy, or when the city was taken by assault. A third part thou shalt scatter in the wind—This signified that a part of them should be dispersed into various countries, as the chaff is dispersed by the wind; I will draw out a sword after them—My vengeance shall pursue them in their dispersions, and they shall be everywhere exposed to suffer violence and injury. Also take a few and bind them in thy skirts—The Hebrew is, in thy wings. This signified that a small part of them should be preserved in the land; and accordingly we find that Nebuzar-adan, captain-general of the king of Babylon, left a few of them in the land under Gedaliah, as we read Jer. xl. 5, 6. Then take of them again, and cast them into the midst of the fire—This expressed the calamity and destruction which should arise from this small remnant differing among themselves: some espousing the part of Gedaliah, who had been set over them by the Babylonians, and was a good man; and others joining themselves to Ishmael, one of the blood of David, but a wicked man; who formed a conspiracy against Gedaliah, and treacherously slew him, which was the occasion of the utter ruin of that poor remainder of the Jews, which were left in their native country. For thereupon some of them went down into Egypt, where they were all consumed according to Jeremiah's prophecy against them, chap. xlv. 11, &c., and the rest who remained in the land were entirely carried away captive by Nebuzar-adan, Jer. lii. 30.

Verses 5, 6. Thus saith the Lord, This is Jerusalem—Here the explication of the foregoing type is given, namely, that the hair to be shaved off signified Jerusalem, which was to be destroyed. I have set it in the midst of the nations—I set Jerusalem in the midst of the heathen nations, that it might be a pattern of religion and virtue to them: that the Egyptians, Syrians, Arabians, &c., might take example from her. Jerusalem was set in the midst of the nations to be as the heart in the human body, to invigorate the dead world with a divine life, as well as to enlighten the dark world with a divine light. And she hath changed my judgments into wickedness—Instead of following my judgments, and the precepts I gave her for the conduct of life, she hath given herself up to wickedness. More than the nations—She hath sinned against clearer light and stronger convictions of duty than the heathen nations, and therefore has contracted greater guilt, and deserved greater punishment than they. And my statutes more than the countries round about her—None of the countries round about had the statutes of Jehovah delivered to them, for he made known his statutes only to Israel: the meaning of this therefore must be, that the nations round about were more observant of the statutes and precepts delivered to them by men than the Israelites were of those delivered to them by God. Thus we find from Jeremiah, that the Rechabites were much more observant of the precepts (though no easy ones) which their father or first founder enjoined them, than the Israelites were of the commandments given them by God.

Verses 7-9. Therefore, because ye multiplied more than the nations—Their multiplying, in the common sense of the word, was a blessing promised to them, and could not be alleged against them as a crime; therefore a word ought to be supplied here, as is done in many versions, namely, because ye multiplied your crimes, or wickedness, more than the nations, &c., neither have done according to the judgments [or manners] of the nations that are round about you—Namely, by persevering in the religion of your forefathers: you have not been so constant and zealous for the true religion as they have been for a false one. Or, as others interpret the clause, You have exceeded them in superstition and idolatry, and fallen short of them in moral duties. Therefore, behold, I, even I, am against thee—I will vindicate my laws from being contemned as they have been by you; for why should I suffer it to be said, See how they who profess to worship the true and only God, live immersed in wickedness, and without any virtue? And I will do in thee that which I have not done—As your sins have particular aggravations above those of other nations, so your punishment shall be proportionably greater. I will not do any more the like—The punishments

A. M. 3410. 10 Therefore the fathers ⁱ shall eat
B. C. 594. the sons in the midst of thee, and the sons shall eat their fathers; and I will execute judgments in thee, and the whole remnant of thee will I ^k scatter into all the winds.

11 Wherefore, as I live, saith the Lord God; Surely, because thou hast ^l defiled my sanctuary with all thy ^m detestable things, and with all thine abominations, therefore will I also diminish thee; ⁿ neither shall mine eye spare, neither will I have any pity.

12 ¶ ^o A third part of thee shall die with the pestilence, and with famine shall they be consumed in the midst of thee: and a third part shall fall by the sword round about thee; and ^p I will scatter a third part into all the winds, and ^q I will draw out a sword after them.

ⁱ Lev. xxvi. 29; Deut. xxviii. 53; 2 Kings vi. 29; Jer. xix.
9; Lam. ii. 20; iv. 10.—^k Verse 12; Lev. xxvi. 33; Deut.
xxviii. 64; Chap. xii. 14; Zech. ii. 6.—^l 2 Chron. xxxvi. 14; Chapter vii. 20; viii. 5, &c.; xliii. 38.—^m Chapter xi. 21.
ⁿ Chapter vii. 4, 9; viii. 18; ix. 10.—^o Verse 2; Jer. xv. 2;
xxi. 9; Chap. vi. 12.

you shall suffer shall be more remarkable for their greatness than those I shall at any time inflict upon other nations.

Verses 10, 11. The fathers shall eat the sons, &c.
—Fathers eating their children, and children their fathers, expresses the height of misery, and the most grievous famine. We have sufficient proof that such instances happened in the Jewish nation amidst their more than common calamities. Josephus relates some instances of parents eating their children during the siege of Jerusalem by the Romans; and we have further evidence of such horrid acts having been done by them in the extremity of famine, from the texts referred to in the margin. And the whole remnant of them will I scatter, &c.—This is another judgment threatened against them by Moses, and remarkably fulfilled in their last dispersion, in which they are to be found in every part of the known world, and yet live everywhere like strangers only upon sufferance: see note on Deut. xxviii. 64. Because thou hast defiled my sanctuary—Hast profaned my temple by placing idols in it, and worshipping them. With all thy detestable things, and all thine abominations—These are expressions of the same signification, denoting idols. Therefore will I also diminish thee—Will make thee of less account, and take from thee all honours as thou hast from me, as much as lay in thy power: or, as some interpret the clause, I will cut off or destroy, by diminishing; (as the word גָּרַע is used Num. xxvii. 4.) without showing any pity or compassion. See the margin.

Verses 12, 13. A third part of thee, &c.—In this verse is given an explication of what the burning of the hair, the smiting of it with a knife, &c., sig-

13 Thus shall mine anger ^r be ac- A. M. 3410. complished, and I will ^s cause my fury B. C. 594.
to rest upon them, ^t and I will be comforted: ^u and they shall know that I the LORD have spoken it in my zeal, when I have accomplished my fury in them.

14 Moreover, ^v I will make thee waste, and a reproach among the nations that are round about thee, in the sight of all that pass by.

15 So it shall be a ^w reproach and a taunt, an instruction and an astonishment unto the nations that are round about thee, when I shall execute judgments in thee in anger, and in fury, and in ^x furious rebukes. I the LORD have spoken it.

16 When I shall ^y send upon them the evil arrows of famine, which shall be for their destruction, and which I will send to destroy

^r Jer. ix. 16; Verses 2, 10; Chap. vi. 8.—^s Lev. xxvi. 33;
Verse 2; Chap. xii. 14.—^t Lam. iv. 11; Chap. vi. 12; vii. 8.
^u Chapter xxi. 17.—^v Deut. xxxii. 36; Isa. i. 24.—^w Chapter xxxvi. 6; xxxviii. 19.—^x Leviticus xxvi. 31, 32; Neh. ii. 17.
^y Deut. xxviii. 37; 1 Kings ix. 7; Psal. lxxix. 4; Jer. xxiv. 9; Lam. ii. 15.—^z Chap. xxv. 17.—^a Deut. xxxii. 23, 24.

nified. see on verse 2. And I will draw out a sword after them—My anger shall still pursue them, even into the countries whither they shall be banished and carried captives. As this was particularly fulfilled in those that went into Egypt, (see on verse 4,) so it has been remarkably verified in the several persecutions and massacres they have undergone at different times in most of the countries of Europe, in latter ages: see note on Deut.
xxviii. 65. Thus shall mine anger be accomplished—My anger shall be appeased toward them, after I have executed due punishment upon them for their sins. And I will cause my fury—Or rather, my wrath, or indignation, as, כֶּחָרָה should be rendered, for to apply the word fury to God, is highly improper and indecent: to rest upon them— To be satisfied in punishing them. And I will be comforted—Here we have a strong instance of the metaphor called anthropopathia, by which the qualities of men are ascribed to God. As men sometimes find some sort of ease and rest in their minds upon venting their anger on just occasions, and bringing offenders to condign punishment; so God is here described as feeling ease and satisfaction in executing his justice on obstinate offenders:
compare chap. xvi. 42, and xxi. 17; and see note on Isa. i. 24. They shall know that I have spoken it in my zeal—Out of a just concern for my own honour and authority, which they have slighted and despised.

Verses 15-17. So it shall be an instruction to the nations—They shall learn from such an example of vengeance to fear me, and be afraid of my judgments. *When I shall send upon them
the evil arrows of famine*—Hail, tempest, drought,

A. M. 3410. you: and I will increase the famine
B. C. 594. upon you, and will break your ^b staff of bread:

17 So will I send upon you famine and ^e evil

^b Levit. xxvi. 26; Chapter iv. 16; xiv. 13.—^c Levit. xxvi. 22;
Deut. xxxii. 24; Chap. xiv. 21; xxxiii. 27; xxxiv. 25.

mildew, locusts, all which contribute to make a famine. So will I send upon you famine and evil beasts—Wild beasts multiply in a land when it becomes uninhabited, Exod. xxiii. 29. This likewise is a punishment which, among others, was threatened against the Jews by Moses: see the margin.

beasts, and they shall bereave thee; A. M. 3410 and ^d pestilence and blood shall pass B. C. 594.
through thee; and I will bring the sword upon thee. I the LORD have spoken it.

^d Chapter xxxviii. 22.

Pestilence and blood shall pass through thee—Blood signifies any unusual sort of death, and may denote here such a pestilence as would destroy multitudes; or that, in addition to destruction by pestilence, they should be slaughtered by their enemies throughout their land.

CHAPTER VI.

In this chapter, (1,) God threatens, by his prophet, to bring general destruction upon the Jews and their idols, 1-7. (2,) Promises that a remnant of those in captivity should return to him by unfeigned repentance, and a thorough reformation, 8-10. (3,) Directs Ezekiel and his fellow-prophets to bewail, both the iniquities and the calamities of their nation, 11-14.

A. M. 3410. AND the word of the LORD came
B. C. 594. unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, ^aset thy face toward the ^bmountains of Israel, and prophesy against them,

3 And say, Ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord God: Thus saith the Lord God to the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the valleys; behold, I, even I, will bring a sword upon you, and ^cI will destroy your high places.

4 And your altars shall be desolate, and your ^dimages shall be broken: and ^dI will cast down your slain men before your idols.

5 And I will ²lay the dead carcasses of the children of Israel before their idols; A. M. 3410. and I will scatter your bones round B. C. 594.

about your altars.

6 In all your dwelling-places the cities shall be laid waste, and the high places shall be desolate; that your altars may be laid waste and made desolate, and your idols may be broken and cease, and your images may be cut down, and your works may be abolished.

7 And the slain shall fall in the midst of you, and ^eye shall know that I am the LORD.

8 ¶ ^fYet will I leave a remnant, that ye may have some that shall escape the sword among

^a Chap. xx. 46; xxi. 2; xxv. 2.—^b Chap. xxxvi. 1.—^c Lev. xx. 30.—¹ Or, sun-images, and so verse 6.—^d Lev. xxvi. 30.

^a Heb. give.—^e Verse 13; Chap. vii. 4, 9; xi. 10, 12; xii. 15.
^f Jer. xlv. 28; Chap. v. 2, 12; xii. 10; xiv. 22.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VI.

Verses 2-7. Set thy face toward the mountains of Israel—Turn thy face to that part where Judea is situated. Judea was a hilly country; therefore that whole land is expressed here and elsewhere by the mountains of Israel, Judah being called Israel, because the ten tribes, generally distinguished by that name, had been long since carried captive into Assyria, and Judah possessed a great part of their country. And prophesy against them—Direct thy discourse to them. The prophets sometimes directed their discourse to the inanimate parts of the creation, thereby to upbraid the stupidity of men. Thus saith the Lord to the mountains and to the hills—Every part of the country had been defiled with idolatry. The altars built for idol-worship were commonly placed upon mountains and hills; the shady valleys and river-sides were likewise made use of for the same purpose, particularly for the sacrificing of children to Moloch: see Isa. lvii. 5; Jer. vii. 31. So by this the prophet denounces a general judgment upon the whole country. And your altars shall be desolate—See note on Lev. xxvi. 30, where Moses denounces against the Israelites the same judgments upon their provocations. I will cast down your slain men before your idols, &c.—So that their sin shall be read in the manner of their punishment; and while the idols are upbraided with their inability to help their worshippers, the idolaters are reproached with the folly of trusting in them. And ye shall know that I am the Lord—“An epiphonema, or conclusion of a severe denunciation often repeated by this prophet, importing that the judgments which God intended to bring on the Jews, would make the most hardened and stupid sinners sensible that this was God’s hand.”—Lowth.

Verses 8-10. Yet will I leave a remnant—“A gracious exception that often occurs in the prophets

A. M. 3410. the nations, when ye shall be scattered through the countries.
B. C. 594.

9 And they that escape of you shall remember me among the nations whither they shall be carried captives, because ⁸ I am broken with their whorish heart, which hath departed from me, and ^h with their eyes which go a whoring after their idols: and ⁱ they shall loathe themselves for the evils which they have committed in all their abominations.

10 And they shall know that I am the LORD, and that I have not said in vain that I would do this evil unto them.

11 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God; Smite ^k with thy hand, and stamp with thy foot, and say, Alas, for all the evil abominations of the house of Israel! ^l for they shall fall by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence.

⁸ Psa. lxxviii. 40; Isa. vii. 13; xliii. 24; lxiii. 10.—^h Num. xv. 39; Chap. xx. 7, 24.—ⁱ Lev. xxvi. 39; Job xlii. 6; Chap. xx. 43; xxxvi. 31.—^k Chap. xxi. 14.—^l Chap. v. 12.

when they denounce general judgments against the Jews; implying that God will still preserve a remnant of that people; to whom he will fulfil the promises made to their fathers." And they that escape of you shall remember me, &c.—Your afflictions shall bring you to the knowledge of yourselves, and a sense of your duty to me. Because I am broken with their whorish hearts—I am much grieved, and my patience is tired out with this people's idolatries, called in Scripture spiritual whoredom. God is here introduced as speaking after the manner of men, whose patience is tired out by the repeated provocations of others, especially when they see no hopes of amendment. And with their eyes go a whoring after their idols—The eyes are the seat of lascivious inclinations: see 2 Pet. ii. 14. So, in pursuit of the same metaphor, the eyes are said to go a whoring after idols, the people being often tempted to idolatrous worship by the costliness of the images, and the fine show they made. And they shall loathe themselves, &c.—With a mixture of grief toward God, of indignation against themselves, and abhorrence of the offence. And they shall know I have not said in vain, &c.—Without cause, as the word הינני is more significantly translated chap. xiv. 22; the sufferers had given him just cause to pronounce that evil. Or, without effect: their sins were the cause, and their destruction is the effect of their sufferings.

Verses 11–14. Smite with thy hand, and stamp with thy foot—Join to thy words the gestures which are proper to express grief and concern at the wickedness of thy people, and for their calamities that will ensue. For they shall fall by the sword, &c.—

12 He that is far off shall die of the pestilence; and he that is near shall fall by the sword; and he that remaineth and is besieged shall die by the famine: ^m thus will I accomplish my fury upon them.

13 Then ⁿ shall ye know that I am the LORD, when their slain men shall be among their idols round about their altars, ^o upon every high hill, ^p in all the tops of the mountains, and ^q under every green tree, and under every thick oak, the place where they did offer sweet savour to all their idols.

14 So will I ^r stretch out my hand upon them, and make the land desolate, yea, ^s more desolate than the wilderness toward ^t Diblath, in all their habitations: and they shall know that I am the LORD.

^m Chap. v. 13.—ⁿ Verse 7.—^o Jer. ii. 20.—^p Hos. iv. 13. ^q Isa. lvii. 5.—^r Isa. v. 25.—^s Or, desolate from the wilderness. ^t Num. xxxiii. 46; Jer. xlviii. 22.

See note on chap. v. 12. He that is far off—And thinks himself out of danger, because he is out of the reach of the enemy; shall die of the pestilence—The arrow that I will shoot at him. And he that is near—Who stays in his own country, or who is near a place of strength, which he hopes will be to him a place of safety, yet shall fall by the sword before he can retreat to it. And he that remaineth—Who is so cautious as not to venture out, but remains in the city; shall die by the famine—The most miserable death of all: thus will I accomplish my fury—I will satisfy my just displeasure, and give them full measure of punishment: I will do all that against them which I had purposed to do. Then shall ye know—See note on verse 10. When their slain men shall be among their idols—As was threatened before, verses 5–7. Upon every high hill, &c.—There, where they had prostrated themselves in honour of their idols, God will lay them dead to their own reproach, and the reproach of their idols: they lived among them, and shall die among them: they had offered sweet odours to their idols, but there shall their dead carcasses send forth an offensive smell, as it were, to atone for that misplaced incense. So will I stretch out my hand—Put forth my almighty power; and make the land desolate—שמה, a desolation, a Hebraism, for most desolate: that fruitful, pleasant, populous country, which has been as the garden of Eden, the glory of all lands; shall be more desolate than the wilderness toward Diblath—Or Diblathaim, as it is called Num. xxxiii. 46; the desert in the borders of Moab, part of that great and terrible wilderness, described Deut. viii. 15.

CHAPTER VII.

In this chapter, the approaching ruin of Judea is foretold very particularly, and in expressions most affecting and often repeated, that, if possible, the people might be awakened and brought to repentance, in order to the prevention of so great a calamity. The prophet is ordered to tell them, (1.) That it will be a final, complete, and miserable destruction, 1-6. (2.) That it was very near at hand, 7-10. (3.) That on account of their aggravated pride and violence it was unavoidable, 10-15. (4.) That neither their strength nor riches should in the least protect them from it, 16-19. (5.) That their glorious temple, in which they trusted, should be laid in ruins, 20-22. (6.) That their miseries and desolation, by the Chaldeans, should be as universal as their sins had been, 23-27.

A. M. 3410.
B. C. 594.

MOREOVER the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Also, thou son of man, thus saith the Lord God unto the land of Israel; ^a An end, the end is come upon the four corners of the land.

3 Now is the end come upon thee, and I will send mine anger upon thee, and ^b will judge thee according to thy ways, and will ¹ recompense upon thee all thine abominations.

4 And ^c mine eye shall not spare thee, neither will I have pity: but I will recompense thy ways upon thee, and thine abominations shall be in the midst of thee: ^d and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

5 Thus saith the Lord God; An evil, an only evil, behold, is come.

6 An end is come, the end is come: it ² watches for thee; behold, it is come.

7 ^e The morning is come upon thee, O thou that dwellest in the land: ^f the time is come, the day of trouble is near, and not ³ the sounding again of the mountains. A. M. 3410.

B. C. 594.

8 Now will I shortly ^g pour out my fury upon thee, and accomplish mine anger upon thee: ^h and I will judge thee according to thy ways, and will recompense thee for all thine abominations.

9 And ⁱ mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity: I will recompense ⁴ thee according to thy ways, and thine abominations that are in the midst of thee; ^k and ye shall know that I am the LORD that smiteth.

10 Behold the day, behold, it is come; ¹ the morning is gone forth; the rod hath blossomed, pride hath budded.

11 ^m Violence is risen up into a rod of wickedness: none of them shall remain, nor of their ⁵ multitude, nor of any of ⁶ theirs: ⁿ neither shall there be wailing for them.

^a Verses 3, 6; Amos viii. 2; Matt. xxiv. 6, 13, 14.—^b Verses 8, 9.—^c Heb. give.—^d Verse 9; Chap. v. 11; viii. 18; ix. 10.
^e Verse 27; Chapter vi. 7; xii. 20.—^f Heb. awaketh against thee.—^g Verse 10.—^h Verse 12; Zeph. i. 14, 15.

³ Or, echo.—^g Chap. xx. 8, 21.—^h Verse 3.—ⁱ Verse 4.
⁴ Heb. upon thee.—^k Verse 4.—^l Verse 7.—^m Jer. vi. 7.
⁵ Or, tumult.—⁶ Or, their tumultuous persons.—ⁿ Jer. xvi. 5, 6; Chap. xxiv. 16, 22.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VII.

Verses 2-4. Thus saith the Lord unto the land of Israel—Unto the inhabitants of the land. Israel is often put for Judah, after the captivity of the ten tribes; those that were left of these tribes joining themselves to the tribe of Judah. The whole country of Judea is here comprehended. An end—An end of God's patience, of the peace and welfare of the people, and of the plenty, beauty, and desirableness of the land itself; is come—Or is near at hand; even that dreadful end threatened by Moses and the prophets, as the certain punishment of idolatry and other violations of God's law: upon the four corners of the land—Upon all parts of it. Now is the end come upon thee—There shall be no more delays. I will judge thee according to thy ways—I will punish thee according to thy deserts. Thine abominations shall be in the midst of thee—The punishment of thy sins shall be upon thee everywhere throughout thy land.

Verses 5-7. Thus saith the Lord, An evil, an only evil—A sore affliction, a singular and uncommon one. An end is come—A destruction, which shall be fatal to a great part of those that go into captivity, as well as to those who are consumed in their own country. It is quite prepared to rush upon thee. Observe, reader, when the end is come upon the ungodly, then an only evil comes upon them. The sorest of temporal judgments have their allays; but the torments of the damned are an evil, an only evil. The morning is come upon thee—"God's judgments shall overtake thee speedily and unexpectedly. The expression alludes to the time when magistrates use to give sentence against offenders, which was in the morning." The time is come—The time of God's vengeance, called elsewhere the day of the Lord. And not the sounding again of the mountains—The sound of war and slaughter, and not such a joyful sound as used to echo from the mountains, by which the treaders of grapes expressed their satisfaction at the time of the vintage: which the word רר, here used, properly signifies. Or, not a mere echo, not a fancy, but a real noise arising from the approach of the Chaldean army.

Verses 10, 11. Behold the day—Which has lingered so long! it is come at last. The morning is gone forth—The day of destruction is already begun. The rod hath blossomed—As the same word

A. M. 3410. 12 ° The time is come, the day
B. C. 594. draweth near: let not the buyer rejoice, nor the seller mourn: for wrath is upon all the multitude thereof.

13 For the seller shall not return to that which is sold, ⁷ although they were yet alive: for the vision is touching the whole multitude thereof, which shall not return; neither shall any strengthen himself ⁸ in ⁹ the iniquity of his life.

14 They have blown the trumpet, even to ° Verse 7.—⁷ Heb. though their life were yet among the living.

⁸ Or, whose life is in his iniquity.

which signifies a tribe, signifies also a rod, the meaning of this sentence may be, the tribe of Judah hath flourished, or hath been prosperous. The consequence is mentioned in the following words: Pride hath budded—Her prosperity first filled her with pride, and that begat violence and all kinds of wickedness. Or the sense may be, Nebuchadnezzar, the rod of God's anger, the rod of correction ordained for Judah, is grown in power and pride, in violence and cruelty, and is thus prepared to punish the Jews, whose pride and luxury, injustice and idolatry, have exposed them to this instrument of the divine vengeance. Violence is risen up into a rod of wickedness—Some render this, Violence is risen up against the rod of wickedness, and understand it of the violent, impetuous Chaldean army rising up against the tribe of Judah, here called the rod of wickedness, to cut it down. None of them shall remain—The Hebrew only expresses none of them, the words shall remain being supplied by our translators. Some versions read, None of them shall be free from evil. Neither shall there be wailing for them—The calamity shall be so general, families will be cut off so entirely, and they will be so stunned, as it were, with the greatness of their affliction, and so taken up in providing for their own safety, that there will be no particular lamentation or wailing made for those who fall.

Verses 12–15. Let not the buyer rejoice, &c.—The buyer will have no reason to rejoice, because he will not enjoy what he hath bought; nor the seller have cause to mourn for having been obliged to part with his possessions, of which the approaching desolation of the country and the captivity would otherwise have deprived him. For the seller shall not return to that which was sold, &c.—The year of jubilee shall be no advantage to the sellers; for though they should live till it come, yet they shall not enjoy the benefit of the law, (Lev. xxv. 13,) nor be restored again to their possessions, as the Chaldeans will have seized upon their lands, who will pay no regard to the year of jubilee, with respect to restoring to every one his old inheritance. For the vision—Or the prophecy; is touching the whole multitude—Is concerning the whole people; which shall not return—Or, as Bishop Newcome reads it. It, that is, the make all ready; but none goeth to A. M. 3410.

the battle: for my wrath is upon all B. C. 594.
the multitude thereof.

15 ^p The sword is without, and the pestilence and the famine within: he that is in the field shall die with the sword; and he that is in the city, famine and pestilence shall devour him.

16 ¶ But ^q they that escape of them shall escape, and shall be on the mountains like doves of the valleys, all of them mourning, every one for his iniquity.

° Heb. his iniquity.—^p Deut. xxxii. 25; Lam. i. 20; Chapter v. 12.—^q Chap. vi. 8.

vision or prophecy, shall not return, namely, unfilled; or, it shall not be void. Neither shall any strengthen himself in iniquity—Neither shall any one secure himself by acting wickedly. Or, “And though they harden themselves in sin, and shut their eyes against the judgments which hang over their heads, these will at last unavoidably overtake them.” They have blown the trumpet—The house of Israel have summoned in all fit for arms: see Jer. vi. 1. But none goeth to the battle—There is not a man going to the war. For the people's hearts fail them—Looking upon themselves as given up to destruction. For my wrath is upon all the multitude thereof—That displeasure which takes away their courage. The sword is without—In the countries; and the pestilence and the famine within—The besieged city. He that is in the field—Whoever is in the field; shall die with the sword—Of the Chaldean soldiers. And he that is in the city—Whither he had fled for safety; famine and pestilence shall devour him—Shall eat him up. You, O Jews, shall be food for these insatiable destroyers.

Verses 16–19. They that escape of them shall escape—This might be more intelligibly rendered, There are of them who shall escape; that is, “Some few shall have the favour of escaping the common calamity, called elsewhere the escaped, or the remnant, from whence is derived the phrase οὐ σωσμένοι, in the New Testament, such as are, or should be, saved.” And shall be on the mountains like doves—Fearful and trembling, and bemoaning themselves on account of the calamities their sins have brought on them. All hands shall be feeble, &c.—Feebleness in the hands and knees is the consequence of the weakness and failing of the spirit. They shall also gird themselves with sackcloth—A general custom in the eastern countries in deep sorrows and distresses. Horror shall cover them—Or, has overwhelmed them, as the same phrase is translated Psal. lv. 5. Shame shall be upon all faces—The marks of confusion and misery shall be seen on all faces; and baldness upon all their heads—Either by their pulling off their hair amidst their sorrows, or cutting it off in token of mourning: see note on Jer. xlviii. 37. They shall cast their silver in the streets—Either that they may be lighter to flee, or

A. M. 3410. 17 All ^r hands shall be feeble, and
B. C. 594. all knees shall ¹⁰ be weak as water.

18 They shall also ^a gird themselves with sackcloth, and ^r horror shall cover them; and shame shall be upon all faces, and baldness upon all their heads.

19 They shall cast their silver in the streets, and their gold shall be ¹¹ removed: their ^u silver and their gold shall not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of the LORD: they shall not satisfy their souls, neither fill their bowels: ¹² because it is ^r the stumbling-block of their iniquity.

20 ¶ As for the beauty of his ornament, he set it in majesty: ^r but they made the images of their abominations and of their detestable things therein: therefore have I ¹³ set it far from them.

^r Isaiah xlii. 7; Jer. vi. 24; Chap. xxi. 7.—¹⁰ Heb. go into water.—^a Isa. iii. 24; xv. 2, 3; Jer. xlviii. 37; Amos viii. 10.
^r Psalm lv. 5.—¹¹ Hebrew, for a separation, or, uncleanness.
^u Prov. xi. 4; Zeph. i. 18.—¹² Or, because their iniquity is their stumbling-block.—^r Chap. xiv. 3, 4; xlv. 12.

to engage the enemy's attention, and so to give themselves time to escape out of the city. And their gold shall be removed—Carried away to Babylon. Their silver and their gold shall not deliver—Shall not remove the distresses of the famine, or prevent their being carried into captivity. They shall not satisfy their souls—Shall not procure them food to satisfy their hunger, nor afford them any comfort. Because it is the stumbling-block of their iniquity—This silver and gold, which they valued too much, coveted immeasurably, abused to the purposes of pride, luxury, oppression, and idolatry; this that they stumbled at, and fell into sin, now they stumble at, and fall into the deepest misery.

Verses 20-22. As for the beauty of his ornament—The temple and all that pertained to it, which was the beauty and glory of the Jewish nation, and accounted so by them; he set it in majesty—God commanded that it should be a stately, beautiful, and magnificent structure; but they made the images of their abominations therein—Set up their idols in his temple, and provoked him, their Maker and their husband, with their spiritual adulteries committed before his face; therefore have I set it far from them—I have parted between it and them, have removed them far from the temple: or, I have given it into the hands of the Gentiles to profane and pollute it: see the marginal reading, and verse 21. My face will I turn from them—Either from the Jews or from the Chaldeans, neither relieving the former nor restraining the latter. And they (the Chaldeans) shall pollute my secret place—My temple, and even the holy of holies. For the robbers shall enter into it—The Chaldean soldiers shall break open all doors, and rush forward, and enter there, where neither the 21 And I will give it into the hands ^r of the strangers for a prey, and to ^r the wicked of the earth for a spoil; and they shall pollute it.

22 My face will I turn also from them, and they shall pollute my secret place; for the ¹⁴ robbers shall enter into it, and defile it.

23 ¶ Make a chain: for ^r the land is full of bloody crimes, and the city is full of violence.

24 Wherefore I will bring the worst of the heathen, and they shall possess their houses: I will also make the pomp of the strong to cease, and ¹⁵ their holy places shall be defiled.

25 ¹⁶ Destruction cometh; and they shall seek peace, and there shall be none.

26 ^a Mischief shall come upon mischief, and rumour shall be upon rumour; ^b then shall they ^r Jer. vii. 30.—¹³ Or, made it unto them an unclean thing.

¹⁴ Or, burglars.—^r 2 Kings xxi. 16; Chapter ix. 9; xi. 6.
¹⁵ Or, they shall inherit their holy places.—¹⁶ Heb. Cutting off.
^a Deut. xxxii. 23; Jer. iv. 20.—^b Psalm lxxix. 9; Lam. ii. 9; Chapter xx. 1, 3.

people, nor the Levites, nor the priests, except only the high-priest, were allowed to enter.

Verses 23, 24. Make a chain—To foreshow the approaching captivity, when both king and people should be carried in chains to Babylon. For the land is full of bloody crimes—The innocent blood that has been shed in it cries aloud for vengeance. See the margin. Wherefore I will bring the worst of the heathen—The most violent, proud, and bloody men, namely, the Chaldeans, who were at that time the great oppressors of the world, and a terror to all the countries round about them; and they shall possess their houses—Not only dwell in them, but by right of conquest account them their own, and as descending to their heirs after them. I will also make the pomp of the strong to cease—The excellence, magnificence, and glory of the mighty men shall be brought to nothing: Jerusalem itself, which they trust in, and think too well fortified by nature and art, and the divine presence, to be ever overthrown, shall be levelled with the ground. And their holy places—The temple and all its courts, shall be defiled. God calls them their holy places, because, having been polluted by their idolatries, he no longer considered them as his.

Verses 25-27. Destruction cometh—Such a provoked power makes when it cuts off all, root and branch. And they shall seek peace—By inquiring of the prophets; or rather, by suing to Nebuchadnezzar, whom, after so many affronts, they will attempt to pacify. And there shall be none—No such thing can be obtained. Mischief shall come upon mischief—One calamity shall follow upon the neck of another. And rumour upon rumour—One piece of mournful intelligence after another, namely, of

A. M. 3410. seek a vision of the prophet; but the
B. C. 594. law shall perish from the priest, and counsel from the ancients.

27 The king shall mourn, and the prince shall be clothed with desolation, and the ¹⁷ Hebrew, with their judgments.

the enemies' preparations, marches, successes, and cruelties, causing the hearts of the stoutest to sink within them. Then shall they seek a vision of the prophet—In this multiplied perplexity they will inquire of the prophets, true or false, concerning the event of things; or will seek to them for some word of direction or comfort from God, as Zedekiah did, Jer. xxxiv. 18, &c. But the law shall perish from the priest, &c.—He shall have no words, either of advice or comfort, to speak to them. And counsel from the ancients—Nor shall their senators know what to advise. So great will be the confusion, trouble, and terror, that neither the pious nor the wise, whom they were wont to consult, and who used to give them counsel in all difficult cases, shall be able to advise any thing to the purpose in this great hands of the people of the land shall A. M. 3410 be troubled: I will do unto them after B. C. 594. their way, and ¹⁷ according to their deserts will I judge them, ^c and they shall know that I am

the LORD.

^c Verse 4.

perplexity and distress. The king shall mourn— Zedekiah shall droop and despair. And the prince shall be clothed with desolation—Every magistrate shall be seized with trouble and astonishment. And the hands of the people shall be troubled—Hang down and melt away. There shall be a general consternation of all ranks and degrees of men. They that are in authority shall want presence of mind to give counsel and directions, and the inferiors shall have no heart to put any advice in execution. What can men contrive, or do for themselves, when God is departed from them? All must needs be in tears, all in trouble, when God comes to judge them according to their deserts, and so make them know, to their cost, that he is the Lord to whom vengeance belongeth.

CHAPTER VIII.

God, having given Ezekiel a clear foresight of the miseries coming upon the people, here gives him a clear insight into the people's wickedness, by which he was provoked to bring those miseries upon them. He takes him in a vision to Jerusalem, to show him the sins that were committed there, 1-4. There the prophet sees, (1.) The image of jealousy set at the gate of the altar, 5, 6. (2.) The elders of Israel worshipping all manner of images in a secret chamber, 7-12. (3.) The women weeping for Tammuz, 13, 14. (4.) The men worshipping the sun, 15, 16. God then appeals to the prophet, whether such a provoking people should have any pity shown them, and threatens most severely to punish them, 17, 18.

A. M. 3411. AND it came to pass in the sixth B. C. 593. year, in the sixth month, in the fifth day of the month, as I sat in my house, and ^a the elders of Judah sat before me,

^a Chap. xiv. 1; xx. 1; xxxiii. 31.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VIII.

Verse 1. And it came to pass in the sixth year— Namely, of Jehoiachin's captivity. In the sixth month—The LXX. read, in the fifth month. As I sat in my house, and the elders of Judah—Men of note for their age or authority, or the chief of those who had been made captives with Jehoiachin, sat before me—Having come, probably, to inquire of the Lord concerning their present state of affairs, what the issue would be; or what would become of their brethren who remained in Judea and Jerusalem. It must be observed, "that in chap. iv. 4-6, the prophet is commanded to lie on his left side three hundred and ninety days, and on his right side forty days; to which must be added the seven days mentioned chap. iii. 15. But the interval between this vision, and chap. i. 1, is only one year and two months, or four hundred and twenty days, reckon-that ^b the hand of the Lord God fell A. M. 3411.

there upon me. B. C. 593.

2 ^c Then I beheld, and lo a likeness as the appearance of fire: from the appearance of his ^b Chap. i. 3; iii. 22.—^c Chap. i. 26, 27.

ing thirty days in a month. It would seem, therefore, that this revelation was made to the prophet during his typical siege. 'But Vignoles, v. ii. 447, thinks, that the year was a lunar one, with an inter-calation of thirty days.'—Secker. And, according to Michaelis, the Jews, and in general the people of Asia, were used to lunar years of three hundred and fifty-four days. Add to them two months, or fifty-nine days, and you have four hundred and thirteen days. A whole month was intercalated from time to time into the lunar year, to make it agree with the harvest year. Add twenty-nine days, and you have four hundred and forty-two days.'—Newcome.

Verse 2. I beheld, and lo a likeness—Namely, of a man; the man whom he had seen upon the throne; as the appearance of fire—This seems to have been the same appearance as that mentioned before, chap. i. 27, signifying that God was about to

A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. his loins even upward, as the appearance of brightness, ^a as the colour of amber.

3 And he ^e put forth the form of a hand, and took me by a lock of my head; and ^f the spirit lifted me up between the earth and the heaven, and ^g brought me in the visions of God to Jerusalem, to the door of the inner gate that looketh toward the north; ^h where was the seat of the image of jealousy, which ⁱ provoketh to jealousy.

4 And, behold, the glory of the God of Israel was there, according to the vision that I ^k saw in the plain.

^a Chap. i. 4.—^e Daniel v. 5.—^f Chap. iii. 14.—^g Chap. xi. 1, 24; xl. 2.

inflict heavy judgments on the Jewish nation, but so as not entirely to destroy it. It is probable, while those who are here called the elders of Judah were sitting before the prophet with silence and attention, waiting for an answer to some inquiries they had made of him, as God's prophet, concerning what was to be the future condition of the Jewish nation, that Ezekiel was on a sudden seized with an ecstasy, and had the things he gives an account of in the following verses presented before his eyes; or such a strong impression of them made upon his mind, that it seemed to him as if he actually saw them.

Verses 3-6. And he put forth the form of a hand—He appeared so to do. This, and all that follows, to the end of verse 16, was done in vision only, as appears from the expression here used: and brought me in the visions of God, &c.—In a similar manner, it was represented to the Prophet Elisha's mind, (2 Kings, v. 26,) what Gehazi was doing when he took the presents from Naaman, which the prophet there calls being present with Gehazi. To Jerusalem, to the door of the inner gate—To the entrance that goes into the inner court, called the court of the priests, where the altar of burnt-offerings stood; where was the seat of the image of jealousy—"An image set up within the precincts of the temple, to provoke God to jealousy, by setting up a rival against him in the place dedicated to his own worship." This was most probably an image of Baal, for that, we find, was the idol they chiefly worshipped. As it was exceedingly provoking to God to set up another object of worship besides him; so it was still more so to do this in the place which had been built for, and was dedicated to, his worship only. To speak in the figurative sense in which God is spoken of, with regard to the Jewish nation, namely, as being a husband to it, it was just the same as if the adulterer were brought into the house of the husband whom he had injured, in his very sight; therefore it is very properly called here, the image of jealousy, or that exciteth jealousy. That I should go far off from my sanctuary—Which are provocations suffi-

5 ¶ Then said he unto me, Son of A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. man, lift up thine eyes now the way toward the north. So I lifted up mine eyes the way toward the north, and behold northward at the gate of the altar this image of jealousy in the entry.

6 He said furthermore unto me, Son of man, seest thou what they do? even the great abominations that the house of Israel committeth here, that I should go far off from my sanctuary? but turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations.

7 ¶ And he brought me to the door of the court; and when I looked, behold a hole in the wall.

^b Jer. vii. 30; xxxii. 34; Chap. v. 11.—^c Deut. xxxii. 16, 21. ^k Chap. i. 28; iii. 2, 23.

cient to cause me to forsake my sanctuary, and deliver it up to be profaned by the heathen, chap. vii. 21, 22. This is significantly represented by the departing of the divine glory from the threshold of the temple, chap. x. 18.

Verses 7-11. And he brought me to the door of the court—This, Dr. Lightfoot understands of the east gate of the inner court, called the gate of Nicanor, over which was the council chamber, where the sanhedrim used to meet, and in some of the rooms near it they secretly practised idolatry, as God discovered to the prophet, verse 11. Behold a hole in the wall—Through which I could look in, and see what abominations were committing there. Then he said, Dig now in the wall—This, and what follows, was done only by vision, during the prophet's trance or ecstasy, while the elders sat before him. And when I had digged in the wall, behold a door—A private door, by which the elders entered into the chambers of their imagery, to perform idolatrous worship to the images. And he said unto me, Go in, &c.—To give me the fullest conviction, I not only looked through the hole, mentioned verse 7, but went into the very room where these idolatries were committed. Behold the abominations that they do here—Hebrew, are doing here: even under the approach of judgments, and under the walls of my temple. So I went in, and behold every form of creeping things—It is probable that they imitated the Egyptians in this kind of idolatry; for the Egyptians used to worship several kinds of beasts and reptiles. According to Diodorus Siculus, l. i. p. 59, edit. Wess., (referred to by Secker,) "round the room in Thebes, where the body of King Osymanduas seemed to be buried, a multitude of chambers were built, which had elegant paintings of all the beasts sacred in Egypt." It is not unlikely they imagined they evaded the law against setting up any image to worship, by having them only portrayed, or painted, on the wall; or, at least, that it was not so great an offence; for the Jewish people in general seem to have had little regard to any thing but the strict

A. M. 3411: 8 Then said he unto me, Son of man, dig now in the wall: and when I had digged in the wall, behold a door.

9 And he said unto me, Go in, and behold the wicked abominations that they do here.

10 So I went in and saw; and behold every form of creeping things, and abominable beasts, and all the idols of the house of Israel, portrayed upon the wall round about.

11 And there stood before them seventy men of the ancients of the house of Israel, and in the midst of them stood Jaazaniah the son of Shaphan, with every man his censer

A. M. 3411
B. C. 593. in his hand; and a thick cloud of incense went up.

12 Then said he unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen what the ancients of the house of Israel do in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery? for they say, ¹The Lord seeth us not; the Lord hath forsaken the earth.

13 ¶ He said also unto me, Turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations that they do.

14 Then he brought me to the door of the gate of the Lord's house which was toward

¹ Chap.

ix. 9.

letter of the law, not regarding the spirit of it. However, as to objects for worship, pictures were prohibited, as well as carved images, as appears from Num. xxxiii. 52. And there stood before them seventy men of the ancients, &c.—Heads of the tribes or families, or, at least, principal men, (according to the number of the sanhedrim,) who ought to have been examples of true religion, not ringleaders in idolatry. By this the prophet was given to see, that it was not the vulgar, or the poor and ignorant only that were guilty of idolatry, but the leading men of the nation, and those of the greatest knowledge, power, and influence, who were superior to, and had the direction of the common people; so that it was properly a national guilt, and, as such, loudly called for national punishment. And in the midst of them stood Jaazaniah—Probably a prince of the people; the son of Shaphan—Mentioned 2 Kings xxii. 9. Shaphan was forward in reforming under Josiah, and his son is as forward in corrupting the worship of God.

Verse 12. Hast thou seen what the ancients do in the dark—Do secretly; every man in the chambers of his imagery—Chambers so very private, that the prophet is described as obliged to dig a hole through the wall before he could discover their idolatrous practices. For they say, The Lord seeth us not—They either deny the being and providence of God, (chap. ix. 9,) or they say in their hearts, God hath cast us off, and withdrawn his wonted protection from us. They seem to have been of the same mind with Ahaz, who resolved to worship the gods of the Syrians, his conquerors, 2 Chron. xxviii. 23. So these men worshipped the idols of their neighbours, whom they saw to be more prosperous than themselves. Observe here, reader, a practical disbelief of God's omniscience and superintending providence is one chief cause of men's treacherous departures from him. The Lord hath forsaken the earth—Looks not after the affairs of it, and therefore we had as well worship any other god as him. Or, he hath forsaken our land, and left it to be a prey to its enemies, and therefore it is time for us to look out to some other god to whom to commit the protection of it. This was a blasphemous reflection upon God, as if he had forsaken them first, otherwise they would not have forsaken him. Those are indeed ripe for ruin who are arrived to such a pitch of impudence as to lay the blame of their sins on God himself.

Verse 14. Then he brought me to the door which was toward the north—Dr. Lightfoot distinguishes this door from that mentioned verse 5; this, he says, was the upper north gate, and that the lower; this being just over against the temple itself; whereas that was opposite the altar. Behold, there sat women weeping for Tammuz—"The prophet here refers to a Phœnician or Syrian superstition. Tammuz was an idol of Chaldee extraction, as is plain from his name; which also is used for the tenth month, reckoning from the autumnal equinox, that is, the month of June; and Tammuz, as the object of worship, expresses the solar light in its perfection, as in the summer solstice. The Vulgate renders Tammuz, by Adonis; and that Adonis, according to the physical theology of the heathen, was the same as the sun, there is no question. Macrobius expressly affirms it, Saturnal., lib. i. cap. 21, and says, that the tradition of Adonis being killed by a boar, means the diminution of the sun's light and heat by winter. This departure of Adonis, or the sun, was lamented in the most frantic ceremonies of grief by the Phœnician and Assyrian women, who, on these occasions, used to prostitute themselves in honour of his vivifying power; and thus the Jewish women are described by our prophet, weeping for Tammuz, on the fifth day of the sixth month, that is, of August; at which time his death, by the winter boar, was drawing on apace. Tammuz was supposed to have been killed by a wild boar in mount Lebanon, whence flows the river Adonis, concerning which Lucian relates an opinion prevailing in these parts, that its stream, at certain seasons of the year, is of a bloody colour, which the heathen considered as proceeding from a kind of sympathy in the river for his death: see Parkhurst and Uni. Hist., vol. i. p. 342. Milton has touched upon each of these particulars in the following elegant lines:

"———Tammuz came next behind,
Whose annual wound in Lebanon allured
The Syrian damsels to lament his fate,

A. M. 3411. the north; and behold, there sat
B. C. 593. women weeping for Tammuz.

15 Then said he unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations than these.

16 ¶ And he brought me into the inner court of the LORD's house, and behold, at the door of the temple of the LORD, ^mbetween the porch and the altar, ⁿwere about five and twenty men, ^owith their backs toward the temple of the LORD, and their faces toward the east; and they worshipped ^pthe sun toward the east.

^m Joel ii. 17.—ⁿ Chap. xi. 1.—^o Jeremiah ii. 27; xxxii. 33.
^p Deut. iv. 19; 2 Kings xxiii. 5, 11; Job xxxi. 26; Jer. xlv. 17.
¹ Or, Is there any thing lighter than to commit.

In am'rous ditties all a summer's day,
While smooth Adonis, from his native rock,
Ran purple to the sea, supposed with blood
Of Tammuz, yearly wounded: the love-tale
Infected Sion's daughters with like heat, Whose wanton passions, in the sacred porch, Ezekiel saw, when by the vision led His eye survey'd the dark idolatries Of alienated Judah ———."

PARADISE LOST, b. i. v. 446.

Verses 15, 16. Turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations—These latter wickednesses may be accounted greater, because they were acted in a more sacred place. And he brought me into the inner court—The court next the temple, namely, that of the priests. And, behold, at the door of the temple—At that door through which there was an entrance into the porch of the temple, from the altar of burnt-sacrifices. Before, he saw the abominations committed in the gates of the courts, now he is come to the very house itself. Were about five and twenty men with their backs toward the temple, &c.—In contempt of God and his worship they turned their backs toward his sanctuary, and their faces toward the sun; according to the custom of the Chaldeans, Persians, and other eastern nations who worshipped the sun. Lowth thinks Hezekiah might allude to some idolatrous practice of this kind, in that confession of his, recorded 2 Chron. xxix. 6, Our fathers have forsaken him, and turned away their faces from the habitation of the Lord, and turned their backs. They turned their back to God, and not the face, as Jeremiah expresses their contempt toward him, chap. ii. 27. To prevent even the appearance of this, the people were commanded to come into the courts of the temple at the north or southern gates when they came to worship, that they might not, at their return, turn their backs upon God: see chap. xlv. 9. God ordered the holy of holies, in his temple, to be placed toward the west, in opposition to this species of heathen idolatry, which consisted in worshipping the rising sun. And the pious Jews always turned their faces toward the temple when they worshipped.

17 ¶ Then he said unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? ¹Is

it a light thing to the house of Judah that they commit the abominations which they commit here? for they have ^afilled the land with violence, and have returned to provoke me to anger: and lo, they put the branch to their nose.

18 ^rTherefore will I also deal in fury: mine ^seye shall not spare, neither will I have pity: and though they ^tcry in mine ears with a loud voice, yet will I not hear them.

^q Chap. ix. 9.—^r Chap. v. 13; xvi. 42; xxiv. 13.—^s Chap. v. 11; vii. 4, 9; ix. 5, 10.—^t Prov. i. 28; Isa. i. 15; Jer. xi. 11; xiv. 12; Mic. iii. 4; Zech. vii. 13.

Verses 17, 18. Then he said—After the prophet had seen all, and had had time to consider all he saw, God appeals to him concerning the heinousness of their crimes. Is it a light thing to the house of Israel—Who know and profess better things, and are dignified with so many privileges above other nations? Is it excusable in them, who have God's oracles and ordinances, that they commit the abominations which they commit here?—Do they not deserve to suffer who thus sin? Should not such abominations as these make desolate? For they have filled the land with violence—All kinds of injustice are here meant, toward all sorts of men, whom they first despised and then defrauded, oppressed, or destroyed. And it is not strange if they who wrong their Creator make no conscience of injuring their fellow-creatures, and with all that is sacred, trample also on all that is just. And this wickedness of their conduct toward each other would have made their worship an abomination, even if it had been paid to the true God: see Isa. i. 11, &c. And have returned to provoke me, &c.—After having filled the land with violence, they return to the temple to practise their idolatries: from injustice against man they return to impiety against God, and thus, by fresh abominations, add new aggravations to their guilt. And lo, they put the branch to their nose—This obscure clause is supposed by several commentators to relate to some custom among the idolaters of dedicating a branch of laurel, or of some other tree, to the honour of the sun, and carrying it in their hands at the time of their worship. And Spencer, De leg. Heb., lib. iv. cap. 5, observes, "that the heathen, in the worship of their deities, held forth the branches of those trees which were dedicated to them:" a rite which was called among the Greeks, σχοφορία, θαλοφορία: that is, branch-bearing. And Lewis, in his Origines Hebrææ, vol. iii. p. 4, observes, that the most reasonable exposition is, that the worshipper, with a wand in his hand, was wont to touch the idol, and then apply the stick to his nose and mouth, in token of worship and adoration. The Jewish rabbins, however, reckon this among the texts which their wise men have corrected, and say the original reading was not נִסְּא, their nose, but נִסְּא, my nose, or face; according to which reading the sense will be, They put a stick to my face, namely, to mock, or exasperate me: or, taking זכרה to mean here, not a branch, but, as Buxtorf renders it, odor malus ventris, the words will mean, they put an offensive smell to my nose, that is, they put an open affront upon me, namely, by turning their back to me in the place dedicated to my worship. And to this sense the LXX. interpret it, reading αυτοι ως μυκηριζοντες, they are as those that mock me, or publicly affront me. The Vulgate, however, reads the clause as we do. Dr. Lightfoot renders the place, They put the branch to my wrath, or their wrath; that is, "they add more fuel to my wrath, which will burst out like a flame to consume them: just as if one should lay a heap of dry sticks upon a fire." Therefore will I deal in fury, &c.—Hebrew, in anger, or wrath. Mine eye shall not spare—Their provocations are such, that my justice cannot be satisfied without bringing deserved punishment upon them; and though they cry, &c.—Their sins cry louder for vengeance than their prayers cry for mercy.

CHAPTER IX.

In a continuance of his vision, Ezekiel is here shown the destruction of Jerusalem for its wickedness. (1.) Instruments are prepared to destroy the city, 1, 2. (2.) While the cloud of glory removes from off the ark in the holy of holies, to the threshold of the temple, those that mourned for the abominations committed in the city are ordered to be marked for preservation, 3, 4. (3.) Orders are given for the execution of the rest, the slaughter of whom is immediately begun, 5-7. (4.) Ezekiel intercedes in vain for the mitigation of the sentence, 8-10. (5.) He who marked the mourners reports, that every thing was done according to order, 11.

A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. HE cried also in mine ears with a loud voice, saying, Cause them that have charge over the city to draw near, even every man with his destroying weapon in his hand.

2 And behold, six men came from the way of the higher gate, ¹ which lieth toward the north, and every man ² a slaughter-weapon in his hand; ³ and one man among them was clothed with linen, with a writer's inkhorn ³ by his side: and they went in and stood beside the brazen altar.

3 And ^b the glory of the God of Israel was gone up from the cherub whereupon he was, to ¹ Heb. which is turned.—² Heb. a weapon of his breaking in pieces.—³ Lev. xvi. 4; Chap. x. 2, 6, 7; Rev. xv. 6.

³ Hebrew, upon his loins.—^b Chap. iii. 23; viii. 4; x. 4, 18; xii. 23.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IX.

Verses 1, 2. He cried also in mine ears—Namely, the man whom he had seen upon the throne; with a loud voice—This denoted the terribleness of the judgments which were going to be inflicted. Cause them that have charge, &c.—That is, says Lowth, "the angels who had the charge of executing God's judgments upon the city." Or it may be intended of the Chaldean army, or of its principal leaders, who had a charge or commission against Jerusalem, to avenge the divine justice of it, because of its heinous provocations. The passage is prophetic of the slaughter which should be made of its inhabitants. And behold, &c.—No sooner was the command given, than these ministers of God's displeasure appear ready to execute it. Six men—In the vision they appeared as men, and the prophet terms them according to their appearance. From the way of the higher gate—See note on chap. viii. 14. Which lieth toward the north—The Babylonians made their inroads into Palestine, as has been more than once observed, from the north, and by this gate it seems, the Chaldeans first entered into the city. And every man a slaughter-weapon in his hand—Prepared for the work to which they were called. And one among them was clothed with linen—A garment proper to the priesthood; and the habit in which the angels often appeared, Dan. x. 5, and xii. 6, 7. This person, at least, seems to have been an angel, who had the charge given him of preserving those that were to be saved amidst the general destruction; with a writer's inkhorn by his side—That he might set a mark on those who were to be preserved amidst the general slaughter. Thus, Rev. vii. 2, St. John in a vision saw an angel with the seal of the living God, and therewith the servants of God were sealed in their foreheads; "in allusion," says Bishop Newton, "to the ancient custom of marking servants in their foreheads, to distinguish what they were, and to whom they belonged." The position of the inkhorn, by the side of this writer, may appear strange to a European reader, but according to Olearius, Dr. Shaw, and others, the custom of placing it by the side continues in the East to this day. And they went in and stood beside the brazen altar—To denote that the men ordained to destruction were offered up as so many sacrifices to God's justice. The destruction of the wicked is elsewhere expressed by the name of a sacrifice: see chap. xxxix. 17; Isa. xxix. 2, and xxxiv. 6.

Verses 3, 4. And the glory of God was gone to the threshold of the house—Namely, that glorious symbol of the divine presence which had been wont to appear between the cherubim upon the mercy-seat,

A. M. 3411. the threshold of the house. And he
B. C. 593.

called to the man clothed with linen,
which had the writer's inkhorn by his side;

4 And the LORD said unto him, Go through the midst of the city, through the midst of Jerusalem, and ⁴set ^oa mark upon the fore-heads of the men ^dthat sigh and that cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst thereof.

5 ¶ And to the others he said in ⁵my hear-

^a Heb. mark a mark.—^c Exodus xii. 7; Rev. vii. 3; ix. 4; xiii. 16, 17; xx. 4.—^d Psa. cxix. 53, 136; Jer. xiii. 17; 2 Cor.
xii. 21; 2 Pet. ii. 8.—⁵ Heb. nine ears.

was departed out of that inner sanctuary to the threshold or door of the temple, to show that God would shortly forsake his house, and withdraw himself from the Jews, because of their idolatries and other sins. The word cherub here stands for cherubin, as chap. x. 2. We must distinguish this apparition of the divine glory, which had its usual residence in the temple, from that which was shown particularly to Ezekiel, chap. i. 26, and iii. 23. And he called to the man clothed with linen—He who sat on the throne, chap. i. 26, namely, the Son of God, gave his commands to the angel; and the Lord (Hebrew, Jehovah) said unto him, Go through the midst of the city—From the one end to the other, or rather through all parts of it; and set a mark, &c.—To signify that distinction which God, by his providence, makes in times of common calamity between some and others, Isa. xxvi. 20; Jer. xxxix. 16; Mal. iii. 18. For God in his greatest wrath against his enemies has a reserve of mercies for his people.
Upon the foreheads of the men that sigh—Namely, out of grief, or who mourn for the sins and miseries of others; and cry for all the abominations, &c.— Who dare openly bewail the abominations of this wicked city, and so bear their testimony against it.
The Vulgate renders the clause, Et signa Thau super frontes virorum gementium, &c.; that is, “mark with the letter Thau the foreheads of the men who grieve, &c.” And it has been a long and prevailing opinion in the Christian Church, that the letter Thau was the mark here intended, namely, in the Samaritan character, supposed to have been used at that time by the Jews, and that the letter was written in the form of a cross, as St. Jerome attests in his commentary on the place. The prevalence of this opinion shows, at least, how early this use of the form of the cross prevailed in the Christian Church, which made way for the superstition and idolatry of the Papists in that particular. It is of more consequence to observe, that whatever this mark was, it was set upon the persons here described to signify that God owned them as his, and would spare and preserve them in the time of this general destruction. Observe, reader, a work of grace in the soul is to God a mark upon the forehead, which he will acknowledge as his mark, and by which he knows them that are his; and those who keep them-ing, Go ye after him through the A. M. 3411.

city, and smite: ^olet not your eye B. C. 593.
spare, neither have ye pity:

6 ^fSlay ⁶utterly old and young, both maids, and little children, and women: but ^ecome not near any man upon whom is the mark;
and ^hbegin at my sanctuary. ⁱThen they began at the ancient men which were before the house.

7 And he said unto them, Defile the house,

^o Verse 10; Chap. v. 11.—^f 2 Chron. xxxvi. 17.—⁶ Heb.
to destruction.—^e Rev. ix. 4.—^h Jer. xxv. 29; 1 Pet. iv. 17.
ⁱ Chap. viii. 11, 12, 16.

selves pure in times of common iniquity, God will keep safe in times of common calamity. They that distinguish themselves shall be distinguished; they that cry for other men's sins, shall not need to cry for their own afflictions; for they shall either be delivered from them, or comforted under them. Observe again: God is more careful of his people than vindictive against his enemies; for he orders the sealing of the mourners before the destruction of the rebels.

Verses 5-7. To the others he said, Go ye after him and smite—That is, cut off and destroy all that are either guilty of, or accessory to the abominations of Jerusalem, and even all that do not sigh and cry for them, or that are not affected with grief and sorrow on account of them. Let not your eyes spare—You must not save any whom God has doomed to destruction. None needs to be more merciful than God is,
and he had said, chap. viii. 18, My eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity. Take notice, reader, those that live in sin, and hate to be reformed, shall perish in sin, and deserve not to be pitied; for they might easily have prevented their ruin, but would not. Slay utterly old and young, &c.—Make no distinction of age or sex. This was awfully fulfilled, partly by the sword of the Chaldeans, 2 Chron. xxxvi.
17, and partly by famine and pestilence, each of which calamities swept away multitudes. And begin at my sanctuary—That sanctuary, the horrid profa-nation of which Ezekiel had seen, as is described in the former chapter; they must begin there, because there the wickedness began which provoked God to send these judgments: the debaucheries of the priests were the poisoning of the springs from which all the corruption of the streams flowed. The wickedness of the sanctuary was of all other the most offensive to God, and therefore there the slaughter must begin. Begin there to try if the people will take warning by the judgments of God upon their priests, and will repent and reform: begin there, that all the world may see and know that the Lord, whose name is Jehovah, is a jealous God, and hates sin most in those that are nearest to him. Indeed when judgments are abroad in the earth, they commonly begin at the house of God, 1 Pet. iv. 17, because such persons sin against greater light and clearer convictions, and abuse greater privileges than others. You only have I known, and therefore will I punish you,

A. M. 3411. and fill the courts with the slain: B. C. 593. go ye forth. And they went forth, and slew in the city.

8 ¶ And it came to pass while they were slaying them, and I was left, that I ^k fell upon my face, and cried, and said, ^l Ah Lord God! wilt thou destroy all the residue of Israel in thy pouring out of thy fury upon Jerusalem?

9 Then said he unto me, The iniquity of the house of Israel and Judah is exceeding great, ^k Num. xiv. 5; xvi. 4, 22, 45; Josh. vii. 6.—^l Chap. xi. 13. ^m 2 Kings xxi. 16; Chap. viii. 17.—ⁿ Heb. filled with.—^o Or, wresting of judgment.

Amos iii. 2. God's temple is a sanctuary, a place of refuge and protection for penitent sinners, but not for any that go on still in their trespasses; neither the sacredness of the place, nor the eminence of any one's office or station in it, will be their security. But come not near any man upon whom is the mark—Do not harm, nay, do not so much as threaten, or put in fear, any one of these. The sense is, I will so order it by my providence, that none whom I have designed for preservation shall be destroyed. This prediction was remarkably fulfilled. Nebuchadnezzar gave particular orders that Jeremiah should be protected, Baruch and Ebedmelech were secured, and it is likely others of Jeremiah's friends for his sake; God had promised that it should go well with his remnant, and that they should be well treated, Jer. xv. 11; and we have reason to think that none of the mourning, praying remnant fell by the sword of the Chaldeans, but God found out some way or other to secure them all; as in the last destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, the Christians were all secured in a city on the mountains, called Pella, and none of them perished with the unbelieving Jews. Then they began at the ancient men which were before the house—Namely, those who committed idolatry in the several courts and apartments belonging to the temple; that is, they strictly observed the orders given them, and began at God's sanctuary, as they were commanded. And he said, Defile the house, and fill the courts with slain—God, abhorring the temple, as having been polluted with idolatry, here not only declares that he will no longer own it for his place of residence, but delivers up both the inner and outward courts belonging to it to be polluted with blood and slaughter. Let us observe well, that if the servants of God's house defile it with their sins, God will justly suffer its enemies to defile it with their acts of violence. If the ministers and members of God's church pollute it with their errors and impieties, God will take away its wall of defence, and expose it to the ravages of persecutors. And they went forth and slew in the city—So it was represented to the prophet in his vision, which was still continued, as a prediction of what should shortly be done in reality.

Verse 8. And while they were slaying, and I was and ^m the land is ⁿ full of blood, and ^o the LORD seeth not. A. M. 3411. the city full of ^p perverseness; for they B. C. 593. say, ^a The LORD hath forsaken the earth, and 10 And as for me also, mine ^p eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity, but ^q I will recompense their way upon their head.

11 And behold, the man clothed with linen, which had the inkhorn by his side, ^r reported the matter, saying, I have done as thou hast commanded me.

^a Chap. viii. 12.—^b Psa. x. 11; Isa. xxix. 15.—^c Chapter vi. 11; vii. 4; viii. 18.—^d Chapter xi. 21.—^e Heb. returned the word.

left—Having, as it is to be supposed, the mark of preservation set upon his forehead by the protecting angel. He seems to speak as if he thought he alone was preserved amidst the common destruction, although, certainly, all those who had a mark set upon them were preserved as well as he. I fell upon my face and cried, &c.—I appeared to myself in my vision to do so, namely, to fall down in a posture of supplication, to deprecate God's anger, (see Num. xii. 5; and xvi. 4, 22, 45,) and to beseech him not to make an utter end of those small remains that were left of the Jewish nation, Jerusalem being almost the only place which was not in the enemy's power.

Verses 9, 10. Then said he, The iniquity of the house of Israel, &c., is exceeding great—Here we have God's denial of the prophet's request for a mitigation of the judgment, and the justification of himself in that denial. 1st, Nothing could be said in extenuation of their guilt. God was as willing to show mercy as the prophet could desire, but here the case would not admit of it: it was such that mercy could not be granted without injuring justice; and it was not fit that one attribute of God should be glorified at the expense of another. Their crimes were so flagrant, that to grant them a reprieve would be a connivance at their sins. The land is full of blood—Blood unjustly shed, which always cries for vengeance. And the city full of perverseness—All judgment was perverted; in judges, to injustice; in priests, to idolatry; in all, to skepticism, or atheism. For they say, The Lord hath forsaken the earth—And hath left us to do what we will in it, and whatever wrong we do, he either knows it not, or will not take cognizance of it. Now how can those expect benefit from the mercy of God who thus bid defiance to his justice? Therefore, 2d, Nothing can be done to mitigate the sentence. Mine eye shall not spare, &c.—I have borne with them as long as it was fit such impudent sinners should be borne with, and therefore I will now recompense their way on their head.

Verse 11. And the man clothed with linen reported the matter—Gave an account of what he had done in pursuance of his commission; he had found out all that mourned in secret for the sins of the land, and cried out against them by a public testimony, and he had marked them in order to their preservation. Lord, I have done as thou hast commanded me—We do not find that those who were commissioned to destroy reported what destruction they had made, but he who was appointed to protect reported his matter; for it would be more pleasing, both to God and the prophet, to hear of those that were saved than of those that perished.

CHAPTER X.

The prophet having informed us, chap. viii. 5, that when he was in vision at Jerusalem, he saw the same appearance of the glory of God there, which he had seen by the river Chebar, he now, in this chapter, gives us some account of the appearance there, as far as was needful for placing in a clear point of view two further indications of the approaching destruction of Jerusalem, which God here gave him: namely, (1.) The scattering of coals of fire upon the city, taken from between the cherubim, 1-7. (2.) The removal of the glory of God from the temple, and its being upon the wing to be gone, 8-22.

A. M. 3411. THEN I looked, and behold, in the
B. C. 593.

^a firmament that was above the head of the cherubims there appeared over them as it were a sapphire-stone, as the appearance of the likeness of a throne.

2 ^b And he spake unto the man clothed with linen, and said, Go in between the wheels, even under the cherub, and fill ^c thy hand with ^d coals of fire from between the cherubims, and ^d scatter them over the city. And he went in in my sight.

3 Now the cherubims stood on the right side of the house, when the man went in; and the cloud filled the inner court.

4 ^e Then the glory of the LORD ² went up from the cherub, and stood over the threshold

^a Chap. i. 22, 26.—^b Chap. ix. 2, 3.—^c Heb. the hollow of thy hand.—^d Chapter i. 13.—^e Rev. viii. 5.—^f Verse 18; Chap. i. 28; ix. 3.

NOTES ON CHAPTER X.

Verses 1-3. Then I looked, &c.—Most of this chapter has been explained in the notes on chap. i. In the firmament, &c.—See chap. i. 26. The repetition of the vision here signified that the heavy and terrible judgments of God were drawing nearer and nearer. He—That sat on the throne; spake unto the man clothed in linen—To the angel, as before, chap. ix. 2; and said, Go in between the wheels, under the cherub—Or, between the cherubim, according to the explication given verse 7. And fill thy hand with coals of fire—Which sparkled and ran up and down between the living creatures: see chap. i. 13. This part of the vision signified that the city would shortly be consumed by fire. Coals of fire do elsewhere denote the divine vengeance. Now the cherubim—Which were part of the vision shown to the prophet; stood on the right side of the house—In the inner court, on the north side of the temple, verse 18; namely, the court of the priests. And the cloud filled the court—A splendour, or brightness, went before, and a cloud followed it. The splendour signified the clearness of the judgment; and of the house; and ^f the house was

B. C. 593.

filled with the cloud, and the court was full of the brightness of the LORD's glory. 5 And the ^g sound of the cherubims' wings was heard even to the outer court, as ^h the voice of the Almighty God when he speaketh.

6 And it came to pass, that when he had commanded the man clothed with linen, saying, Take fire from between the wheels, from between the cherubims; then he went in, and stood beside the wheels.

7 And one cherub ³ stretched forth his hand from between the cherubims unto the fire that was between the cherubims, and took thereof, and put it into the hands of him that was clothed with linen: who took it, and went out.

^a Hebrew, was lifted up.—^b 1 Kings viii. 10, 11; Chapter xliii. 5.—^c Chapter i. 24.—^d Psalm xxix. 3, &c.—^e Heb. sent forth.

the clouds, the storms of calamity which would follow it.

Verses 4-7. Then the glory of the Lord went up from the cherub—In token of his departure from the temple. The words may be better rendered, For the glory of the Lord had gone up, &c. For the prophet repeats here what he had related before, chap. ix. 3. And the house was filled with the cloud—The account here given must strike every reader as to its similarity with the description given of the Shechinah in the books of Moses and the first book of Kings. A bright cloud was the sign of God's presence, which first filled the tabernacle, Exod. xl. 35, (afterward the temple, 1 Kings viii. 10,) where it fixed itself upon the mercy-seat, Lev. xvi. 2. From whence God is said, so often in Scripture, to dwell between the cherubim. This glory now removed from the place where it used to appear in the inner sanctuary, and came down toward the porch of the temple, and stood, or fixed itself, partly in the temple and partly in the inner court adjoining to it: see note on chap. ix. 3. The glory stood, to show God's unwillingness to leave his people, and give them

A. M. 3411. 8 ¶ⁱ And there appeared in the
B. C. 593. cherubims the form of a man's hand under their wings.

9 ^kAnd when I looked, behold the four wheels by the cherubims, one wheel by one cherub, and another wheel by another cherub: and the appearance of the wheels was as the colour of a ^lberyl-stone.

10 And as for their appearances, they four had one likeness, as if a wheel had been in the midst of a wheel.

11 ^mWhen they went, they went upon their four sides; they turned not as they went, but to the place whither the head looked they followed it; they turned not as they went.

12 And their whole ⁿbody, and their backs, and their hands, and their wings, and ^othe wheels, were full of eyes round about, even the wheels that they four had.

13 As for the wheels, ^pit was cried unto them in my hearing, O wheel!

ⁱ Chapter i. 8; Verse 21.—^k Chap. i. 15.—^l Chap. i. 16.
^m Chapter i. 17.—ⁿ Heb. flesh.—^o Chap. i. 18.—^p Or, they were called in my hearing, wheel, or, galgal.

time to return to him, and placed itself where it might be seen, both by priests and people, that both might be moved to repentance. And the sound of the cherubims' wings, as the voice of the Almighty—As the sound of loud thunder. The cherubim, in the prophet's vision, seem to have moved to attend upon the Shechinah, which now had taken its station at the threshold of the house. He went and stood beside, rather, between, the wheels.

Verses 8–13. There appeared in the cherubim the form of a man's hand—See chap. i. 8. The following verses to the 12th are the same, in substance, with chap. i. 16–18, where see the notes. To the place where the head looked they followed, verse 11.
Each wheel consisted of four semicircles in correspondence to the heads of each animal. It was cried unto them, O wheel—Or, move round, as some render the word. They were put in mind of continually attending upon their duty; for the wheels and living creatures were animated with the same principle of understanding and motion.

Verse 14. And every one had four faces—See notes on chap. i. 6–10. The first had the face of a cherub—That is, of an ox, as appears by comparing this verse with chap. i. 10. The word cherub, indeed, originally signifies an ox. The several faces are here represented in a different order from the description given of them chap. i. 10, of which difference this reason may be assigned. In the first chapter the prophet saw this vision coming out of the north, and advancing southward, (verse 4,) where the face of a man, being placed on the south side, was first in view. The lion, being on the east 14 ^oAnd every one had four faces: A. M. 3411.

the first face was the face of a cherub, B. C. 593.
and the second face was the face of a man, and the third the face of a lion, and the fourth
the face of an eagle.

15 And the cherubims were lifted up. This is ^pthe living creature that I saw by the river of Chebar.

16 ^qAnd when the cherubims went, the wheels went by them: and when the cherubims lifted up their wings to mount up from the earth, the same wheels also turned not from beside them.

17 ^rWhen they stood, these stood; and when they were lifted up, these lifted up themselves also: for the spirit ^sof the living creature was in them.

18 Then ^tthe glory of the Lord ^udeparted from off the threshold of the house, and stood over the cherubims.

19 And ^vthe cherubims lifted up their wings,
and mounted up from the earth in my sight:

^o Chap. i. 6, 10.—^p Chap. i. 5.—^q Chap. i. 19.—^r Chap.
i. 12, 20, 21.—^s Or, of life.—^t Verse 4.—^u Hosea ix. 12.
^v Chap. xi. 22.

part, was toward his right hand; the ox, being placed toward the west, was on his left; and the eagle was toward the north. This interpretation is justified from the situation of the standards of the several tribes of Israel in the wilderness, (Num. ii. 2, 10, 18, 25,) where Judah, whose standard was a lion, was placed on the east side; Reuben, whose standard was a man, was placed on the south; Ephraim, whose standard was an ox, was placed on the west; and Dan, whose standard was an eagle, was placed on the north side. Here the prophet is supposed to stand westward of the Shechinah, as that was moving eastward: so the ox was first in his view.

Verses 15–17. And the cherubims were lifted up—
To attend upon the divine glory wherever it went,
and particularly at its removal from the temple.
This is the living creature, &c.—Here it is spoken of as only one living creature, though before it is called the living creatures; because it was, as it were, but one creature, of the likeness of four different animals. For the spirit of the living creature was in them—There is a perfect harmony between second causes in their dependance on, and subjection to, the one infinite, wise, good, holy, and just God. The Spirit of God directs all the creatures, upper and lower, so that they all serve the divine purpose. Events are not determined by the wheel of fortune, which is blind, but by the wheels of pro- vidence, which are full of eyes.

Verses 18, 19. Then the glory of the Lord de- parted from off the threshold, &c.—The cloud of glory, emblematical of the divine presence, now

A. M. 3411. when they went out, the wheels also
B. C. 593. were beside them, and every one stood at the door of the east gate of the LORD's house; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.

20 * This is the living creature that I saw under the God of Israel [†] by the river of Che-bar; and I knew that they were the cherubims.

* Chap. i. 22; Ver. 15.—[†] Chap. i. 1.—[‡] Ch. i. 6; Ver. 14.

makes a further remove from the temple: it now quite left the house itself, and settled upon the cherubim, which stood in the court adjoining to it, ver. 3. And the cherubims lifted up their wings: the wheels also—See chap. i. 19, 26. And stood at the door of the east gate—This was a still further remove from the temple, (for the east gate was just at the entrance into the inner court before the temple,) to signify that the divine protection would entirely leave the house; and, God departing, the angels depart also,

21 * Every one had four faces apiece, A. M. 3411.
B. C. 593. and every one four wings; ^a and the likeness of the hands of a man was under their wings.

22 And ^b the likeness of their faces was the same faces which I saw by the river of Chebar, their appearances and themselves: ^c they went every one straight forward.

^a Chap. i. 8; Verse 8.—^b Chap. i. 10.—^c Chap. i. 12.

and withdraw that benefit and service which they gave before. Here, however, the glory of God, the cherubim, and the wheels, all stood, respiting execution, and giving opportunity of preventing the approaching misery.

Verse 20. This is the living creature, &c.—See chap. i. 22-26. And I knew that they were the cherubims—Either by special assurance as a prophet, or from reading and hearing about those that were represented in the holy of holies.

CHAPTER XI.

This chapter concludes the vision which Ezekiel saw at Jerusalem, and relates two messages which he received: (1.) A message of wrath against those who remained secure at Jerusalem, 1-13. (2.) A message of comfort to the dejected captives at Babylon, 14-21. (3.) The glory of God removes farther, 22, 23. (4.) The vision disappears, of which Ezekiel gives an account, 24, 25.

A. M. 3411. MOREOVER, ^a the spirit lifted me
B. C. 593. up, and brought me unto ^b the east gate of the LORD's house, which looketh eastward: and behold ^c at the door of the gate five and twenty men; among whom I saw Jaazaniah the son of Azur, and Pelatiah the son of Benaiah, princes of the people.

^a Chapter iii. 12, 14; viii. 3; Verse 24.—^b Chapter x. 19.
^c Chapter viii. 16.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XI.

Verses 1-3. Moreover the spirit lifted me up—It seems it should rather have been rendered, And the spirit had lifted me up, for here he appears to go back to speak about those twenty-five men of whom he made mention chap. vii. 16, but had broken off from speaking of them to speak of things of greater importance; but he now returns to them again. And brought me unto the east gate—Caused me to see those parts in my vision just as if I had been there. And behold at the door five and twenty men—The same who are represented in chap. viii. 16, as worshipping the sun. They were princes of the people—That is, most probably, members of the great sanhedrim: compare Jer. xxvi. 10. Among whom I saw Pelatiah, &c.—Named here for that dreadful, sudden death, whereby he became a warn-

2 Then said he unto me, Son of A. M. 3411.
B. C. 593. man, these are the men that devise mischief, and give wicked counsel in this city:

3 Which say, ¹ It is not ^d near; let us build houses: ^e this city is the caldron, and we be the flesh.

¹ Or, It is not for us to build houses near.—^d Chap. xii. 22, 27;
^e 2 Peter iii. 4.—^a Jer. i. 13; Chapter xxiv. 3, &c.

ing to others. Then said he unto me—Namely, the divine appearance which was before my eyes. These are the men that give wicked counsel—They probably advised and encouraged the people to use the Chaldean rites of worship, in order to please and gain the favour of that nation. Or, they persuaded the Jews that they had no reason to fear future trouble or mischief from the Chaldeans, and therefore rendered them secure in their sins. Which say, It is not near—The threatened danger and ruin by the Chaldeans. These were such as put the evil day far from them, as is said Am. vi. 3, and so went on securely in building houses, and making such like improvements. This city is the caldron, and we be the flesh—Jeremiah had foretold the destruction of Jerusalem under the figure of a seething-pot, or caldron, Jer. i. 13. And Ezekiel himself uses

A. M. 3411. 4 Therefore prophecy against them, B. C. 593. — prophecy, O son of man.

5 And ^fthe Spirit of the LORD fell upon me, and said unto me, Speak; Thus saith the LORD; Thus have ye said, O house of Israel: for I know the things that come into your mind, every one of them.

6 ^gYe have multiplied your slain in this city, and ye have filled the streets thereof with the slain.

7 Therefore thus saith the Lord God: ^hYour slain whom ye have laid in the midst of it, they are the flesh, and this city is the caldron: ⁱbut I will bring you forth out of the midst of it.

^f Chap. ii. 2; iii. 24. — ^g Chap. vii. 23; xxii. 3, 4. — ^h Chap. xxiv. 3, 6, 10, 11; Micah iii. 3. — ⁱ Verse 9. — ^k Chapter v. 8.

the same metaphor, chap. xxiv. 3, 4, &c. So these scoffers made use of the same expression on purpose to deride the menaces of the prophets; as if they had said, If this city be a caldron, we are well content to be the flesh that is boiled in it. "We will share all fates with her, we will either be preserved or perish with her." So Michaelis, who thinks the words are a proverb.

Verses 4, 5. Therefore prophecy against them—Declare to them how different things shall happen to them from what they expect. And the Spirit of the Lord fell upon me—See note on chap. iii. 24. And said unto me, Speak; Thus have ye said—Ye have advanced the assertion, mentioned verse 3. "You have rightly said what you say: the city is the caldron, and we are the flesh, shall be fulfilled, but not as you understand it. Many of you will perish in the city. For those it will be the caldron, and they will be flesh boiled in it. But yourselves shall not be the flesh in the caldron: but you shall be taken out and elsewhere cut in pieces."—Michaelis in Newcome. For I know the things that come into your mind—Here God declares that, however much these men thought, and said in their hearts, The Lord seeth us not, yet still he not only saw them, but knew the things that came into their mind, every one of them, and took particular notice of that vain confidence with which they supported themselves, and endeavoured to put a good face upon a matter which they could not but know to be bad. Remember, reader, God perfectly knows not only the things that come out of our mouths, but the things that come into our minds; not only all we say, but all we think; even those thoughts which are most suddenly darted into our minds, and as suddenly slip out of them again, are perfectly known and narrowly observed by God: he knows us infinitely better than we know ourselves; he understands us afar off: the consideration whereof should oblige us to keep our hearts with all diligence, that no vain thoughts may come into them, or lodge within them.

8 Ye have feared the sword; and A. M. 3411. I will bring a sword upon you, saith B. C. 593. the Lord God.

9 And I will bring you out of the midst thereof, and deliver you into the hands of strangers, and ^kwill execute judgments among you.

10 ^lYe shall fall by the sword; I will judge you in ^mthe border of Israel; ⁿand ye shall know that I am the LORD.

11 ^oThis city shall not be your caldron, neither shall ye be the flesh in the midst thereof; but I will judge you in the border of Israel:

^l 2 Kings xxv. 19, 20, 21; Jer. xxxix. 6; lii. 10. — ^m 1 Kings viii. 65; 2 Kings xiv. 25. — ⁿ Psa. ix. 16; Chap. vi. 7; xiii. 9, 14, 21, 23. — ^o Verse 3.

Verses 6, 7. Ye have multiplied your slain in this city—Ye have, without law or justice, shed the blood of many in your streets. From this, and many other expressions in the Scripture, we may conclude that not only private murders were extremely frequent among them, but that they also frequently put to death, under colour of justice, those who were innocent of every crime deserving of death, but whom, for some wicked purposes, they wanted to be removed out of the way. And ye have filled the streets thereof with the slain—You have not only committed many murders yourselves, but you are accountable to God for all those whom the Chaldeans have slain, seeing you persuaded your people thus obstinately to stand out. Your slain, they are the flesh, &c.—You yourselves, therefore, have made your city, as it were, a caldron, by the murdered bodies with which you have filled the streets of it; many of them cut in pieces, so that they seem like flesh cut for the caldron. And this city may properly be called the caldron, into which their flesh has been thrown. But I will bring you forth out of the midst of it—Not in mercy, but in wrath, by the conquering hand of the king of Babylon. You shall not die there, but I will reserve you for another punishment: see verses 9, 11.

Verses 8–11. Ye have feared the sword—Of the Chaldeans; and have, to avoid it, courted them, and left my worship to follow their idolatrous rites: but this very sword will I bring upon you. And I will deliver you into the hands of strangers—Defeating all your projects for escape; and I will execute judgments among you—By the hands of the Chaldeans, whom I will make the instruments of my just vengeance. I will judge you in the border of Israel—Namely, in Riblah, just upon the borders of Judea. In this place the king of Babylon, who is here spoken of as God's representative, sat in judgment on all the princes of Judah, and slew them: see the margin. This city shall not be your caldron—The place of your sufferings; greater are reserved for you elsewhere.

A. M. 3411. 12 And ye shall know that I am the LORD: ² for ye have not walked in my statutes, neither executed my judgments, but ³ have done after the manners of the heathen that are round about you.

13 ¶ And it came to pass, when I prophesied, that ⁴ Pelatiah the son of Benaiah died. Then ⁵ fell I down upon my face, and cried with a loud voice, and said, Ah Lord God! wilt thou make a full end of the remnant of Israel?

14 ¶ Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

15 Son of man, thy brethren, even thy brethren, the men of thy kindred, and all the house of Israel wholly, are they unto whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, Get you far from the LORD: unto us is this land given in possession.

16 Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord God; Although I have cast them far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, ⁶ yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come.

17 Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord God; ⁷ I will even gather you from the people, and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel.

^p Verse 10.—² Or, which have not walked.—³ Lev. xviii. 3, 24, &c.; Deut. xii. 30, 31; Chap. viii. 10, 14, 16.

^r Ver. 1; Acts v. 5.—^s Ch. ix. 8.—^t Psa. xc. 1; xci. 9; Isa. viii. 14.—^u Jer. xxiv. 5; Ch. xxviii. 25; xxxiv. 13; xxxvi. 24.

Verse 13. And when I prophesied, Pelatiah died—Mentioned verse 1, a principal man among the twenty-five princes, who made all the mischief in Jerusalem: see note on verse 2. It seems this was done only in vision now, (as the slaying of the ancient men, chap. ix. 6,) but it was an assurance, that when this prophecy was published it would be done in fact. And the death of Pelatiah was a pledge of the complete accomplishment of the prophecy. Then fell I down upon my face, and cried—The prophet thought this an earnest of the common destruction which was coming upon all the inhabitants of the city, and thereupon he earnestly deprecated so severe a judgment. See chap. ix. 8.

Verses 14, 15. Again the word of the Lord came unto me—A seasonable word, to stop the mouths of the insulting Jerusalemites, and to encourage the captives at Babylon. Son of man, thy brethren—The men of thy kindred, or, of thy redemption, as גִּבְרֹתָךְ may be rendered: that is, thy fellow-captives, as Bishop Newcome reads it; unto whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, Get ye far from the Lord, &c.—The Jews who were left in Judea thought themselves more the favourites of God than those who had been carried away captives, looking upon the latter as outcasts, and such as had no right, either to the privileges of Jews or to the land of Judea. The words, רְדוּ מִצִּיּוֹן, rendered, Get you far from the Lord, may be translated, They have departed far from the Lord, that is, they have more grievously sinned and offended God than we. So thought and so said the inhabitants of Jerusalem, concerning those who had been carried into captivity. Unto us is this land given in possession—This promised, holy land, where our fathers dwelt, is exclusively ours, and we shall never be put out of possession of it, but it shall always be our inheritance.

Verse 16. Therefore say—In vindication of the captives; Although I have cast them far off—Not from myself, but from you and your polluted land, and out of the way of the dreadful judgments which are approaching; among the heathen—The Chaldeans, or those among whom the Chaldeans have placed them; and have scattered them among the countries—Have separated them from each other, and dispersed them in many countries; yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary—A sanctuary, or a refuge and protection “for a short time,” (so Bishop Newcome,) that is, during the seventy years’ captivity; or a little one in opposition to the great temple at Jerusalem; which, when its inhabitants were in the greatest need, should afford them the least help. But I, says God, will really be to my captives what the proud, self-deceiving Jews promise themselves from their temple, namely, their defence, support, and comfort. To me shall they flee, and in me shall they be safe, as he was that took hold on the horns of the altar. Or rather, they shall have such communion with me in the land of their captivity, as it was thought could be had nowhere but in the temple. They shall have the tokens of my presence with them, and my grace in their hearts shall sanctify their prayers and praises, as truly as ever the altar at the temple sanctified the gift. Observe, reader, they that are deprived of the benefit of public ordinances, if it be not their own fault, may have the want of them abundantly supplied in the immediate communications of divine grace and comforts.

Verses 17–20. I will even gather you from the people—This might be, in some degree, fulfilled in those that returned from captivity, but the perfect completion of this promise must be referred to the time of the expected general restoration of the Jewish nation. And they shall come thither—They who assemble upon Cyrus’s proclamation first, and they who afterward assemble upon Darius’s, shall overcome all difficulties, perform their journey, and come safely to their own land. And they shall take away all the detestable things thereof—Shall abolish superstition and idolatry from the temple, the city,

A. M. 3411. 18 And they shall come thither, and
B. C. 593. ^athey shall take away all the detestable things thereof, and all the abominations thereof from thence.

19 And ^vI will give them one heart, and I will put ^aa new spirit within you; and I will take ^athe stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them a heart of flesh:

20 ^bThat they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them: ^cand

^{*} Chap. xxxvii. 23.—^v Jer. xxxii. 39; Chap. xxxvi. 26, 27; Zeph. iii. 9.—^a Psa. li. 10; Jer. xxxi. 33; xxxii. 39; Chap.
xviii. 31.—^a Zech. vii. 12.

and the country, and shall live pure from all the pollutions with which the land had been formerly defiled. But this promise also ultimately respects the future conversion of the Jews, as do those contained in the next two verses. And I will give them one heart—A heart entire for me, the living and true God, and not divided, as their hearts were formerly, among many gods; a heart firmly fixed and resolved for my worship and service, and not wavering; steady and uniform, and not inconstant, and inconsistent with itself. And hence they shall serve me with one consent, Zeph. iii. 9. And I will put a new spirit within them—A disposition of mind agreeable to the new circumstances into which, in the course of my providence, I will bring them. Observe, reader, all that are regenerated have a new spirit: a spirit entirely changed from what it was before: they act from new principles, walk by new rules, and aim at new ends. A new name, a new profession, new opinions, or new modes of worship will not serve without a new spirit. If any man be in Christ he is a new creature: see the margin. And I will take away the stony heart out of their flesh—Out of their corrupt nature. Their hearts shall no longer be dead and dry, hard and unfeeling, but tender and apt to receive good impressions, and deeply sensible of, and affected with, things spiritual and divine. These are the same evangelical promises as we read in the other prophets, particularly Jer. xxxii. 39. "The insensibility of men, with regard to religious matters, is often ascribed to the hardness of their hearts. God promises here to give them teachable dispositions, and to take away the veil from their hearts, as St. Paul expresses it, 2 Cor. iii. 16; the same temper being indifferently expressed either by blindness or hardness of heart."—Lowth. That they may walk in my statutes—In their whole conversation; and keep my ordinances—In all acts of religious worship. These two particulars must go together, and not be separated; and those to whom God has given a new heart, and a new spirit, will make conscience of both, and then the following promise shall be fulfilled, They shall be my people, and I will be their God: the ancient covenant, which seemed to have been broken and forgotten, shall be renewed. By their idolatry and other sins, they appeared to have cast God off; and by their being they shall be my people, and I will A. M. 3411.

B. C. 593.
be their God.

21 But as for them whose heart walketh after the heart of their detestable things and their abominations, ^dI will recompense their way upon their own heads, saith the Lord God.

22 ¶ Then did the cherubims ^elift up their wings, and the wheels beside them; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.

23 And ^fthe glory of the Lord went up

^b Psalm cv. 45.—^c Jer. xxiv. 7; Chap. xiv. 11; xxxvi. 28; xxxvii. 27.—^d Chap. ix. 10; xxii. 31.—^e Chap. i. 19; x. 19.
^f Chap. viii. 4; ix. 3; x. 4, 18; xliii. 4.

sent into captivity, and divers other punishments, God seemed to have cast them off; but when they are cured of their idolatry and various vices, and delivered from their captivity and other calamities, God and Israel own one another again: God, by his good work in them, makes them his people; and then, by the tokens of his good-will toward them, shows them that he is their God.

Verse 21. But as for them—Whoever they be, and some there will be in the best times, who will refuse to own God for their God, and truly to love and obey him. Whose heart walketh after their detestable things—Whose judgment and choice, or whose will and affections, go after their idols and iniquities, their lusts and vices. I will recompense their way upon their own heads—Their state shall differ as much as their practice does, from that of the people of God: I will treat them according to their ways.

Verse 23. And the glory of the Lord went up from the midst of the city—The symbol of God's presence, which had before departed from the temple, (chap. x. 18,) now quite left the city, to signify that he would acknowledge no longer his relation to either, but deliver them up to be profaned by the heathen. It deserves to be observed here, that God did not quit the temple and city all at once, but by little and little. The cloud of his presence was first withdrawn from the mercy-seat in the holy of holies, the usual place of its residence, and removed to the threshold of the house, (chap. ix. 1,) where it remained some time waiting for their repentance. Its second remove was from this threshold, leaving the house altogether, to settle upon the cherubim, which were hovering over the court, and upon the wing to depart, chap. x. 18. It then, with these angelic ministers of the divine will, and the accompanying wheels of providence, withdrew to the east gate of the inner court, chap. x. 19. And now at last it quits Jerusalem altogether, and fixes itself upon the mountain on the east side of the city. By withdrawing himself from his people by slow degrees, God gave them time for consideration and repentance, to which each remove of the Shechinah was a fresh and solemn call, and he thus also manifested with what reluctance he entirely abandoned the seed of Abraham his friend. And even his causing the symbol of his presence, before his final departure, to take its station

A. M. 3411. from the midst of the city, and stood B. C. 593. ^g upon the mountain ^h which is on the east side of the city.

24 ¶ Afterward ⁱ the spirit took me up, and brought me in a vision by the Spirit, of God

^g Zech. xiv. 4.—^h Chap. xliii. 2.

on the mount of Olives, where it was, as it were, within call, and ready to return, if now at length in this their day they would have understood the things that made for their peace, was a further manifestation of grace as well as of justice; for while the cloud of glory lingered there, it gave fresh encouragement to them to repent, and a final warning so to do, at the same time that it was emblematical of the judgment which, if their repentance did not prevent, should begin to be executed upon them from that mount, from whence the city would be annoyed by the darts of the Chaldeans. Nor was this only a figure of the calamities which were to be brought on the Jews by Nebuchadnezzar, but it was also an emblem of the evils which were to befall them in consequence of their rejecting and crucifying their own Messiah, the Lord of glory. This Divine Saviour, after exhausting his patience in instructing, correct-

into Chaldea, to them of the cap- A. M. 3411.
tivity. So the vision that I had seen B. C. 593.
went up from me.

25 Then I spake unto them of the captivity all the things that the LORD had showed me.

ⁱ Chapter viii. 3.

ing, and threatening Jerusalem, at length forsook it, and ascended to heaven from this same mount of Olives, in the presence of his apostles and disciples, that he might exercise his kingly office, and inflict a just and exemplary vengeance on this obstinately wicked and irreclaimable people.

Verses 24, 25. The spirit took me, and brought me in vision into Chaldea—That is, took away from before my eyes the image of Jerusalem and the temple, &c., and presented nothing to my mind but what was the real matter of fact, namely, that I was a captive with many others of my countrymen in the land of Chaldea. So the vision that I had seen went up from me—Was at an end. In other words, he recovered from his trance or ecstasy. Then I spake unto them of the captivity—He related unto them all that had passed in his vision, namely, all that is contained in the last four chapters.

CHAPTER XII.

Though the vision of the divine glory was withdrawn from the prophet, yet God's word continues to come to him, and is by him sent to the people: and to the same purpose with that which was shown in the vision, namely, to announce the terrible judgments that were coming upon Jerusalem, by which the city and temple should be entirely destroyed. In this chapter, (1.) The prophet, by removing his stuff and quitting his lodgings, is made a sign of Zedekiah's flight out of Jerusalem in the utmost confusion, when the Chaldeans took the city, 1-16. (2.) By eating his meat trembling, he prefigures the famine and consternation in the city during the siege, 17-20. (3.) A message is sent from God to the people, to assure them that all these predictions should be accomplished very shortly, and not be deferred, as they flattered themselves they would be, 21-28.

A. M. 3411. THE word of the LORD also came
B. C. 593. unto me, saying,

^a Chap. ii. 3, 6,

NOTES ON CHAPTER XII.

Verses 1, 2. The word of the Lord also came, &c.—This is supposed to have happened in the sixth year of Zedekiah, and five years before the siege of Jerusalem: and the prophecies contained in the following chapters, to the twentieth, are thought to be of the same year. Thou dwellest in the midst of a rebellious house—"He was among them of the captivity in Chaldea, as appears from verse 10, chap. xi. 24, xiv. 22, and xxiv. 2. And these seem to have disbelieved the prophecies that Jerusalem should be smitten and burned, and its inhabitants scattered abroad: see chap. iv. 2, and ix. 5, and x. 2, and xi. 9."—Newcome. They saw Jerusalem still inhabited, and under the government of its own king. And as they who were left in Judea thought themselves

2 Son of man, thou dwellest in the A. M. 3411. midst of ^a a rebellious house, which B. C. 593.

7, 8; iii. 26, 27.

much more highly in God's favour than those who had been carried away captives, so those who had been made captives repined at their lot, and thought those who remained in their own country were in a much better condition than themselves; therefore the following symbolical representations were designed to show, that they who were left behind, to endure the miseries of a siege, and the insults of a conqueror, would be in a much worse condition than those who were already settled in a foreign land: see Lowth. Which have eyes to see, and see not, &c.—Who will not make use of that sense and understanding which God has given them, nor learn from those examples and incidents which have happened, and by which God intended they should be instructed.

A. M. 3411. ^b have eyes to see, and see not; they
B. C. 593. have ears to hear, and hear not: ^c for they are a rebellious house.

3 Therefore, thou son of man, prepare thee ¹ stuff for removing, and remove by day in their sight: and thou shalt remove from thy place to another place in their sight; it may be they will consider, though they be a rebellious house.

4 Then shalt thou bring forth thy stuff by day in their sight, as stuff for removing: and thou shalt go forth at even in their sight, ² as they that go forth into captivity.

5 ³ Dig thou through the wall in their sight, and carry out thereby.

6 In their sight shalt thou bear it upon thy shoulders, and carry it forth in the twilight:
thou shalt cover thy face, that thou see not the ground: ^d for I have set thee for a sign unto the house of Israel.

7 And I did so as I was commanded: I brought forth my stuff by day, as stuff for captivity, and in the even I ² digged through the wall with my hand; I brought it forth in the twilight, and I bare it upon my shoulder in their sight.

¹ Isa. vi. 9; xlii. 20; Jer. v. 21; Matt. xiii. 13, 14.—^c Chap.
ii. 5.—¹ Or, instruments.—² Heb. as the goings forth of captivity.—³ Heb. Dig for thee.—^d Isa. viii. 18; Chapter iv. 3; xxiv. 24; Verse 11.—⁴ Heb. digged for me.—^e Chapter ii. 5.
^f Chap. xvii. 12; xxiv. 19.

Verses 3-6. Therefore, prepare thee stuff for removing—Hebrew, כְּלֵי נֹגֶה, vessels, or instruments of removing, namely, such as were suited for that purpose. Get all thy goods together, and pack them up as those do that remove from one place to another.
Do this openly, and at noon-day, that the people, among whom thou dwellest, may all see and take notice of it. The prophets often prophesied in this way by signs, as being of greater force and efficacy than words. Thou shalt bring forth thy stuff by day in their sight—Before it is quite night, that they,
who ought to learn by this sign, may see and consider it. Thou shalt go forth at even—To signify that Zedekiah and his retinue should escape out of the city by night, 2 Kings xxv. 4. Dig through the wall in their sight—To show that the king would make his escape by the same means. Carry it forth in the twilight—What the prophet was here commanded to carry out in the twilight, it seems, was something different from the goods he removed in the day-time; probably, necessary provision for his present subsistence may be intended. Thou shalt cover thy face that thou see not the ground—As Ze-dekiah shall do, that he may not be discovered. Or,
as the prophet was now in Chaldea, this covering of his face, that he might not see the ground, might be

8 And in the morning came the A. M. 3411.
word of the LORD unto me, saying, B. C. 593.

9 Son of man, hath not the house of Israel, ^e the rebellious house, said unto thee, ^f What doest thou?

10 Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD;
This ^g burden concerneth the prince in Jerusalem, and all the house of Israel that are among them.

11 Say, ^h I am your sign: like as I have done, so shall it be done unto them: ⁱ they ¹ shall remove and go into captivity.

12 And ^k the prince that is among them shall bear upon his shoulder in the twilight, and shall go forth: they shall dig through the wall to carry out thereby: he shall cover his face, that he see not the ground with his eyes.

13 My ¹ net also will I spread upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare: and ^m I will bring him to Babylon to the land of the Chal-deans, yet shall he not see it, though he shall die there.

14 And ⁿ I will scatter toward every wind all that are about him to help him, and all his bands; and ^o I will draw out the sword after
them.

^g Mal. i. 1.—^h Verse 6.—ⁱ Heb. by removing, go into captivity.—^j 2 Kings xxv. 4, 5, 7.—^k Jer. xxxix. 4.—^l Job xix.
6; Lam. i. 13; Jer. lii. 9; Chap. xvii. 20.—^m 2 Kings xxv. 7; Jer. lii. 11; Chap. xvii. 16.—ⁿ 2 Kings xxv. 4, 5; Chap. v. 10.
^o Chap. v. 2, 12.

intended to signify, that though Zedekiah should be brought into that country, yet he should never see it; as his eyes would be put out on the borders of Judea, as we read they were, Jer. lii. For I have set thee for a sign unto the house of Israel—I will show, by what thou dost, what shall happen to the Jewish nation, and particularly to their king.

Verses 9-16. Hath not the house of Israel said— That is, I know they have said; as the words, "are they not written in the book of Chronicles, &c.?" mean, they are written there. What doest thou, &c.—They have inquired by way of derision and contempt, what these signs mean. Say—This burden concerneth the prince, &c.—Namely, King Ze-dekiah, chap. vii. 27. The prince that is among them shall bear upon his shoulder, &c.—Their king shall even be forced himself to carry what he can out of the city, in the dusk of the evening. They shall dig through the wall, &c.—His retinue shall make a private way to get out of the city, that they may not be discovered: see Jer. xxxix. 4, and lii. 7.
It is probable that the king and his companions fled through a breach made by themselves in the wall.
Or the gate through which they fled might have been walled up during the siege. He shall cover his face, &c.—See note on verse 6, and on 2 Kings xxv.

A. M. 3411. 15 ^p And they shall know that I ^{B. C. 605.} am the LORD, when I shall scatter them among the nations, and disperse them in the countries.

16 ^a But I will leave ^e a few men of them from the sword, from the famine, and from the pestilence; that they may declare all their abominations among the heathen whither they come; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

17 ¶ Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

18 Son of man, ^r eat thy bread with quaking, and drink thy water with trembling and with carefulness;

19 And say unto the people of the land, Thus saith the Lord God of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and of the land of Israel; they shall eat their bread with carefulness, and drink their water with astonishment, that her land may ^a be desolate from ^r all that is ^{B. C. 593.} therein, ^t because of the violence of all them that dwell therein.

20 And the cities that are inhabited shall be laid waste, and the land shall be desolate; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

21 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

22 Son of man, what is that proverb that ye have in the land of Israel, saying, ^u The days are prolonged, and every vision faileth?

23 Tell them therefore, Thus saith the Lord God; I will make this proverb to cease, and they shall no more use it as a proverb in Israel; but say unto them, ^x The days are at hand, and the effect of every vision.

24 For ^v there shall be no more any ^z vain vision nor flattering divination within the house of Israel.

^p Psalm ix. 16; Chapter vi. 7, 14; xi. 10; Verses 16, 20.
^q Chap. vi. 8, 9, 10.—^d Heb. men of number.—^r Chap. iv. 16.
^s Zech. vii. 14.

^t Heb. the fulness thereof.—^u Psalm civ. 37.—^v Verse 27; Chap. xi. 3; Amos vi. 3; 2 Pet. iii. 4.—^x Joel ii. 1; Zeph. i. 14.—^y Chap. xiii. 23.—^z Lam. ii. 14.

7. My net also will I spread upon him—Though he thinks to escape, yet I will bring his enemies upon him, who shall encompass him, and stop his flight, as when a wild beast is entangled in a net. I will bring him to Babylon, yet shall he not see it—Neither the land nor the city; for his eyes will be put out at Riblah: see notes on 2 Kings xxv. 5-7. I will scatter toward every wind all that are about him—Either the Egyptians, who came to assist him, or those that fled with him. And I will draw out the sword after them—I will cause them to be pursued by the sword and slain, whithersoever they go. But I will leave a few men—Hebrew, אֲנָשִׁי מְעַט, men of number: that is, populus numerabilis utpote parvus, a people easily numbered, as being few: Hor., Ars Poet., l. 206. From the sword &c., that they may declare all their abominations—May confess that they were justly punished for their idolatries and immoralities: or that they may declare the cause (namely, their heinous wickedness) why the city of Jerusalem, and the temple dedicated to Jehovah there, were delivered up to destruction, and thereby may justify my proceedings. And they shall know that I am the Lord—Namely, the Chaldeans shall know it. See how God brings good out of evil! The dispersion of sinners, who had done God much dishonour and disservice in their own country, proves the dispersion of penitents, who shall do him much honour and service in other countries.

Verses 17-19. Moreover, &c.—As he was a sign to them in digging through the wall and carrying out his stuff, so he must now be a sign to them in another way. Eat thy bread with quaking, &c.—Show all the signs of anxiety and consternation when thou takest thy common sustenance. This he was to do that he might express the calamitous condition of those that should be in Jerusalem during the siege. And say unto the people—Thy fellow-captives; Thus saith the Lord of the inhabitants of Jerusalem—This was designed to inform the captives that they were not in a worse condition than those that were left behind in Judea. They shall eat their bread with carefulness, &c.—See note on chap. iv. 16, 17. That her land may be desolate—Rather, because her land shall be desolate, namely, the land of Jerusalem, or the country, of which it was the head city, which was shortly to be laid waste, emptied of its inhabitants, wealth, and plenty. Because of the violence, &c.—The injustice, oppression, and tyranny of the Jews toward one another.

Verses 22-25. Son of man, what is that proverb?—The saying become proverbial. The days are prolonged, and every vision faileth—Words of the same import with those that occur verse 27, and chap. xi. 3. Both of them the words of scoffers, who turned the grace of God into wantonness, and took encouragement from his patience and long-suffering, to despise his threatenings, as if they would never be fulfilled. Tell them therefore—Who either use this proverb, or who stumble at my deferring to execute judgment; I will make this proverb to cease—My patience shall soon be at its period, and will call on my justice to vindicate it, and then calamities felt will prove that there can be no more place for such a proverb, the groundlessness of it being manifest to all. Say unto them, The days are at hand—The time when God will show his wrath, and make his power and justice known to the world by fulfilling his threatenings and the predictions of his prophets. For there shall be no more any vain vision—The false prophets, who foretold peace and safety, shall see their prophecies so confuted by the events, quite

A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. 25 For I am the LORD : I will speak, and ^a the word that I shall speak shall come to pass ; it shall be no more prolonged : for in your days, O rebellious house, will I say the word, and will perform it, saith the Lord God.

26 ¶ Again the word of the LORD came to me, saying,

^a Isa. lv. 11 ; Verse 28 ; Dan. ix. 12 ; Luke xxi. 38.

contrary to what they foretold, that they will never pretend any more to publish new prophecies. I am the Lord—I am able to discover the vanity and falsehood of the prophets that have flattered the people, and will do it by accomplishing what my true prophets have foretold. The word that I shall speak shall come to pass—No length of time shall make

A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. 27 ^b Son of man, behold, they of the house of Israel say, The vision that he seeth is ^c for many days to come, and he prophesieth of the times that are far off.

28 ^d Therefore say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God ; There shall none of my words be prolonged any more, but the word which I have spoken shall be done, saith the Lord God.

^b Verse 22.—^c 2 Pet. iii. 4.—^d Verses 23, 25.

me forget it ; no pretences of self-flattering prophets or people shall divert me from my purpose ; no power can hinder, nor counsel defeat my design. It shall be no more prolonged : for in your days, &c.—My threatenings shall be fulfilled in your own days, and you shall have ocular demonstration of their truth.

CHAPTER XIII.

Nothing had a greater influence in hardening the Jews in their sins than the pretended predictions and flatteries of their false prophets. Here, (1.) The sin of these prophets is set forth at large, and the judgments of God are denounced against them, 1-16. (2.) The prophet shows also the sin and punishment of the false prophetesses, 17-23. Both agreed to sooth men up in their sins, and, under pretence of comforting God's people, to flatter them with hopes that they should yet have peace ; but Ezekiel here foretels that they should be proved liars, their prophecies mere fictions, and the expectations which the people built upon them nothing but illusions.

A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel that prophesy, and say thou unto ^a them ¹ that prophesy out of their own ^b hearts, Hear ye the word of the LORD ;

^a Ver. 17.—¹ Heb. them that are prophets out of their own hearts.
^b Jer. xiv. 14 ; xxiii. 16, 26.—² Heb. walk after.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XIII.

Verses 2-4. Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel—So they called themselves, as if none but they had been worthy of the name of Israel's prophets, who were indeed Israel's deceivers. Say unto them that prophesy out of their own hearts—According to their own fancy, without having received any revelation from God. The true prophets often denounced God's judgments against the false ones : laying to their charge many misdemeanours in their private life and conversation, and upbraiding them for their unfaithfulness in the office they undertook of declaring God's will to his people. Wo unto the foolish prophets—Ignorant and wicked, and who, while they wilfully deceived the people, unthinkingly brought destruction upon themselves. Observe, reader, foolish prophets are not of God's sending : those whom he sends, he either finds or makes fit for his work. Where he gives warrant,

A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. 3 Thus saith the Lord God ; Wo unto the foolish prophets, that ² follow their own spirit, ³ and have seen nothing !

4 O Israel, thy prophets are ^c like the foxes in the deserts.

5 Ye ^d have not gone up into the ⁴ gaps,

³ Or, and things which they have not seen.—^c Cant. ii. 15.
^d Psa. cvi. 23, 30 ; Chap. xxii. 30.—⁴ Or, breaches.

he gives wisdom. That follow their own spirit, and have seen nothing—Who utter their own imaginations for true prophecies, and pretend to have visions when they never had any. — O Israel, thy prophets, not mine, are like the foxes in the deserts—Hungry and ravening, crafty and guileful : “ deceitful workers, (as the apostle styles such persons, 2 Cor. xi. 13,) who craftily insinuate false doctrines into weak and unstable minds, and greedily catch at any appearance of advantage to themselves.”—Lowth.

Verse 5. Ye have not gone up into the gaps—Or stood in the gap, or breach, as it is expressed chap. xxii. 30 ; Psa. cvi. 23. Ye have not exercised your prophetic office, and framed your own conduct, so as to stop the wrath of Jehovah, by admonitions and exhortations to the people, and by personal piety and prayer to God. The place alludes to the intercession which Moses made for the Israelites, whereby he withheld God's hand, as it were, when

A. M. 3411. neither ⁵ made up the hedge for the house of Israel to stand in the battle in the day of the LORD.

6 ⁶ They have seen vanity and lying divination, saying, The LORD saith: and the LORD hath not sent them: and they have made others to hope that they would confirm the word.

7 Have ye not seen a vain vision, and have ye not spoken a lying divination, whereas ye say, The LORD saith it, albeit I have not spoken?

8 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because ye have spoken vanity, and seen lies,

^a Heb. hedged the hedge.—^c Verse 23; Ch. xii. 24; xxii. 28. ^b Or, secret, or, council.—^f Ezra ii. 59, 62; Neh. vii. 5; Psa.

it was just stretched out to take vengeance upon the people for their heinous sin in making the golden calf, Exod. xxxii. 10, 11. The phrase is taken from those who put a stop to the enemy, when he is just entering in at a breach. In like manner it was the office and duty of those prophets, if they had truly been what they pretended to be, by their endeavours to reform the people, and their intercessions with God, to avert his displeasure, and prevent the vengeance which was just ready to be poured out on a sinful people. Neither made up the hedge—The Vulgate renders it, neque opposuistis murum pro domo Israel, nor made up a wall for the house of Israel; another expression taken from people besieged in a city, who, if a breach be made in the wall, presently make it up, or build up a new one within it, to prevent the enemy from entering and becoming masters of the place. To stand in the battle in the day of the Lord—When God shall come, like a general at the head of his army, to execute his judgment upon his enemies.

Verses 6-9. They have seen vanity and lying divination—They have uttered false prophecies concerning peace and prosperity, pretending to have seen that which they did not see, and producing that as a divine truth which they knew to be a detestable lie. They have made others—Who were so simple as to believe them; to hope that they would confirm the word—Or rather, that the word would be confirmed. Their speaking with so much assurance made others confidently expect that the event would answer their predictions, and that the judgments which the true prophets had threatened in the name of God would never come, whereby they hardened those in sin whom they ought to have endeavoured to bring to repentance. Therefore, because ye have spoken vanity—Have uttered mere fictions and lies, with a view to your own advantage. Behold, I am against you, saith the Lord God—And who can be for you when I am against you? And my hand shall be upon the prophets—My power striking them so, that it shall be evident they fall under my displeasure; as Pelatiah, chap. xi. 13, and Hananiah, therefore, behold, I am against you, A. M. 3411: saith the Lord God. B. C. 593.

9 And my hand shall be upon the prophets that see vanity, and that divine lies: they shall not be in the ^a assembly of my people, ^f neither shall they be written in the writing of the house of Israel, ^g neither shall they enter into the land of Israel; ^h and ye shall know that I am the Lord God.

10 Because, even because they have seduced my people, saying, ⁱ Peace; and there was no peace; and one built up ^j a wall, and lo, others ^k daubed it with untempered mortar:

11 Say unto them which daub it with un-

lix. 28.—^e Chap. xx. 38.—^h Chap. xi. 10, 12.—ⁱ Jer. vi 14; viii. 11.—^j Or, a slight wall.—^k Chap. xxii. 28.

Jer. xxviii. 15. They shall not be in the assembly of my people—Of those who shall hereafter worship me in Jerusalem; or, in the secret council of those who shall consult on public affairs. They shall not be members of my church here, nor partake of the communion of saints hereafter. The Hebrew word סוד, here rendered assembly, properly signifies a secret assembly, or privy council; such as are acquainted with the secret intents and purposes of their prince. Hence it is applied to God's chosen people, those that are acquainted with the whole counsel of God, and whom he instructs and directs by his Holy Spirit: see notes on Psa. xxv. 14; Jer. xxiii. 18. The prophet, therefore, here tells these men who pretended to know so much of the secrets of the Almighty that they should never be of the number of those favourites of heaven to whom God would reveal himself and his counsels. Neither shall they be written, &c.—The sense of this clause is nearly the same with that of the preceding; the words containing an allusion to the registers usually kept of the members of cities or corporations, to the privileges of which societies none are admitted but they whose names are entered into such registers. The false prophets, it seems, promised a speedy return to the exiles; God, therefore, tells them that they should never live to see it, nor should their names be entered into the register of those that should return home. Neither shall they enter into the land of Israel—They shall never see their own country again, nor shall they have a share in the blessings peculiar to true Israelites: see Lowth.

Verses 10-15. They have seduced my people, &c.—Have made my people to err, both with respect to the greatness of their own guilt, and my displeasure on account of it, as if both were less than they really are, and no great danger was to be apprehended. They deceived them, by assuring them that none of those judgments should overtake them which Jeremiah and the other true prophets threatened them with, and they spoke peace to men's consciences upon false grounds and principles. Thus they obstructed and drew them out of the way of

A. M. 3411. tempered mortar, that it shall fall :
B. C. 593. ¹there shall be an overflowing shower ; and ye, O great hailstones, shall fall ; and a stormy wind shall rend it.

12 Lo, when the wall is fallen, shall it not be said unto you, Where is the daubing wherewith ye have daubed it ?

13 Therefore thus saith the Lord God ; I will even rend it with a stormy wind in my fury ;
and there shall be an overflowing shower in mine anger, and great hailstones in my fury to consume it.

14 So will I break down the wall that ye have daubed with untempered mortar, and bring it down to the ground, so that the foundation thereof shall be discovered, and it shall fall, and ye shall be consumed in the midst thereof : ^mand ye shall know that I am the LORD.

15 Thus will I accomplish my wrath upon

¹ Chapter xxxviii. 22.—^m Verses ^a, 21, 23 ; Chapter xiv. 8.
^a Jer. vi. 14 ; xxviii. 9.—^o Chap. xx. 46 ; xxi. 2.

that repentance and reformation into which the other prophets were endeavouring to bring them. And, observe, reader, those are the most dangerous seducers who suggest to sinners that which tends to lessen their dread of sin, or their fear of God. These are compared to men who build a slight tottering wall, which others daub with untempered mortar; sorry stuff which will not bind nor hold the bricks together; doctrines not grounded on, nor according with, the word of God. Say unto them that it shall fall—When they have the greatest need of defence, and when they least apprehend such an event. There shall be an overflowing shower, &c.—Terrible judgments from God, often compared in Scripture to storms and tempests, the artillery of heaven, especially when he executes his judgments by a victorious army. Shall it not be said, Where is the daubing? &c.—Then it will be asked, by way of taunt and reproach, where are the remedies you had provided, and in which you persuaded all to put confidence? I will even rent it with a stormy wind in my fury—Rather, in my indignation. Under these metaphors is foretold the destruction of Jerusalem, and the Jewish state by the Chaldean army. Thus the Chaldee paraphrase expounds it: “I will bring a mighty king with the force of a whirlwind, and a destroying people, as it were an overflowing storm, and powerful princes like great hailstones.” So will I break down the wall, &c.—Thus will I overthrow all your false confidences, and all the remedies which ye have provided against the ruin of the state; and ye yourselves that were so confident of safety shall be consumed. The Chaldee paraphrase reads, I will destroy the city wherein ye have uttered these false prophecies, which exposition ac-

the wall, and upon them that have ^{A. M. 3411.} ^{B. C. 593.} daubed it with untempered mortar, and will say unto you, The wall is no more,
neither they that daubed it;

16 To wit, the prophets of Israel which prophesy concerning Jerusalem, and which ⁿsee visions of peace for her, and there is no peace, saith the Lord God.

17 ¶ Likewise, thou son of man, ^oset thy face against the daughters of thy people, ^pwhich prophesy out of their own heart; and prophesy thou against them,

18 And say, Thus saith the Lord God ; Wo to the women that sew pillows to all ^aarmholes, and make kerchiefs upon the head of every stature to hunt souls ! Will ye ^qhunt the souls of my people, and will ye save the souls alive that come unto you ?

19 And will ye pollute me among my people ^rfor handfuls of barley and for pieces of bread, cords with the next words, And ye shall be consumed in the midst thereof; that is, shall be destroyed in the same common calamity. And ye shall know, &c.—Those that deceived others will in the end be found to have deceived themselves. And no doom will be more fearful than that of unfaithful ministers. Thus will I accomplish my wrath, &c.—Fulfil what my prophets foretold; and will say unto you—Will show by the awful event; The wall is no more, neither they that daubed it—The city is no more, nor the false prophets.

^p Verse 2.—^a Or, elbows.—^q 2 Pet. ii. 14.—^r Prov. xxviii. 21 ; Mic. iii. 5.

Verses 17–19. Likewise, set thy face against the daughters of thy people—Direct thy discourse against the female pretenders to prophecy. God sometimes bestowed the gift of prophecy upon women, Exod. xv. 20; Judg. iv. 4; 2 Kings xxii. 14. This encouraged others of that sex to pretend to the same gift: compare Rev. ii. 20. Wo to the women that sew pillows, &c.—As the prophet compares the deceitful practices of the false prophets to the daubing of a wall, so he represents the artifices of these female seducers by sewing pillows under the hearers’ arms, that they might rest securely in their evil ways. “The eastern mode of sitting,” says Harmer, chap. vi. observ. 35, “supported by pillows, explains this representation of Ezekiel. Dr. Russel has given us a print representing a fine eastern lady reposing herself on one of these bolsters, or pillows, by leaning with one of her arms on one of them, while she is smoking.” In Barbary and the Levant they “always cover the floors of their houses with carpets; and along the sides of the wall, or floor, a range of narrow beds, or mattresses, is often placed upon these carpets; and, for their further ease and convenience, several velvet or damask bolsters are

A. M. 3411. to slay the souls that should not die, B. C. 593. and save the souls alive that should not live, by your lying to my people that hear your lies?

20 Wherefore thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I am against your pillows, wherewith ye there hunt the souls ⁹ to make them fly, and I will tear them from your arms, and will let the ⁹ Or, into gardens.

placed upon these carpets or mattresses: indulgences that seem to be alluded to by the stretching of themselves upon couches, and by the sewing of pillows to arm-holes."—Shaw's Travels, p. 209, second edition. Sir John Chardin also mentions "a mattress, with large cushions, placed at the back and sides" of the person who uses it as a bed, Harm., vol. ii., chap. vi. observ. 46. See also, to the same purpose, Lady M. W. Montague's description of a Turkish lady's apartment, let. 32, vol. ii. p. 55. And make kerchiefs upon the head of every stature—Rather, Upon every head, כֹּל רֹאשׁ, of every stature, the false prophetess doing this without distinction of stature or age. "This," says Bishop Newcome, "may be a strong, eastern manner of expressing that these women hoodwinked their votaries, and kept them in spiritual darkness." In the same light the passage is considered by Lowth and many others. "Or the covering of the head may have been of the ornamental kind, to denote prosperity or victory, as pillows denoted tranquillity and plenty; and both may have been significantly applied to the heads and arms of those who consulted the prophetesses." Thus we are told by Dr. Shaw, p. 221, and Lady M. W. Montague, vol. ii. p. 30, that the eastern women bind on their other ornaments for the head with a handkerchief, which the latter calls "a rich embroidered handkerchief." These prophetesses, therefore, Harmer thinks, "did the same thing by their flattering words, as would have been best expressed, if they had thought fit to signify the same thing by actions only, (as the prophets sometimes did,) by making bolsters for the arms, and presenting them to the Israelitish women, whom they wanted to assure of the continuance of their prosperity; and embroidering handkerchiefs, proper to bind over the ornaments of females in a state of honour, and afterward putting them on their heads. Whereas, the true prophets of God gave them to understand, in direct contradiction to all this, that if the Jews would not yield up themselves to the Chaldeans, great numbers of their men should perish, and their women should be brought down from those elevated places in which they sat supported by rich bolsters, and should be forced to sit on the ground; and, instead of a rich attire for their heads, should have their hair miserably dishevelled, strongly marking out grief in a despairing neglect of their persons. Such is the description Isaiah gives of the state of captives, (chap. xlvii. 1, 2,) which every one must see is just the reverse of what these prophet-souls go, even the souls that ye hunt A. M. 3411.

to make them fly. B. C. 593.

21 Your kerchiefs also will I tear, and deliver my people out of your hand, and they shall be no more in your hand to be hunted; ^a and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

22 Because with lies ye have made the heart of the righteous sad, whom I have not made

^a Verse 9.

esses are represented as doing: Come down and sit in the dust, &c."—Harmer, chap. vi., observ. 35.

To hunt souls—To allure, draw, or drive men into those nets and snares that they have laid for them, and thereby to make them their prey. Or to destroy men, to expose them to the divine vengeance, by lulling them into security, and enticing them to commit sin in following their directions. Will ye hunt the souls of my people?—Will ye make a prey of men's souls by deluding them with fair promises and vain hopes? Will ye draw my people into destruction, by promising them safety and happiness, while they continue in sin? "This verse," says Secker, "should seem to mean, that these women made every body easy to their ruin, for their own profit." Will ye pollute me among my people?—Will ye profane my name, by making use of it to give credit to your own dreams and lies? Or, Will ye dishonour it by employing it to the vilest use, the encouraging of wickedness, and the discouraging of piety and virtue? For handfuls of barley, &c.—For the sake of gain to yourselves, even for the meanest presents? It is well known how customary gifts were, and still are, in the East. These false prophets and prophetesses being chiefly, if not solely, consulted by the corrupt and wicked part of the Jews, who made them presents for their answers; and those presents being generally the larger the more agreeable the answers were, therefore these prophets and prophetesses always uttered what was pleasing, and gave encouragement to the wicked, and what tended to disgrace and discourage the truly good. To slay the souls that should not die—To denounce or prophesy death and destruction to those that shall be preserved. Thus they denounced death to those who yielded themselves to the Chaldeans in Jeconiah's captivity, whom God had determined to preserve alive, Jer. xxix. 5, 6. And they encouraged those who remained at Jerusalem, with promises of peace and safety, who, God had foretold, should perish: see chap. v. 12. Or the words may be understood, in a more general sense, of discouraging the godly, and confirming the wicked in their evil ways: see verse 22; and Jer. xxiii. 14, 17. To slay, and make alive, signify here, to promise men life, or threaten them with death. So the prophet says he came to destroy the city, (chap. xliii. 3,) when he came to pronounce the sentence of destruction upon it.—Lowth.

Verses 20–23. Behold, I am against your pillows, wherewith ye hunt the souls, &c.—To make them

A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. sad; and ^tstrengthened the hands of the wicked, that he should not return from his wicked way, ¹⁰ by ¹¹ promising him life;

^t Jer. xxiii. 14.—¹⁰ Or, that I should save his life.—¹¹ Heb. by quickening him.

run into those snares and seductions that you have laid for them, verse 18. The metaphor is continued from the manner of hunting and pursuing living creatures, thereby to drive them into the toils prepared for them. I will tear them from your arms—"I will make your cheats and impostures appear so evidently that nobody shall be in danger of being seduced by you any more:" see verse 23. Your kerchiefs also will I tear—I will lay quite open and render useless all your arts; they shall no longer serve your purpose. Because with lies you have 23 Therefore ^uye shall see no more A. M. 3411. vanity, nor divine divinations: for I B. C. 593. will deliver my people out of your hand: ^xand ye shall know that I am the LORD.

^u Verse 6, &c.; Chapter xii. 24; Micah iii. 6.—^x Verse 9; Chap. xiv. 8; xv. 7.

made the heart of the righteous sad—As you have deluded and comforted the wicked with vain hopes, so you have disheartened the righteous with groundless fears, or made them sad with the lies and calumnies you have invented against them. Therefore ye shall see no more vanity nor divine divinations, &c.—An entire end shall be put to all your false predictions and divinations; for ye shall all perish, namely, in the siege of Jerusalem, either by the famine, disease, or the weapons of the Chaldeans.

CHAPTER XIV.

Here, (1.) The Jewish elders at Babylon, having come to inquire of the prophet, meet with a rebuke, instead of acceptance, 1-5. (2.) They are called upon to repent of their sins and reform, otherwise it would be at their peril to inquire of God, 6-11. (3.) God assures his prophet, that when a land had exposed itself to his judgments by trespassing grievously, no intercessions, not even those of Noah, Daniel, and Job, should prevail to save it from the destruction it had merited: much less should any intercessions be available to preserve Jerusalem from the judgments which its aggravated sins had deserved, and which God had determined to bring upon it, 12-21. And yet, (4.) It is promised that a remnant should escape, 22, 23.

A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. THEN ^acame certain of the elders of Israel unto me, and sat before me.

2 And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

3 Son of man, these men have set up their idols in their heart, and put ^bthe stumbling-

^a Chap. viii. 1; xx. 1; xxxiii. 31.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XIV.

Verse 1. Then came certain of the elders of Israel—Men of note, that were in office and power among the Jews. "The prophet neither tells us the name nor the intention of these elders of Israel, nor the time when they came to him. But the manner wherein God speaks, gives us to understand that they came only to tempt him, as the Pharisees came to Christ, and with no design to profit by what they heard, or to correct their faults:" see Calmet. And sat before me—As was the usual posture of those that came to hear the instructions of any prophet or teacher: see chap. viii. 1. In after times the teachers sat in a chair or eminent seat, and the hearers on lower forms at the feet of their masters: see Luke x. 39; Acts xxii. 3.

Verses 2, 3. And the word of the Lord came unto me—To acquaint me with the real character of these men, and what I should say to them. These men block of their iniquity before their A. M. 3411. face: ^cshould I be inquired of at all B. C. 592. by them?

4 Therefore speak unto them, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Every man of the house of Israel that setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumbling-block

^b Chap. vii. 19; Verse 4, 7.—^c 2 Kings iii. 13.

have set up their idols in their hearts—They are not only inclined to idolatry in their hearts, but they have actually set up idols and worshipped them. It seems, however, that their idolatry consisted, not in entirely deserting, but in corrupting and polluting the service of the true God, intermixing it with foreign worship and superstitions, learned from the heathen. And have set up the stumbling-block, &c.—Their idols, which were both the object of their sin, and the occasion of their ruin. Should I be inquired of at all by them?—Shall I give any counsel, or any answer concerning that of which they inquire of me, to such hypocrites as these?

Verses 4, 5. Say unto them—Declare my will clearly and faithfully; Every man of the house of Israel—Whoever he be, rich or poor, mighty or mean; that setteth up his idols in his heart—That is attached in his heart to any species of idolatry; and cometh to the prophet—As if he were desirous

A. M. 3411. of his iniquity before his face, and
B. C. 593. cometh to the prophet; I the LORD will answer him that cometh according to the multitude of his idols;

5 That I may take the house of Israel in their own heart, because they are all estranged from me through their idols.

6 ¶ Therefore say unto the house of Israel,
Thus saith the Lord God; Repent, and turn ¹ yourselves from your idols; and turn away your faces from all your abominations.

7 For every one of the house of Israel, or of the stranger that sojourneth in Israel, which separateth himself from me, and setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumbling-block of his iniquity before his face, and cometh

¹ Or, others.—^d Levit. xvii. 10; xx. 3, 5, 6; Jer. xlv. 11;
Ch. xv. 7.—^e Num. xxvii. 10; Deut. xxviii. 37; Ch. v. 15.

to know what is best to be done, that he might do it; or what is the will of God, that he might comply with it: and what will be the issue of these times and affairs; I the Lord will answer him that cometh—And that in a way but little to his satisfaction; according to the multitude of his idols—According to his real iniquity, not according to his pretended piety: I will declare the greatness of his sin by the greatness of his punishment; he has multiplied his idols, and I will multiply his sorrows. That I may take the house of Israel in their own heart—That I may lay open what is in their hearts, and discover their hypocrisy and impiety; or, that I may reprove and convince them, from their own words and behaviour, what a base part they act, and that their inward and secret wickedness is perfectly known to me. Because they are estranged from me through their idols—It is always through some idol or other that the hearts of men are estranged from God. Some creature has gained that place in the heart which belongs to none but God.

Verses 6-8. Therefore say, Repent—Be truly sorry for your past sins, and give proof of your sorrow by forsaking them, &c.; and turn from your idols—Separate yourselves from them, that they may not finally and eternally separate you from God. And turn away your faces—Your heart and ways; from all your abominations—Not only from all your idolatries, but from all sinful practices. Turn your faces from them, abhor the very sight of them; not only forsake them, but do it with loathing and detestation. For every one of the house of Israel—Every Jew of the seed of Abraham, whom this warning first and principally concerns; or of the stranger that sojourneth, &c.—Every proselyte: or the expression may include the foreigners who lived in Judea, termed, in the fourth commandment, the stranger within their gates. For these, although they were neither circumcised nor subject to the ceremonial laws, yet were under an obligation to

to a prophet to inquire of him con- A. M. 3411. cerning me; I the LORD will answer B. C. 593.
him by myself:

8 And ^d I will set my face against that man, and will make him a ^e sign and a proverb, and I will cut him off from the midst of my people; ^f and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

9 And if the prophet be deceived when he hath spoken a thing, I the LORD ^g have deceived that prophet, and I will stretch out my hand upon him, and will destroy him from the midst of my people Israel.

10 And they shall bear the punishment of their iniquity: the punishment of the prophet shall be even as the punishment of him that seeketh unto him;

^f Chap. vi. 7.—^g 1 Kings xxii. 23; Job xii. 16; Jer. iv. 10; 2 Thess. ii. 11.

refrain from idolatry, or from worshipping any God but Jehovah. Which separateth himself from me—Who leaves me to worship idols. God considered them as separating themselves from him, not only if they wholly left off to worship him, but also if they worshipped as gods any other beings, real or imaginary, along with him. For he, being the only true God, could not, of course, admit of any other to be worshipped together with him, as no other being whatsoever had the least pretence to be worshipped as God. I the Lord will answer him by myself—I who am Jehovah, the only Creator, Preserver, and Lord of all things, will answer him according to my own inherent power, not by words, but by executing my judgments upon him. And he shall find by the answer, that it was not the prophet, but God that answered, so dreadful, searching, and astonishing shall my answer be. And I will set my face against that man—I will make him a mark for my indignation; and will make him a sign and a proverb—A signal and remarkable instance of my vengeance; and will cut him off, &c.—By sudden death, attended with extraordinary circumstances.

Verses 9-12. And if the prophet be deceived—Or, seduced. This is to be understood of the false prophets, whose practices are reprov'd throughout the whole foregoing chapter. I the Lord have deceived that prophet—I Jehovah have suffered him to be deceived; I have given him up to strong delusions, as a just judgment upon him for going after idols, and setting up false pretences to inspiration, 2 Thess. ii. 11, 12. Or the words may signify, I will disappoint the expectations of those prophets who seduce my people, by speaking peace to them. For I will bring upon them those evils which they, with great assurance, have declared shall never come to pass. Thus Bishop Newcome, "When any false prophet is deceived, the probable event proving contrary to his prophecy, I Jehovah have so superintended the course of things as to deceive that pro-

A. M. 3411. 11 That the house of Israel may
B. C. 593. ^h go no more astray from me, neither be polluted any more with all their transgressions; ⁱ but that they may be my people, and I may be their God, saith the Lord God.

12 ¶ The word of the LORD came again to
me, saying,

13 Son of man, when the land sinneth against me by trespassing grievously, then will I stretch out my hand upon it, and will break the ^k staff of the bread thereof, and will send famine upon it, and will cut off man and beast
from it:

14 ^l Though these three men, Noah, Daniel, and Job, were in it, they should deliver but their own souls ^m by their righteousness, saith the Lord God.

15 ¶ If I cause ⁿ noisome beasts to pass through the land, and they ^o spoil it, so that it be desolate, that no man may pass through because of the beasts:

^h 2 Peter ii. 15.—ⁱ Chapter xi. 20; xxxvii. 27.—^k Levit.
xxvi. 26; Isaiah iii. 1; Chapter iv. 16; v. 16.—^l Jer. xv. 1; Verses 16, 18, 20; Jer. vii. 16; xi. 14; xiv. 11.—^m Proverbs xi. 4.—ⁿ Leviticus xxvi. 22; Chapter v. 17.—^o Or, bereave.
Verses 14, 18, 20.

phet." And I will, &c.—Or, Yea, I will stretch out my hand upon him—Remarkably punish his falsehood, and in severity destroy him. And they—Both the deceiver and the deceived; shall bear the punishment of their iniquity—There is so great a parity in the folly and impiety of both the seducing prophets and the seduced people, that it is hard to say, whose sin is greatest. The punishment of the prophet shall be, &c.—Their punishments shall be as similar as they made their sins: both shall be cut off and destroyed. That the house of Israel may go no more astray from me—The judgments I will inflict upon the false prophets, and those that consult them, shall be an instruction to my people to continue steady to me and my worship, and not hanker after the idolatrous practices of the neighbouring nations.

Verses 13, 14. When the land, or, when a land sinneth, &c.—The meaning of this and the following verses is, that when the inhabitants of a land have filled up the measure of their iniquities, and God arise to execute judgment upon them, the few righteous that are left among them shall not be able,
by their prayers and intercessions, to deliver the nation from the judgments decreed against it. They shall but deliver their own souls; as we see in the case of Sodom, where there were none righteous but Lot and his family: those just persons saved themselves, but no intercession could avail to save the city. Though these three men, Noah, Daniel, and Job, were in it—All of them persons eminent for piety. Noah, as a reward of his piety, saved eight 16 ° Though these three men were A. M. 3411.

^a in it, as I live, saith the Lord God, ^b they shall deliver neither sons nor daughters; they only shall be delivered, but the land shall be desolate.

17 ¶ Or if ^c I bring a sword upon that land, and say, Sword, go through the land; so that I ^d cut off man and beast from it:

18 ° Though these three men were in it, as I live, saith the Lord God, they shall deliver neither sons nor daughters, but they only shall be delivered themselves.

19 ¶ Or if I send ^e a pestilence into that land, and ^f pour out my fury upon it in blood, to cut off from it man and beast:

20 ° Though Noah, Daniel, and Job, were in it, as I live, saith the Lord God, they shall deliver neither son nor daughter; they shall but deliver their own souls by their righteousness.

21 ¶ For thus saith the Lord God; ^g How much more when ^h I send my four sore judg-

^a Heb. in the midst of it.—^b Lev. xxvi. 25; Chapter v. 12;
xxi. 3, 4; xxix. 8; xxxviii. 21.—^c Chap. xxv. 13; Zeph. i. 3.
^d Verse 14.—^e 2 Sam. xxiv. 15; Chap. xxxviii. 22.—^f Chap.
vii. 8.—^g Verse 14.—^h Or, Also when.—ⁱ Chapter v. 17; xxxiii. 27.

persons out of the universal deluge, and obtained a promise from God that he would never destroy the world so again, Gen. viii. 21. Daniel interceded with God for the whole nation of the Jews, and obtained a promise of their restoration, and of the coming of the Messiah, Dan. ix. Job was appointed by God to make intercession for his three friends, and obtained pardon for them, Job xlii. 8. But when God's irreversible decree is gone out against a nation which hath filled up the measure of its iniquity, even the prayers of such men will be ineffectual toward their deliverance. For it is only for those that are not arrived to that height of wickedness, that the prayers of the righteous avail: compare Jer.
xv. 1. We may observe here how early the fame of Daniel's piety was spread over Chaldea, who at this time was probably not above thirty years of age;
he having been carried to Babylon only fourteen years before, when he was very young. For he was taken captive in the third year of Jehoiakim, (Dan.
i. 1,) who, after this, reigned eight years, 2 Kings xxiii. 36. And this prophecy, as appears from chap.
viii. 1, was uttered in the sixth year of Jehoiachin's captivity, who succeeded Jehoiakim, and only reigned three months.

Verses 15–21. If I cause noisome beasts to pass through the land—We find it was one punishment of the inhabitants of Judea, to be infested by lions and other wild beasts. To this their neighbourhood to the deserts of Arabia exposed them; and God, at certain times, to punish them for their sins, either by

A. M. 3411. ments upon Jerusalem, the sword,
B. C. 593. and the famine, and the noisome beast, and the pestilence, to cut off from it man and beast ?

22 ¶ Yet, behold, therein shall be left a remnant that shall be brought forth, both sons and daughters : behold, they shall come forth unto you, and ² ye shall see their way and ¹ Chap. vi. 8.—² Chap. xx. 43.

causing a scarcity of food in the deserts, or by some other means, influenced these wild beasts to make incursions into Judea, in great numbers, which they otherwise were not wont to do. Or if I bring a sword upon that land, &c.—“If I deliver a land into the hand of a cruel enemy. The conquerors’ sword is often called the sword of the Lord, in the prophets, because they are the executioners of God’s judgments.” So that I cut off man and beast from it—“Men are destroyed by the sword, and the cattle are driven away by the enemy ; or else consumed by pestilence, arising from the air’s being corrupted through the stench of dead bodies.” Or I send pestilence, and pour out my fury in blood—With great destruction of men’s lives, chap. xxxviii. 22 ; for every kind of sudden and immature death is called blood in the Hebrew. How much more—Shall there be an utter destruction ; when I send my four sore judgments upon Jerusalem—“If it is just, with respect to other countries, that the good alone should escape punishment, how much more with respect to Jerusalem, after such repeated instructions and admonitions ?” And if the intercessions of such holy men as those above mentioned could not prevent the execution of one of these four judgments upon those that had filled up the measure of their iniquities, how much less would they be able to keep off all the four, when I commission them all to come at once ?

Verses 22, 23. Yet, behold, therein—In Jerusalem itself, though marked for utter ruin ; in Judea, though condemned to suffer unexampled desolations ; shall be left a remnant—That shall not be cut off by any of those sore judgments before mentioned, but shall escape and be brought forth into Chaldea, to be your companions in captivity ; both sons and daughters—
That shall be the seed of a new generation. And ye their doings : and ye shall be com- A. M. 3411 forted concerning the evil that I have B. C. 592 brought upon Jerusalem, even concerning all that I have brought upon it.

23 And they shall comfort you, when ye see their ways and their doings ; and ye shall know that I have not done ^a without cause all that I have done in it, saith the Lord God.

^a Jer. xxii. 8, 9.

shall see their ways and their doings—“Ye shall be made sensible of their guilt and reformation.” Their sufferings shall be made instrumental in bringing them to a due sense of the greatness and aggra-vations of their former iniquities, and you shall hear them make a free and ingenuous confession of them, and an humble profession of repentance for them, with promises of amendment, and you shall see instances of this amendment, and be witnesses of the good their affliction has done them, and how prudently and patiently they carry themselves under it.
And ye shall be comforted—“By their confession of their idolatries, by a conviction of my justice, and by the spirit of allegiance to me, which they shall propagate.”—Bishop Newcome. Concerning the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem—Ye shall the less grieve when you are made sensible they were not punished beyond what their sins deserved, and that their sufferings have had a salutary influence on their spirit and conduct. This consideration will compose your minds, and make you give glory to God, and acknowledge his judgments to be righteous, though they touch you very nearly in the destruction of your friends and country. And they shall comfort you when ye see their ways, &c.— When you see them repenting of their sins and reforming their lives, humbling themselves before God, justifying his conduct toward them, and quietly accepting the punishment of their iniquity. And ye shall know that I have not done without cause—Not without a just provocation, and yet not without a gracious design ; all that I have done in it—In Jerusalem and among its inhabitants. When afflictions have done their work, and have accomplished that for which they were sent, then will appear the wisdom and goodness of God in sending them, and God will not only be justified, but glorified in them.

CHAPTER XV.

To reconcile Ezekiel himself, and his hearers, to the destruction of Judah and Jerusalem by the Chaldeans, God here shows that it was as proper that they should be destroyed as that an unfruitful vine should be cut up and burned
We have, (1.) The parable or similitude, showing that when the vine is barren it is unfit for any use, 1-5. (2.) The anful application of it to the Jews, 6-8

A. M. 3411
B. C. 593.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, What is the vine-tree more than any tree, or than a branch which is among the trees of the forest?

3 Shall wood be taken thereof to do any work? or will men take a pin of it to hang any vessel thereon?

4 Behold, ^ait is cast into the fire for fuel; the fire devoureth both the ends of it, and the midst of it is burned. ¹Is it meet for any work?

5 Behold, when it was whole, it was ²meet for no work: how much less shall it be meet

^a John xv. 6.—¹ Heb. Will it prosper?—² Heb. made fit.
^b Lev. xvii. 10; Chap. xiv. 8.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XV.

Verses 1-5. What is the vine more than any tree?—The house of Israel is often compared to a vine, which when fruitful is very profitable and valuable, but when barren is very worthless and contemptible. Of this the prophet reminds the Jews to humble them, and awaken them to a sense of the importance of bringing forth the fruits of righteousness. Or, than a branch which is among the trees of the forest?—One single branch of a tree in the forest is of more use and value than the whole vine-tree is, except for its fruit. Some, however, render this latter clause, If its branch is as the trees of the forest; that is, if it brings forth no fruit. Shall wood be taken thereof to do any work?—There are some fruit-trees, the wood of which, if they do not bear fruit, is of much use, and may be made to turn to a good account; but the vine is not one of these; its wood is of no use in building, or in making any piece of furniture or domestic utensil; nor, indeed is it fit for any of the purposes for which the wood of other trees is used. It will not afford even a pin to drive into a wall or post, on which you may safely hang any weight: and, therefore, if the vine do not bring forth grapes it is good for nothing. Behold, it is cast into the fire for fuel—When, for its barrenness, it is cut down, it is only fit to be burned. The fire devoureth both the ends of it, and the midst of it, &c.—“A very apt representation of the state of Judea, when both its extremities were consumed by the ravages of the destroyer, and the middle of it, where the capital city stood, was threatened every moment with destruction from the enemy.” Is it meet for any work?—Is it worth any body’s while to save it from being burned for any use! If a piece of solid timber be kindled, somebody, perhaps, may snatch it out of the fire, and say it is a pity to burn it, for it may be put to some better use; but if the branch of a vine be on fire, and, as usual, both the ends of it and the middle are kindled together, nobody goes about to save it: for when it was whole it was meet for no work, much less when the fire has almost devoured it. Just so, the parable implies, it was of no use or consequence to save the Jewish nation from yet for any work, when the fire hath devoured it, and it is burned? A. M. 3411.

B. C. 593.

6 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; As the vine-tree among the trees of the forest, which I have given to the fire for fuel, so will I give the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

7 And ^bI will set my face against them; ^cthey shall go out from one fire, and another fire shall devour them; ^dand ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I set my face against them.

8 And I will make the land desolate, because they have ³committed a trespass, saith the Lord God.

^c Isa. xxiv. 18.—^d Chap. vi. 7; vii. 4; xi. 10; xx. 38, 42, 44.
³ Heb. trespassed a trespass.

destruction, were it possible to do it, which had so little answered the design of God, in making them his people, and had been of so little use in promoting his glory among the surrounding nations.

Verses 6-8. As the vine-tree among the trees of the forest, which I have given for fuel—That is, as the vine-tree, when barren and fruitless, like the wild trees of the forest, is given for fuel, being fit for nothing else; or as a vine, when barren and cut up, is thrown among other wood which is intended to be fuel for the fire; so will I give the inhabitants of Jerusalem—So will I destroy them by the Chaldeans, among other nations which are destroyed by them. For they are so degenerated, and grown so corrupt and wicked, that they are of no use any longer in the world; but are rather injurious to civil society, and therefore are only fit to be consumed. And I will set my face against them—To thwart all their counsels and confound their schemes, as they have set their faces against me to contradict my word and defeat my designs: or, I will look upon them with indignation. They shall go out from one fire, and another fire shall devour them—The end of one judgment shall be the beginning of another; and their escape from one only a reprieve till another come. They shall go from misery in their own country to misery in Babylon. They that kept themselves out of the way of the sword, perished by famine or pestilence: when one descent of the Chaldean forces upon them was over, and they thought, Surely the bitterness of death is past; yet soon after these enemies returned again with double violence till they had made a full end. And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have set my face against them—You that are in Chaldea, when you shall hear what mischiefs, one after another, are heaped on Jerusalem, shall know that I am Jehovah, a God of almighty power, that it is my wrath and vengeance that is poured upon them. Observe, reader, God shows himself to be the Lord by the destruction of his implacable enemies, as well as by the deliverance of his obedient people. And, observe also those against whom he sets his face, though they may come out of one trouble little hurt, will fall into another; though they come out of the pit, will be taken in the snare, Isaiah xxiv. 8; though they escape the sword of Hazeel, will fall by that of Jehu, 1 Kings xix. 17: for evil pursues sinners. Nay, though they go out from the fire of temporal judgments, and seem to die in peace, yet there is an everlasting fire that will devour them; for when God judgeth, first or last, he will overcome, and will be known by the judgments which he executeth.

CHAPTER XVI.

In the foregoing chapter Jerusalem was compared to an unfruitful vine, which was fit for nothing but the fire: in this chapter she is compared to an adulteress, that in justice deserved to be abandoned and exposed. The prophet therefore is commanded to show the people their abominations, that they might see how little reason they had to complain of the judgments already come and coming upon them. Here, therefore, in a long discourse, are set forth, (1.) The despicable and deplorable beginnings of their church and nation, 3-5. (2.) The many honours and favours God had bestowed on them, 6-14. (3.) Their treacherous and ungrateful departures from him to the service and worship of idols, here represented by the most impudent whoredom, 15-34. (4.) A threatening of terrible destroying judgments, which God would bring upon them for this sin, 35-43. (5.) An aggravation both of their sin and of their punishment, by comparing them with the sin and punishment of Sodom and Samaria, 44-59. (6.) A promise of mercy in the close, which God would show to a penitent remnant, 60-63.

A. M. 3411. A GAIN the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, ^a cause Jerusalem to know her abominations,

3 And say, Thus saith the Lord God unto Jerusalem; Thy ¹ birth ^b and thy nativity is of the land of Canaan; ^c thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother a Hittite.

4 And as for thy nativity, ^d in the day thou wast born thy navel was not cut, neither wast thou washed in water ² to supple thee; thou wast not salted at all, nor swaddled at all.

^a Chap. xx. 4; xxii. 2; xxxiii. 7, 8, 9.—¹ Heb. cutting out, or, habitation.

^b Chapter xxi. 30.—^c Verse 45.—^d Hos. ii. 3.—² Or, when I looked upon thee.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XVI.

Verse 2. Cause Jerusalem to know her abominations—Her foul sins and multiplied transgressions, especially her idolatries, or spiritual adulteries, and unexampled folly in her lewdness. "This might probably be done by way of letter, as Jeremiah signified the will of God to the captives at Babylon. God here particularly upbraids Jerusalem for her iniquities, because it was the place he had chosen for his peculiar residence; and yet the inhabitants had defiled that very place, nay, and the temple itself with idolatry; the sin particularly denoted by the word abomination." "Nothing can give us a greater horror of the crimes of Jerusalem than the manner in which Ezekiel speaks here. This city must certainly have carried her impiety to the greatest height, to merit reproaches so lively and strong." See Lowth and Calmet.

Verse 3. Thus saith the Lord God unto Jerusalem—Unto the whole race of the Jews, and especially to the natives and inhabitants of that proud city, who thought it a singular privilege to be born or to live there, counting it a more holy place than the rest of the land of Canaan. Thy birth and thy nativity—The LXX. render it, ἡ ρίζα σου καὶ ἡ γενεὴ σου, thy root and thy generation, and so also the Vulgate. The word rendered birth, or root, however, כְּבִרְתִּךָ, seems rather to mean, commerce, or dealings, appearing to be derived from כָּכַר, to sell. Accordingly Buxtorf translates it commercium tua, thy dealings.

Houbigant, indeed, whom Bishop Newcome inclines to follow, prefers deriving the word from כְּרִי, to dig, referring to Isa. li. 1, and then the sense will be, thy origin, or thy rise, and thy nativity, is of the land of Canaan. If understood of the city of Jerusalem, the assertion is strictly true. It was a Canaanitish city, or strong hold, possessed and inhabited by the Jebusites, till David took it from them: see 2 Sam. v. 6. The father, therefore, of this city, might be properly said to be an Amorite, and its mother a Hittite; these names comprehending all the idolatrous nations of Canaan, of which the Jebusites were a branch. Or if the Jews or Israelites be intended, their progenitors, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, sojourned in the land of Canaan long before the possession of it was given to their posterity; and the two latter were natives of that country. But as those are said to be our parents, in Scripture language, whose manners we imitate, the Jews or Israelites, may be here represented as being of Canaanitish origin, because they followed the manners of the idolatrous inhabitants of that country, rather than those of the pious patriarchs: see verse 45; John viii. 44; Matt. iii. 7. There is an expression of the same import in the history of Susannah, verse 56, that seems to be borrowed from this passage, O thou seed of Canaan, and not of Judah, beauty hath deceived thee, and lust hath perverted thy heart.

Verse 4. As for thy nativity, &c.—"Jerusalem is here represented under the image of an exposed in-

A. M. 3411. 5 None eye pitied thee, to do any
B. C. 593. of these unto thee, to have compassion upon thee; but thou wast cast out in the open field, to the loathing of thy person, in the day that thou wast born.

6 ¶ And when I passed by thee, and saw thee ³polluted in thine own blood, I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood, Live; yea,
I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood, Live.

7 ° I have ⁴caused thee to multiply as the bud of the field, and thou hast increased and waxen great, and thou art come to ⁵excellent ornaments: thy breasts are fashioned, and thy hair is grown, whereas thou wast naked and bare.

8 Now when I passed by thee, and looked

² Or, trodden under foot.—³ Exod. i. 7.—⁴ Heb. made thee a million.—⁵ Heb. ornament of ornaments.—⁶ Ruth iii. 9.

fant, whom God preserved from destruction, brought up, espoused and exalted in sovereignty. But she proved faithless and abandoned; and therefore God threatens her with severe vengeance, but graciously promises that afterward he would fulfil his early covenant with her. The allegory is easily understood; and has much force, liveliness, and vehemence of eloquent amplification. The images are adapted to a people immersed in sensuality.”—Bishop Newcome. Thy navel was not cut—The navel-string, by which thou wast held to the body of thy mother, none took care to cut. By this and the other meta-phorical expressions in this and the next verse, the prophet hints how despised a people Israel was, and in what a forlorn condition when they went first into Egypt. Neither wast thou washed in water to supple thee—Hebrew, לִכְשֵׁי, ad aspectum meum, as Buxtorf renders it, that is, when I first beheld thee, or, ut jucunda aspectu esses, that thou mightest be pleasant to behold. Some render it, To make thee shine. The meaning is, to cleanse thee from the pollutions of thy birth. Thou wast not salted at all.
—It seems it was then customary to rub new-born infants over with salt; probably to dry up the humours of their bodies. All the expressions here used allude to the custom observed by the eastern nations at the birth of their children; and “the design of the prophet is to mark out that state of impurity wherein the Hebrews were found in Egypt, plunged in idolatry and ignorance, and oppressed with cruel servitude.”

Verse 5. None eye pitied thee, &c.—The cruelty of the Egyptians, who ought, in gratitude for the services they had received from Joseph, to have been as parents to the Israelites, seems to be here hinted at. Thou wast cast out in the open field— Thou wast exposed to perish. It was the custom to lay those children, whom their parents would not take the trouble of bringing up, in the open fields, upon thee, behold, thy time was the A. M. 3411.

time of love; ¹ and I spread my skirt B. C. 593.
over thee, and covered thy nakedness: yea, I sware unto thee, and entered into a covenant with thee, saith the Lord God, and ² thou becamest mine.

9 Then washed I thee with water; yea, I thoroughly washed away thy ⁶blood from thee, and I anointed thee with oil.

10 I clothed thee also with brodered work, and shod thee with badgers' skin, and I girded thee about with fine linen, and I covered thee with silk.

11 I decked thee also with ornaments, and I ¹put bracelets upon thy hands, ¹and a chain on thy neck.

12 And I put a jewel on thy ⁷forehead, and

⁵ Exod. xix. 5; Jer. ii. 2.—⁶ Heb. bloods.—⁷ Gen. xxiv. 22, 47.—¹ Prov. i. 9.—⁷ Heb. nose, Isa. iii. 21.

and leave them there. To the loathing of thy person—Hebrew, בִּגְעֹל נַפְשִׁי, to the despising of thy soul, or life. The Vulgate reads, in abjectione animæ tuæ in die qua nata es; in the casting away of thy soul, or life, in the day in which thou wast born.
The sense seems to be, In contempt of thee as un-lovely and worthless; and in abhorrence of thee as loathsome to the beholder. This seems to have reference to the exposing of the male children of the Israelites in Egypt. And it is an apt illustration of the natural state of the children of men. In the day that we were born; we were shapen in iniquity; our understandings darkened, our minds alienated from the life of God; and polluted with sin, which rendered us loathsome in the eyes of God.

Verses 6, 7. And when I passed by thee—While as yet no body took so much care of thee as to wash thee from thy native filthiness, I took pity on thee;
as a traveller that passes by and sees an infant lie exposed; and I provided all things necessary for thy support. God here speaks after the manner of men. I said unto thee, Live—This is such a command as sends forth a power to effect what is commanded: he gave that life: he spake, and it was done. I caused thee to multiply, &c.—The prophet in this verse describes the Israelites increasing in Egypt, under the metaphor of a female child growing up to maturity: compare Exod. i. 7. Thou art come to excellent ornaments—Hebrew, בְּעֵרֵי עֲרִי, to ornaments of ornaments, that is, thou wast adorned with the choicest blessings of Divine Providence.
Or, as Dr. Waterland renders it, “Thou didst arrive to the perfection of beauty.” Thy breasts were fashioned, &c.—Thou didst come to woman's estate.

Verses 8-12. Now when I passed by thee, &c.—
This second passing by may be understood of God's visiting them in Egypt, and calling them out. Behold, thy time, &c.—The time of thy misery was the time of my love toward thee. And I spread

A. M. 3411. ear-rings in thine ears, and a beautiful crown upon thy head.

13 Thus wast thou decked with gold and silver; and thy raiment was of fine linen, and silk, and brodered work; ^k thou didst eat fine flour, and honey, and oil; and thou wast exceeding ^l beautiful, and thou didst prosper into a kingdom.

^k Deuteron. xxxii. 13, 14.—^l Psa. xlviii. 2.—^m Lam. ii. 15.
ⁿ Deut. xxxii. 15; Jer. vii. 4; Mic. iii. 11.

my skirt over thee—I espoused thee and took thee under my protection as a husband doth his wife, Ruth iii. 9. And covered thy nakedness—Enriched thee with the spoils and possessions of the Egyptians and Canaanites: see verses 10, 11. Yea, I entered into covenant with thee—This was done in mount Sinai, when the covenant between God and Israel was sealed and ratified. Those to whom God gives spiritual life, he takes into covenant with himself. By this covenant they become his, his subjects and servants, which speaks their duty: and at the same time his portion and treasure, which speaks their privilege. Then I washed thee with water—It was a very ancient custom among the eastern people to purify virgins who were to be espoused. And I anointed thee with oil—Thus also were women, on some occasions, prepared for their nuptials. The washings and purifications of the law are probably intended to be signified by these metaphorical expressions; and the priesthood by the anointing with oil here spoken of. I clothed thee also with brodered work—Or, with needle-work of divers colours. The expression may refer to the rich garments of the priests, and the covering and hangings of the tabernacle; or it may denote the gifts and graces bestowed upon them. And shod thee with badgers' skins—Or, with sandals of a purple colour, as Bochart expounds the word תחש. The eastern people had an art of curiously dressing and colouring the skins of badgers, of which they made their neatest shoes, for the richest and greatest personages. "This and the following verses allude to those parts of women's attire which serve not only for use but for ornament also; and import that God did not only provide the Jews with necessities, but likewise with superfluities." I decked thee also with ornaments—This and the following expressions are descriptive of the great wealth and felicity of the Jewish people, particularly under David and Solomon. I put bracelets upon thy hands, &c.—Ornaments which none but persons of better quality used to wear, Gen. xxiv. 47; Prov. i. 9. And I put a jewel on thy forehead—The same which is called a nose-jewel, Isa. iii. 21. And a beautiful crown upon thy head—"Crowns, or garlands, were used in times of public rejoicing; from whence is derived that expression of St. Paul, A crown of rejoicing, 1 Thess. ii. 19: compare Isa. xxv. 10. Virgins were sometimes adorned with crowns; and they were commonly put upon the heads of persons newly married, Cant. iii. 11."—Lowth.

14 And ^m thy renown went forth among the heathen for thy beauty: for it was perfect through my comeliness, which I had put upon thee, saith the Lord God.

15 ¶ ⁿ But thou didst trust in thine own beauty, ^o and playedst the harlot because of thy renown, and pouredst out thy fornications on every one that passed by; his it was.

^o Isa. i. 21; lvii. 8; Jer. ii. 20; iii. 2, 6, 20; Chap. xxiii. 3, 8, 11, 12; Hos. i. 2.

Verses 13, 14. Thus wast thou decked with gold, &c.—With ornaments the most costly and splendid. And thy raiment was of fine linen, &c.—Which was of the manufacture of Egypt, and one of the principal ornaments of women, as well as of great men. Thou didst eat fine flour, honey, and oil—Thy country afforded all manner of plenty and delicacies: see Deut. xxxii. 13, 14. Thou wast exceeding beautiful—This may refer to the beauty of the buildings of Jerusalem, and in particular of the temple. And thou didst prosper into a kingdom—Thou didst increase in majesty and dominion, and became superior to the nations around. Bishop Newcome renders this clause, Thou didst prosper into a queen, that is, didst become the reigning city, the mistress of many subject provinces. And thy renown went forth, &c., for thy beauty—Through thy power and riches thou wast able to procure every thing beautiful and desirable, so that thou didst soon become famous among the heathen nations around; or, perhaps, the words may refer to the excellent laws by which they were governed, and the various privileges of their church and state, which rendered their nation more perfect in beauty than any other in the world. Indeed, we can name nothing that would be to the honour of a people, but it was found in Israel in David and Solomon's time, when that kingdom was in its zenith of prosperity, power, and glory; piety, learning, wisdom, justice, victory, peace, wealth, were found there in perfection, and all sure to continue if they had kept close to God. It was perfect, saith God, through my comeliness, which I had put upon thee—That is, through the beauty of their holiness, as they were a people devoted to God. This was it that put a lustre upon all their other honours, and was indeed the perfection of their beauty. Observe, reader, sanctified souls are truly beautiful in God's sight, and they themselves may take the comfort of it; but God must have all the glory, for whatever comeliness they have is that which God has put upon them.

Verses 15–19. But thou didst trust in thine own beauty—Houbigant translates this, "But thou, trusting in thy beauty, didst play the harlot, degenerating from thy renown:" as if he had said, Thou didst abuse those honours, privileges, and advantages which I had bestowed upon thee, and didst make them an occasion of pride, of self-confidence, and of forsaking me thy benefactor, and serving idols. It was chiefly by their frequent and scandalous idol-

A. M. 3411. 16 ^p And of thy garments thou didst
B. C. 593. take, and deckedst thy high places with divers colours, and playedst the harlot thereupon: the like things shall not come, neither shall it be so.

17 Thou hast also taken thy fair jewels of my gold and of my silver, which I had given thee, and madest to thyself images ¹ of men, and didst commit whoredom with them.

18 And tookest thy brodered garments, and coveredst them: and thou hast set mine oil and mine incense before them.

19 ^a My meat also which I gave thee, fine flour, and oil, and honey, wherewith I fed thee, thou hast even set it before them for ² a sweet savour: and thus it was, saith the Lord God.

20 ^r Moreover, thou hast taken thy sons and thy daughters, whom thou hast borne unto me, and these hast thou sacrificed unto them ³ to be devoured. Is this of thy whoredoms a small matter,

^p 2 Kings xxiii. 7; Chap. vii. 20; Hos. ii. 8.—¹ Heb. of a male.—^a Hos. ii. 8.—² Heb. a savour of rest.—^r 2 Kings xvi. 3; Psalm cvi. 37, 38; Isa. lvii. 5; Jer. vii. 31; xxxii. 35; Chap. xx. 26; xxiii. 37.

atries that the Jews and Israelites polluted their glory, and profaned the great name of Jehovah. And they presumed upon that very favour which God had showed to Jerusalem, in choosing it for the place of his residence, as if that would secure them from his vengeance, let their idolatries and other wickedness be never so great. And playedst the harlot—Idolatry, as has been often observed, is expressed by this metaphor. And of thy garments thou didst take, &c.—This was a great aggravation of their ingratitude, that they applied those very blessings which Jehovah, the true God, had given them, to the worship of idols, contrary to his express command. And deckedst thy high places—Places of idolatrous worship, commonly built on eminences, with divers colours. Or, as the LXX. interpret it, Thou madest idols, or images, of divers colours. Thou madest little shrines, chapels, or altars for idols, and deckedst them with hangings of divers colours, verse 18, 2 Kings xxiii. 7. The like things shall not come, &c.—I will utterly destroy those idolatries, and those that commit them. Thou hast also taken thy fair jewels, &c.—The wealth I had bestowed upon thee thou hast laid out in doing honour to idols; and particularly in setting up images to deified heroes, and didst pay them religious worship, here signified by committing whoredom with them. And coveredst them—Didst clothe with thy brodered garments the images thou hast made. And hast set mine oil, &c., before them—Thou offeredst these my creatures as meat-offerings, unto idols. The meat-offering is called an offering of a sweet savour, because of the frankincense which 21 That thou hast slain my child— A. M. 3411.

ren, and delivered them to cause them B. C. 593.
to pass through the fire for them?

22 And in all thine abominations and thy whoredoms thou hast not remembered the days of thy ^a youth, ^t when thou wast naked and bare, and wast polluted in thy blood.

23 And it came to pass, after all thy wickedness, (wo, wo unto thee! saith the Lord God,)

24 That ^u thou hast also built unto thee an ^e eminent place, and ^x hast made thee a high place in every street.

25 Thou hast built thy high place ^y at every head of the way, and hast made thy beauty to be abhorred, and hast opened thy feet to every one that passed by, and multiplied thy whoredoms.

26 Thou hast also committed fornication with ^z the Egyptians thy neighbours, great of flesh; and hast increased thy whoredoms, to provoke me to anger.

^a Heb. to devour.—^t Jer. ii. 2; Verses 43, 60; Hosea xi. 1. ^u Verses 4, 5, 6.—^e Verse 31.—^x Or, brothel-house.—^y Isa. lvii. 5, 7; Jer. ii. 20; iii. 2.—^z Prov. ix. 14.—^z Chap. viii. 10, 14; xx. 7, 8; xxiii. 19, 20, 21.

was put upon it, Lev. ii. 2. The oblation here mentioned differs from those offered to God in one particular, namely, that honey was mixed with it, which God had expressly forbidden to be used in his service, Lev. ii. 11.

Verses 20–22. Thou hast taken thy sons, &c., whom thou hast borne unto me—Being married to me by a spiritual contract, verse 8. The children, with whom I blessed thee, were mine, being entered into covenant with me, as thou wast, Deut. xxix. 11, 22. These thou hast sacrificed unto them to be devoured—These very children of mine hast thou destroyed by consuming them with fire. These inhuman sacrifices were offered to the idol Moloch, in the valley of Hinnom. Is this of thy whoredoms a small matter—Were thy spiritual whoredoms, thy idolatries, a small matter, that thou hast proceeded to this unnatural cruelty? Thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth—Thy infant state in Egypt; that miserable condition from which I rescued thee, when I first took notice of thee, and set thee apart for my own people.

Verses 24–26. Thou hast also built thee an eminent place in every street—Manasseh filled Jerusalem with idols, 2 Chron. xxxiii. 4, 5, 15; the altars of many of which were placed upon high or eminent places. At every head of the way—Not content with what was done in the streets of Jerusalem and other cities, thou hast erected thine altars in the country, wherever it was likely passengers would come. Thou hast also committed fornication with the Egyptians—While the Israelites sojourned in Egypt they learned to practise the Egyptian idola-

A. M. 3411. 27 Behold, therefore I have stretch-
B. C. 593. ed out my hand over thee, and have diminished thine ordinary food, and delivered thee unto the will of them that hate thee, ^athe ^bdaughters of the Philistines, which are ashamed of thy lewd way.

28 ^bThou hast played the whore also with the Assyrians, because thou wast insatiable; yea, thou hast played the harlot with them, and yet couldest not be satisfied.

29 Thou hast, moreover, multiplied thy fornication in the land of Canaan ^cunto Chaldea; and yet thou wast not satisfied herewith.

30 How weak is thy heart, saith the Lord God, seeing thou doest all these things, the work of an imperious, whorish woman;

^a 2 Chron. xxviii. 18, 19; Verse 57.—^b Or, cities.—^b 2 Kings xvi. 7, 10; 2 Chr. xxviii. 23; Jer. ii. 18, 36; Ch. xxiii. 12, &c.

tries. From Josiah's time the Jews were in strict confederacy with the Egyptians, and, to ingratiate themselves with them, practised their idolatries; and the worship of Tammuz, the idolatry they are upbraided with, chap. viii. 14, was derived from that country. Great of flesh—Who are naturally lusty and strong, and men of great stature. This expression seems to signify that the Israelites were allured by the riches and grandeur of Egypt to imitate their idolatries.

Verses 27–29. Behold, therefore—Open thine eyes, thou secure and foolish adulteress, see what has been done against thee, and consider it is for thy lewdness. I have stretched out my hand over thee—I have chastised and punished thee already in some measure. And have diminished thine ordinary food—Have taken away some of thy opulence, and abridged thee of many necessities and conveniences. And delivered thee unto the will of them that hate thee—Have excited them to make war against thee, have given them victory over thee, and delivered thee into their power. The daughters of the Philistines—This and what follows was effected in the reign of King Ahaz, 2 Chron. xxviii. 16, 18. The daughters of the Philistines are here put for the Philistines, as the daughters of Samaria, Sodom, and Syria stand for the people of those places, to carry on the allegory and comparison between them and Jerusalem, being all of them described as so many lewd women, prostituting themselves to idols, verse 41. By the same metaphor Samaria and Sodom are called sisters to Jerusalem, verse 46. Which are ashamed of thy lewd way—Who have not had the wickedness to imitate thy evil deeds; for they have not forsaken the religion of their country as you Jews have done, nor have been so fond of foreign idolatries. Thou hast played the whore also with the Assyrians—The Jews courted the alliance of their two potent neighbours, the Egyptians and Assyrians, as it served

31 ^eIn that ^dthou buildest thine ^feminent place in the head of every way, and makest thy high place in every street; and hast not been as a harlot, in that thou scornest hire;

32 But as a wife that committeth adultery, which taketh strangers instead of her husband!

33 They give gifts to all whores: but ^gthou givest thy gifts to all thy lovers, and ^hhirest them, that they may come unto thee on every side for thy whoredom.

34 And the contrary is in thee from other women in thy whoredoms, whereas none followeth thee to commit whoredoms: and in that thou givest a reward, and no reward is given unto thee; therefore thou art contrary.

^c Chapter xxiii. 14, &c.—^d Or, in thy daughters is thine, &c.
^e Ver. 24, 39.—^f Isa. xxx. 3; Hos. viii. 9.—^g Heb. bribe.

their present turn; and, to ingratiate themselves with them, served their idols, Jer. ii. 18, 36. This is particularly recorded of Ahaz, 2 Chron. xxviii. 23. Thou hast multiplied thy fornication in Canaan unto Chaldea—The sense is, thou hast defiled thyself with all the idolatries of the heathen, beginning with those that were practised by the former inhabitants of Canaan, and, by degrees, learning new kinds of idolatry, derived from distant countries, such as Chaldea was reckoned. It is said unto Chaldea, to signify that they learned and practised the idolatries of Chaldea before they were carried captives thither.

Verses 30–34. How weak is thy heart—Not only unstable as to good resolutions, but even restless and unsettled in evil practices, still hankering after some new kind of idolatry, and resolved to indulge a wandering appetite, verses 28, 29. The work of an imperious, whorish woman—A woman that acknowledges no superior, and will neither be guided nor governed. In that thou buildest thine eminent place—See verses 16, 22. And hast not been as a harlot, in that thou scornest hire—Thou art the more inexcusable in that thou hast practised these idolatries without being compelled to it by want and necessity, and thou also hast never gained by them. The metaphor of a lewd woman is still carried on; and as one who is lewd for the sake of a maintenance, is more excusable than those who are lewd to gratify their passions, so God here tells the Jewish people, by the prophet, that they had not even the plea, which common harlots had, of practising their sin out of necessity; for that they had never made any advantage of their idolatries, but were subservient to those idolatrous nations, and lavished their riches on them, without reaping any benefit from them. They give gifts to all whores—That is, to the most of them: it is usual for loose men to do so. But thou givest thy gifts to all thy lovers—By this is signified the large presents they frequently sent

A. M. 3411. 35 ¶ Wherefore, O harlot, hear, the
B. C. 593. word of the LORD :

36 Thus saith the Lord GOD ; Because thy filthiness was poured out, and thy nakedness discovered through thy whoredoms with thy lovers, and with all the idols of thy abominations, and by ^f the blood of thy children, which thou didst give unto them ;

37 Behold, therefore, ^g I will gather all thy lovers, with whom thou hast taken pleasure, and all them that thou hast loved, with all them that thou hast hated ; I will even gather them round about against thee, and will discover thy nakedness unto them, that they may see all thy nakedness.

38 And I will judge thee, ^h as ⁱ women that break wedlock and ^j shed blood are judged ; and I will give thee blood in fury and jealousy.

39 And I will also give thee into their hand, and they shall throw down ^k thine eminent place, and shall break down thy high places :

^f Verse 20 ; Jer. ii. 34.—^g Jer. xiii. 22, 26 ; Lament. i. 8 ; Chap. xxiii. 9, 10, 22, 29 ; Hosea ii. 10 ; viii. 10 ; Nah. iii. 5.
^h Heb. with judgments of.—ⁱ Lev. xx. 10 ; Deuteron. xxii. 22 ; Chap. xxiii. 45.—^j Gen. ix. 6 ; Exod. xxi. 12 ; Verses 20, 36.
^k Verses 24, 31.—^l Chap. xxiii. 26 ; Hos. ii. 3.

to the Egyptians, Assyrians, and Chaldeans, to purchase their friendship. The Jews are often upbraided for making leagues with idolaters, and court- ing their favours by presents, and by complying with their idolatries. And the contrary is in thee—The intelligent reader, says Bishop Warburton, perceives that the meaning of the metaphor is, “ You Jews are contrary to all other nations ; you are fond of borrowing their rites ; while none of them care to borrow yours, or to take any of them into their national worship.” See Div. Leg., vol. iii.

Verses 37–39. Behold, I will gather all thy lovers—Those allies, whose friendship thou hast courted, by complying with their idolatries ; with all them that thou hast hated—As Edom, Moab, and Ammon : who were always of an envious and hostile disposition toward the Jews, and insulted over their calamities. And I will discover thy nakedness to them—They shall see thee carried away captive, stripped, and bare, without any covering to thy nakedness, according to the barbarous custom of conquerors in those times. The words allude to the punishment that used to be inflicted on common harlots and adulteresses, which was to strip them naked and expose them. And I will judge thee as women that break wedlock, and shed blood—I will inflict upon thee the punishment of adultery and murder : that is, some of thy people shall be stoned, and some killed by the sword : for these were the punishments of adultery and murder. Jerusalem might be properly said to be stoned when the Chaldeans, from their slings and engines, flung large stones into the city ;

^l they shall strip thee also of thy ^m clothes, and shall take ⁿ thy fair ^o jewels, and leave thee naked and bare. A. M. 3411.
B. C. 593.

40 ^m They shall also bring up a company against thee, ⁿ and they shall stone thee with stones, and thrust thee through with their swords.

41 And they shall ^o burn thy houses with fire, and ^p execute judgments upon thee in the sight of many women : and I will cause thee to ^q cease from playing the harlot, and thou also shalt give no hire any more.

42 So ^r will I make my fury toward thee to rest, and my jealousy shall depart from thee, and I will be quiet, and will be no more angry.

43 Because ^s thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth, but hast fretted me in all these things ; behold, therefore, ^t I also will recompense thy way upon thy head, saith the Lord GOD : and thou shalt not commit this lewdness above all thine abominations.

^o Heb. instruments of thine ornament.—^m Chap. xxiii. 10, 47.
ⁿ John viii. 5, 7.—^p Deuteron. xiii. 16 ; 2 Kings xxv. 9 ; Jer. xxxix. 8 ; lli. 13.—^q Chap. v. 8 ; xxiii. 10, 48.—^r Chap. xxiii. 27.—^s Chap. v. 13.—^t Verse 22 ; Psa. lxxviii. 42.—^u Chap. ix. 10, 11, 21 ; xxii. 31.

for this was usual in the besieging of places in those days. And I will give thee blood in fury and in jealousy—I will punish thee with severity, as a jealous and provoked husband does a wife that has wronged him. Or, I will pour out the blood of thy slain like water : I will make an utter destruction of thine inhabitants. They shall throw down thine eminent place—Probably the temple is here meant, called their eminent place, because they had filled it with idols ; and shall break down thy high places—Dedicated to idolatrous worship. They shall strip thee also of thy clothes—They shall take away thy walls : or they shall plunder thee of every thing before they carry thee away captive. And shall take thy fair jewels—Hebrew, כלי חפצתך, the vessels of thy ornament, or glory. The vessels of the temple seem to be here intended.

Verses 40–43. They shall bring a company against thee—A company shall come against thee, and beat down thy walls and houses, with stones slung out of battering-engines : see Jer. xxxiii. 4. The expression alludes, as in verse 38, to the punishment inflicted upon adulteresses, which was stoning. And they shall burn thy houses, &c.—The punishment allotted to an idolatrous city, Deut. xiii. 16. The word may likewise allude to the punishment of burning, anciently inflicted upon harlots : see Gen. xxxviii. 24. And execute judgment upon thee in the sight of many women—Nations that shall triumph over thee ; such as the Syrians, Philistines, &c.—The judgment which I shall execute upon thee shall be for an instruction to other nations, deterring

A. M. 3411. 44 ¶ Behold, every one that useth
B. C. 593. proverbs shall use this proverb against thee, saying, As is the mother, so is her daughter.

45 Thou art thy mother's daughter, that loatheth her husband and her children; and thou art the sister of thy sisters, which loathed their husbands and their children: ^ayour mother was a Hittite, and your father an Amorite.

46 And thine elder sister is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwell at thy left hand: and ^athy ¹⁷younger sister, that dwelleth at thy right hand, is Sodom and her daughters.

^a Verse 3.—^x Deut. xxxii. 32; Isaiah i. 10.—¹⁷ Heb. lesser than thou.—¹⁸ Or, that was loathed as a small thing.

them from following thine evil practices. It is said, in the sight of women, because Jerusalem is spoken of and represented as a woman. So will I make my fury, &c., to rest—I will fully satisfy my just anger, in inflicting these severe punishments upon thee. I also will recompense thy way upon thy head—Thou hast despised me, I also will despise thee; thou hast forsaken me, I also will forsake thee. Thou shalt not commit this lewdness, &c.—Thou shalt not add these manifold and shameless practices of idolatry to all thy other wickedness. The clause however may be rendered, Neither hast thou laid to heart all these thine abominations.

Verses 44, 45. Every one that useth proverbs—They who love to apply proverbial sayings, shall apply that common saying to thee, As is the mother, so is her daughter—The inhabitants of Jerusalem are just such a people as the Amorites and Hittites were, whose land they inhabit. Thou art thy mother's daughter—The Canaanites and other nations, who dwelt in the land before the Israelites, are here called their mother; and in terming the Jews their mother's daughter, the prophet signifies that they walked in the steps of the Canaanites, or imitated their manners. That loatheth her husband and her children—Both these qualities belong to harlots, and were verified in the Jews, who hated God, their husband, and offered their children to idols, having cast off all natural affection to them. And thou art the sister of thy sisters—Thou art in disposition like to those to whom thou art allied by blood. The sisters here spoken of are Sodom, the Ammonites, the Moabites, and Samaria, the principal city of the ten tribes. Moloch, who was worshipped in general by the ten tribes, and very often by those of Judah, was the ancient god of the Ammonites and Moabites: and the Samaritans also received among them the ancient gods of Chaldea. The inhabitants of Samaria were the kindred of the Jews by Jacob, and the Ammonites and Moabites were also related to them in the female line.

Verses 46, 47. Thine elder sister is Samaria, she and her daughters—That is, her lesser towns. "Sa-

47 Yet hast thou not walked after A. M. 3411. their ways, nor done after their abo- B. C. 593.
minations: but ¹⁸as if that were a very little thing, ^rthou wast corrupted more than they, in all thy ways.

48 As I live, saith the Lord God, ^aSodom thy sister hath not done, she nor her daughters, as thou hast done, thou and thy daughters.

49 Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom, pride, ^afulness of bread, and abundance of idleness was in her and in her daughters, neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy.

50 And they were haughty, and ^bcommitted

^r 2 Kings xxi. 9; Chap. v. 6, 7; Ver. 48, 51.—^a Matt. x. 15; xi. 24.—^a Gen. xiii. 10.—^b Gen. xiii. 13; xviii. 20; xix. 5.

maria is called the elder, or greater sister, because it was a much larger city and kingdom, greater for power, riches, and numbers of people, and more nearly allied to Judah. And Sodom is called the younger sister, as being a smaller and less populous city, and further removed in blood from Jerusalem and its inhabitants, being only, as it were, a half sister. That dwell at thy left hand—That is, toward the north, Samaria lying northward of Jerusalem, as Sodom lay southward of it. For these two quarters of the world are expressed by the right and left in the Hebrew language, being placed in such a position to those that set their faces eastward. The prophet here considers Samaria and Sodom as two cities still subsisting; though Sodom had been long since destroyed, and Samaria had been overthrown one hundred and twenty-seven years before this prophecy of Ezekiel was delivered. Yet thou hast not walked after their ways—Thou hast not been content merely to be as bad as they, but hast carried thy wickedness to a much greater height, and committed many more crimes than they: see note on chap. v. 7. "The vices of Sodom and Samaria were not attended with such aggravating circumstances as those of Jerusalem; for they had not been blessed with the same great privileges."

Verses 49, 50. Behold, this was the iniquity of Sodom, pride, fulness of bread, &c.—The inhabitants of Sodom "abused that plenty which God gave them to pride and idleness, which gave rise to those enormities that they afterward were guilty of. The Scripture takes notice of the fruitfulness of the soil where Sodom stood," Gen. xiii. 10.—Lowth. Such is the depravity of human nature, that plenty, and a freedom from toil and danger, often prove people's ruin; and therefore, if we were truly wise, we should be as much afraid of prosperity as we are of any of those supposed evils which are the frequent objects of our fears. Neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy—Pride and luxury make men expensive in their way of living, and regardless of the wants and miseries of others. And they were haughty—Hebrew, ותנבנה, they were high, lofty,

A. M. 3411. abomination before me: therefore ° I
B. C. 593. took them away as I saw good.

51 Neither hath Samaria committed half of thy sins: but thou hast multiplied thine abominations more than they, and ^a hast justified thy sisters in all thine abominations which thou hast done.

52 Thou also, which hast judged thy sisters, bear thine own shame for thy sins that thou hast committed more abominable than they: they are more righteous than thou: yea, be thou confounded also, and bear thy shame, in that thou hast justified thy sisters.

53 ° When I shall bring again their captivity, ^f the captivity of Sodom and her daughters, ° Gen. xix. 24.—^a Jer. iii. 11; Matt. xii. 41, 42.—° Isa. i. 9; Verses 60, 61.—^f Jer. xx. 16.

arrogant in their deportment toward good men, vexing Lot's righteous soul, toward the angels, whom they assaulted in his house, and toward God himself, all whose laws they trampled under foot, Gen. xiii. 13; and before whom they committed abominations of the most heinous and detestable kind; arriving by degrees to the height of impiety and wickedness. And, indeed, when pride has got the ascendancy in a man he is in the high road to all abominations. And therefore I took them away as I saw good—Destroyed their cities, people, and country, by a most tremendous, unexpected, and unexampled judgment.

Verses 51, 52. Neither hath Samaria—The kingdom of the ten tribes, founded in rebellion and idolatry; committed half of thy sins—The sin of Jerusalem was greater than that of Samaria, because God had placed his name and the ordinances of his worship there; and she had profaned his temple by placing idols in it, which was a degree of idolatry beyond any thing the ten tribes had been guilty of. And probably, with respect to other crimes, Jerusalem went beyond, or exceeded Samaria. But thou hast multiplied thine abominations more than they—Hast worshipped more idols, and slain more prophets; and hast justified thy sisters, &c.—Not made them righteous, but declared them less unrighteous than thou art; hast made them appear less guilty through the greatness of thy sins. Thou also, who hast judged thy sisters—Hast condemned their apostacy, and judged their punishment just; bear thy shame—For wherein thou hast judged them, or declared them to be deservedly punished, thou hast condemned thyself, having been guilty of the same sins, and those accompanied with greater aggravations. The inhabitants of Judea allowed that the ten tribes were justly punished when they were carried into captivity, and yet fell into the same and greater crimes themselves.

Verses 53–56. When I shall bring again the captivity of Sodom and her daughters, &c.—“Sodom and her daughters may mean cities placed in the disand the captivity of Samaria and her ^{A. M. 3411.} daughters, then will I bring again ^{B. C. 593.} the captivity of thy captives in the midst of them:

54 That thou mayest bear thine own shame, and mayest be confounded in all that thou hast done, in that thou art ^g a comfort unto them.

55 When thy sisters, Sodom and her daughters, shall return to their former estate, and Samaria and her daughters shall return to their former estate, then thou and thy daughters shall return to your former estate.

56 For thy sister Sodom was not ¹⁹ mentioned by thy mouth in the day of thy ²⁰ pride.

° Chapter xiv. 22, 23.—¹⁹ Hebrew, for a report, or, hearing. ²⁰ Heb. pride, or, excellences.

trict where Sodom stood. Sodom was not where the lake is, Gen. xix. 24.”—Bishop Newcome. “The Moabites and Ammonites, descended from Sodom, are called by this name.”—Michaelis. “When the fulness of the Gentiles shall come into the church, some of whom may be compared with Sodom for wickedness, Isa. i. 9, then will I also remember you were my ancient people. St. Paul tells us the Jews will be provoked to emulation by the Gentiles coming into the church, and thereby be induced to acknowledge the truth, Rom. xi. 11–31. And the conversion of the Gentiles is expressed, Jer. xlviii. 47, and xlix. 6, 39, by returning the captivity of Moab, Ammon, and Elam; and Isa. xviii. 7, and xix. 24, 25, and xxiii. 18, by the Egyptians, Syrians, Assyrians, and Ethiopians bringing presents to God, and acknowledging themselves his servants. And by the same analogy we may understand the bringing again the captivity of Sodom here, of the Gentiles coming into the church.”—Lowth. “The sense of this,” says Bishop Newcome, “is again expressed verse 55, and both verses are to be explained by verse 61. I refer the words rather to the future restoration of the Jews than to their return from Babylon.” This prediction was partly fulfilled in the age of the apostles and first disciples of Christ; but the full accomplishment of it is undoubtedly yet future. That thou mayest bear thine own shame—That thou mayest be humbled and made ashamed, in having those put upon a level with thee whom thou hadst before so greatly contemned, and thought so much beneath thee. For thy sister Sodom—Including the cities in or near the place where she stood, and the Ammonites, Moabites, and other neighbouring nations, termed her daughters, verses 53, 55, and here put for the Gentiles in general; was not mentioned in the day of thy pride—Was held in such contempt, that thou didst not think her worthy of being named by thee; before thy wickedness was discovered, verse 57—Before it was made apparent to the world by the judgments or punishments inflicted on thee. Or, as Bishop Newcome and some

A. M. 3411. 57 Before thy wickedness was discovered, as at the time of thy ^h reproach of the daughters of ²¹ Syria, and all that are round about her, ⁱ the daughters of the Philistines, which ²² despise thee round about.

58 ^k Thou hast ²³ borne thy lewdness and thine abominations, saith the LORD.

59 For thus saith the Lord God; I will even deal with thee as thou hast done, which hast ^l despised ^m the oath in breaking the covenant.

60 ¶ Nevertheless, I will ⁿ remember my covenant with thee in the days of thy youth, and I will establish unto thee ^o an everlasting covenant.

A. M. 3411. 61 Then ^p thou shalt remember thy ways, and be ashamed, when thou shalt receive thy sisters, thine elder and thy younger: and I will give them unto thee for ^q daughters, ^r but not by thy covenant.

62 ^s And I will establish my covenant with thee; and thou shalt know that I am the LORD:

63 That thou mayest ^t remember, and be confounded, ^u and never open thy mouth any more because of thy shame, when I am pacified toward thee for all that thou hast done, saith the Lord God.

^h 2 Kings xvi. 5; 2 Chron. xxviii. 18; Isaiah vii. 1; xiv. 28.
²¹ Heb. Aram.—ⁱ Ver. 27.—²² Or, spoil.—^k Chap. xxiii. 49.
²³ Heb. borne them.—^l Ch. xvii. 13, 16.—^m Deut. xxix. 12, 14.

ⁿ Psalm cvi. 45.—^o Jer. xxxii. 40; i. 5.—^p Chap. xx. 43.
^{xxxvi.} 31.—^q Isa. liv. 1; lx. 4; Gal. iv. 26.—^r Jer. xxxi. 31.
^s Hos. ii. 19, 20.—^t Verse 61.—^u Rom. i. 19.

others interpret the words, "The exemplary punishment of Sodom was not duly considered and spoken of by thee in the time of thy prosperity and self-confidence; before thy humiliation showed thy wickedness, and defeats and distresses were brought on thee by the Syrians and Philistines."

Verses 57–59. As at the time of thy reproach, &c.—These words appear to begin a new sentence; which may be translated more intelligibly thus, by joining them to the following verse: "But when it was the time of thy becoming the reproach of the daughters of Syria," &c. The words, with regard to what goes before, import thus much: In thy prosperity thou didst despise those who were no worse than thyself; but thou hast since, in thy turn, been insulted and invaded by thy neighbours, both Syrians and Philistines, whom God hath made use of as executioners of his judgments upon thee; thou hast been a remarkable instance of his vengeance, and God's hand hath been heavy upon thee for all thine idolatries and abominations. The words relate to the frequent inroads which the Syrians and Philistines made into Judea, in the time of King Ahaz. Thou hast borne—Or, Thou shalt bear, thy lewdness, &c.—Thou shalt be punished according to thy wickedness. I will even deal with thee as thou hast done, which hast despised the oath, &c.—That solemn oath and covenant you entered into with me, to be my people, and serve no other god besides, Deut. xxix. 12, 14. Hereupon God threatens her, that since she had broken her oath and promise, he should not think himself obliged to make good any of the promises of favour and protection which he had made to her, but would give her up to ruin and desolation.

Verses 60–63. Nevertheless, I will remember my covenant with thee, in the days of thy youth—I will yet have some regard for you, because you were formerly my people, by virtue of the covenant that I made with you at your coming out of Egypt. And I will establish with you an everlasting covenant—Such a one as shall never be abolished, namely, that of the gospel: see note on Jer. xxxii. 40. Then thou shalt remember thy ways, and be ashamed—Thou shalt be affected with a deep sense of, and contrition for, thy former provocations, as a necessary preparation for thy conversion. When thou shalt receive thy sisters—Converted with thee to Christianity; when the Gentiles, now strangers, but their sisters, shall be admitted with thee into the Christian Church. And I will give them unto thee for daughters—As daughters hearken to, and obey their mothers, so shall the Gentiles, brought into the church of God, hearken to his word, which is there declared, and which first went forth from Jerusalem. "Even in the times of the apostles, there was a particular deference paid to the church of Jerusalem, as the mother church of the Christian world: see Rom. xv. 26, 27. Accordingly, she is styled the mother of all churches, by the second general council in their synodical epistle: see Theod., Hist. Eccles., lib. v. c. 9. A title which the Church of Rome now assumes, without any pretence from Scripture or antiquity."—Lowth. Not by thy covenant—Not by that old covenant, which was violated; not by external ceremonies, which were a great part of the first covenant; but by that covenant which writes the law in the believer's heart, and puts the fear of God into his inward parts; the covenant which I will make with you, through the mediation of the Messiah; a covenant founded in the divine love, cemented by the blood of Christ, and freed from the yoke of bondage. The first covenant was only for a time, but this shall be for ever. And thou shalt know that I am the Lord—Shalt know to thy comfort, that I am Jehovah, the source of being and of blessedness, the God of almighty power, of infinite love, and of inviolable faithfulness, merciful to thy unrighteousness, and remembering thy sins and iniquities no more, Jer. xxxi. 34; as conspicuous in my mercies as I was before in my judgments. That thou mayest remember and be confounded—That thou mayest acknowledge, and be deeply sensible, how many and great thy transgressions have been, and how great my mercy is in pardoning so many and such aggravated iniquities; and never open thy mouth any more—Either to justify thyself, or to condemn others, or to quarrel with thy God; because of thy shame—Because shame and sorrow, for thy past sins, will cover thee with confusion. When I am pacified toward thee for all that thou hast done—When I have pardoned all thy transgressions, and am re-provocations. Observe, reader, the more sensible we are of God's love to us, the more ashamed we are that ever we offended him; and the more our shame for sin is increased, the more will our comfort in God be increased also. conciled to thee, notwithstanding thy innumerable

CHAPTER XVII.

In the preceding chapter God had set forth the wickedness of the Jewish nation, in their treacherously breaking their covenant with him, and apostatizing from his worship to that of idols. Here, in a parable of two eagles and a vine, he represents the wickedness of Zedekiah, in courting the favour of the king of Egypt, after he had solemnly sworn allegiance to the king of Babylon, and had rendered himself and his kingdom tributary to him. (1.) We have the parable itself, 1-10. (2.) The explication and application of it, 11-21. (3.) In the close, by the emblem of planting a top branch on a high mountain, and causing it to flourish exceedingly, is promised the restoration of the honour of David's family in Zerubbabel, but chiefly in the person and kingdom of Christ, 22-24.

A. M. 3411. AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, put forth a riddle, and speak a parable unto the house of Israel;

3 And say, Thus saith the Lord God; ^a A great eagle, with great wings, long-winged, full of feathers, which had ¹ divers colours, came unto Lebanon, and ^b took the highest branch of the cedar.

4 He cropped off the top of his young twigs, and carried it into a land of traffic; he set it in a city of merchants.

5 He took also of the seed of the A. M. 3411. land, and ² planted it in ^c a fruitful B. C. 593. field; he placed it by great waters, and set it ^d as a willow-tree.

6 And it grew, and became a spreading vine ^e of low stature, whose branches turned toward him, and the roots thereof were under him: so it became a vine, and brought forth branches, and shot forth sprigs.

7 There was also another great eagle with great wings and many feathers: and behold, ^f this vine did bend her roots toward him, and

^a Verse 12.—¹ Hebrew, embroidering.—² 2 Kings xxiv. 12. ² Heb. put it in a field of seed.

^c Deuteronomy viii. 7, 8, 9.—^d Isaiah xlv. 4.—^e Verse 14. ^f Verse 15.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XVII.

Verse 2. Son of man, put forth a riddle—A continued metaphor or figurative speech: an allegory. The prophets frequently delivered their instructions in this way, as being well calculated both to engage the attention of their hearers or readers, and to make a deep and lasting impression on their minds. It was a mode of teaching peculiarly adapted to the eastern people, and therefore often adopted by their instructors, whether inspired or uninspired. It is well known that our Lord frequently used it in preaching his gospel.

Verses 3-6. A great eagle with great wings—The eagle is the king of birds, swift, strong, and rapacious. And this great eagle, according to all interpreters, represents Nebuchadnezzar. Its "greatness, long wings, beautiful, abundant, and well-coloured plumage, denote the force and greatness of his empire, the rapidity of his conquests, and the number of his subjects. The Scripture has in other places described this prince under the figure of an eagle. See Jer. xlviii. 40, 49; Dan. vii. 4. By his coming to Lebanon, and taking the highest branch of the cedar, is meant his invasion of Judea, his investing the city of Jerusalem, and taking King Jehoiachin and the princes captive."—Calmet. He cropped off the top of his young twigs—Both the king of Judah, now eighteen years old, and the nobles and chief of the land. And carried it into a land of traffic—"Babylon, and the country about it, being the seat of a universal monarchy, must needs have been a place of great trade. Strabo takes notice that the merchants who travelled by land to Babylon went through the country of the Arabians, called Scenitæ, lib. xvi. p. 747; and vessels of great burden came up the river Euphrates to the walls of it from the Persian gulf." See Pliny's Nat. Hist., l. vi. c. 26; and Lowth. He took also of the seed of the land—Of the king's seed, as it is explained verse 13: that is, Zedekiah, whom the king of Babylon made king of Judah instead of Jehoiachin; first exacting an oath of him, that he would be true to him, and pay him tribute. And he planted it in a fruitful field—Hebrew, בשרת זרע, in a field of seed, that is, proper for seed: he placed it by great waters, and set it as a willow-tree—Judea was a fruitful country and well watered, (see Deut. viii. 7,) where Zedekiah flourished as a willow-tree, that thrives best in moist ground, Isa. xlv. 4. And it became a spreading vine of low stature, &c.—Though Zedekiah flourished, yet he enjoyed but a tributary kingdom under the king of Babylon, and acknowledged him as his lord and sovereign: see verse 14.

Verses 7, 8. There was also another great eagle—

A. M. 3411. shot forth her branches toward him, B. C. 593. that he might water it by the furrows of her plantation.

8 It was planted in a good ³soil by great waters, that it might bring forth branches, and that it might bear fruit, that it might be a goodly vine.

9 Say thou, Thus saith the Lord God; Shall it prosper? ^ashall he not pull up the roots thereof, and cut off the fruit thereof, that it wither? it shall wither in all the leaves of her spring, even without great power or many people to pluck it up by the roots thereof.

10 Yea, behold, being planted, shall it prosper? ^bshall it not utterly wither, when the east wind toucheth it? it shall wither in A. M. 3411. the furrows where it grew. B. C. 593.

11 ¶ Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

12 Say now to ⁱthe rebellious house, Know ye not what these things mean? Tell them, Behold, ^kthe king of Babylon is come to Jerusalem, and hath taken the king thereof, and the princes thereof, and led them with him to Babylon;

13 ¹And hath taken of the king's seed, and made a covenant with him, ^mand hath ⁴taken an oath of him: he hath also taken the mighty of the land:

14 That the kingdom might be ⁿbase, that

^a Heb. field.—^e 2 Kings xxv. 7.—^b Chap. xix. 12; Hos. xiii. 15.—ⁱ Chap. ii. 5; xii. 9.—^k Verse 3; 2 Kings xxiv. 11–16.

¹ 2 Kings xxiv. 17.—^m 2 Chron. xxxvi. 13.—⁴ Heb. brought him to an oath.—ⁿ Verse 6; Chap. xxix. 14.

Namely, Pharaoh, king of Egypt, with whom Zedekiah made an alliance; whereupon that king sent an army to raise the siege of Jerusalem, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 13; Jer. xxxvii. 5, 7. With great wings and many feathers—Having a great army and many people to support him. And this vine (namely, Zedekiah) did bend her roots toward him, &c.—Zedekiah sought the assistance and protection of the king of Egypt. Dr. Waterland renders this clause, And shot forth her branches under him, from the furrows where she was planted, that he might water it: that is, give it assistance. The auxiliary forces which Zedekiah expected from Egypt are here intended. It was planted in a good soil, &c.—The words are to the same purpose with verse 5, to show that Zedekiah's condition was so good under the king of Babylon, that he needed not to have broken his oath out of a desire to better it, whereby he involved himself and his country in ruin: see notes on 2 Kings xxiv. 20; and Jer. xvii. 25.

Verses 9, 10. Say—Tell them what shall be the issue of all this, and tell it to them in my name. Shall it prosper?—Can it be that such breach of faith and such ingratitude should prosper? No, it cannot be: God will never suffer it. Zedekiah, besides the obligation of an oath, was bound to the king of Babylon by the ties of gratitude, as he owed all he possessed to him. Shall he not pull up the roots thereof?—Shall not Nebuchadnezzar, in return for this perfidiousness, destroy him and his kingdom? see 2 Kings xxv. 7. And cut off the fruit thereof—Put his children and those of his nobles to the sword? It shall wither in all the leaves of her spring—It shall wholly wither: not only the old branch shall wither, but its young shoots also: and all the promising hopes they had shall vanish: even without great power or many people—God shall be on the side of the Chaldeans, and he does not need great power or many people to effect his purpose. He can as easily overturn a sinful king and kingdom as a man can root up a tree that cumbereth the ground.

The king of Babylon, therefore, God being with him, shall easily subdue the land of Judah, and shall not need a large human force to assist him. Yea, shall it not utterly wither when the east wind toucheth it?—Here the prophet compares the Chaldean army, which should come against Judea, to a parching wind that blasts the fruits of the earth, withers the leaves of the trees, and makes every thing look naked and bare.

Verses 12–14. Say now to the rebellious house—To the house of Judah, which have been and still are rebellious against me, and are now entering into a rebellion against Nebuchadnezzar. This is God's order to his prophet to explain the riddle. Know ye not what these things mean?—Will you not apply your minds to understand what God speaks to you? And that whether he directs his speech to you in plain words, or delivers his mind in riddles and parables? Behold, the king of Babylon is come—Or rather, did come, or came to Jerusalem—Namely, some time before the delivery of this prophecy: and hath taken the king thereof, and the princes thereof—Namely, Jeconiah and all his princes and officers: see 2 Kings xxiv. 12. And hath led them with him to Babylon—Judging them unfit to be trusted any more with any office or power in their own country. And hath taken of the king's seed—Hath taken from among the royal seed Mattaniah, Jehoikim's brother, and advanced him to the throne in Jerusalem, 2 Kings xxiv. 17; and made a covenant with him—A solemn agreement, on terms acceded to and approved by Mattaniah; and hath taken an oath of him—An oath of fealty: when Nebuchadnezzar caused Mattaniah to enter into this covenant and oath, he changed his name to Zedekiah, which word signifies, the justice of God, to express that God would avenge the crime of this restored captive, if he should break the covenant into which he had entered, and perjure himself: see note on 2 Kings xxiv. 17. He hath also taken the mighty of the land—Namely, as hostages for Zedekiah's performance

A. M. 3411. it might not lift itself up, ⁵ but that
B. C. 593. by keeping of his covenant it might stand.

15 But ^o he rebelled against him in sending his ambassadors into Egypt, ^p that they might give him horses and much people. ^q Shall he prosper? shall he escape that doeth such things?
or, shall he break the covenant, and be delivered?

16 As I live, saith the Lord God, surely ^r in the place where the king dwelleth that made him king, whose oath he despised, and whose covenant he brake, even with him in the midst of Babylon he shall die.

17 ^s Neither shall Pharaoh, with his mighty army and great company, make for him in the war, ^t by casting up mounts, and building forts, to cut off many persons:

⁵ Heb. to keep his covenant, to stand to it.—^o 2 Kings xxiv. 20; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 13.—^p Deuteron. xvii. 16; Isaiah xxxi. 1, 3; xxxvi. 6, 9.—^q Verse 9.—^r Jer. xxxii. 5; xxxiv. 3; lii. 11;

of the covenant agreed on. That the kingdom might be base—Or rather, humble; that it might be kept in subjection and obedience. Zedekiah being made only a tributary king, consequently was not in as honourable a condition as his predecessors had been in; but yet the keeping of his covenant was the only means, under present circumstances, to support himself and his government.

Verse 15. But he rebelled in sending into Egypt, that they might give him horses—Egypt was a country abounding in horses, of which there was great scarcity in Judea. This was not only a violation of his oath and covenant, but likewise a breach of that part of the Jewish law which forbade their king to fetch horses out of Egypt, or strengthen himself with the alliance of that nation. Shall he escape that doeth such things?—Shall not the divine vengeance overtake such ingratitude and perfidy? Shall he break the covenant and be delivered?—Can perjury and covenant-breaking be the way to any man's deliverance? Can such notorious sinning end in any thing but misery? From what is said on this occasion we learn, that an oath ought not to be violated though it was taken under unfavourable circumstances, and though the things to which a man bound himself by it were very disagreeable to him.

Verses 16-21. As I live, saith the Lord, &c.—This intimates how highly God resented the crime, and how sure and severe the punishment of it would be.
He swears in his wrath, as he did, Psa. xc. 11. Observe, reader, as God's promises are confirmed with an oath, for comfort to the saints, so are his threatenings, for terror to the wicked. Surely in the place where the king dwelleth—In Babylon, where Nebuchadnezzar dwells, who made him king, when he might have as easily made him a prisoner. Whose

18 Seeing he despised the oath by A. M. 3411 breaking the covenant, when lo, he B. C. 593.
had ^u given his hand, and hath done all these things, he shall not escape.

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord God;
As I live, surely mine oath that he hath despised, and my covenant that he hath broken, even it will I recompense upon his own head.

20 And I will ^x spread my net upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare, and I will bring him to Babylon, and ^y will plead with him there for his trespass that he hath trespassed against me.

21 And ^z all his fugitives with all his bands shall fall by the sword, and they that remain shall be scattered toward all winds: and ye shall know that I the LORD have spoken it.

Chap. xii. 13.—^s Jer. xxxvii. 7.—^t Jer. lii. 4; Chap. iv. 2.
^u 1 Chron. xxix. 24; Lam. v. 6.—^x Chapter xii. 13; xxxii. 3.
^y Chap. xx. 36.—^z Chap. xii. 14.

oath he despised—Made light of, and perfidiously violated. Even with him he shall die—Shall be a prisoner in Babylon the rest of his days, and shall die there. Neither shall Pharaoh make for him— See Jer. xxxvii. 7. But the Hebrew, יעשה במלחמה, may be properly rendered, as indeed it is by Bishop Newcome, Pharaoh shall not deal with him, namely, with Nebuchadnezzar, in war: or, shall not make war with him. Accordingly the Vulgate translates the clause, "Et non in exercitu grandi, neque in populo multo faciet contra eum Pharaoh præ-lium:" neither with a great army, nor with much people, shall Pharaoh fight a battle against him.
By casting up, &c.—Or rather, When he hath cast up mounts, &c., that is, when Nebuchadnezzar has raised mounts and builded forts to annoy Jerusalem, and destroy its inhabitants, Pharaoh shall not bring any assistance to it. Seeing he despised, &c., when lo, he had given his hand—In token of entering into a mutual league and covenant: It was a ceremony used especially when an inferior made profession of his subjection to a superior. My covenant that he hath broken—God calls it his covenant, because it was entered into, or promised to be observed, by taking an oath in his name. Even it will I recompense upon his own head—I will punish it as it deserves, and it shall appear by the punishment that my hand doth execute it. And I will spread my net, &c.—See on chap. xii. 13, where this clause occurs word for word. And will plead with him there
—God is said to plead with men when he places their sins before their eyes, and convinces them of their disobedience by manifest tokens of his vengeance. And all his fugitives—All the companions of his flight; with all his bands shall fall by the sword—Every thing here denounced by the prophet against Zedekiah exactly came to pass, as the reader

A. M. 3411. 22 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God, I
B. C. 593. will also take of the highest ^a branch of the high cedar, and will set it; I will crop off from the top of his young twigs ^b a tender one, and will ^c plant it upon a high mountain and eminent:

23 ^d In the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it: and it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar: and ^a Isa. xi. 1; Jer. xxiii. 5; Zech. iii. 8.—^b Isa. liiii. 2.—^c Psa.

ii. 6.—^d Isa. ii. 2, 3; Chap. xx. 40; Mic. iv. 1.

may see by comparing these threatenings with the account given Jer. lii. 8–11; 2 Kings xxv. 5–7.

Verses 22, 23. I will also take of the highest branch, &c.—God, having spoken of Jerusalem, in the first part of this chapter, under the figure of a cedar, and the king of it as the highest branch of the cedar, here carries his view to farther scenes, and, after having acquainted his prophet with the fate of Zedekiah, informs him, that as Nebuchadnezzar had taken of the seed of the land, (or the king,) and planted it, so he himself would take of the highest branch of the cedar and set it, &c. This appears plainly to be a prediction of the restoration of the royal family of David; and it was in some degree fulfilled at the return from the captivity, when Zerubbabel, of the lineage of David, had a shadow of kingly authority among the Jews, and by his means their state was again restored. But if the words be properly examined, the expressions will be found to be such as, in their full sense, can only belong to Christ and his kingdom, which shall be extended over all the world. I will crop off from the young twigs a tender one—This may fitly be applied to our Saviour, in respect to the low estate to which the family of David was then reduced, and the meanness of Christ's outward condition and appearance: see Isa. liii. 2. And will plant it upon a high mountain—Upon mount Zion, a type of the gospel church; and eminent—Not for outward splendour, but for spiritual advantages. In the mountain of the height of Israel—In Jerusalem, the capital city of my people, will I plant it—I will make him ruler of my church. He alludes to the temple placed on mount Moriah, a part of mount Zion, thence styled God's holy mountain; which expression is often used in the prophets to denote the Christian Church, which is described as a city set on a hill, and conspicuous to all the world. And it shall bring forth boughs—Have many members and subjects; and bear fruit—Do much good. The living members of the church are often compared to fruitful trees and flourishing

^e under it shall dwell all fowl of every ^f wing; in the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell. A. M. 3411. B. C. 593.

24 And all the trees of the field shall know that I the Lord ^g have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree, have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish: ^h I the Lord have spoken and have done it.

^e Chap. xxxi. 6; Dan. iv. 12.—^f Luke i. 52.—^g Chap. xxii. 14; xxiv. 14.

branches. And be a goodly cedar—The most happy society in the world, Deut. xxxiii. 29; Psa. cxliv. 15. And under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing—Persons of all nations shall become members of it. A powerful, especially if it be a mild government, is a shelter and security to all its subjects: compare chap. xxxi. 6; Dan. iv. 12. Such shall the kingdom of Christ be to all that submit themselves to his laws.

Verse 24. All the trees of the field—All the nations of the world; shall know that I the Lord have brought down the high tree—Have subdued and degraded the enemies of my people; have exalted the low tree—Have advanced my church, and made it flourish; have dried up the green tree, &c.—The same thing expressed in somewhat different words. Although these expressions may partly refer to the overthrow of the mighty Babylonian empire, and the restoration of the Jewish state by their return out of captivity, yet they are so magnificent, that they evidently intend much more than this. The Jewish kingdom did never, after the captivity, arrive at such a pitch of greatness as to give occasion to these magnificent expressions. Some more noble kingdom is undoubtedly here pointed at, namely, the kingdom of Christ, as has been observed above, which will at last be exalted above all the kingdoms of the world, and put an end to them all, while it will continue to all eternity: see Dan. iv. 35, 44, and vii. 27; Luke i. 33; 1 Cor. xv. 24. It is under Christ's kingdom only that people of all nations, signified here by fowls of every kind, shall be gathered together. And the subjects of that kingdom only have a certain and eternal protection, and a supply of every thing necessary. There is therefore no doubt that this was spoken, in its full sense, of the eternal and all-powerful kingdom to be established in Christ, one of the royal seed of Judah according to the flesh. I the Lord have spoken it, and have done it—The prophets often speak of future events as if they were already accomplished, to assure us that they shall certainly come to pass.

CHAPTER XVIII.

In order to refute a profane proverb of the wicked Jews, importing that God punished the innocent children instead of their wicked parents, God asserts in this chapter his sovereignty and justice: to manifest which, (1.) He declares that the wicked man shall die, or be punished, 4, 20: and that however good his father had been, 10–15: and however well he himself had lived for a time, 24, 26. (2.) He promises to reward the righteous man, 5-9: however wicked his parents had been, 14-18: and though himself had for a time been the same, 21-23. (3.) He declares that the end of such providential conduct was to vindicate his own equity, 19, 20, 25, 29: and to excite men sincerely to repent of sin and turn to him, 23, 30, 32.

A. M. 3411.
B. C. 593.

THE word of the LORD came unto me again, saying,

2 What mean ye, that ye use this proverb concerning the land of Israel, saying, The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge?

3 As I live, saith the Lord God, ye shall not

^a Jer. xxxi. 29; Lam. v. 7.—^b Verse 20; Rom. vi. 23.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XVIII.

Verse 2. What mean ye, that ye use this proverb concerning the land of Israel—With respect to the desolations made in it by the sword, famine, and pestilence. The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge—The present generation is punished for the offences committed by their forefathers, particularly for the sins committed in the time of Manasseh, king of Judah: see 2 Kings xxiii. 26; Jer. xv. 4. The Jewish people were very prone to plead their innocence, however great their crimes were.

Verse 3. As I live, saith the Lord, ye shall not have occasion to use this proverb any more in Israel—I will make such a visible discrimination between the righteous and the wicked, between those that tread in the steps of their forefathers and those who take warning by their examples, that you shall not have any further room to use this proverb among you. God threatens, it must be acknowledged, to visit the sins of the fathers upon the children, both in the Old Testament and the New: see Exod. xx. 5; Matt. xxiii. 35. But this is to be understood only, 1st, With respect to the temporal punishments of this world, not with respect to the eternal punishments of the next; and, 2d, When the children walk in the wicked steps of their parents, and so by degrees fill up the measure of national iniquity: see notes on Jer. xv. 4, and xxxi. 29, where this matter is more fully explained. "The Scripture takes notice of a certain measure of iniquity, which is filling up from one generation to another, till at last it makes a nation or family ripe for destruction. And although those persons on whom this vengeance falls suffer no more than their own personal sins deserved, yet, because the sins of former generations, which they equal or outdo, make it time for God utterly to destroy them, the punishments due to the sins of many ages and generations are said to fall upon them."—Dr. Sherlock.

Verse 4. Behold, all souls are mine—As they are all equally my creatures, and in my power, so my dealings with them shall be without prejudice or partiality. The soul that sinneth, it shall die—The very same man that committeth sin shall be punished for it. Some commentators explain this of the temporal death which was about to come on the wicked Jews by the sword, famine, and pestilence; have occasion any more to use this A. M. 3411.

B. C. 593.
proverb in Israel.

4 Behold, all souls are mine; as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine: ^bthe soul that sinneth, it shall die.

5 ¶ But if a man be just, and do ¹that which is lawful and right,

¹ Heb. judgment and justice.

and they would confine the whole chapter to these events. "But," as Mr. Scott justly observes, "it cannot be proved that every righteous man escaped those temporal judgments, or that all who survived them were righteous: without which this whole interpretation must fall for want of a foundation. Many, indeed, of the pious Jews had 'their lives given them for a prey,' but even what Jeremiah, Baruch, and others endured in the siege, and after the taking of Jerusalem, nearly equalled the external sufferings of many wicked men among them; and none of those who survived the siege escaped captivity or exile. So that facts, in this particular, did not so fully ascertain the equality of the divine conduct toward these distinct characters, as this hypothesis requires." Temporal death, therefore, which, as the consequence of the first transgression, passes equally upon all men, cannot be only, or even chiefly, if it be at all, intended here. But, as life signifies in general all that happiness which attends God's favour, so death denotes all those punishments which are the effects of the divine displeasure, (see 2 Sam. xii. 13,) under which are comprehended the miseries of the next world. And these shall be allotted to men according to their deeds, (Rom. ii. 6,) without any regard to the faults of their ancestors, which shall not then be laid to their charge, or taken into account to aggravate their guilt. This the prophets well knew, and therefore, as they instruct men in the practice of inward and evangelical righteousness, and in order to it speak slightly of the mere external duties of religion, (see Isa. i. 11; Jer. vii. 22, 23,) so they raise men's minds to look beyond the temporal promises and threatenings of the law, to the eternal rewards and punishments of another life, Isa. lxvi. 24; Dan. xii. 2. In both which respects they prepared men's minds for the reception of the gospel when it should be revealed. See Lowth.

Verses 5-9. If a man be just—Or righteous, rather, as the word צדיק properly signifies; for it is not mere honesty, but true religion that is intended. And hath not eaten upon the mountains—Feasted on the sacrifices they offered to false gods. Idolatrous worship was commonly performed upon mountains or high places; and eating part of the sacrifice was properly maintaining communion with the idol to which it was offered. Neither hath lifted up his

A. M. 3411. 6 ° And hath not eaten upon the
B. C. 593.

mountains, neither hath lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, neither hath ^d defiled his neighbour's wife, neither hath come near to ° a menstruous woman,

7 And hath not ^f oppressed any, but hath restored to the debtor his ^g pledge, hath spoiled none by violence, hath ^h given his bread to the hungry, and hath covered the naked with a garment;

8 He that hath not given forth upon ⁱ usury, neither hath taken any increase, that hath withdrawn his hand from iniquity, ^k hath executed true judgment between man and man,

9 Hath walked in my statutes, and hath kept my judgments, to deal truly; he is just, he shall surely ^l live, saith the Lord God.

10 ¶ If he beget a son that is a ^m robber, ⁿ a shedder of blood, and ^o that doeth the like to any one of these things,

11 And that doeth not any of those duties,

^c Chap. xxii. 9.—^d Lev. xviii. 20; xx. 10.—^e Lev. xviii. 19; xx. 18.—^f Exodus xxii. 21; Leviticus xix. 15; xxv. 14. ^g Exod. xxii. 26; Deut. xxiv. 12, 13.—^h Deut. xv. 7, 8; Isa. lviii. 7; Matt. xxv. 35, 36.—ⁱ Exod. xxii. 25; Lev. xxix. 36, 37; Deut. xxiii. 19; Neh. v. 7; Psalm xlv. 5.—^k Deut. i. 16; Zech. viii. 16.

eyes to the idols—In prayer and adoration. And hath restored to the debtor his pledge—That is, what he could not be in want of without great inconvenience; such as clothes, bedding, and the like. God forbade the Jews to detain all night any pledge of this kind which they took from a poor man, (see the margin,) which was, in effect, to enjoin them to lend to the poor, without either pawn or usury. Hath given his bread to the hungry—After the offices of justice, come those of charity or beneficence: see margin. That hath not given forth upon usury—Usury, when exacted of the poor, has been generally condemned as no better than oppression, and is particularly forbidden by the law: see the margin. It is probable this sort of usury is chiefly here meant, because it is joined with oppression, violence, and want of charity. Every kind and degree of usury, however, was forbidden to the Israelites among one another, to promote a spirit of mutual kindness. But this law was peculiar to them: like their not reaping the corners of their fields, and their not gleaning their vines and olive-trees. Neither hath taken any increase—This seems to be meant of taking any advantage of the poor upon any occasion: see note on Lev. xxv. 36. Hath executed true judgment between man and man—Whenever he has been appointed a judge or an arbiter of differences between men; or, according as he has opportunity of doing it. Hath walked in my statutes, and kept my judgments—My ordinances and commandments, attending diligently to the various in-

but even hath eaten upon the moun- A. M. 3411 tains, and defiled his neighbour's wife, B. C. 593.

12 Hath oppressed the poor and needy, hath spoiled by violence, hath not restored the pledge, and hath lifted up his eyes to the idols, hath ⁿ committed abomination,

13 Hath given forth upon usury, and hath taken increase; shall he then live? he shall not live: he hath done all these abominations; he shall surely die; ° his ⁴ blood shall be upon him.

14 ¶ Now lo, if he beget a son, that seeth all his father's sins which he hath done, and considereth, and doeth not such like,

15 ^p That hath not eaten upon the mountains, neither hath lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, hath not defiled his neighbour's wife,

16 Neither hath oppressed any, ^q hath not withholden the pledge, neither hath spoiled by violence, but hath given his bread to the stitutions of my worship, and living in continual obedience to my will as revealed in my word, and that from a principle of faith in, and love to me, Deut. vi. 5; and xxx. 20; to deal truly—Uprightly and sincerely, according to the best of his knowledge; he is just—Righteous in a gospel sense. Righteousness has been imputed to him, Gen. xv. 6; Psa. xxxii. 1, 2; and implanted in him, Deut. v. 29, and xxx. 6; Psa. li. 10; otherwise it would not be thus practised by him. His person has been justified, and his nature renewed, otherwise he would neither have inclination nor power to walk thus before God in all well-pleasing. He shall surely live, saith the Lord God—Shall enjoy the comfort and reward of his obedience, and shall not need to fear any of those punishments that befall the wicked. He lives to God here, and shall live with him hereafter: see notes on Psa. xv.

¹ Chapter xx. 11; Amos v. 4.—² Or, breaker up of a house. ^m Gen. ix. 6; Exod. xxi. 12; Numbers xxxv. 31.—³ Or, that doeth to his brother besides any of these.—ⁿ Chapter viii. 6, 17. ^o Lev. xx. 9, 11, 12, 13, 16, 27; Chap. iii. 18; xxxiii. 4; Acts xviii. 6.—⁴ Hebrew, bloods.—^p Verse 6.—^q Heb. hath not pledged the pledge, or, taken to pledge.

Verses 10-13. If he—The righteous man before described, who transmits his human nature, but cannot transmit his graces and virtues to his son; beget a son who is a robber, &c.—Who is guilty of any of the evil practices above mentioned; and that doeth not any of those duties—That lives in the neglect of the just and humane offices which have been mentioned, and which are commanded by the law; he hath committed abomination—This may chiefly refer to the last two clauses of verse 6. He shall not live—Namely, because of his father's righteousness. He shall not enjoy the divine favour and blessing here or hereafter: he shall not escape

A. M. 3411. hungry, and hath covered the naked
B. C. 593. with a garment,

17 That hath taken off his hand from the poor, that hath not received usury nor increase, hath executed my judgments, hath walked in my statutes; he shall not die for the iniquity of his father, he shall surely live.

18 As for his father, because he cruelly oppressed, spoiled his brother by violence, and did that which is not good among his people, lo, even ^a he shall die in his iniquity.

19 ¶ Yet say ye, Why? ² doth not the son bear the iniquity of the father? When the son hath done that which is lawful and right, and hath kept all my statutes, and hath done ³ them, he shall surely live.

20 ⁴ The soul that sinneth, it shall die. ⁵ The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son: ⁶ the righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him, ⁷ and the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him.

21 ¶ But ⁸ if the wicked will turn from all his sins that he hath committed, and keep all my statutes, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall surely live, he shall not die.

22 ⁹ All his transgressions that he hath committed, they shall not be mentioned unto him: in his righteousness that he hath done he shall live.

23 ¹⁰ Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord God: and not that he should return from his ways, and live?

^a Chap. iii. 18.—² Exod. xx. 5; Deut. v. 9; 2 Kings xxiii. 26; xxiv. 3, 4.—³ Verse 4.—⁴ Deut. xxiv. 16; 2 Kings xiv. 6; 2 Chron. xxv. 4; Jer. xxxi. 29, 30.

⁵ Isa. iii. 10, 11.—⁶ Rom. ii. 9.—⁷ Verse 27; Chap. xxxiii. 12, 19.—⁸ Chap. xxxiii. 16.—⁹ Verse 32; Chap. xxxiii. 11; 1 Tim. ii. 4; 2 Pet. iii. 9.

punishment; namely, unless he turn to God in true repentance and reformation, verse 21. He hath done, or, because he hath done, all these abominations—Which have rendered him an object of the divine wrath; his blood shall be upon him—He is the cause of his own destruction; the whole blame of it must lie at his own door.

Verses 19, 20. Yet say ye, Why? doth not the son bear the iniquity of the father?—God here puts into the prophet's mouth what he knew the Jews would object (at least in their minds) to the foregoing declarations, namely, that they would deny what the prophet had said on this head, and would appeal to facts and experience that the son did bear the iniquity of the father; so that the sense of the first clause of the verse is, Why do you affirm this? does not experience show that the son bears the iniquity of the father? Is it not plain and undeniable, notwithstanding your fine discourse to the contrary? To be sure, we feel the truth of it in our own cases. To this cavil God makes answer in the following words, affirming that this was no otherwise so than when the son followed the example of his father's iniquity; for that, when the son did that which was lawful and right, and kept God's statutes, or lived a life of true piety and virtue, he should surely live, that is, should not be punished, or cut off, on account of the iniquity of his father. The righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him—That is, the righteous shall receive the reward of his righteousness. And the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him—That is, the reward of his wickedness. As certainly as it shall be well with the righteous, because he shall eat the fruit of his doings, so certainly shall woful punishment be executed upon the wicked who persist in their wickedness: see Isa. iii. 10, 11.

Verses 21–23. But if the wicked will turn from all his sins—That is, repent and bring forth fruit worthy of repentance. He shall surely live—He shall escape punishment: he shall be pardoned, and it shall be well with him in time and in eternity; as if he had said, So far is God from punishing the sins of guilty parents on their innocent children, as is objected above, that it is certain he does not punish even the guilty for their own sins, when they repent of and forsake them. Our God, who mercifully pardons the penitent for their own sins, will not, cannot for a moment, be supposed to charge innocent children, or any others, with the sins that are not their own. All his transgressions—That is, not one of all his transgressions; shall be mentioned unto him—Or remembered against him; that is, imputed to or punished on him; they shall be as if they were forgotten. God is said in Scripture to remember men's sins when he punishes them, and not to remember them when he pardons them: see Jer. xiv. 10, and xxxi. 34. Have I any pleasure, &c., that the wicked should die?—“Is it any pleasure to me that men should be wicked; or that those who are now wicked men, should die everlastingly? Is it not rather my desire that men should repent, and that the repentant should live? Is not this the very sum of my gospel, which I send into the world? Do I not call, and cry, and sue to men, that they would return from their sins, and be saved?”—Bishop Hall. It is not in the nature of God, which is infinitely holy and gracious, to have any pleasure in the unholiness and misery of any of his creatures. It does not comport with the wisdom and rectitude of the eternal lawgiver and sovereign ruler of the world, to take delight in seeing his laws violated, the rights of his government infringed, and his subjects punished. And it cannot consist with the boundless love of the almighty Father of the universe to take pleasure in witness-

A. M. 3411. 24 ¶ But ^b when the righteous turn-
B. C. 593.

eth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and doeth according to all the abominations that the wicked man doeth, shall he live? ^cAll his righteousness that he hath done shall not be mentioned: in his trespass that he hath trespassed, and in his sin that he hath sinned, in them shall he die.

25 ¶ Yet ye say, ^dThe way of the LORD is not equal. Hear now, O house of Israel; Is not my way equal? are not your ways unequal?

26 ^eWhen a righteous man turneth away

^e Chapter iii. 20; xxxiii. 12, 13, 18.—^c 2 Pet. ii. 20; Matt. v. 13; xii. 43; xxiv. 10, 45–51; Luke xxi. 34; John xv. 1–6.

ing the wretchedness of his offspring; or with the infinite mercy of the Redeemer and Saviour of the fallen race of Adam, to delight in seeing those perish for whose salvation he gave his Son to die. On the contrary, he willeth all men to be saved, and, in order thereto, to come to the knowledge of the truth, and is not willing that any should perish, 1 Tim. ii. 4; 2 Pet. iii. 9. It is true that God has determined to punish sinners continuing in sin; his justice calls for it; and, pursuant to that, impenitent sinners will lie for ever under his wrath and curse. This is the will of his decree, his consequent will, but it is not his antecedent will, the will of his delight and good pleasure. For though the righteousness of his government requires that sinners should die, yet the goodness of his nature causes him to choose far rather that they should turn from their ways and live; and he is unspeakably better pleased when his mercy is glorified in their salvation than when his justice is glorified in their damnation. Hence that affectionate wish, Deut. v. 29, O that there were such a heart in them, that they would fear me, &c., always, that it might be well with them, and with their children for ever!

Verse 24. But when the righteous turneth away from his righteousness, &c.—"The question here," say some commentators, "is not whether truly righteous men ever do thus apostatize." No? Surely it is the question, and the sole question: for if the truly righteous (of whom alone the prophet is speaking, and not of the hypocritically righteous, or mere professors of righteousness) do never apostatize, why does the prophet suppose that they do? Nay, why does he expressly affirm it, saying, When the righteous turneth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity? &c. Which is repeated verse 26, with the addition, And dieth in them; for the iniquity that he hath done shall he die. Surely these words are utterly irreconcilable with the notion, that the truly righteous never fall away. They who maintain this position may, on similar grounds, maintain, and, to be consistent with themselves, ought to maintain, in contradiction to the 21st and 27th verses, that the truly wicked never turn from their

from his righteousness, and commit- A. M. 3411. teth iniquity, and dieth in them; for B. C. 593.
his iniquity that he hath done, shall he die.

27 Again, ^fwhen the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive.

28 Because he ^gconsidereth and turneth away from all his transgressions that he hath committed, he shall surely live, he shall not die.

29 ^hYet saith the house of Israel, The way of the LORD is not equal. O house of Israel, are not my ways equal? are not your ways unequal?

^d Verse 29; Chap. xxxiii. 17, 20.—^e Verse 24.—^f Verse 21.
^g Verse 14.—^h Verse 25.

wickedness, never truly repent, and save their souls alive. For both events are equally supposed by the prophet frequently to take place, and it is affirmed in similar terms that both do take place. See note on chap. iii. 20. Nor is this prophet singular in teaching this doctrine, or this the only passage of Scripture in which it is taught: it is abundantly and explicitly declared and attested in other parts of holy writ, and by other inspired writers, especially those of the New Testament, and even by Christ himself, as the reader may see, if he will take the trouble of consulting the passages quoted in the margin. All his righteousness that he hath done shall not be mentioned—For, better had it been for him not to have known the way of righteousness, than after he hath known it, to turn aside from the holy commandment, 2 Pet. ii. 21. Such a one sins against a clearer light, and greater convictions, and withal is guilty of the highest ingratitude in doing despite unto the Spirit of grace.

Verses 25–29. Yet ye say, The way of the Lord is not equal, &c.—Yet ye allege that I do not act according to the strict rules of justice and equity: but "the declarations I have so often repeated concerning the eternal rewards and punishments allotted to the righteous and the wicked, are sufficient to vindicate the justice of my proceedings against all your objections." When a righteous man turneth away from his righteousness, &c.—"It is an opinion that prevails among the Jews, even till this day, that at the day of judgment a considerable number of good actions shall overbalance men's evil ones. See chap. xxxiii. 13. So they thought it a hard case for a man who had been righteous the far greater part of his life, if he did at last commit iniquity, that his former righteousness should avail him nothing. In opposition to this doctrine, God here declares that a righteous man sinning and not repenting, should die in his sins; and that a wicked man, upon his repentance, should save his soul alive."—Lowth. Again, when the wicked man, &c.—These verses are, as it were, a repetition of what had been said before; or rather, the conclusion of the matter, or the whole of the chapter summed up and brought to a point;

A. M. 3411. 30 ⁱ Therefore I will judge you, O B. C. 593. house of Israel, every one according to his ways, saith the Lord God. ^k Repent, and turn ^o yourselves from all your transgressions; so iniquity shall not be your ruin.

31 ¶ ^l Cast away from you all your transgres-

¹ Chap. vii. 3; xxxiii. 20.—^k Matt. iii. 2; Rev. ii. 5.—^o Or, others.—^l Ephes. iv. 22, 23.

namely, that men suffer the divine punishments only on account of their sins; that they cannot enjoy the divine favour while they continue in sin; and that, in order to obtain it, it is indispensably necessary that they should turn from all their transgressions and become new creatures, and that even former righteousness cannot obtain for them, or preserve to them, the favour of God, while they relapse into and continue in subsequent iniquity. In a word, that sin and wickedness are the sole objects of God's aversion and indignation, and holiness and righteousness of his favour and approbation.

Verses 30, 31. Therefore will I judge you, O house of Israel, every one according to his ways, &c.—You complain of the injustice of my ways or proceedings; but if I judge you according to the desert of your ways, you will certainly be all found guilty: and nothing but repentance, and a real turning to God in heart and life, can avert that ruin to which your sins have exposed you. Cast away from you all your transgressions—Here God, in a most tender and pathetic manner, exhorts the Israelites, and in them all sinners, to comply with those terms on which alone he could or can take men into favour, and save them from destruction, namely, the casting away or forsaking all their sins, whether of omission or commission, all their sinful tempers, words, or works; and giving up themselves sincerely and heartily to his love and service. And to show that a mere attendance on modes of worship, and an external obedience to the precepts of God's law, are not sufficient, nor can be accepted without internal purity and holiness, he adds, Make you a new heart sions, whereby ye have transgressed; A. M. 3411.

and make you a ^m new heart and a ⁿ new spirit: for why will ye die, O house of Israel?
B. C. 593.

32 For ^a I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God: wherefore turn ⁷ yourselves, and live ye.

^m Jer. xxxii. 39; Chapter xi. 19; xxxvi. 26.—ⁿ Lam. iii. 33; Verse 23; Chap. xxxiii. 11; 2 Pet. iii. 9.—⁷ Or, others.

and a new spirit—Which words imply, both that a new heart and a new spirit are absolutely necessary in order to salvation, and that means must be used by us in order to the attainment of these blessings. It must be well observed, that what is here commanded as our duty, to show the necessity of our endeavours in the use of means, is elsewhere promised as God's gift, (see chap. xxxvi. 26, and xi. 19,) to show man's inability to perform this duty, without the special grace of God, which, however, will not be denied to those who sincerely and earnestly seek it, in the way God has prescribed, namely, the way of prayer, watchfulness, self-denial, attention to and faith in the word and promise of God, assembling with his people, and carefully shunning the appearance of evil. For, as Lowth well observes, the difference of expression is thus to be reconciled, "that although God works in us to will and to do, and is the first mover in our regeneration, yet we must work together with his grace, and not quench or resist its motions;" see notes on Jer. xxxi. 18, 33, 34. To the same purpose are the words of Calmet here: "We can do nothing well of ourselves; we have of ourselves nothing but sin: all our power comes from God, and with the aid of his grace we can do all things. But if, on the one hand, we ought to humble ourselves on account of our impotence, on the other hand we ought to hope in him, who giveth to all liberally, and who willet not our death, but our conversion. He informs us of our freedom of will, by enjoining us to make us a new heart: he would have us to do what we can, and to ask of him what we cannot."

CHAPTER XIX.

The scope of this chapter, like that of the seventeenth, is to foretel and bewail the ruin of the house of David, in the calamitous exit of Josiah's sons, Jehoahaz, Jehoiakim, Zedekiah, and his grandson Jehoiachin, in whom that illustrious line of kings was cut off, which the prophet is here ordered to lament, 1. This he doth by similitudes. (1.) The kingdom of Judah and house of David are here compared to a lioness, and these princes to young lions, fierce and ravenous, but hunted down and taken in nets by the Egyptians and Chaldeans, 2-9. (2.) That kingdom and family are compared to a vine, and these princes to branches which had been strong and flourishing, but either were, or soon would be, broken off and burned, 10-14.

A. M. 3411. MOREOVER, ^atake thou up a lamentation for the princes of Israel,

2 And say, What is thy mother? A lioness: she lay down among lions, she nourished her whelps among young lions.

3 And she brought up one of her whelps: ^bit became a young lion, and it learned to catch the prey; it devoured men.

4 The nations also heard of him; he was taken in their pit, and they brought him with chains unto the land of ^cEgypt.

5 Now when she saw that she had waited, and her hope was lost, then she took ^danother of her whelps, and made him a young lion.

^a Chap. xxvi. 17; xxvii. 2.—^b Verse 6; 2 Kings xxiii. 31, 32.—^c 2 Kings xxiii. 33; 2 Chronicles xxxvi. 4; Jeremiah xxii. 11, 12.—^d 2 Kings xxiii. 34.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XIX.

Verses 1, 2. Take up a lamentation for the princes of Israel—The expression alludes to the mournful songs sung at funerals. Such a lamentation the prophet is directed to apply to the mournful condition of Jehoahaz, Jehoiakim, Jehoiahin, and Zedekiah. And say, What is thy mother?—What resemblance shall I use to express the nature, deportment, and state of the mother of these princes, namely, Judea, or the Jewish nation? The prophet proposes a question that may be applied to each prince distinctly. A lioness—Here is an allusion, says Grotius, to Gen. xlix. 9, where Judah is represented under the emblem of a lion, and Judea was among the nations like a lioness among the beasts of the forest; she had strength and sovereignty. And the young lions which she produced are the princes, Josiah's successors, whose life and disgraces the prophet here points out. She lay down among the lions—She remained in grandeur and security in the neighbourhood of many powerful kings. She nourished her whelps among lions—She multiplied and increased in power, notwithstanding the envy of all the neighbouring nations.

Verses 3, 4. And she brought up one of her whelps—This seems to be spoken of Jehoahaz, who, we are told, followed not the good example of his father Josiah, but the evil practices of the wicked kings his predecessors; and though we have no further account of his acts, yet, from this, there is sufficient reason to suppose that he was rapacious and injurious to his neighbours, and tyrannical and cruel; which possibly was the reason why Pharaoh-necho deposed him after he had reigned only three months, and placed his brother on the throne in his room. The nations also heard of him—The king of Egypt, hearing of his character, and probably some of his subjects having been used ill by him, deprived him of his kingly office, put him in bands, and carried him into Egypt, 2 Kings xxiii. 32, 34. He was taken in their pit—This expression alludes to those

6 ^eAnd he went up and down among the lions, ^fhe became a young lion, and learned to catch the prey, and devoured men.

7 And he knew ¹their desolate palaces, and he laid waste their cities: and the land was desolate, and the fulness thereof, by the noise of his roaring.

8 ^gThen the nations set against him on every side from the provinces, and spread their net over him: ^hhe was taken in their pit.

9 ⁱAnd they put him in ward ²in chains, and brought him to the king of Babylon: they brought him into holds, that his voice should no more be heard upon ^kthe mountains of Israel.

^e Jeremiah xxii. 13-17.—^f Verse 3.—¹ Or, their widows. ^g 2 Kings xxiv. 2.—^h Verse 4.—² 2 Chron. xxxvi. 6; Jer. xxii. 18.—² Or, in hooks.—^k Ezek. vi. 2.

pit-falls and snares which are made to take wild beasts; and as Jehoahaz is spoken of here as a young lion, the expression was quite applicable to signify his being taken prisoner.

Verses 5-9. When she saw that she had waited—This seems to signify that the Jews waited some time before they thought of setting another king over them, hoping, probably, that the king of Egypt would restore unto them Jehoahaz, whom he had taken prisoner; but when they saw their hopes disappointed in this, and that there was no longer any room to expect it, then they, by the consent, and, probably, direction of the king of Egypt, elected Jehoahaz's brother, Eliakim, king in his stead, his name being changed to Jehoiakim. And he went up and down among the lions—He imitated the kings his neighbours, and became rapacious and cruel like them. And learned to catch the prey, &c.—He learned and practised all the methods of tyranny and oppression. And he knew their desolate palaces—Dr. Waterland and Houbigant render it, He destroyed their palaces; and Bishop Newcome, He brought evil upon their palaces. The meaning seems to be, that Jehoiakim made himself master of the riches and pleasant seats of the great men of the land. And the land was desolate, &c., by the noise of his roaring—His cruelty and oppression caused many of the inhabitants of Judea to remove out of it, and go and settle in other places, where they could live more secure. Then the nations set themselves against him, &c.—He was attacked by the Chaldeans, Syrians, Moabites, and Ammonites, and at last the king of Babylon took him prisoner, and carried him in fetters to Babylon: see 2 Chron. xxxvi. 6. That his voice should no more be heard, &c.—That he should be no more a terror to the land of Israel. For Jehoiakim being compared, in the foregoing verses, to a lion, whose voice, or roaring, strikes men with terror; by saying that his voice should no more be heard, is signified that he should be no longer a terror to any in the country.

A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. 10 ¶ Thy mother is ¹ like a vine ² in thy blood, planted by the waters: she was ³ fruitful and full of branches by reason of many waters.

11 And she had strong rods for the sceptres of them that bare rule, and her ⁴ stature was exalted among the thick branches, and she appeared in her height with the multitude of her branches.

12 But she was plucked up in fury, she was cast down to the ground, and the ⁵ east wind dried up her fruit: her strong rods were broken and withered; the fire consumed them.

13 And now she is planted in the wilderness, in a dry and thirsty ground.

14 ¶ And fire is gone out of a rod of her branches, which hath devoured her fruit, so that she hath no strong rod to be a sceptre to rule. ¶ This is a lamentation, and shall be for a lamentation.

¹ Chapter xvii. 6.—² Or, in thy quietness, or, in thy likeness. ³ Deut. viii. 7, 8, 9.—⁴ So Chap. xxxi. 3; Dan. iv. 11.

⁵ Chap. xvii. 10; Hos. xiii. 15.—⁶ Judg. ix. 15; 2 Kings xxiv. 20; Chap. xvii. 18.—⁷ Lam. iv. 20.

Verses 10–14. Thy mother is like a vine—Here another similitude is made use of, and the Jewish nation is compared, as it frequently is in other places, to a vine. In thy blood—So the Hebrew and Vulgate; but the LXX. read, ως ανθος εν ποα, as a flower on a pomegranate-tree; and Bishop Newcome, who supposes the LXX. to have read ברכן, and not ברך, renders the clause, like a pomegranate, planted by the waters, &c.—“The Jewish nation, whence the royal family had their original, was like a fruitful vine in a very flourishing condition.” And she had strong rods, &c.—From her sprung valiant princes, fit to sway the sceptre. A rod or sceptre is, an emblem of authority. Her stature was exalted among the thick branches—Among the neighbouring kings and princes: see 2 Chron. xxxii. 23. The increase of the nation’s power is expressed by this. But she was plucked up in fury—God, in his anger, removed her out of her own land. She was cast down to the ground—She was reduced to a contemptible state.

The east wind dried up her fruit—The Chaldean forces ravaged and depopulated the country; her strong rods were broken—Her kings and princes were subdued, and made captives. The fire consumed them—The divine anger brought them to destruction, as fire consumes the branches of a tree when it is withered. And now she is planted in the wilderness—A great part of her people are carried captive, where their condition is as much different from what it was formerly, as the condition of a tree is when it is removed out of a rich soil into a dry and barren ground. The Jews suffered several captivities before that final one which ended in the destruction of their temple and government. And fire is gone out of a rod of her branches—This is spoken of Zedekiah’s breaking his oath of fidelity to the king of Babylon, which was the occasion of the destruction of the royal family, and the entire ruin of the government. This is a lamentation, &c.—This is matter of present lamentation, and shall be so to after ages.

CHAPTER XX.

The prophet, consulted by some of the elders of Israel, (1.) Signifies God’s displeasure against them, 1–3. (2.) Gives them a history of God’s dealings with their fathers, and of their treacherous dealings with God in Egypt, 4–9. In the wilderness, 10–26. In Canaan, 27–32. (3.) He denounces the judgments of God against them, 33–36. (4.) Promises mercy to a remnant in God’s bringing them to repentance, re-establishing them in their own land, and restoring his sanctuary among them, 37–44. (5.) By a parable he predicts the burning of Jerusalem, and other cities of Judah, and the destruction of all ranks of people in the land, 45–49.

A. M. 3412. B. C. 592. AND it came to pass in the seventh year, in the fifth month, the tenth day of the month, that ^a certain of the elders of Israel came to inquire of the LORD, and sat before me.

^a Chap. viii. 1;

2 Then came the word of the LORD A. M. 3412. B. C. 592. unto me, saying,

3 Son of man, speak unto the elders of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Are ye come to inquire of me? As I live, saith Chap. xiv. 1.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XX.

Verses 1–3. It came to pass in the seventh year, &c.—Namely, of Jehoiakim’s captivity. All the prophecies recorded from the eighth chapter to this, probably belong to the sixth year of that captivity.

Certain of the elders came to inquire, &c.—Came to me, as the prophet of God, to inquire what would be the event of their affairs; when they might expect deliverance from their calamities, and by what means. I will not be inquired of by you—I will give

A. M. 3412. the Lord God, ^b I will not be in-
B. C. 592. quired of by you.

4 Wilt thou ¹ judge ^c them, son of man? wilt thou judge them? ^d cause them to know the abominations of their fathers:

5 ¶ And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; In the day when ^e I chose Israel, and ² lifted up my hand unto the seed of the house of Jacob, and made myself ^f known unto them in the land of Egypt, when I lifted up my hand unto them, saying, ^g I am the LORD your God;

^b Verse 31; Chap. xiv. 3.—¹ Or, plead for them.—^c Chap. xxii. 2; xxiii. 36.—^d Chap. xvi. 2.—^e Exodus vi. 7; Deut. vii. 6.—² Or, swear, and so verse 6; Exod. vi. 8.—^f Exod. iii. 8; iv. 31; Deut. iv. 34.—^g Exod. xx. 2.

you no information concerning the things about which you come to inquire: or, you shall not receive such an answer as you expect, but such as your hypocrisy deserves.

Verse 4. Wilt thou judge them—Or, rather, Wilt thou not judge them? Wilt thou not reprove, or condemn them? Wilt thou not denounce my judgments against them? Cause them to know the abominations of their fathers—The abominable crimes of which their fathers have been guilty, and which they themselves, and the present generation of Jews, have also committed with fresh aggravations: and hereby let them know what they have to expect. This whole chapter is a kind of decree, in which the prophet, after having set forth the crimes of the Jews, pronounces against them their reprobation, and foretels what blessings God would bestow on a faithful people who should serve him truly on his holy mountain.

Verse 5. In the day when I chose Israel—When I entered into a solemn covenant. And lifted up my hand, &c.—That is, sware unto them, this being a gesture used in swearing: see the margin, and notes on Gen. xiv. 22, and Psa. cxliv. 8. “Among the Jews the juror held up his right hand toward heaven; which explains Psa. cxliv. 8, Whose mouth speaketh vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of falsehood. The same form is retained in Scotland still.”—Paley’s Moral and Political Philosophy, p. 159. This manner of taking an oath is mentioned by Homer, Εὐχέτο χεῖρας ἀνασχών, which shows it to have been of great antiquity, even among the heathen. It was a solemn appeal to God, as the author of truth, and the defender thereof, and also the judge of the heart; implying a wish in the person swearing, that God would take vengeance if the truth was either violated or concealed. Some think, however, that lifting up the hand in this place means giving them help and deliverance: but the 15th and 23d verses evidently confirm the former explication. And made myself known unto them—By appearing unto Moses, and showing myself present among them, by the wonders I wrought for their deliverance. Saying, I am the Lord your God—I am the God whom you ought to serve, and none else.

6 In the day that I lifted up my ^h hand unto them, ^h to bring them forth ⁱ of the land of Egypt into a land that I had espied for them, flowing with milk and honey, ⁱ which is the glory of all lands:

7 Then said I unto them, ^k Cast ye away every man ^l the abominations of his eyes, and defile not yourselves with ^m the idols of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.

8 But they rebelled against me, and would not hearken unto me; they did not every man

^h Exod. iii. 8, 17; Deut. viii. 7, 8, 9; Jer. xxxii. 22.—ⁱ Psa. xlviii. 2; Verse 15; Daniel viii. 9; xi. 16, 41; Zech. vii. 14. ^k Chap. xviii. 31.—^l 2 Chron. xv. 8.—^m Lev. xvii. 7; xviii. 3; Deut. xxix. 16, 17, 18; Josh. xxiv. 14.

Verse 6. To bring them into a land that I had espied for them—Which I chose out of all others to bestow it upon them. So God is said to go before them, to search out a place to pitch their tents in, Deut. i. 33. The expressions import, that every step the people took, till their settlement in the land of Canaan, was under the immediate care and conduct of providence. Flowing with milk and honey—Judea is often called a land flowing with milk and honey, both on account of its own fruitfulness, and also from God’s peculiar blessing upon it: see Deut. xi. 12. The great number of inhabitants which it nourished is an evident proof of its fertility. Bochart observes, that this phrase occurs about twenty times in the Scriptures; and that it is an image frequently used in the classics: as Πει δε γαλακτι πεδον, ρει δ’ οινω, ρει δε μελισσων νεκταρι. The land flows with milk, flows with wine, flows with nectar of bees. Eurip. Bacch. 142. Which is the glory of all lands—The Hebrew, צבי היא לכל הארצות, may either mean, that this circumstance of flowing with milk and honey is a glory to all lands, namely, in which it is found; or, that Judea was the glory of all lands. The Vulgate takes it in the latter sense, rendering the clause, Quæ est egregia inter omnes terras, which is excellent among all lands. Judea might justly be called the glory of all lands, because it was the place where the temple of the true God was fixed, Psa. xlviii. 2, 3; Dan. xi. 16, 41, 45.

Verses 7–9. Cast ye away every man the abominations of his eyes—The idols to which your eyes are lifted up. One of the chief allurements to the worship of images is, that by way of indulgence to men’s imagination, they exhibit a visible object of adoration. This was what the Israelites were so fond of, when they said to Aaron, Make us gods to go before us, Exod. xxxii. 1. And defile not yourselves with the idols of Egypt—It is generally supposed that the Israelites, while they dwelt in Egypt, learned the idolatry of that country: the fact indeed is not recorded in the books of Moses; but it may be collected from their proneness to that sin in the wilderness. But they rebelled against me—The history of the rebellions of the children of Israel begins as early as their beginning. So does the history of

A. M. 3412. cast away the abominations of their eyes, neither did they forsake the idols of Egypt: then I said, I will ^apour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the midst of the land of Egypt.
B. C. 592.

9 ^o But I wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted before the heathen, among whom they were, in whose sight I made myself known unto them, in bringing them forth out of the land of Egypt.

^a Chap. vii. 8; Verses 13, 21.—^o Exodus xxxii. 12; Num. xiv. 13; Deut. ix. 28; Verses 14, 22; Chapter xxxvi. 21, 22. ^p Exod. xiii. 18.—^q Deut. iv. 8; Nehemiah ix. 13, 14; Psalm

10 Wherefore, I ^pcaused them to A. M. 3412.
go forth out of the land of Egypt, and B. C. 592.
brought them into the wilderness.

11 ^a And I gave them my statutes, and ³showed them my judgments, ^rwhich if a man do, he shall even live in them.

12 Moreover, also I gave them my ^ssabbaths, to be a sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the LORD that sanctify them.

cxlvii. 19, 20.—³ Heb. made them to know.—^r Lev. xviii. 5; Verses 13, 21; Rom. x. 5; Gal. iii. 12.—^s Exod. xx. 8; xxxi. 13; xxxv. 2; Deut. v. 12; Neh. ix. 14.

man's apostasy from his Maker. No sooner have we read the story of his creation than we meet with that of his rebellion. So we see here it was with Israel; a people designed to represent the body of mankind, both in their dealings with God, and in God's dealings with them. Then I said, I threatened, I will pour out my fury upon them—Such a threatening as this is nowhere recorded in the Scriptures no more than that which follows verse 23 of this chapter. Without question God might have justly cut them off in Egypt for their idolatries and other sins which they had committed, and never exerted his power for their deliverance. But I wrought for my name's sake—For the glory of my mercy and faithfulness. That it should not be polluted before the heathen—Reproached and blasphemed. This is elsewhere assigned as the reason why God did not punish the Israelites according to their deserts, namely, because it would have turned to God's dishonour in the judgment of the heathen world, as if he had not been able to make good those promises which he had given them. This was a proper consideration to check the vain presumption of the Jews, who imagined that God's gracious dealings with them were owing to their own merits.

Verses 10, 11. Wherefore I caused them to go forth out of Egypt—Removed all obstacles, furnished them with all necessities, went before them, and showed them the way they should go, Exod. xiii. 17; and brought them into the wilderness—It was not Moses's error, though Pharaoh thought so, Exod. xiv. 3, 4, but the peculiar conduct of God that brought them thither. And I gave them my statutes—A favour not afforded to other nations: see Deut. iv. 8; Psal. cxlvii. 20. This was a treasure which David declared he prized above thousands of gold and silver, Psal. cxix. 72. Which if a man do, he shall even live in them—That is, in keeping God's commandments there is abundance of comfort, and a great reward. "By life is generally meant, in the Old Testament, all that happiness which is contained in the literal sense of the promises belonging to that covenant. Under these were mystically comprehended the promises of a better life, wherein God will bestow upon his servants the peculiar marks of his favour, Psal. xvi. 11. These promises were made to the Jews upon condition of their punctual obedience to the whole law, Lev. xviii. 5, and xxvi. 2, &c.; Deut. xxvii. 26. And several persons under that dispensation are styled blameless, by reason of the sincerity of their obedience, though it was not perfect, or unsinning: see Luke i. 6; Phil. iii. 6. But if we understand the forementioned condition in its rigorous sense, as implying a perfectly exact and unsinning obedience; and as the word life contains the promise of eternal life under it; (a promise which the pious Jews expected, and hoped to obtain, Matt. xix. 16, 17; Acts xxvi. 6, 7;) as it was impossible to be performed, so no person could lay claim to eternal life by virtue of any promise therein contained; from whence St. Paul infers the necessity of seeking to Christ, and laying hold on the promises in the gospel, for the obtaining of justification and eternal life."⁷—Lowth. It must always be remembered, that the promises of spiritual blessings that we find in the Old Testament, such as pardon, acceptance with God, the Holy Spirit, sanctification, &c., belong to the gospel, or covenant of grace, as much as those in the New Testament: see 2 Cor. i. 20; Heb. vi. 17, 18; viii. 10–12; xi. 13.

Verse 12. Moreover, I gave them my sabbaths—Including the weekly sabbaths, the sabbatical years, and all the solemn days of divine worship, in which no servile work was to be done: to be a sign between me and them—A sign of their being peculiarly my people, and to distinguish them from all other people, as the worshippers of me, Jehovah, who in six days made heaven and earth, and all things therein, and rested the seventh day; and also of my delivering them out of their state of bondage in Egypt. That they might know that I am the Lord that sanctifies them—That by their resting on those days from their usual employments, and their coming together to wait upon me in the ordinances of my worship, they might become more acquainted with me, and with my will concerning them, and might receive a larger measure of my sanctifying grace. Observe, reader, 1st, Sabbaths are privileges, and are to be considered and improved as such. 2d, They are signs: it is a sign men have a sense of religion, and that there is some correspondence between them and God, while they make conscience of keeping holy the sabbath day. 3d, Sabbaths, if duly sanctified, are the means of our sanctification: if we do

A. M. 3412. 13 ¶ But the house of Israel ^{re-}belled against me in the wilderness: they walked not in my statutes, and they ^udespised my judgments, which if a man do, he shall even live in them: and my sabbaths they greatly ^zpolluted: then I said, I would pour out my fury upon them in the ^ywilderness, to consume them.

14 ^z But I wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted before the heathen, in whose sight I brought them out.

15 Yet also ^a I lifted up my hand unto them in the wilderness, that I would not bring them into the land which I had given them, flowing with milk and honey, ^b which is the glory of all lands;

16 ^c Because they despised my judgments, and walked not in my statutes, but polluted my sabbaths: for ^d their heart went after their idols.

^t Num. xiv. 22; Psa. lxxviii. 40; xcv. 8, 9, 10.—^u Verses 16, 24; Prov. i. 25.—^x Exod. xvi. 27.—^y Numbers xiv. 29; xxvi. 65; Psa. cvi. 23.—^z Verses 9, 22.—^a Numbers xiv. 29; Psa. xcv. 11; cvi. 26.—^b Verse 6.—^c Verses 13, 24.

the duty of the day, we shall find to our comfort; it is the Lord that sanctifies us; makes us holy, that is, truly happy, here; and prepares us to be happy, that is, perfectly holy, hereafter.

Verses 13-17. But the house of Israel—Not a few, but the generality of the people; rebelled against me—Were undutiful, disobedient, contumacious, and even openly and repeatedly rebellious; in the wilderness—Where they were receiving daily and great mercies from me; where they were on their way to Canaan, and were peculiarly dependant upon me for direction in the way, protection from their enemies, and the supply of all their wants; where they most needed my care and favour, and where the preserving their lives from being destroyed by noxious creatures and by famine, in that barren, desolate, and howling desert, required and was a continued miracle. They walked not in my statutes—Given them as the rule of their conduct toward me and one another. And they despised my judgments—Slighted them first as of little excellence, and then refused and cast them off. They who disobey God's statutes despise them; they show by their disobedience that they have a mean opinion of them, and of him whose statutes they are. And my sabbaths they greatly polluted—That is, profaned, neglecting the duties enjoined to be done on those holy days, and employing them in worldly business, in pursuing sensual gratifications, or in practising secret idolatry and other wickedness. But I wrought, &c.—See on verse 9. Yet I lifted up my hand, &c.—I solemnly swore (see verse 5) they should not enter into that rest I had designed for them. So all the murmuring, disobedient, unbeliev-

17 ^e Nevertheless mine eye spared ^f them from destroying them, neither ^g did I make an end of them in the wilderness.

18 But I said unto their children in the wilderness, Walk ye not in the statutes of your fathers, neither observe their judgments, nor defile yourselves with their idols:

19 I am the LORD your God; ^f walk in my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them;

20 ^g And hallow my sabbaths; and they shall be a sign between me and you, that ye may know that I am the LORD your God.

21 Notwithstanding, ^h the children rebelled against me: they walked not in my statutes, neither kept my judgments to do them, ⁱ which if a man do, he shall even live in them: they polluted my sabbaths: then I said, ^k I would pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the wilderness.

^d Num. xv. 39; Psa. lxxviii. 37; Amos v. 25, 26; Acts vii. 42, 43.—^e Psa. lxxviii. 38.—^f Deut. v. 32, 33; vi. vii.; viii.; x.; xi.; xii.—^g Verse 12; Jer. xvii. 22.—^h Num. xxv. 1, 2; Deut. ix. 23, 24; xxxi. 27.—ⁱ Ver. 11, 13.—^k Verses 8, 13.

ing generation was excluded, and their children were brought in. Because they despised, &c.—See on verse 13. For their heart went after their idols—They were still inclined to the idolatries which they had learned in Egypt, to which they added new idols, which they had seen in the countries through which they travelled, namely, the idols of the Midianites, Amorites, &c.: see the margin. Nevertheless, mine eye spared them—Though they did highly provoke me, and deserved to be all cut off, I had great patience with them, often reprieved them after sentence of condemnation was passed, and bore with their untoward manners, till a new and better disposed generation arose, to whom I could, consistently with my holiness, fulfil my promises made to their fathers.

Verses 18-24. But I said unto their children in the wilderness—In the plains of Moab; Walk ye not in the statutes of your fathers—Imitate not their superstitious usages, nor retain their foolish and wicked customs, but walk in the statutes of your God. This refers to the many pathetic exhortations contained in the book of Deuteronomy, particularly those in chapters twenty-ninth to the thirty-second, which were uttered after that rebellious generation were all consumed, according as God had threatened them. Notwithstanding, the children rebelled against me—Even that generation which I afterward permitted to enter Canaan, and which I rendered victorious over all the inhabitants of that land, was guilty of many instances of disobedience and rebellion. The chief instance of that generation's contumacy and inclination to idolatry, was the iniquity of Peor, (Num. xxv. 3,) as that of their

A. M. 3412. 22 ¹ Nevertheless, I withdrew my
B. C. 592. hand, and ^m wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted in the sight of the heathen, in whose sight I brought them forth.

23 I lifted up my hand unto them also in the wilderness, that ⁿ I would scatter them among the heathen, and disperse them through the countries ;

24 ^o Because they had not executed my judgments, but had despised my statutes, and had polluted my sabbaths, and ^p their eyes were after their fathers' idols.

25 Wherefore ^q I gave them also statutes that were not good, and judgments whereby they should not live ;

26 And I polluted them in their own gifts, in fathers was the golden calf. Then the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel: then there was a plague in the congregation of the Lord, which, if it had not been seasonably stayed by Phinehas's zeal, had cut them all off; and yet they owned in Joshua's time that they were not cleansed from that iniquity unto that day, Josh. xxii. 17. Then it was that God said he would pour out his fury upon them, verse 21; that he lifted up his hand, &c., in the wilderness—When they were a second time just ready to enter into Canaan; that he would scatter them among the heathen—This very thing he said to them by Moses in his parting song, (Deut. xxxii. 20, 26, 27,) which explains this passage.

¹ Psalm lxxviii. 38 ; Verse 17.—^m Verses 9, 14.—ⁿ Lev. xxvi. 33 ; Deut. xxviii. 64 ; Psa. cvi. 27 ; Jer. xv. 4.—^o Verses 13, 16.—^p Chap. vi. 9.—^q Psa. lxxxi. 12 ; Verse 39 ; Rom. i. 24 ; 2 Thess. ii. 11.

Verses 25, 26. Wherefore I gave them statutes that were not good, &c.—This some understand of the ceremonial law, as if it were given purely to be a check and restraint to that perverse people, consisting of numerous rites and observances, many of which had no intrinsic good in them. "But I conceive," says Lowth, "the statutes here spoken of to be of a different nature from those mentioned verse 11, because they have a quite contrary character given of them; and therefore I take the words to import, that God, in a just judgment for their disobedience to his own laws, gave them up to a reprobate mind, and suffered them to walk after the idolatrous and impious customs of the heathen around them. And whereas, by obeying the laws and ordinances which he had given them, they might have lived happily, (verse 11,) they became slaves to the vile and cruel practices of the heathen idolatries, so as to offer up their very children in sacrifice to idols, to the utter destruction of themselves and their posterity, verse 26. This will appear to be the sense of the text, if we compare it with verse 39, and with Deut. iv. 28 ; xxviii. 36 ; Jer. xvi. 13 ; in which texts God threatens them, as a punishment for their neglect that they caused to pass ^r through the fire all that openeth the womb, that I might make them desolate, to the end that they ^s might know that I am the Lord.

27 ¶ Therefore, son of man, speak unto the house of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Yet in this your fathers have ^t blasphemed me, in that they have ^u committed a trespass against me.

28 For when I had brought them into the land, for the which I lifted up my hand to give it to them, then ^v they saw every high hill, and all the thick trees, and they offered there their sacrifices, and there they presented the provocation of their offering: there also they made their ^w sweet savour, and poured out there their drink-offerings.

^r 2 Kings xvii. 17 ; xxi. 6 ; 2 Chron. xxviii. 3 ; xxxiii. 6 ; Jer. xxxii. 35 ; Chap. xvi. 20, 21.—^s Chap. vi. 7.—^t Rom. ii. 24. ^u Heb. trespassed a trespass.—^v Isa. lviii. 5, &c. ; Chap. vi. 13. ^w Chap. xvi. 19.

of his worship, to disperse them into the heathen countries, and thereby deprive them of an opportunity of serving him in public, and expose them to the peril of being seduced to idols. Just as David complains to Saul of the hardship of his exile, that it laid him open to the temptation of serving the heathen gods, 1 Sam. xxvi. 19." In the same light Bishop Newcome views the passage, interpreting the sense to be, "I permitted them to observe statutes, or idolatrous rites, of an evil and execrable nature." And I polluted them in their own gifts—I suffered them to pollute themselves in offering abominable sacrifices. In that they caused to pass through the fire, &c.—In offering their firstborn sons in sacrifice to Moloch. That I might make them desolate—Which occasioned the destruction of great numbers of them, and made a desolation in the land. That they might know that I am the Lord—This I permitted, that they might be made sensible that I am the living and true God, and a being infinitely more excellent than any or all of the idols, to the worship of which they had foolishly addicted themselves: or, that they might be compelled to acknowledge, that I am a mighty king in punishing those that would not have me for a gracious king in governing them.

Verses 27–29. Therefore, son of man, speak, &c.—Here the prophet proceeds with the story of their rebellions for their further humiliation, and shows that they persisted in them after they were settled in the land of Canaan. Thus saith the Lord, Yet in this, &c.—Or, Moreover in this, your fathers have blasphemed me—Have dishonoured me in acting contrary to my commandments. For when I had brought them into the land, &c.—As soon as they were settled in the land promised to Abraham and his seed; then they saw every high hill, &c.—When they saw the high hills and shady groves, they made

A. M. 3412. 29 Then ^e I said unto them, What
B. C. 592. is the high place whereunto ye go?
and the name thereof is called Bamah unto this day.

30 ¶ Wherefore, say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God; Are ye polluted after the manner of your fathers? and commit ye whoredom after their abomi-
nations?

31 For when ye offer ^v your gifts, when ye make your sons to pass through the fire, ye pollute yourselves with all your idols, even unto this day: and ^z shall I be inquired of by you, O house of Israel? As I live, saith the Lord God, I will not be inquired of by you.

32 And that ^a which cometh into your mind shall not be at all, that ye say, We will be as

^e Or, I told them what the high place was, or, Bamah.—^v Verse 26.—^z Verse 3.

choice of them as proper places whereon to erect altars for the worship of idols. The Jews were wont to offer sacrifices upon mountains or high places to the true God before the temple was built, 1 Kings iii. 2; 5. And this custom was afterward permitted by godly kings, who were zealous in putting down all sorts of idolatry, 1 Kings xv. 14; and xxii. 43; 2 Chron. xxxiii. 17. But by degrees those places became appropriated to idolatrous worship, and upon that score are severely condemned. There they presented the provocation of their offering—There they presented the offerings whereby they provoked me. This, being distinguished from their sacrifices already mentioned, is to be understood of their meat-offerings, of which see the note on Lev. ii. 1. These were especially styled offerings of a sweet savour. Then I said, What is the high place whereunto ye go?—What mean you that you go to the high place? What do you find so inviting there, that you will leave my altar, where I require your attendance, to frequent such places as I have forbidden you to worship in, and which I will avenge? And the name thereof is called Bamah—That is, the high place; unto this day—“Notwithstanding my reproof, the name continues, and the practice, unto this day.” So Bishop Newcome, who adds, “It may be doubted whether the last six (Hebrew words) of this verse have not been taken into the text from the margin, where they anciently stood as a note.” “All the old versions have this verse, which yet seems out of its place here. If the verse should stand, it relates to something not to be explained now.”—Secker.

Verses 30-32. Say unto the house of Israel—To the elders now sitting before thee, and through them to the rest of their brethren; Are ye polluted after the manner of your fathers—After all that God hath said to and against you by a succession of prophets, and done against you by a series of judgments, yet will you take no warning? Will you still be as the heathen, as the families of the A. M. 3412. countries to serve wood and stone. B. C. 592.

33 ¶ As I live, saith the Lord God, surely with a mighty hand, and ^b with a stretched-out arm, and with fury poured out, will I rule over you:

34 And I will bring you out from the people, and will gather you out of the countries where-in ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with fury poured out.

35 And I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, and there ^c will I plead with you face to face.

36 ^d Like as I pleaded with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so will I plead with you, saith the Lord God.

^a Chapter xi. 5.—^b Jer. xxi. 5.—^c Jer. ii. 9, 35; Chap. xvii. 20.—^d Num. xiv. 21, 22, 23, 28, 29.

wicked as your fathers were, and commit the same abominations that they committed? Some prefer rendering the words, Are ye not polluted, and do ye not commit whoredom, &c.? Do ye not walk in your fathers' sins and idolatries, notwithstanding all the warnings I have given you, and the severe instances of my displeasure against their practices, which ought to have terrified you from following their bad example? For when ye offer your gifts, &c., ye pollute yourselves—You render yourselves filthy and abominable in my sight. And shall I be inquired of by you—Are you fit to come and ask counsel of me, whom you have so shamefully and so obstinately forsaken and reproached? I will not be inquired of by you—I will answer you as little as you regard me. And that which cometh into your mind shall not be at all—Shall be quite frustrated. God, to convince them, here tells them what was in their thoughts, and what they had purposed. We find by the Scripture history, that the Jews had all along a fond desire of worshipping the gods of their neighbours, and could not bear that imputation of singularity, which their peculiar way of worship exposed them to. They thought also by this means to live more quietly among the heathen whither they were led captive. God tells them here that he would prevent this purpose of theirs from taking effect. And we find, from the very time of their return from the Babylonish captivity, they have been very cautious of committing idolatry, and scrupulous of making the least approaches to it.—Lowth.

Verses 33-36. Surely with a mighty hand, &c.—I will no longer try to reclaim you by the gentle methods of patience and forbearance, but will govern you, as masters do bad servants, by stripes and corrections; and by this means cure you of your inclinations to the heathen customs and idolatries. And I will bring you out from the people—With whom you now live mixed, and whose manners and customs

A. M. 3412. 37 And I will cause you to ^e pass
B. C. 592. under the rod, and I will bring you into ^e the bond of the covenant :

38 And ^f I will purge out from among you the rebels, and them that transgress against me : I will bring them forth out of the country where they sojourn, and ^g they shall not enter into the land of Israel : ^h and ye shall know that I am
the LORD.

39 As for you, O house of Israel, thus saith the Lord God ; ⁱ Go ye, serve ye every one his idols, and hereafter also, if ye will not

^e Leviticus xxvii. 32 ; Jer. xxxiii. 13.—^f Or, a delivering.
^f Chapter xxxiv. 17, 20 ; Matt. xxv. 32, 33.—^g Jer. xlv. 14.
^h Chap. vi. 7 ; xv. 7 ; xxiii. 49.—ⁱ Judges x. 14 ; Psalm lxxxii.
12 ; Amos iv. 4.

you follow. The Moabites, Ammonites, and other neighbouring nations, seem to be intended, into whose countries many of the Jews were carried captive, or went as voluntary exiles, before the general captivity by the Chaldeans. God here declares he will bring them thence, and carry them to Babylon. And I will bring you into the wilderness— Between Judea and Babylon, through which ye shall pass into captivity. Or, as some think, the barren lands in which the Babylonians planted these captives are meant. "The wilderness of the people," says Michaelis, "is the desert in the neighbourhood of the Chaldeans, and of other nations. And there will I plead with you face to face—Convince you of your sins, execute judgments on you, and thereby most plainly manifest my justice to you. "I will punish you in the face of the world, and fill you with conviction that my punishments are just."—Bishop Newcome. Like as I pleaded with your fathers— Punished them for their sins ; in the wilderness of the land of Egypt—That is, the wilderness bordering upon Egypt. As I there set the crimes of your fathers before their eyes, so that they were not able to deny their guilt, nor to say any thing against the justice of the punishment inflicted on them, so will I deal with you.

Verses 37, 38. I will cause you to pass under the rod—Of punishment. I will bring you under the chastisement due to you for breaking my covenant.
Or there may be an allusion to the custom of numbering flocks and herds, by striking them with a rod :
and so the sense will be, "I will take an exact account of you, as a shepherd does of his flock, and will sever between the good and the bad, between the sheep and the goats." And I will bring you into the bond of the covenant—By these methods I will reduce you to that obedience to which, by my covenant, you are obliged. And I will purge out from among you the rebels—I will separate the righteous from the wicked, in order to destroy the latter, as I did the rebellious Israelites in the wilderness. I will bring them forth out of the country, &c.—I will bring them (namely, the rebels, or wicked ones) forth out of the land of Judea, where they now sojourn, and where they boast that they shall always continue ; and they shall not enter into the land of Israel—They shall never return into it again.

Bishop Newcome thinks "those are here referred to,
who, after the murder of Gedaliah, went into Egypt, called here the land of their sojourning. Some of these were to be carried into Chaldaea with the captive Egyptians, Jer. xliii. 11, though the greater part were to be consumed, Jer. xlv. 12. Some of the obstinately rebellious Jews might also sojourn in other neighbouring countries subdued by Nebuchadnezzar, as Edom, Moab, Ammon, Tyre, &c., and might thence be taken into captivity. The small number who returned from Egypt into Judea were righteous men, and not such as are here called rebels
and transgressors."

40 For ¹ in my holy mountain, in the mountain of the height of Israel, saith the Lord God, there shall all the house of Israel, all of them in the land, serve me : there ^m will I accept them, and there will I require your offerings, and the ⁿ first-fruits of your oblations, with all your holy things.

41 I will accept you with your ^s sweet ⁿ savour, when I bring you out from the people,

^k Isa. i. 13 ; Chap. xxiii. 39, 39.—^l Isa. ii. 2, 4 ; Chap. xvii.
23 ; Micah iv. 1.—^m Isaiah lvi. 7 ; lx. 7 ; Zech. viii. 20, &c. ; Mal. iii. 4 ; Rom. xii. 1.—ⁿ Or, chief.—^o Heb. savour of rest.
^a Eph. v. 2 ; Phil. iv. 18.

ed ones) forth out of the land of Judea, where they
now sojourn, and where they boast that they shall always continue ; and they shall not enter into the land of Israel—They shall never return into it again.
Bishop Newcome thinks "those are here referred to,
who, after the murder of Gedaliah, went into Egypt,
called here the land of their sojourning. Some of these were to be carried into Chaldaea with the captive Egyptians, Jer. xliii. 11, though the greater part were to be consumed, Jer. xlv. 12. Some of the obstinately rebellious Jews might also sojourn in
other neighbouring countries subdued by Nebuchadnezzar, as Edom, Moab, Ammon, Tyre, &c., and might thence be taken into captivity. The small number who returned from Egypt into Judea were righteous men, and not such as are here called rebels
and transgressors."

Verse 39. As for you, O house of Israel, go ye, serve, &c.—Go at present, and serve your idols ;
persist in your idolatries, agreeably to the stubbornness of your hearts. An indignant concession And hereafter also, if ye will not hearken unto me —And continue to do so if you are resolved not to do according to my commandments, or to worship me as I have appointed. But pollute ye my holy name no more, &c.—While you are such idolaters, forbear to take my name into your lips. In other words, While you offer your gifts, and immolate your children to idols, do not call yourselves any longer my servants, nor pretend to pay your devotions in my temple, and thereby bring a reproach upon my name and worship.

Verses 40–42. For in my holy mountain, &c.—
The holy hill of Zion, holy through God's appointing it for the place of his temple. The mountain of the height of Israel—See chap. xvii. 23 ; Mic.
iv. 1. Though mount Zion was not one of the highest mountains of Israel, yet God manifesting his presence there in his temple, it was more honoured than any of their other mountains. Lowth, and several other commentators, think the Christian Church is here meant, and termed God's holy mountain in allusion to the temple at Jerusalem, built upon

A. M. 3412. and gather you out of the countries
B. C. 592. wherein ye have been scattered; and I will be sanctified in you before the heathen.

42 ° And ye shall know that I am the LORD,
° when I shall bring you into the land of Israel, into the country for the which I lifted up my hand to give it to your fathers.

43 And ° there shall ye remember your ways, and all your doings wherein ye have been defiled; and ° ye shall loathe yourselves in your own sight for all your evils that ye have committed.

44 ° And ye shall know that I am the LORD,

° Verses 38, 44; Chapter xxxvi. 23; xxxviii. 23.—° Chap. xi.
17; xxxiv. 13; xxxvi. 24.—° Chap. xvi. 61.

mount Moriah, a part of mount Zion; (see notes on chap. xvii. 23, and Isa. ii. 2;) and that the prophet here foretels the conversion of the Jews to Christianity, and their union with the converted Gentiles in the church of God. At the same time, however, they suppose that, upon their conversion and return to their own country, certain privileges shall belong to the earthly Jerusalem, as the metropolis of that nation. There shall all the house of Israel, all of them, serve me—That is, all the house of Israel that are restored, shall serve me in Jerusalem. There shall be no more any such separation as when the ten tribes forsook the worship of God at Jerusalem.
There will I accept them, and there will I require your offerings, &c.—Requiring signifies the same with accepting, by a metonymy of the cause for the effect; just as seeking is sometimes used for finding: see Isaiah lxx. 1. In the same sense, God is said not to require such instances of worship as he takes no delight in, Isa. i. 11. Offerings signify in general every thing devoted to God's service.
Those who suppose that the prophet is here foretelling the conversion of the Jews to Christianity, consider him as "expressing the Christian worship by those religious oblations which were proper to his own time; as the other prophets frequently describe the state of the Christian Church, by representations taken from the Jewish temple and service."—See Lowth. I will accept you with your sweet savour—This is mentioned in opposition to the sweet savour of their offerings to idols. The words may be rendered, I will be pleased with you, as with a sweet savour; or, as with the savour of an offering of atonement. When I bring you out— Or, as it may be better rendered, When I have brought you out from the people; that is, either, 1st, When I have brought you back out of captivity to your own land; or, 2d, When I have converted you to Christ, and united you to the Christian Church.
And I will be sanctified in you before the heathen—
I shall procure honour to my name by the wonderful works, whether of justice or mercy, which I will show toward you; and the nations shall consider me as a great and holy God, when they shall observe when I have wrought with you ° for A. M. 3412.

my name's sake, not according to your B. C. 592.
wicked ways, nor according to your corrupt doings, O ye house of Israel, saith the Lord God.

45 ¶ Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

46 ° Son of man, set thy face toward the south, and drop thy word toward the south, and prophesy against the forest of the south field;

47 And say to the forest of the south, Hear the word of the LORD; Thus saith the Lord God;

° Lev. xxvi. 39; Chap. vi. 9; Hos. v. 15.—° Verse 38; Chap.
xxiv. 24.—° Chap. xxxvii. 22.—° Chap. vi. 2; xxi. 2.

my deliverance of you, and your obedience to me.
And ye shall know that I am the Lord—Or, Jehovah; that is, He who causeth that to be which he hath said SHALL BE, and who fulfilleth his promises.
When I shall bring you into the country, &c.—Into the land which I swear to give to your fathers and their posterity: see verse 5.

Verses 43, 44. And there shall ye remember your ways—There, in my holy mountain, in Zion, when you are restored to your own land; and more especially in the Christian Church, when, in consequence of your conversion, you enter into it, and enjoy the privileges of it, ye shall remember and be humbled on account of your doings, whereby you have been defiled. When you find how gracious I am to you, notwithstanding your long-continued disobedience and repeated rebellions, you will be overcome with my kindness, and blush to think of your refractory conduct toward so good a God. And ye shall loathe yourselves in your own sight—See notes on chap. vi. 9, and xvi. 63. Thus the prophet foretels that the restoration of the Jews to their own land would be accompanied with a general repentance, and a deep remorse for their former misdoings.
And we find, from the books of Ezra and Nehemiah, that this was in fact the case with multitudes of them: they fasted and made public confessions of their sins upon their returning to Judea, and entered into a general and solemn engagement to be obedient to God, and observe his laws for the future. And, undoubtedly, this humiliation, godly sorrow, and true repentance, will more especially take place, and be more abundantly manifested in and among that people, when they shall be converted to Christianity in the latter days.

Verses 45–49. Moreover, the word of the Lord, &c.—Here we have a new prophecy, with which Houbigant, following many learned commentators, begins the xxiist chapter, and that very properly; for what is contained in that chapter is only an explanation of what is contained in the remainder of this.
Son of man, set thy face toward the south—The prophets were generally commanded to turn themselves toward the places concerning which they were

A. M. 3412. Behold, ^{*} I will kindle a fire in thee, B. C. 592. and it shall devour [†] every green tree in thee, and every dry tree: the flaming flame shall not be quenched, and all faces [‡] from the south to the north shall be burned therein.

^{*} Jer. xxi. 14.—[†] Luke xxiii. 31.

going to prophesy; and Ezekiel being now in Chaldea, near the river of Chebar, Judea lay to the south of him. And drop thy word, &c.—That is, prophesy. The gift of prophecy seems to be here compared to rain, or dew, distilling from heaven upon the earth, and refreshing and rendering it fruitful: see Deut. xxxii. 2. Such is the benefit of sound doctrine wherever it is received. And prophesy against the forest of the south field—By this is meant Jerusalem, the word forest being taken metaphorically for a city; either because its stately buildings resembled tall cedars standing in their several ranks, or, as Archbishop Secker supposes, from the number of its inhabitants. And say, Behold, I will kindle a fire in thee—By fire here is meant, not only the burning of literal fire, but every thing which destroys or consumes, as in chap. xix. 12. Indeed, fire is often taken, in a general sense, for God's severe judg-

48 And all flesh shall see that I the LORD have kindled it: it shall not be quenched. A. M. 3412. B. C. 592.

49 Then said I, Ah, Lord God! they say of me, Doth he not speak parables?

[‡] Chap. xxi. 4.

ments, which, it is here said, shall devour both the green tree and the dry, that is, the righteous as well as the wicked; the righteous being here, as elsewhere, compared to green and flourishing trees, and the wicked to dry and withered ones, such as are only fit for the fire. The flaming flame shall not be quenched—The evils I will send upon them shall not cease, till what I will has been accomplished. And all faces from the south to the north shall be burned—The destruction shall reach from one end of the land to the other: see chap. xxi. 44. Ah, Lord God! they say of me, Doth he not speak parables?—They make this an argument for disregarding what I say, that I use so many similitudes and metaphorical expressions, that they cannot understand my meaning. To take away all ground for this objection, God commands him, in the next chapter, to speak the same thing in plain words.

CHAPTER XXI.

In this chapter we have, (1.) An explication of the prophecy in the close of the last chapter, with directions to the prophet upon it, 1-7. (2.) A prediction of the sword that was coming on the land, 8-17. A prospect given of the king of Babylon's coming to Jerusalem, to which he was determined by divination, 18-24. (3.) Sentence passed on Zedekiah, 25-27. (4.) The destruction of the Ammonites, 28-32.

A. M. 3412. AND the word of the LORD came B. C. 592. unto me, saying,

2 ^a Son of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, and ^b drop thy word toward the holy places, and prophesy against the land of Israel,

3 And say to the land of Israel, Thus saith he LORD; Behold, I am against thee, and

^a Chap. xx. 46.—^b Deut. xxxii. 2; Amos vii. 16;

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXI.

Verses 1-5. Son of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem—Here God directs the prophet to declare in plain language, what he had ordered him to speak allegorically, from the 46th to the 48th verses of the foregoing chapter. And say to the land of Israel—The prophet's face being turned toward Judea and Jerusalem, he addresses them as if they were present before him. Behold, I am against thee—I am become thine enemy because of thy sins; I hate thy practices, and will punish thee for them. And will draw forth my sword out of his sheath—By the will draw forth my sword out of his sheath, and will cut off from thee ^c the righteous and the wicked. A. M. 3412. B. C. 592.

4 Seeing then that I will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked, therefore shall my sword go forth out of his sheath against all flesh ^d from the south to the north:

Mic. ii. 6, 11.—^c Job ix. 22.—^d Chap. xi. 47.

sword here is meant the same as by the fire in the foregoing chapter, namely, every thing which destroys. It may, however, be taken in a rather more literal sense than the fire is there to be understood, as the calamities of Judea were chiefly to arise from the sword of the king of Babylon, who was God's instrument to execute his purpose on Judea. And will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked—I will take away from thee the righteous by sending them into captivity; and the wicked by destroying them, either by the sword, or famine, or pestilence. My sword shall go forth against all flesh—

A. M. 3412. 5 That all flesh may know that I
B. C. 592. the LORD have drawn forth my sword out of his sheath: it ^o shall not return any more.

6 ^f Sigh therefore, thou son of man, with the breaking of thy loins, and with bitterness sigh before their eyes.

7 And it shall be, when they say unto thee, Wherefore sighest thou? that thou shalt answer, For the tidings, because it cometh: and every heart shall melt, and ^g all hands shall be feeble, and every spirit shall faint, and all knees ¹ shall be weak as water: behold, it cometh, and shall be brought to pass, saith the Lord God.

8 ¶ Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

9 Son of man, prophesy, and say, Thus saith

^e So Isaiah xlv. 23; lv. 11.—^f Isaiah xxii. 4; Jer. xxiii. 9; Dan. vii. 28; Hab. iii. 16.—^g Chapter vii. 17.—¹ Heb. shall go into water.—^h Deuteron. xxxii. 41; Verses 15, 28.—^a Or, it is the rod of my son, it despiseth every tree.—¹ Verse 19.

Against all the Jews that dwell in the land. It shall not return any more—That is, into its sheath, till it hath executed all my purposes.

Verses 6, 7. Sigh, therefore, with the breaking of thy loins, &c.—Show all the tokens of grief and concern; sigh and groan deeply; let the sense of these impending judgments so greatly affect thee, as to make thee stoop like one quite borne down under the weight of them. God's judgments, as they were represented to the minds of the prophets, very often affected them with dreadful apprehensions, especially when they concerned their own people: see the margin. With bitterness sigh before their eyes—Before the eyes of the elders of Israel, mentioned chap. xx. 1, or of the Jewish captives, who could not but be touched with a tender sense of the calamities ready to befall their brethren in Judea. Every heart shall melt, &c.—Men's hearts and strength shall fail them for fear.

Verses 9, 10. Say, A sword, a sword is sharpened—The sword was unsheathed in the foregoing verses; here it is fitted to do execution, which the prophet is commanded to lament. 1. It is sharpened, that it may cut, and wound; and make sore slaughter. The wrath of God will put an edge upon it; and whatever instruments he shall be pleased to use in executing his judgments, he will fill them with strength, courage, and fury, according to the service they are employed in. 2. It is furbished, that it may glitter, to the terror of those against whom it is drawn. It shall be a kind of flaming sword. Though the glory of God's justice may seem to have been eclipsed for a while, (like a sword rusting in the scabbard,) during the day of his patience, and the delay of his judgments; yet it will shine out again, and be made o glitter. 3. It is a victorious sword, nothing shall the LORD; Say, ^h A sword, a sword A. M. 3412. is sharpened, and also furbished: B. C. 592.

10 It is sharpened to make a sore slaughter, it is furbished that it may glitter; should we then make mirth? ² it contemneth the rod of my son, as every tree.

11 And he hath given it to be furbished, that it may be handled: this sword is sharpened, and it is furbished, to give it into the hand of ⁱ the slayer.

12 Cry and howl, son of man: for it shall be upon my people, it shall be upon all the princes of Israel: ³ terrors by reason of the sword shall be upon my people: ^k smite therefore upon thy thigh.

13 ⁴ Because it is ¹ a trial, and what if the sword contemn even the rod? ^m it shall be no more, saith the Lord God.

³ Or, they are thrust down to the sword with my people.—^k Jer. xxxi. 19.—⁴ Or, When the trial hath been, what then? shall they not also belong to the despising rod?—¹ Job ix. 23; 2 Cor. viii. 2; Heb. xi. 36.—^m Verse 27.

stand before it. It contemneth the rod of my son, as every tree—It makes no distinction between the sceptre and common wood; between the branches of the royal family, descended from David and Solomon, (who were honoured with the title of God's sons,) and the meanest of the people. This seems to be the meaning of the clause, provided our translation be just; but it is rendered very differently in some other versions. The Vulgate reads, Qui movet sceptrum filii mei, succidisti omne lignum, Thou who removest the sceptre of my son, hast cut down every tree; which Capellus understands of Nebuchadnezzar, who took away the sceptre, and overturned the kingdom. The marginal reading, It is the rod of my son, it despiseth every tree, may be understood in two senses. It may either mean, It is the rod whereby I chastise my son, namely, my people Israel. These, collectively considered, are termed God's son, Exod. iv. 22, 23; Hos. xi. 1; as being selected and chosen from all others, to stand to him in the relation of sons and daughters. Or, it may signify, It is the rod of my son, the Messiah, appointed by me to be the judge of the world, and invested with authority to execute judgment. This rod despiseth every tree; for it is the rod of iron, whereby the Son of God breaks the power of his enemies, Psa. ii. 9, and dashes them in pieces like a potter's vessel, without respect of persons.

Verses 12, 13. Cry and howl, son of man—As a mark of the vehemence of thy grief. For it shall be upon my people—Namely, the devouring sword; upon all the princes of Israel—Both princes and people shall be involved in one common destruction. Smite therefore upon thy thigh—Use all the outward expressions of grief and mourning. Because it is a trial—As all great calamities are often styled: see

A. M. 3412. B. C. 592. 14 Thou, therefore, son of man, prophesy, and ^asmite thy ^bhands together, and let the sword be doubled the third time, the sword of the slain: it is the sword of the great men that are slain, which entereth into their ^cprivy chambers.

15 I have set the ^dpoint of the sword against all their gates, that their heart may faint, and their ruins be multiplied: ah! ^eit is made bright, it is ^fwrapped up for the slaughter.

16 ^gGo thee one way or other, either on the right hand, ^hor on the left, whithersoever thy face is set.

^a Num. xxiv. 10; Verse 17; Chap. vi. 11.—^b Heb. hand to hand.—^c 1 Kings xx. 30; xxii. 25.—^d Or, glittering, or, fear.—^e Verses 10, 28.—^f Or, sharpened.

the margin. And what if the sword condemn even the rod?—Namely, the sceptre and royal family. The Hebrew, שֶׁבֶט מִאֲסַת וְכֹחַ אֵם וְנֹכַח, it seems, should rather be rendered, And what if even the rod, or sceptre, condemn?—That is, if the king and kingdom of Judah despise this trial. It shall be no more, saith the Lord—Both shall be destroyed, and be no more. The word rendered rod here, is continually put in Scripture for governor, or government; a rod, staff, or sceptre, being the usual signs of government. God, therefore, here foretels, that if the sceptre of Judah should despise, or not profit by, the correction or punishment brought upon it by the instrumentality of Nebuchadnezzar, it should be entirely broken, and be no more; which came to pass accordingly. The royal family was not amended by this severe judgment, and therefore was laid aside. "The sceptre here only means the kingly power in the house of David, and not that supreme authority which Jacob foretold should not forsake Judah till the coming of the Messiah."

Verses 14, 17. Prophesy, and smite thy hands together—In token of amazement and sorrow. And let the sword be doubled the third time—Bishop Newcome reads, Bring the sword twice; yea, bring it thrice; namely, that God's judgments might be fully executed, and his justice satisfied. It is probable that the three great slaughters which should be made of the inhabitants of Judea and Jerusalem are here intended, namely, 1st, During the siege, in which, undoubtedly, great numbers fell who were without the walls of the city, and many within: 2dly, When the city was taken by assault, which certainly was not without great slaughter: and 3dly, The massacre of Gedaliah, and those that sided with him. The sword of the slain—Wherewith many shall be slain. It is the sword of the great men, &c.—Appointed for the slaughter of the great men, namely, the princes, rulers, and captains; which entereth into their privy chambers—Where they were hidden in hopes of escaping. I have set the point of the sword against all their gates—I have gathered together the Chaldeans round about Jerusalem, with 17 I will also ^asmite my hands together, and ^bI will cause my fury to rest: I the LORD have said it.

18 ¶ The word of the LORD came unto me again, saying,

19 Also, thou son of man, appoint thee two ways, that the sword of the king of Babylon may come: both twain shall come forth out of one land: and choose thou a place, choose it at the head of the way to the city.

20 Appoint a way, that the sword may come to ^cRabbath of the Ammonites, and to Judah in Jerusalem the defenced.

^a Chapter xiv. 17.—^b Hebrew, set thyself, take the left hand.—^c Verse 14; Chap. xxii. 13.—^d Chap. v. 13.—^e Jer. xlix. 2; Chap. xxv. 5; Amos i. 14.

their swords sharpened and drawn at every gate, to meet and slay all that shall attempt to come out, or to slay all they find on entering the city. Ah! it is made bright—Hebrew, עֲשׂוּיָה לְבָרָק, It is made like lightning. The same metaphor which occurs in Virgil:

"Vaginaque eripit, ensem fulmineum."—Æn. iv. l. 579.

"He drew his sword, which did like lightning blaze."

It is wrapped—Or rather, It is sharpened for the slaughter. So Kimchius and some others translate מִעֲטָה, deriving the word from עָט, a style, or iron pen: see Buxtorf. Go thee one way or other—God is here represented as speaking, by way of apostrophe, to the sword, and giving it an unlimited commission to destroy wherever it should be drawn. I will also smite my hands together—In token of my approbation. I will animate and encourage the slayers to go on. And I will cause my fury to rest—I will satisfy my anger by a full execution of my judgments.

Verses 19, 20. Appoint thee two ways—So as to represent them to the eyes of thy countrymen: see chap. iv. 1; "Designa in tabella, lapide, aut terra," Mark on a map, a stone, or on the earth.—Vatablus. That the sword of the king of Babylon may come—Dr. Waterland translates this, "Appoint thee two roads for the king of Babylon's sword to come by; let both go forth out of one land; and choose thou a way-mark; choose it at the head of the road toward the city: verse 20, Point out a road for the sword to go to Rabbath, and to Judah in Jerusalem the defenced." Instead of the defenced, Houbigant reads, that he may besiege it. God here foreshows his prophet, that when the king of Babylon should come with his army into Syria, and find the Ammonites had entered into a confederacy with Egypt as well as Zedekiah, he would be in doubt against which of the two people he should first make war, and would commit the decision of the matter to his arts of divination, described verse 21; and that God should direct the divination to be for taking the road that leads to Jerusalem. The words, Let both go forth out of one land, seem to mean, that the single way

A. M. 3412. 21 For the king of Babylon stood
B. C. 592. at the ⁹parting of the way, at the head of the two ways, to use divination; he made his ¹⁰arrows bright, he consulted with ¹¹images, he looked in the liver.

22 At his right hand was the divination for Jerusalem, to appoint ¹²captains, ¹³to open the mouth in the slaughter, to ¹⁴lift up the voice with shouting, ¹⁵to appoint battering-rams

⁹ Heb. mother of the way.—¹⁰ Or, knives.—¹¹ Heb. teraphim.
¹² Or, battering-rams, Chap. iv. 2.—¹³ Heb. rams.

should divide itself into two, leading to different places. This, as appears from what follows, was the road coming out of Arabia, which afterward parted into two, one leading to Rabbath, and the other to Jerusalem.

Verses 21, 22. For the king of Babylon stood at the parting of the way—The prophet here expresses what was future as if it were past, according to the usual style of the prophets, when speaking of things soon to come to pass. And he explains the symbolical action spoken of in the two foregoing verses; he shows that it was designed to represent what the king of Babylon would do when he was on his march, and came to the place where the road was divided; that he would use divination to determine which of the roads he should take. He made his arrows bright—The Vulgate reads, Commiscens sagittas, Mingling his arrows; which sense of the verb קלקל, agrees better with the accounts given us by ancient writers of this kind of divination, and therefore is preferred by Dr. Pocock, who confirms it by the Arabic use of the word. It is also adopted by Bishop Newcome. The way of divining by arrows is thus described by St. Jerome in his commentary on this place: "They wrote on several arrows the names of the cities they intended to assault; and then, putting them all together promiscuously in a quiver, they drew them out thence as lots are drawn; and that city whose name was written on the arrow first drawn was the city they first made war upon." A method of divining by arrows is still in use, it appears, among the idolatrous Arabs. Of this we read the following description, in Sale's Preliminary Discourse to the Koran, p. 126: "Seven divining arrows were kept at the temple of Mecca; but generally, in divination, the idolatrous Arabs made use of three only, on one of which was written, My Lord hath commanded me; on another, My Lord hath forbidden me; and the third was blank. If the first was drawn, they looked on it as an approbation of the enterprise in question; if the second, they made a contrary conclusion; but if the third happened to be drawn, they mixed them, and drew over again, till a decisive answer was given by one of the others." He consulted with images—The Hebrew word here is teraphim, the name given to the images, or gods, which Rachel stole from Laban, Gen. xxxi. 19. In what way these were consulted against the gates, to cast a mount, ¹⁶and to build a fort.

23 And it shall be unto them as a false divination in their sight, ¹⁷to them that ¹⁸have sworn oaths: but he will call to remembrance the iniquity, that they may be taken.

24 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because ye have made your iniquity to be remembered, in that your transgressions are discover-

¹⁶ Jer. li. 14.—¹⁷ Chap. iv. 2.—¹⁸ Or, for the oaths made unto them.—¹⁹ Chap. xvii. 13, 15, 16, 18.

cannot now be said, and all conjectures about it are vain. He looked in the liver—This was another way of divination used among these heathen; they determined for or against certain things, according to the state of the liver of sacrificed animals, whether mutilated or complete, sound or unsound, or from its colour, or some marks appearing in particular places of it, and this by rules laid down among them. At his right hand was the divination for Jerusalem—When the king of Babylon stood at the head of the two ways, to consult which of the two he should take, the tokens that were shown him, God so ordering it, induced him to march with his army to the right, that is, toward Jerusalem. Nebuchadnezzar must be considered as coming from Dan, and marching along the river Jordan. Rabbath was therefore situated to the left hand, and Jerusalem to the right: see Michaelis. From this, and many other instances in the Scriptures, we may conclude, that things apparently the most fortuitous, such as the coming up of lots, and the like, are subject to the direction of Divine Providence, and, when occasion requires it, are ordered to answer its purposes; to open the mouth in the slaughter—Or, to the slaughter; that is, to animate the soldiers to slay. To lift up the voice with shouting—To make the military cry, in order to strike the inhabitants with terror. We find it was usual, in almost all armies, to begin the attack of their enemies with a loud cry, which served to animate their own men, and to intimidate the enemy. To cast a mount—See note on Jer. xxii. 24.

Verses 23, 24. And it shall be as a false divination to them that have sworn oaths—That is, the Jews, when they shall hear of it, shall deride and despise it as a vain, lying divination, and so shall consider themselves as being unconcerned in it; and that though they have sworn homage to the king of Babylon, and afterward perfidiously broken their covenant with him. But he will call to remembrance the iniquity, that they may be taken—Nebuchadnezzar will remember Zedekiah's breach of his oath, and all his and his people's treacheries, and will avenge himself by taking the city, and making him and his subjects prisoners of war. The form of expression seems to imply that the king of Babylon had had it chiefly in his mind to go against Rabbath; but the divinations all signifying that he should go against Jerusalem, caused him to reflect

A. M. 3412. ed, so that in all your doings your
B. C. 592. sins do appear; because, I say, that ye are come to remembrance, ye shall be taken with the hand.

25 ¶ And thou, ²profane wicked prince of Israel, ³whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end.

26 Thus saith the Lord God; Remove the diadem, and take off the crown: this shall not

^a 2 Chron. xxxvi. 13; Jer. lii. 2; Chap. xvii. 19.—^a Verse 29; Chap. xxxv. 5.—^b Chap. xvii. 24; Luke i. 52.—¹⁶ Heb.
Perverted, perverted, perverted, will I make it.

on the perfidious behaviour of the Jewish nation toward him, and so determined him to take the way to Jerusalem, in order severely to punish the inhabitants of it. Because ye have made your iniquity to be remembered—Not by yourselves, that it might be repented of, but by me, that it might be punished:
because by your open and manifest continuance in your former sinful courses against me, and rebellions against the king of Babylon, you cause both me and him to call your iniquitous conduct to mind, and punish you for it: ye shall be taken by the hand— As birds or beasts, entangled in the net, are easily taken with the hand, so shall you be taken in the easiest manner, and fall into the hands of the king of Babylon, whose anger you have justly provoked.

Verses 25, 26. And thou, profane wicked prince of Israel—The words are directed to Zedekiah, whom the prophet calls profane and wicked, chiefly with respect to his breaking that solemn oath, uttered in the name of God, whereby he had engaged himself to be tributary to the king of Babylon. By this action he and his courtiers did great dishonour to the true God. The king of Babylon, it appears, kept the oath which he swore to them by his false gods, while they broke the oath which they swore to him by Jehovah! Thus disgracing the true God before the Babylonians and other heathen, who must needs entertain a contemptible opinion of that being, whose worshippers durst break the oath which they had sworn by him. Therefore with respect to this, as well as his unalterable regard to truth and the due observance of oaths, God could not but look with indignation upon the breach of their oath, and inflict punishment upon them for it.
See note on chap. xvii. 15. Whose day is come—
The day of whose calamity is near at hand, when he shall receive the due punishment of his iniquity.
Remove the diadem—The original word is often used for the priestly mitre, but here it means some kingly ornament, probably the royal tire of the head. Take off the crown—Depose him from his kingly dignity. This shall not be the same—The kingdom shall never be what it has been. Exalt him that is low—This seems to be spoken of Jehoiachin, who was many years kept in prison at Babylon; but at length, as we read 2 Kings xxv. 27, was taken out of prison, kindly treated, and advanced to great honour by Evil-merodach, king of Babylon.

be the same: ^bexalt him that is low, A. M. 3412.
and abase him that is high. B. C. 592.

27 ¹⁵ I will overturn, overturn, overturn it: ^o and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him.

28 ¶ And thou son of man, prophesy and say, Thus saith the Lord God ^dconcerning the Ammonites, and concerning their reproach; even say thou, ^eThe sword, the ^e Genesis xlix. 10; Verse 13; Luke i. 32, 33; John i. 49.

^d Jeremiah xlix. 1; Chapter xxv. 2, 3, 6; Zephaniah ii. 8, 9, 10.
^e Verses 9, 10.

And abase him that is high—Namely, Zedekiah;
who was to be pulled down from his throne, have his eyes put out, and be kept in prison the remainder of his days.

Verse 27. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it—
By several degrees I will utterly overthrow the kingdom of Judah; and it shall be no more—It shall never recover its former lustre and dignity;
until he come, &c.—Till the Messiah come to take his kingdom. To the same purpose is Lowth's paraphrase on the verse: "After that Zedekiah is deprived of his regal authority, there shall be no more kings of that family till Christ come, the King so often foretold and promised, who in due time shall reign upon the throne of his father David, and of whose kingdom there shall be no end, Luke
i. 32, 33. After the captivity, some of the priests of the Asmonean race assumed the style and title of kings; but not being of the tribe of Judah, they could have no just right to that honour. The expression, Whose right it is, seems to be peculiarly characteristic of the Messiah, who is always spoken of by the prophets as the true and right heir to the throne of David, and as one who was in an eminent manner to inherit the kingdom. His indeed the right was; for him was reserved the kingly dominion, not only over Judea, but the whole earth.
The repetition of the word overturn, in the beginning of this verse, or, as the Hebrew expression יִפְּחוּ may be more literally rendered, an overturning, may probably be intended to predict the repeated subversions which the Jewish state was to undergo in future times, by the Chaldeans, Macedonians, Romans, and many others, and the multiplied destructions of their nation, by which they would be punished for their sins; which subversions and destructions will not come to any happy termination, till they submit to the easy yoke of their long-rejected Messiah, and in humility, faith, and gratitude, accept the salvation which he waits to confer upon them. Nay, and the expression might be intended "to predict all the convulsions in states and kingdoms, which shall make way for the establishment of his kingdom throughout the earth."—Scott.

Verses 28, 29. Thus saith the Lord concerning the Ammonites—Because the Ammonites were reprieved by Nebuchadnezzar's decision to besiege Jerusalem, they were ready to promise themselves

A. M. 3412. sword is drawn : for the slaughter it B. C. 592. is furbished, to consume because of the glittering :

29 While they ^fsee vanity unto thee, while they divine a lie unto thee, to bring thee upon the necks of them that are slain, of the wicked, ^gwhose day is come, when their iniquity shall
have an end.

30 ^hShall I cause it to return into his sheath? ⁱI will judge thee in the place where ^f Chapter xii. 24; xxii. 28.—^g Verse 25; Job xviii. 20; Psalm xxxvii. 13.—^h Or, cause it to return.—ⁱ Jeremiah xlvi. 6, 7.

security, and to insult over the calamities brought on the Jews; a practice for which they are often reproved very severely by the prophets, and threatened with the like judgments. And concerning their reproach—Wherewith they reproached Israel in the day of Israel's afflictions; say thou, The sword is drawn, is drawn—Warlike preparations are made against you, the war is declared, and your enemy hath drawn the sword. For the slaughter it is furbished—It is prepared to make dreadful destruction, to lay waste your country, and consume its inhabitants. While they see vanity unto thee— While the soothsayers and pretenders to divination foretel nothing but happy events to thee, O Ammon!
the sword is preparing to destroy thee. To bring thee upon the necks of them that are slain—To add thy people to the number of those who are slain in Judea, (verses 14, 15,) and to make thy condition like theirs; whose day is come—See verse 25. When their iniquity shall have an end—When their deserved punishment, coming upon them, shall put a stop to their wickedness. This prophecy concerning the Ammonites was fulfilled by the Babylonians, about five years after the destruction of Jerusalem, because the Ammonites assisted Ishmael to wrest the government of Judea out of the hands of thou wast created, ^kin the land of A. M. 3412.

thy nativity. B. C. 592.

31 And I will ^lpour out mine indignation upon thee, I will ^mblow against thee in the fire of my wrath, and deliver thee into the hand of ⁿbrutish men, and skilful to destroy.

32 Thou shalt be for fuel to the fire; thy blood shall be in the midst of the land; ⁿthou shalt be no more remembered: for I the LORD
have spoken it.

ⁱ Gen. xv. 14; Chap. xvi. 38.—^k Chap. xvi. 3.—^l Chap.
vii. 8; xiv. 19; xxii. 22.—^m Chapter xxii. 20, 21.—ⁿ Or, burning.—^o Chap. xxv. 10.

Gedaliah, whom the king of Babylon had fixed there as his deputy.

Verses 30–32. Shall I cause it to return into his sheath?—Shall the sword that is drawn to execute the judgments of God upon Ammon be put up in its sheath before it has done its work? Surely not.
I will judge thee in the place where thou wast created—That is, where thy nation first received its existence; thou shalt not be carried captive, but shalt be destroyed in thy own land. I will pour out mine indignation upon thee—Which shall overwhelm thee as with a flood, and sweep thy nation into ruin. I will blow against thee, &c.—To melt thee as it were in a furnace. See chap. xxii. 20, 21.
And deliver thee into the hand of brutish men—
The LXX. read, ἀνδρῶν βαρβαρῶν τεκταινοντων διαφθορας, of barbarous men, artificers of destruction;
or, as we render it, skilful to destroy. Thou shalt be for fuel to the fire—Thy country and cities shall be destroyed by fire. Thy blood shall be in the midst of the land—A slaughter shall be made of thee in every part of thy country, and thy blood shall appear everywhere. Thou shalt be no more remembered—The Jewish people still subsist, but the Ammonites are lost in the mass of mankind, and have been long forgotten.

CHAPTER XXII.

In this chapter we have, (1,) A catalogue of the sins of Jerusalem, 1–12. (2,) The punishment of those sins threatened, 13–16. (3,) They are condemned as dross to the fire, 17–22. (4,) A prediction, that as all orders of men had contributed to the national guilt, all should share in the punishment of it, 23–31.

A. M. 3412. MOREOVER the word of the
B. C. 592. LORD came unto me, saying,
2 Now, thou son of man, ^awilt thou ¹judge,

^a Chap. xx. 4; xxiii. 36.—¹ Or, plead for.—^b Chapter xxiv.
6, 9; Nah. iii. 1.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXII.

Verses 2–5. Wilt thou judge, wilt thou judge the bloody city?—Wilt thou plead for it? Or rather, Wilt thou not judge? see note on chap. xx. 4. The wilt thou judge ^bthe ²bloody city? A. M. 3412. yea, thou shalt ³show her all her B. C. 592.

abominations.

² Hebrew, city of bloods.—³ Hebrew, make her know, Chapter xvi. 2.

expression is doubled to awaken the prophet more fully, and to quicken him to his work. Jerusalem is termed the bloody city, Hebrew, עיר הדמים, the city of bloods, because of the blood of innocent per-

A. M. 3412. 3 Then say thou, Thus saith the B. C. 592. Lord God, The city sheddeth blood in the midst of it, that her time may come, and maketh idols against herself to defile herself.

4 Thou art become guilty in thy blood that thou hast ^cshed; and hast defied thyself in thine idols which thou hast made; and thou hast caused thy days to draw near, and art come even unto thy years: ^dtherefore have I made thee a reproach unto the heathen, and a mocking to all countries.

5 Those that be near, and those that be far from thee, shall mock thee, which art ^e*infamous and much vexed.*

6 Behold, ^ethe princes of Israel, every one were in thee to their ^epower to shed blood.

7 In thee have they set ^flight by father and mother: in the midst of thee have they ^gdealt by ^hoppression with the stranger: in thee have they vexed the fatherless and the widow.

^c 2 Kings xxi. 16.—^d Deut. xxviii. 37; 1 Kings ix. 7; Chap. v. 14; Dan. ix. 16.—^e Heb. polluted of name, much in vexation.
^f Isaiah i. 23; Micah iii. 1, 2, 3; Zeph. iii. 3.—^g Heb. arm.
^h Deuter. xxvii. 16.—ⁱ Exodus xxii. 21, 22.—^j Or, deceit.
^k Verse 26.—^l Lev. xix. 30; Chap. xxiii. 38.—^m Heb. men of slanders.
ⁿ Exod. xxiii. 1; Lev. xix. 16.—^o Chap. xviii. 6, 11.—^p Lev. xviii. 7, 8; xx. 11; 1 Cor. v. 1.

sons, of children sacrificed to Moloch, and of prophets and righteous men shed in her, and that by courts of justice under colour of law. Yea, thou shalt show her—Make her know; all her abominations—That I may be justified in all the desolations which I have brought, and shall still more fully bring upon her. The city sheddeth blood in the midst of it—Openly and impudently; that her time may come—The time of her destruction, as the consequence of her having filled up the measure of her iniquities; and maketh idols against herself—To her own ruin. Thou hast caused thy days to draw near—The days of thy sorrows and sufferings; and art come even to thy years—To the end of thy years of trial, so that thou shalt be borne with no longer. Therefore have I made thee a reproach unto the heathen—Have exposed thee to their contempt and scorn; and a mocking to all countries—A proverb, and a by-word, and cause of astonishment to all people, according to the prediction of Moses, (Deut. xxviii. 37,) and the solemn warning given by the Lord to Solomon, when he appeared to him after the dedication of the temple, 1 Kings ix. 7. Those that are near—And are eye-witnesses of thy apostasy and degeneracy, as the Edomites, Ammonites, Moabites, and Philistines; and those that be far from thee—The Medes, Persians, Hyrcanians, &c., to whom thou shalt be carried captive; shall mock thee, which art infamous—Of a most infamous name; and much vexed—Afflicted, impoverished, and ruined: or rather, who art full of tumult and trouble, as רבת המהומה more properly signifies: that is, in which

8 Thou hast ^hdespised my holy things, and hast ⁱprofaned my sabbaths.

9 In thee are ^jmen ^kthat carry tales to shed blood: ^land in thee they eat upon the mountains: in the midst of thee they commit lewdness.

10 In thee have they ^mdiscovered their fathers' nakedness: in thee have they humbled her that was ⁿset apart for pollution.

11 And ^oone hath committed abomination ^pwith his neighbour's wife; and ^qanother ^rhath ^slewdly defiled his daughter-in-law; and another in thee hath humbled his ^tsister, his father's daughter.

12 In thee ^uhave they taken gifts to shed blood; ^vthou hast taken usury and increase, and thou hast greedily gained of thy neighbours by extortion, and ^whast forgotten me, saith the Lord God.

^a Lev. xviii. 19; xx. 18; Chap. xviii. 6.—^b Or, every one
^c Lev. xviii. 20; xx. 10; Deut. xxii. 22; Jer. v. 8; Chap. xviii. 11.—^d Or, every one.
^e Lev. xviii. 15; xx. 12.—^f Or, by lewdness.
^g Lev. xviii. 9; xx. 17.—^h Exod. xxiii. 8; Deut. xvi. 19; xxvii. 25.—ⁱ Exodus xxii. 25; Lev. xxv. 36; Deut. xxiii. 19; Chapter xviii. 13.—^j Deut. xxxii. 18; Jer. iii. 21; Chap. xxiii. 35.

there are continually confusion and disorder, by the commission of acts of violence.

Verses 6–12. Behold, the princes of Israel, &c.—Probably the members of the great sanhedrim, or the king's counsellors and chief officers, are here intended; every one in thee—Not one to be found of a more merciful temper; to their power—According to their ability; to shed blood—Every one of the princes committed acts of violence, and shed blood, as far as he had it in his power to do it. In thee have they set light by father and mother—Disobedience to, or slighting of parents, is unnatural and brutish in itself, and had, in particular, a curse denounced against it by God's law, Deut. xxvii. 16; so that it is here placed next to murder in the catalogue of their sins. Thou hast despised my holy things, &c.—Thou hast paid no proper regard to my holy temple, mine altars, sacrifices, feasts, and other things consecrated to my service, nor to the pure worship I appointed; but hast defiled and profaned them all by worshipping of idols together with me, and mingling heathen rites with the forms of worship which I ordered. The sabbaths, which I appointed to be set apart for my honour, thou hast, in great measure, employed in the worship and to the honour of false gods. In thee are men that carry tales to shed blood—Who raise calumnies and depose falsehoods even so far as to take away the lives of innocent persons. In thee they eat upon the mountains—Thy inhabitants sacrifice, and feast upon the sacrifices, in the mountains, in honour of idols or false gods. In the midst of thee they commit lewdness—And that

A. M. 3412. 13 Behold, therefore I have ^u smitten
B. C. 592. my hand at thy dishonest gain which thou hast made, and at thy blood which hath been in the midst of thee.

14 ^x Can thy heart endure, or can thy hands be strong, in the days that I shall deal with thee? ^y I the LORD have spoken it, and will do it.

15 And ^z I will scatter thee among the heathen, and disperse thee in the countries, and ^a will consume thy filthiness out of thee.

16 And thou ¹¹ shalt take thine inheritance in thyself in the sight of the heathen, and ^b thou shalt know that I am the LORD.

17 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto
me, saying,

18 Son of man, ^c the house of Israel is to me become dross: all they are brass, and tin, and iron, and lead, in the midst of the furnace; they are even the ¹² dross of silver.

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Because ye are all become dross, behold, A. M. 3412. therefore I will gather you into the B. C. 592.

midst of Jerusalem.

20 ¹³ As they gather silver, and brass, and iron, and lead, and tin, into the midst of the furnace, to blow the fire upon it, to melt it;
so will I gather you in mine anger and in my fury, and I will leave you there, and melt you.

21 Yea, I will gather you, and ^d blow upon you in the fire of my wrath, and ye shall be melted in the midst thereof.

22 As silver is melted in the midst of the furnace, so shall ye be melted in the midst thereof; and ye shall know that I the LORD have ^e poured out my fury upon you.

23 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto
me, saying,

24 Son of man, say unto her, Thou art the land that is not cleansed, nor rained upon in the day of indignation.

^u Chapter xxi. 17.—^x Chapter xxi. 7.—^y Chapter xvii. 24.
^z Deut. iv. 27; xxviii. 25, 64; Chap. xii. 14, 15.—^a Chapter xxiii. 27, 48.—¹¹ Or, shall be profaned.—^b Psalm ix. 16;

Chap. vi. 7.—^c Isa. i. 22; Jer. vi. 28, &c.; Psalm cxix. 119.
¹² Heb. drosses.—¹³ Heb. according to the gathering.—^d Chap.
xxii. 20, 21, 22.—^e Chap. xx. 8, 33; Verse 31.

in the most scandalous instances. In thee have they discovered their fathers' nakedness—Have defiled their fathers' beds, or taken their mothers-in-law for wives, called by St. Paul, such fornication as is not named among the Gentiles. In thee have they taken gifts to shed blood—Thy judges have taken bribes, not only to pervert justice, but even to take away the lives of the innocent.

Verses 13–16. Therefore I have smitten my hand at thy dishonest gain, &c.—Therefore I have expressed my indignation against thy avarice and unjust practices: I have called for punishment to come upon thee, and have animated and encouraged thy enemies to destroy thee. Can thy heart endure?—Will not thy heart fail thee when thou shalt fall into those calamities which I will certainly bring upon thee? And will consume thy filthiness out of thee—Will purge thee in the furnace of afflictions, and take that method to consume thy dross, and put an end to thy idolatrous practices. And thou shalt take thine inheritance in thyself in the sight of the heathen—“Instead of being mine inheritance, and under my peculiar care and protection, thou shalt be cast out among the heathen, and there eat the fruit of thine own ways, and receive the just reward of thy wickedness.” The translation of this clause in the margin seems preferable: Thou shalt be profaned, that is, thou shalt no longer enjoy the privileges of a city called by my name, and set apart for my worship, but shalt be laid open as common ground to be profaned by infidels: compare Isa. xlvii. 6.

Verses 18–22. The house of Israel is to me become dross—“Their filthiness may be fitly compared to the mixture of dross and baser metals with the pure silver: and as that is purified by being melted in a furnace or crucible, so Jerusalem, when it is set on fire, shall be the furnace into which I will cast them and their wickedness to be consumed: compare Jer. vi. 28–30. God's severe judgments are expressed by the furnace of affliction, (Isa. xlviii. 10,) and compared to a refiner's fire, (Mal. iii. 2; Isa. i. 25,) because they are designed to purge men from that dross and corruption which are too often the effect of ease and prosperity.”—Lowth. As they gather silver, so will I gather you—From all parts. I will, by a secret, overruling providence, bring you into Jerusalem, as into a furnace where you may be consumed. And I will blow upon you in the fire of my wrath—I will stir or blow up the fire of my wrath against you. God's vengeance is often compared to fire, but here it was so in a literal sense, when both city and temple were consumed by fire, 2 Kings xxv. 9.

Verses 24, 25. Thou art the land that is not cleansed nor rained upon, &c.—Though God's judgments have been as violent floods, and as hottest fires, thou hast not been cleansed from thy wickedness by the punishments I have sent upon thee, nor purified by the instructions and admonitions which I have given thee by my prophets; which, if they had been duly received, would have been instrumental in cleansing thee from all thy filthiness, as the heavy rains wash away the filth that lies upon the earth: see Isa. iv. 4; John xv. 3; Eph. v. 26; 1 Pet. i. 22. Or this latter clause, nor rained upon, may be taken literally, and signify that God had withheld rain from

A. M. 3412. 25 ^f There is a conspiracy of her
 B. C. 592. prophets in the midst thereof, like a roaring lion ravening the prey; they ^g have devoured souls; ^h they have taken the treasure and precious things; they have made her many widows in the midst thereof.

26 ⁱ Her priests have ^l violated my law, and have ^k profaned my holy things: they have put no ^l difference between the holy and profane, neither have they showed difference between the unclean and the clean, and have hid their eyes from my sabbaths, and I am profaned among them.

27 Her ^m princes in the midst thereof are like wolves ravening the prey, to shed blood, and to destroy souls, to get dishonest gains.

28 And ⁿ her prophets have daubed them

^f Hos. vi. 9.—^g Matt. xxiii. 14.—^h Mic. iii. 11; Zeph. iii.
 3, 4.—ⁱ Mal. ii. 8.—^j Heb. offered violence to.—^k Lev. xxii.
 2; 1 Sam. ii. 29.—^l Lev. x. 10; Jer. xv. 19; Chap. xlv. 23.
^m Isa. i. 23; Chap. xxii. 6; Mic. iii. 2, 3, 9, 10, 11; Zeph. iii. 3. ⁿ Chap. xiii. 10.

them, which was one of the judgments wherewith God punished them in the day of his wrath, Jer.
 xiv. 4. There is a conspiracy of her prophets—
 That is, of the false prophets: a contrivance to speak all alike, smooth words, and to utter promises of peace and safety: they are all agreed together to deceive the people, and to plot the ruin of the true prophets, and those that favour them. They have devoured souls—They have brought men to ruin and destruction, by deceiving them with their false predictions; and taken away their lives, by false accusations and evil practices. They have taken the treasure and precious things—As a reward of their lies. By their cunning arts they have obtained riches, power, and honours, and have drained the people of their substance; they have made her— Namely, the land; many widows—By persuading Zedekiah to persist in the war, which filled Jerusalem with dead husbands and forlorn widows.

Verse 26. Her priests have violated my law— Which they ought to have observed, and to have taught the people to observe; and have profaned my holy things—The gifts and sacrifices offered in my service; either by offering them in an undue manner, as the sons of Eli did, 1 Sam. ii. 15, or without due purification of themselves; or else eating them as common meats, without regard to the rules prescribed in the law. They have put no difference between the holy and profane—They have not shown any regard to the rules of my law, concerning what is holy and unholy, clean and unclean, and that both with respect to persons and things. And they are guilty of this neglect in contradiction to an express charge given them respecting this matter, Lev. x. 10.
 By the holy is here meant that which was peculiarly dedicated to God; by the profane, things in common use; by the unclean, those meats which were with untempered 'mortar, ^o seeing A. M. 3412. vanity, and divining lies unto them, B. C. 592.

 saying, Thus saith the Lord God, when the LORD hath not spoken.

29 ^p The people of the land have used ^q oppression, and exercised robbery, and have vexed the poor and needy: yea, they have ^r oppressed the stranger ^s wrongfully.

30 ^t And I sought for a man among them, that should ^u make up the hedge, and ^v stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it: but I found none.

31 Therefore have I ^w poured out mine indignation upon them; I have consumed them with the fire of my wrath: ^x their own way have I recompensed upon their heads, saith the Lord God.

^o Chapter xxiii. 6, 7; xi. 29.—^p Jer. v. 26, 27, 28; Chapter xviii. 12.—^q Or, deceit.—^r Exodus xxii. 21; xxiii. 9; Lev.
 xix. 33; Chap. xxii. 7.—^s Heb. without right.—^t Jer. v. 1.
^u Chap. xiii. 5.—^v Psa. cvi. 23.—^w Verse 22.—^x Chap. ix.
 10; xi. 21; xvi. 43.

forbidden to be eaten; by the clean, what it was lawful to eat. And have hid their eyes from my sabbaths—They have taken no care that my sabbaths should be kept, and have not attended themselves upon my public worship on the sabbath days, 2 Chron. xxix. 7; and thereby have encouraged my people in the neglect and profanation of it. And I am profaned among them—I am dishonoured by them, and they use my name to false and wicked purposes.

Verses 27, 28. Her princes are like wolves—The chief officers of state stick at no method of injustice and oppression whereby they may increase their substance, though it be by taking away the lives and estates of the innocent: see the margin. And her prophets have daubed them, &c.—Have daubed over the evil practices of the great men, by palliating devices: or, have flattered them in their ways of sin and violence, and encouraged them to proceed therein with promises, which, like ill-tempered mortar, will deceive them, though all seems at present smooth and safe.

Verses 29–31. The people of the land—The common people; have used oppression—Have wronged each other by acts of fraud and violence, and have greatly and cruelly oppressed each other. And have vexed the poor and needy—By these frauds and oppressions, instead of relieving them, which they ought to have done. Yea, they have oppressed the strangers wrongfully—Without any colour of justice or reason. This was contrary to an express prohibition of God's law, frequently repeated and enforced upon them, from the consideration, that they themselves were strangers in Egypt. And I sought— God speaks after the manner of men; for a man among them—Any one among the princes, prophets, priests, or people; that should make up the hedge—

That should repair the breach, and prevent further mischief; and stand in the gap before me—That might interpose between a sinful people and their offended God; deprecate God's wrath, and entreat for mercy, that the land might not be destroyed; but I found none—All were corrupted, and went on in sin without repentance. This general complaint must be understood with some restriction, such as is commonly understood in unlimited expressions. For we read, chap. ix. 4, that there were some that sighed and cried to God (by way of deprecating his wrath) for the abominations done in Jerusalem; and they undoubtedly exhorted the people to repentance and reformation. Therefore have I poured out mine indignation upon them—Have given it full scope, that it might come upon them in a full stream; yet, whatever calamity God brings upon a sinful people, it is their own way that is therein recompensed upon their heads, and God punishes them not more, but much less, than their iniquity deserves.

CHAPTER XXIII.

In this long chapter, as in chap. xvi. and xx., we have a history of the apostacies of God's professing people from him, and the aggravations of those apostacies, under the similitude of whoredom and adultery: the kingdoms of Israel and Judah, of the ten tribes, and the two, with their capital cities, Samaria and Jerusalem, are considered distinctly. We have, (1.) The apostasy of Israel and Samaria from God, 1-8: and their ruin for it, 9, 10. (2.) The apostasy of Judah and Jerusalem from God, 11-21: and sentence passed upon them, that they shall in like manner be destroyed for it, 22-35. (3.) The joint wickedness of them both together, 36-44. and the joint ruin of them both, 45-49.

A. M. 3412. THE word of the LORD came again
B. C. 592. unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, there were ^atwo women, the daughters of one mother:

3 And ^bthey committed whoredoms in Egypt; they committed whoredoms in ^ctheir youth: there were their breasts pressed, and there they bruised the teats of their virginity. A. M. 3412.

4 And the names of them were ^{B. C. 592.}

Aholah the elder, and Aholibah her sister; and ^dthey were mine, and they bare sons and daughters. Thus were their names; Samaria is ¹Aholah, and Jerusalem ²Aholibah.

5 And Aholah^f played the harlot when she ^aJer. iii. 7, 8, 10; Chap. xvi. 46.—^bLev. xvii. 7; Josh. xxiv. 14; Chap. xx. 8.—^cChap. xvi. 22.—^dChap. xvi. 8, 20.

¹That is, His tent, or, tabernacle.—²That is, My tabernacle in her, 1 Kings viii. 29.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXIII.

Verses 2, 3. There were two women, daughters of one mother—Judah and Israel, two kingdoms. "Countries are commonly represented as mothers of their people, and the inhabitants as their children: so the daughters of Syria signify the inhabitants of that country, chap. xvi. 57. Thus Samaria and Jerusalem are described in this chapter as sisters, the offspring of the same land, or country." And they committed whoredoms in Egypt—The Israelites first learned idolatry in Egypt, for Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob were wholly free from it. They committed whoredoms in their youth—The time when the Israelites were in Egypt, or were lately departed out of it, is called their youth in the prophets, because that was the time when God first owned them for his people. There were their breasts pressed—"There they served idols, and there they corrupted their ways," as the Chaldee paraphrase expresses the sense. The reader must observe, "The style of this chapter, like that of chap. xvi., is adapted to persons among whom, at that time, no refinement subsisted. Large allowance must be made for language addressed to an ancient eastern people, in the worst period of their history; all whose ideas were sensual; and whose grand inducement to idolatry seems to have been the brutal impurities which it encouraged."—

Bishop Newcome. The Scripture commonly calls idolatrous churches and nations by the name of harlots: and in like manner honours those, who preserve their allegiance to God pure and undefiled, with the title of chaste wives, or virgins.

Verses 4. The names of them were Aholah and Aholibah—"The word Aholah signifies, Her tent, or tabernacle: Aholibah denotes, My tent, or tabernacle, is in her. These two different appellations imply that Samaria had indeed a tabernacle, or place for public worship, but of her own devising; namely, the cities of Dan and Bethel, where the golden calves were set up; whereas God's tabernacle first, and afterward his temple, was placed in Jerusalem. He placed his name there, or chose it for the place of his peculiar residence," 1 Kings viii. 29. Aholah, or Samaria, is here called the elder sister, as having the greatest dominion, power, wealth, and number of people belonging to her, ten tribes out of twelve being under her jurisdiction. And they were mine—By a solemn marriage covenant. And they bare sons and daughters—Were fruitful, and brought forth children to me: they increased in number of people, and among these there were some that were my spiritual children by adoption and grace, by faith, love, and obedience.

Verses 5, 6. And Aholah played the harlot when

A. M. 3412. was mine; and she doted on her
B. C. 592. lovers, on ^e the Assyrians her neighbours,

6 Which were clothed with blue, captains and rulers, all of them desirable young men, horsemen riding upon horses.

7 Thus she ³ committed her whoredoms with them, with all them that were ⁴ the chosen men of Assyria, and with all on whom she doted; with all their idols she defiled herself.

8 Neither left she her whoredoms brought ^f from Egypt: for in her youth they lay with her, and they bruised the breasts of her virginity, and poured their whoredom upon her.

9 Wherefore, I have delivered her into the hand of her lovers, into the hand of the ^g Assyrians, upon whom she doted.

^e 2 Kings xv. 19; xvi. 7; xvii. 3; Hosea viii. 9.—³ Heb. bestowed her whoredoms upon them.—⁴ Heb. the choice of the children of Ashur.—^f Verse 3.—^g 2 Kings xvii. 3, 4, 5, 6, 23; xviii. 9, 10, 11.—^h Chap. xvi. 37, 41.—^g Heb. a name.

she was mine—When she was under my government and protection. “After she had lived in covenant with me, and attended upon my service and worship all the time of the judges, and of David and Solomon, she fell off from my service, and was the first that established idolatry by a law, and consented to Jeroboam’s wicked device ^h of setting up the golden calves.” In the Scripture language, the Jewish people are said to play the harlot with those whose religious ceremonies they imitated. And she doted on her lovers—That is, her foreign allies, whose idolatries she was fond of, and hoped by that means to procure their friendship and assistance: see note on chap. xvi. 33, 37. On the Assyrians her neighbours—The king of Assyria was a very potent prince, and thereupon his alliance was courted both by the kings of Israel and Judah: see the margin.

Which were clothed with blue, captains and rulers—“As women are apt to fall in love with comely young men, well mounted and richly clothed; so the Israelites were enamoured with the state and bravery of the Assyrians, and thought themselves secure if they could but procure their alliance and friendship, and in order to it embraced their idolatries. Horsemen riding upon horses—Horses were scarce in Judea, which made the Jews apply themselves to the neighbouring countries for troops of horse, in the time of any hostile invasion.”—Lowth.

Verses 7–10. Thus she committed whoredoms with them—She defiled herself with idols, as the sense is more plainly expressed at the end of the verse. Neither left she her whoredoms brought from Egypt—She added new idolatries to those she had formerly committed: see verse 3. Wherefore I delivered her into the hand of her lovers—God made these very Assyrians the executioners of his judgments upon the ten tribes, many of them being carried away captive by Pul, king of Assyria, afterward by

10 These ^h discovered her naked- A. M. 3412 ness: they took her sons and her B. C. 592.
daughters, and slew her with the sword: and she became ⁵ famous among women; for they had executed judgment upon her.

11 And ⁱ when her sister Aholibah saw this, ^k she ⁶ was more corrupt in her inordinate love than she, and in her whoredoms ⁷ more than her sister in her whoredoms.

12 She doted upon the ^l Assyrians her neighbours, ^m captains and rulers clothed most gorgeously, horsemen riding upon horses, all of them desirable young men.

13 Then I saw that she was defiled, that they took both one way;

14 And that she increased her whoredoms: for when she saw men portrayed upon the

ⁱ Jer. iii. 8.—^k Jer. iii. 11; Chap. xvi. 47, 51.—⁶ Heb. she corrupted her inordinate love more than, &c.—⁷ Heb. more than the whoredoms of her sister.—^l 2 Kings xvi. 7, 10; 2 Chronicles xxviii. 16–23; Chap. xvi. 28.—^m Verses 6, 23.

Tiglath-pileser, and at length the whole country was subdued and depopulated by Shalmaneser: see the margin. The kings of Babylon were likewise styled kings of Assyria, 2 Kings xxiii. 29; 2 Chron. xxxiii. 11. Lovers mean the same with allies; those whose friendship and assistance the Jews courted, by complying with them in their idolatries, chap. xvi. 37. These discovered her nakedness: they took her sons and her daughters—These stripped her of every thing, and carried her and her children away captive: see the margin, and verse 29. And slew her with the sword—Those that were not led captive were slain in the field of battle, or in the siege of Samaria, 2 Kings xvii. 5. And she became famous among women—The Hebrew reads, She became a nation among women: as she had been formerly renowned among the heathen for her beauty, (chap. xvi. 14,) so now she was everywhere talked of as a remarkable instance of God’s vengeance, and set forth for an example to other cities and nations, to deter them from the like abominations.

Verses 11, 12. When her sister Aholibah saw this, she was more corrupt—Jerusalem was so far from taking warning by the judgments inflicted on Samaria, that she advanced to greater degrees of idolatry. She doted upon the Assyrians her neighbours—Ahaz, king of Judah, entered into a confederacy with the king of Assyria, hoping for relief from his power and the bravery of his army, and worshipped the idols which the Assyrians worshipped, in order to ingratiate himself with them. See the margin.

Verses 13–16. Then—When she neither took warning nor feared; I saw that she was defiled—That her heart was already set on her idols; that they both—Samaria and Jerusalem; took one way—That Judah fell into the same idolatrous practices as Israel. And that she increased her whoredoms

A. M. 3412. wall, the images of the Chaldeans
B. C. 592. portrayed with vermilion,

15 Girded with girdles upon their loins, exceeding in died attire upon their heads, all of them princes to look to, after the manner of the Babylonians of Chaldea, the land of their nativity:

16 ^a And ^b as soon as she saw them with her eyes, she doted upon them, and sent messengers unto them into Chaldea.

17 And the ^c Babylonians came to her into the bed of love, and they defiled her with their whoredom, and she was polluted with them, and ^d her mind was ^e alienated from them.

18 So she discovered her whoredoms, and discovered her nakedness: then ^f my mind was

^a 2 Kings xxiv. 1; Chapter xvi. 29.—^b Heb. at the sight of her eyes.—^c Heb. children of Babel.—^d Verses 22, 28.

—Added to the number of her idolatries; for when she saw men portrayed, &c.—These were probably the pictures of those deified heroes, whom the Chaldeans worshipped as gods; such were Bel, Nebo, and Merodach, mentioned Isa. xlv. 1; Jer. l. 2. Calmet, however, understands the words in a different sense, paraphrasing them thus: "Before she had seen the Assyrians, upon the bare relation concerning them, or upon the painting only which was made of them, her passion was inflamed toward them." Girded with girdles upon their loins—A girdle was a mark of dignity, and worn as such by princes and men in authority. In died attire upon their heads—Houbigant reads, Having their heads bound with a died tiara, or turban. The Chaldeans, and afterward the Persians, wore a sort of turban upon their heads, died of different colours, and with different degrees of ornaments, according to their different qualities. As soon as she saw them, she doted upon them—These images pleased her so much, that she sent to Babylon to learn the manner how their idols were to be worshipped: see verses 40, 41; chap. xvi. 17. This, Lowth thinks, relates to those times when a correspondence was maintained between the cities of Babylon and Jerusalem, after that Nebuchadnezzar had conquered Judea, and made it a tributary kingdom, in the beginning of the fourth year of Jehoiakim.

Verses 17–20. And the Babylonians came to her, &c.—The metaphor of representing idolatry by the inordinate lust of adultery is still carried on. And her mind was alienated from them—She quickly grew weary of these also, as lewd women are of their former gallants, and look out for new ones. She broke her league and covenant with them, as St. Jerome very well expresses the sense; meaning that covenant which Jehoiakim made with Nebuchadnezzar to be his tributary, and which was afterward renewed by Zedekiah. So she discovered, or, after she discovered, her whoredoms—The sense alienated from her, like as my mind A. M. 3412. was alienated from her sister. B. C. 592.

19 Yet she multiplied her whoredoms, in calling to remembrance the days of her youth, ^a wherein she had played the harlot in the land of Egypt.

20 For she doted upon their paramours, ^b whose flesh is as the flesh of asses, and whose issue is like the issue of horses.

21 Thus thou calledst to remembrance the lewdness of thy youth, in bruising thy teats by the Egyptians for the paps of thy youth.

22 ¶ Therefore, O Aholibah, thus saith the Lord God; ^c Behold, I will raise up thy lovers against thee, from whom thy mind is alienated, and I will bring them against thee on every side;

^a Heb. loosed, or, disjointed.—^b Jeremiah vi. 8.—^c Verse 3. Chap. xvi. 26.—Chap. xvi. 37; Verse 28.

being still continued with the foregoing verse. The meaning is, She was open and notorious in her lewd practices, and in the highest degree shameless. Then my mind was alienated from her—As she, by her idolatries, had broken all the bonds of duty and allegiance whereby she was engaged to me, a sin often compared to a wife's disloyalty toward her husband, so I withdrew my love and affection from her, and resolved to give her a bill of divorce, as the Prophet Jeremiah expresses it, and not own her any more as mine, as I had cast off her sister Samaria. Yet she multiplied, &c.—Though she was fond of new idolatries, she did not forget her old ones, even those which she had learned in Egypt. For she doted upon their paramours—Upon the idols of Egypt, and the impure rites which accompanied their idolatrous worship. This may relate to the time when Zedekiah entered into a new confederacy with Egypt, which made the people fond of admitting the Egyptian idolatries. Whose flesh, &c.—These expressions seem to be made use of, to signify the excess of the Egyptian idolatry. They may likewise metaphorically express the great power and riches of the Egyptians, which made the Jewish people fond of courting their friendship and alliance.

Verses 22–24. I will raise up thy lovers against thee, &c.—I will execute my judgments upon thee, by those very Babylonians whose alliance and idolatries thou hast been so fond of, but since hast broken the league thou madest with them, contracting a new one with Egypt, and thereby hast provoked them to revenge thy perfidiousness. Pekod, and Koa, and Shoa, and all the Assyrians with them—The inhabitants of the several provinces of the Babylonish monarchy; for most of the ancients understand these words as names of places. Pekod is mentioned as a province of Babylon, Jer. l. 21. St. Jerome, however, upon the place, understands these three words, Pekod, Shoa, and Koa, in an appellative sense, to denote so many titles, or degrees

A. M. 3412. 23 The Babylonians, and all the
B. C. 592. Chaldeans, ^a Pekod, and Shoa, and Koa, and all the Assyrians with them: ^a all of them desirable young men, captains and rulers, great lords and renowned, all of them riding upon horses.

24 And they shall come against thee with chariots, wagons, and wheels, and with an assembly of people, which shall set against thee a buckler and shield and helmet round about:
and I will set judgment before them, and they shall judge thee according to their judgments.

25 And I will set my jealousy against thee, and they shall deal furiously with thee: they shall take away thy nose and thine ears; and thy remnant shall fall by the sword: they shall take thy sons and thy daughters; and thy residue shall be devoured by the fire.

26 ^a They shall also strip thee out of thy clothes, and take away thy ¹¹ fair jewels.

¹ Jer. l. 21. — ^a Verse 12. — ^x Chap. xvi. 39. — ¹¹ Heb. instruments of thy decking. — ^y Chap. xvi. 41; xxii. 15.

of honour; as much as to say, governors, princes, and great men. In which sense the two former words, Pekod (or Pakud) and Shoa, are confessedly taken in Scripture. All of them desirable young men, &c.—As their riches and bravery made them appear amiable in your eyes when you first courted their alliance, so they shall appear in the same splendid equipage when they come to invade your country and to besiege your city; but then their gallant appearance shall strike a terror and a consternation into you. And they shall come against thee with chariots, &c.—Chariots are mentioned, both by sacred and profane writers, as of principal use in the ancient way of fighting. And I will set judgment before them, &c.—I will deliver thee into their power, as the ministers of my justice, who shall make thy punishments bear a correspondence with thy guilt.

Verses 25–27. I will set my jealousy against thee, &c.—I will be against thee, as a jealous man is against his wife; and they shall deal furiously—
And they, as the executioners of my wrath, shall act toward thee as persons provoked to great fury.
And they shall take away thy nose, &c.—A punishment of adultery which rage sometimes dictated.
As husbands in that case render those women deformed whose beauty hath been too pleasing to strangers, so shall the Chaldeans deface all the glories and ornaments of Jerusalem, and after they have slain and carried captive its inhabitants, shall set the city on fire, and reduce it to a heap of ashes.
The mutilations mentioned in this verse were common among the Chaldeans. St. Jerome assures us, that they frequently cut off the nose and the ears of adulterers. And this was practised toward adul-

27 Thus ^y will I make thy lewdness A. M. 3419. to cease from thee, and ^z thy whore- B. C. 592.
dom brought from the land of Egypt: so that thou shalt not lift up thine eyes unto them, nor remember Egypt any more.

28 For thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will deliver thee into the hand of them ^a whom thou hatest, in the hand of them ^b from whom thy mind is alienated:

29 And they shall deal with thee hatefully, and shall take away all thy labour, and ^c shall leave thee naked and bare: and the nakedness of thy whoredoms shall be discovered, both thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

30 I will do these things unto thee, because thou hast ^d gone a whoring after the heathen, and because thou art polluted with their idols.

31 Thou hast walked in the way of thy sister; therefore will I give her ^e cup into thy hand.

^z Verses 3, 19. — ^a Chap. xvi. 37. — ^b Verse 17. — ^c Chapter
xvi. 39; Verse 26. — ^d Chap. vi. 9. — ^e Jer. xxv. 15.

teresses in Egypt. They shall also strip thee, &c.
—As lewd, disgraced harlots and captives were used chap. xvi. 39. And take away thy fair jewels—All thy rich, beautiful ornaments, which shall be a prey to the enemy. Thus will I make thy lewdness to cease—“These severe judgments shall effectually deter thee from idolatry, and make thee abhor the least approaches toward it. Accordingly we find that after the captivity the Jews never returned to their former idolatrous practices.”—Lowth. And thy whoredom brought from the land of Egypt— Thy idolatries which thou broughtest with thee from Egypt, where thou didst first learn idolatry, and ever hast had an inclination to it.

Verses 28–30. Behold, I will deliver thee, &c.— I will give thee up into the power of the Chaldeans, whom thou wast formerly fond of, verse 22; but since thou hast broken thy league and friendship with them, thy love is turned into hatred: see verse 17. They shall deal with thee hatefully, &c.— As thou hast changed thy friendship for them into enmity, so shall they deal with thee; their hatred against thee shall be greater than their former love toward thee. This shall prompt them to take a full revenge upon thy perfidiousness, to consume all the fruits of thy labours, and to take away all the wealth thou hast gathered by thine industry. Thy whoredoms shall be discovered—All thy foul and shameful deeds shall be brought to light. I will do these things, because thou hast gone a whoring, &c.
—I will cause all these things to be done unto thee by the Babylonians, who are the executioners of my anger.

Verses 31–35. Therefore will I give her cup, &c.
—I will make thee drink the same bitter draught, or

A. M. 3412. 32 Thus saith the Lord God; Thou shalt drink of thy sister's cup deep and large; ^f thou shalt be laughed to scorn and had in derision; it containeth much.

33 Thou shalt be filled with drunkenness and sorrow, with the cup of astonishment and desolation, with the cup of thy sister Samaria.

34 Thou shalt ^e even drink it and suck it out, and thou shalt break the sherds thereof, and pluck off thine own breasts: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God.

35 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because thou hast ^h forgotten me, and ⁱ cast me behind thy back, therefore bear thou also thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

36 ¶ The Lord said moreover unto me; Son of man, wilt thou ^k judge ^{l2} Aholah and Aholibah? yea, ^l declare unto them their abominations; experience the same calamity that has fallen upon her. God's judgments are often compared to a cup of intoxicating liquors, because they astonish men, and bereave them of common judgment and discretion, and likewise expose them to the scorn and contempt of their enemies. Thou shalt even drink it and suck it out—There shall be no punishment which thou shalt not partake of. Thou shalt drink of the cup of calamity even to the dregs; that which is the very worst and most bitter: see notes on Psa. lxxv. 8, and Isa. li. 17. Thou shalt break the sherds thereof—People who are quite intoxicated, often in their drunken madness break the cups out of which they had drunk; therefore by this expression here is meant, that the Jewish people should be, as it were, driven to madness by the grievous judgments that should fall upon them. And pluck off thine own breasts—"Thou shalt tear away thy breasts with the sharp pieces of the broken cup, through grief and madness."—Bishop Newcome. Or, Thou shalt be in a fury with thyself for having by thine own sins brought such grievous calamities upon thyself. Her breasts are mentioned as the parts which had a principal share in her guilt, according to the allegorical description here given of her idolatries. Because thou hast forgotten me—Because thou hast not only forsaken my worship, but hast showed the utmost contempt of and aversion from me. Therefore bear thou also thy lewdness—Therefore thou shalt suffer the punishment of thy wickedness and idolatry.

^f Chap. xxii. 4, 5.—^g Psalm lxxv. 8; Isaiah li. 17.—^h Jer. ii. 32; iii. 21; xiii. 25; Chapter xxii. 12.—ⁱ 1 Kings xiv. 9; Nehemiah ix. 26.—^k Chap. xx. 4; xxii. 2.—^{l2} Or, plead for. ^l Isa. lviii. 1.

Verses 36–39. Wilt thou judge Aholah and Aholibah—That is, Samaria and Jerusalem? The meaning is, Wilt thou not judge, or, Wilt thou not condemn them? That they have committed adultery, and blood is, &c.—That they have been guilty 37 That they have committed adultery, and ^m blood is in their hands, ^{A. M. 3412. B. C. 592.} and with their idols have they committed adultery, and have also caused their sons, ⁿ whom they bare unto me, to pass for them through the fire, to devour them.

38 Moreover, this they have done unto me: they have defiled my sanctuary in the same day, and ^o have profaned my sabbaths.

39 For when they had slain their children to their idols, then they came the same day into my sanctuary to profane it; and lo, ^p thus have they done in the midst of my house.

40 And furthermore, that ye have sent for men ¹³ to come from far, ^q unto whom a messenger was sent; and lo, they came: for whom thou didst ^r wash thyself, ^s paintedst thine eyes, and deckedst thyself with ornaments,

^m Chapter xvi. 38; Verse 45.—ⁿ Chap. xvi. 20, 21, 36, 45; xx. 26, 31.—^o Chap. xxii. 8.—^p 2 Kings xxi. 4.—¹³ Heb. coming.—^q Isa. lvii. 9.—^r Ruth iii. 3.—^s 2 Kings ix. 30; Jer. iv. 30.

of the heinous sins of murder and adultery; and have also caused their sons, &c.—Have caused their children, who of right belonged to me, and who ought to have been bred up to be my worshippers, to be burned in the fire, by way of sacrifice in honour to false gods. They have defiled my sanctuary in the same day—They have also come directly from these idolatrous and abominable rites and sacrifices into my temple, as though they could worship me acceptably when they were thus horribly polluted. And have profaned my sabbaths—Have spent the sabbaths, which I appointed to be observed to my honour alone, in the service and to the honour of idols. Or, they profaned them by coming into God's courts to observe them, immediately after they had defiled themselves by their idolatrous and horrid ceremonies. For when they had slain their children to their idols—To my great dishonour, and the reproach of the human nature; then they came into my sanctuary—With their hands imbrued, and their clothes stained with their children's blood, to present themselves before me; expecting acceptance with me notwithstanding their villanies, as if I either did not know their wickedness, or did not hate it. And lo, thus have they done in the midst of my house—In the inward part of my temple. Some expound the words, of their setting up idols in the very temple, and worshipping them there.

Verses 40–42. And furthermore, ye have sent for men to come from far, &c.—Here the same thing which was spoken of in the former part of the chapter, is mentioned again in other words, namely, their courting the alliances of foreign nations, by complying with their idolatries: and this is set forth under the representation of the several arts which harlots used to recommend themselves to new lovers:

A. M. 3412. 41 And satest upon a ¹⁴stately ¹bed,
B. C. 592. and a table prepared before it, ^awhereupon thou hast set mine incense and mine oil.

42 And a voice of a multitude being at ease was with her: and with the men ¹⁵of the common sort were brought ¹⁶Sabeans from the wilderness, which put bracelets upon their hands, and beautiful crowns upon their heads.

43 Then said I unto her that was old in adulteries, Will they now commit ¹⁷whore-doms with her, and she with them?

44 Yet they went in unto her, as they go in unto a woman that playeth the harlot: so went they in unto Aholah and unto Aholibah, the lewd women.

45 ¶ And the righteous men, they shall ²judge them after the manner of adulteresses,

¹⁴ Heb. honourable.—¹ Esth. i. 6; Isa. lvii. 7; Amos ii. 8;
vi. 4.—^a Proverbs vii. 17; Chapter xvi. 18, 19; Hosea ii. 8.
¹⁵ Heb. of the multitude of men.—¹⁶ Or, drunkards.—¹⁷ Heb.
her whoredoms.—² Chap. xvi. 38.—³ Verse 37.

compare Isa. lvii. 7, 9. For whom thou didst wash thyself—A custom generally practised by women in those countries, before they entertained their lovers. Paintedst thy eyes—It seems to have been their fashion in those days to draw strokes about their eyes, or to colour their eye-brows with black lead. And satest upon a stately bed—Here the custom of sitting or lying upon beds, at the feasts made in honour of idols, or false gods, seems to be particularly spoken of, as may be inferred from the following words: whereupon thou hast set mine incense and mine oil—That is, whereupon thou hast offered up to idols that incense and oil which ought to have been offered up to me. It was usual, after a sacrifice to idols, for a table well spread to be placed before a couch, and a feast to be partaken of. The lectisternia of the Romans were borrowed from this eastern idolatrous rite, Livy, v. xiii. Houbigant thinks, that by the table here spoken of is meant the altar which Ahaz erected, after the similitude of that which he had seen at Damascus. And a voice of a multitude, &c.—The noise of festivity, and of people assembled together in jollity, was heard all around. It seems their loose mirth, at their meetings in honour of some of their idols, is here particularly meant. And with the men of the common sort were brought Sabeans, &c.—The prophet proceeds in comparing the idolatries of the Jews to the practices of lewd women, who prostitute themselves to all comers, even those of the meanest condition. Such were the Sabeans that came from the wilderness, that is, from Arabia, called the desert, where dwelt the posterity of Seba, mentioned Gen. x. 7. Which put bracelets upon their hands, &c.—That is, upon the hands and heads of these two lewd women, Aholah and Aholibah. Bracelets and crowns were ornaments proper for brides, and were likewise presented by lovers to their mistresses; and

and after the manner of women that ^{A. M. 3412} shed blood: because they are adul- ^{B. C. 592.} teresses, and ⁷blood is in their hands.

46 For thus saith the Lord God; ²I will bring up a company upon them, and will give them ¹⁸to be removed and spoiled.

47 ^aAnd the company shall stone them ¹⁹with stones, and ¹⁹despatch them with their swords; ^bthey shall slay their sons and their daughters, and burn up their houses with fire.

48 Thus ^cwill I cause lewdness to cease out of the land, ^dthat all women may be taught not to do after your lewdness.

49 And they shall recompense your lewdness upon you, and ye shall ^ebear the sins of your idols: ^fand ye shall know that I am the Lord God.

² Chap. xvi. 40.—¹⁸ Heb. for a removing and spoil.—^a Chap.
xvi. 41.—¹⁹ Or, single them out.—^b 2 Chron. xxxvi. 17, 19; Chap. xxiv. 21.—^c Chap. xxii. 15; Verse 27.—^d Deut. xiii.
11; 2 Pet. ii. 6.—^e Verse 35.—^f Chap. xx. 38, 42, 44; xxv. 5.

therefore this may signify the compliance of the Jewish people with the grossest idolatries. Or the meaning may be, that Aholah and Aholibah, the inhabitants of Samaria and Jerusalem, put bracelets upon the hands, and beautiful crowns upon the heads, of such worthless idolaters as the Sabeans of the wilderness were; that is, courted their friendship and alliance with gifts.

Verses 43, 44. Then I said unto her that was grown old in adulteries—Aholibah, who had been long idolatrous. The words import that experience might, before this time, have sufficiently convinced her of the folly of her ways. Will they now commit whoredoms with her?—God is here represented as waiting to see whether that mutability, which is natural to the human race, would not occasion a difference between the Jewish people and their idolatrous allies, and make them grow weary of one another. Yet they went in unto her, &c.—Both Samaria and Jerusalem continued to defile themselves with the idolatries of all the heathen round about them: compare verses 7, 17.

Verses 45–49. And the righteous men, they shall judge them—All just judges, yea, all men that have any sense of common honesty, will condemn their conduct, and pronounce them deserving of the punishment of adulteresses and murderers. Or, as others interpret the words, “As upright magistrates used to condemn and execute judgment upon adulterers and murderers, so did the prophets, in the name of God, denounce sentence against Jerusalem and Samaria; and even the heathen princes, who executed the sentence, were more righteous than the apostate sufferers.”—Scott. I will bring a company upon them, &c.—This is spoken of the Babylonians, who were to plunder and carry away a great part of the inhabitants of Jerusalem. And the company shall stone them with stones, and despatch them with swords—Stoning was the punishment of adulterers, and putting to death with the sword that of murderers. The Babylonian army might be properly said to be the executioners of both these punishments upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, as, without doubt, they killed many of them during the siege by the stones they cast from their engines, and slew many by the sword when they took the city by assault. Thus will I cause lewdness to cease, &c.—Thus will I put an end to idolatry in the Jewish nation. That all women may be taught not to do after your lewdness—That is, that all nations may dread defiling themselves with the guilt of your idolatries. For as the kingdoms of Israel and Judah are here described as two women, therefore, by all women here must be meant all nations. And ye shall bear the sins of your idols—Ye shall bear the punishment due to your sins of idolatry. To bear sin, or iniquity, is an expression often used in the Scriptures to signify undergoing the punishment due to it.

CHAPTER XXIV.

In this chapter, (1.) By the sign of flesh boiling in a pot are shown the miseries that Jerusalem should suffer during the siege, 1–14. (2.) By the sign of Ezekiel's being forbidden to mourn for the sudden death of his wife is shown, that the calamities coming on the Jews should be so astonishing as to exceed all expressions of sorrow, 15–27.

A. M. 3414.
B. C. 590. AGAIN, in the ninth year, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, write thee the name of the day, even of this same day: the king of Babylon set himself against Jerusalem ^athis same day.

3 ^bAnd utter a parable unto the rebellious house, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; ^cSet on a pot, set it on, and also pour water into it:

4 Gather the pieces thereof into it, even every good piece, the thigh, and the shoulder; fill it with the choice bones.

5 Take the choice of the flock, and ¹burn also the bones under it, and make it boil well, and let them seeth the bones of it therein.

^a 2 Kings xxv. 1; Jer. xxxix. 1; lii. 4.

^b Chap. xvii. 12.—^c Jer. i. 13; Chap. xi. 3.—¹ Or, heap.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXIV.

Verses 1, 2. Again, in the ninth year—Namely, of Jehoiachin's captivity, and of Zedekiah's reign; the word of the Lord came unto me—Namely, in Chaldea, where the prophet now was, and where, as the words here evidently imply, God gave him notice, though many hundreds of miles distant from Jerusalem, of Nebuchadnezzar's beginning to lay siege to that city, just at the time when he began to do it. Saying, The king of Babylon set himself against Jerusalem—Hebrew, כִּכְךָ אֶל יְרוּשָׁלַם, hath set himself, or, as Buxtorf renders it, accedit, vel appropinquat, comes, or approaches, to Jerusalem, בָּעֵצָם הַיּוֹם הַזֶּה, this self-same day—Namely, this day that I now speak to thee. Write thee the name of the day, &c.—Make a memorial of the day, and of my having this day informed thee of this great event; and signify it to the people, that when they shall receive intelligence from Judea of the siege having been begun this day, according to thy information, it may be a confirmation of the truth of thy mission, and of the certainty of the fulfilment of all thy predictions. This was about two years before the taking of Jerusalem: see 2 Kings xxv. 1; Jer. xxxix. 1; and lii. 4.

Verses 3–5. Utter a parable unto the rebellious house—Though the house of Judah has as yet paid no due regard to what thou and the rest of the prophets have uttered or done; nevertheless, still further represent to them the destruction coming upon them by a symbolical action. Set on a pot, &c.—By the pot was signified Jerusalem, (under which figure it is represented, both by this prophet, chap. xi. 3, and by Jeremiah, chap. i. 13.) and by the pieces gathered into it, the different ranks of men gathered into that city, by taking refuge within its walls, when the Chaldean army approached to besiege it. By the water and fire were signified the calamities which they were to suffer. By every good piece, the thigh and the shoulder, the wealthiest and chief of the inhabitants of the land seem to be meant, who would flee from their country houses to live in safety in Jerusalem; and by the choice bones, the bravest and strongest among the common people, or the most warlike, who would betake themselves to the city for its defence. Burn also the bones under it—Not the bones of the pieces to be boiled, but of the many innocent persons to be murdered in Jerusalem, whose blood cried for vengeance, and their bones, scattered on the face of the earth, will both make and maintain this fire. Bishop Newcome renders the clause, Pile also (in the margin we read heap) the bones under it: namely, as he explains it, “the useless bones (verse 10) which the coals (verse 11) would consume, to show what a general destruction of the meaner sort would be caused by the Chaldeans.”

A. M. 3414. 6 Wherefore thus saith the Lord
B. C. 590. GOD; Wo to ^dthe bloody city, to the pot whose scum is therein, and whose scum is not gone out of it! bring it out piece by piece; let no ^elot fall upon it.

7 For her blood is in the midst of her; she set it upon the top of a rock; ^fshe poured it not upon the ground, to cover it with dust;

8 That it might cause fury to come up to take vengeance; ^gI have set her blood upon the top of a rock, that it should not be covered.

9 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; ^hWo to the bloody city! I will even make ^{A. M. 3414.}

the pile for fire great. ^{B. C. 590.}

10 Heap on wood, kindle the fire, consume the flesh, and spice it well, and let the bones be burned.

11 Then set it empty upon the coals thereof, that the brass of it may be hot, and may burn, and that ⁱthe filthiness of it may be molten in it, that the scum of it may be consumed.

12 She hath wearied herself with lies, and her great scum went not forth out of her: her scum shall be in the fire.

^d Chapter xxii. 3; xxiii. 37; Verse 9.—^e 2 Sam. viii. 2; Joel iii. 3; Obad. 11; Nah. iii. 10.

^f Lev. xvii. 13; Deut. xii. 16, 24.—^g Matt. vii. 2.—^h Verse 6; Nah. iii. 1; Hab. ii. 12.—ⁱ Chap. xxii. 15.

And make it boil well—To denote the heat or violence of the calamity, and perhaps also that the city would be set on fire and consumed.

Verses 6-8. Wherefore thus saith the Lord—Here begins an explication of the preceding symbolical representation; Wo to the bloody city—Jerusalem, which is this pot; whose scum is therein—Whose filthiness, or wickedness, is not purged out of it. Bring it out piece by piece—One piece after another till all be taken. Let nothing be left in it; let it be emptied of every thing. This signified the entire ruin and spoil of the city and the inhabitants of it, all without distinction being either killed or carried into captivity. Let no lot fall upon it—There shall be no lot cast to determine who shall be spared and who consumed, or who shall be left and who carried into captivity; for they shall be all either destroyed or carried away. For her blood is in the midst of her—The innocent blood which she hath shed. She set it upon the top of a rock—Openly and publicly, without fear, or shame, or reluctance; she set it where it might be seen by all, and seen long; she shed blood in a presumptuous manner, and with a high hand; she was impudent and barefaced in her cruelties; she did not seek to cover or excuse them. She poured it not upon the ground, to cover it with dust—As being ashamed of shedding it. “These words allude to the command of the law, Lev. xvii. 13, that they should cover the blood of any beast, or other living creature which was slain, with dust; which precept was not only intended to prevent their eating of blood, but also to give men a sort of horror or aversion to bloodshed.”—Lowth. That it might cause fury to come up to take vengeance—For such impudent murders as these, which even dared the divine indignation. I have set her blood upon the top of a rock—Her punishment shall be as notorious in the sight of the world as her sin was. I will punish it so openly, and in such a manner, as shall not be soon forgotten.

Verses 9-11. Thus saith the Lord, &c.—In this and the two following verses is still more fully explained the meaning of the symbol of the boiling pot, and what the fire is that made it boil. By making the pile for the fire great, is signified the destruction being very great and general. And spice it well—Or, season it well, so as to make it desirable. The expression imports, that the Babylonians should be as much set on destroying the city and inhabitants, as hungry people are greedy of devouring meat well spiced and dressed. This was a very proper expression, considering that Jerusalem, in the foregoing part of this chapter, is represented as a boiling pot, and the inhabitants of it as pieces of flesh boiled in it. All the other expressions of this verse signify an entire destruction. Then set it empty upon the coals thereof, &c.—This expresses, that after a riddance was made of the inhabitants, either by slaughtering them with the sword, or carrying them away into captivity, the city itself, represented by the pot, should be burned with fire, that its impurity might be consumed, or purged away by the flames; that is to say, that their wickedness might be taken away with their persons and city; or that the remains of the inhabitants, who were made captives, should be reformed by this terrible destruction of Jerusalem. If we understand it as spoken of the place of the city, the expression may allude to what was commanded in the ceremonial law, namely, that metal vessels, which water could not cleanse, should be purified by fire. Thus nothing short of burning Jerusalem down to the ground could purge it from its abominations: afterward it should be rebuilt, and become a holy city, free from the idolatries which had formerly defiled it.

Verses 12-14. She hath wearied herself with lies—Hebrew, וּבְרִיבָהּ, with vanities, or troubles; multiplying her idolatries, and seeking help sometimes from one idol and sometimes from another, but all in vain. The expression may also include the alliances the Jewish people entered into, and the various arts of policy they employed to avert their ruin, none of which were of any service to them: as if he had said, She has taken a great deal of pains, but to no purpose: her allies, their promises, their forces, their gods, all prove a lie to the house of Judah. Her great scum went not out of her, &c.—All the admonitions I gave her by my prophets, and my sundry chastisements and punishments of her sin, availed nothing to the purifying her from her idolatries and

A. M. 3414. 13 In thy filthiness is lewdness :
B. C. 590. because I have purged thee, and thou wast not purged, thou shalt not be purged from thy filthiness any more ^k till I have caused my fury to rest upon thee.

14 ^l I the LORD have spoken it : it shall come to pass, and I will do it ; I will not go back, ^m neither will I spare, neither will I repent ; according to thy ways, and according to thy doings, shall they judge thee, saith the Lord God.

15 ¶ Also the word of the LORD came unto
me, saying,

16 Son of man, behold, I take away from thee the desire of thine eyes with a stroke : yet neither shalt thou mourn nor weep, neither shall thy tears ² run down.

17 ³ Forbear to cry, ⁿ make no mourning for the dead, ^o bind the tire of thy head upon thee, and ^p put on thy shoes upon thy feet, and ^k Chapter v. 13; viii. 18; xvi. 42.—^l 1 Samuel xv. 29.

^m Chapter v. 11.—ⁿ Heb. go.—^o Heb. Be silent.—^p Jeremiah xvi. 5, 6, 7.—^q Leviticus x. 6; xxi. 10.—^r 2 Samuel
xv. 30.—^s Micah iii. 7.

other wickedness ; her scum shall be in the fire—
The fire must consume her and her wickedness. In thy filthiness is lewdness—Thou hast shown thyself shameless and incorrigible in thine idolatries. Because I have purged thee, and thou wast not purged
—I did what was requisite on my part to thy amendment, but thou refusedst to comply with those frequent calls and exhortations which I gave thee ; and therefore my Spirit shall not strive with thee any longer with gentle methods, but I will proceed to execute my severest judgments upon thee, namely, by sending thee into captivity, and letting thee suffer all the calamities of it for a long season. According to thy doings shall they judge thee—According to thy deserts shall the Chaldeans, who are the ministers of my justice, punish thee.

Verses 16–18. Behold, I take away from thee the desire of thine eyes with a stroke—Behold, I take away from thee thy wife, the object of thy love and thy affection, by a sudden stroke from my own immediate hand, that is, by a sudden death. Observe, reader, we know not how soon the desire of our eyes may be removed from us. Death is a stroke from which the most pious, the most useful, the most amiable, are not exempted. Yet neither shalt thou mourn nor weep—Thou shalt not show any signs of grief. This command was given to the prophet, to signify that the public calamity should be so great, that private ones would not appear worthy of notice, nor would they be at leisure to lament them, so much would those of a public nature distract and oppress them. Bind the tire of thy head upon thee—Use thy ordinary dress upon thy head ; for in the time of mourning it was customary sometimes to shave

^q cover not thy ⁴ lips, and eat not the ^r A. M. 3414.
bread of men. B. C. 590.

18 So I spake unto the people in the morning :
and at even my wife died ; and I did in the morning as I was commanded.

19 ¶ And the people said unto me, ^r Wilt thou not tell us what these things are to us, that thou doest so ?

20 Then I answered them, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

21 Speak unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God ; Behold, ^s I will profane my sanctuary, the excellency of your strength, ^t the desire of your eyes, and ^u that which your soul pitieth ; ^v and your sons and your daughters whom ye have left shall fall by the sword.

22 And ye shall do as I have done : ^x ye shall not cover your lips, nor eat the bread of men.

23 And your tires shall be upon your heads,

⁴ Heb. upper lip, and so Verse 22 ; Lev. xiii. 45.—^r Chap.
xii. 9 ; xxxvii. 18.—^s Jeremiah vii. 14 ; Chap. vii. 20, 21, 22.
^t Psa. xxvii. 4.—^u Heb. the pity of your soul.—^v Chap. xxiii.
47.—^x Jer. xvi. 6, 7 ; Verse 17.

the head, sometimes to cast dust upon it. Put on thy shoes upon thy feet—Going barefoot was usual in great sorrow and affliction ; and therefore the prophet, who was to show no sign of sorrow, was commanded to put on his shoes. Cover not thy lips— Covering the lips, or face, was another token of mourning. And eat not the bread of men—Partake not of the mourning-feast, that relations used to prepare for the funerals of their friends : see note on Jer. xvi. 7. So I spake to the people, &c., and at even my wife died—My wife accordingly died very suddenly in the evening of a day, on the morning of which I had been speaking to the people, concerning the intimations I had of her death ; and the next morning I declared what commands God had laid upon me, not to make any outward show, or sign of mourning upon that occasion.

Verses 19–24. Will thou not tell us what these things are—That is, what is the meaning of thy unusual actions. They seem to make this inquiry by way of derision and contempt. Speak unto the house of Israel—Now he is commissioned to declare the meaning of what he did. Thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will profane my sanctuary—I will deliver my temple into the hands of the heathen, and they shall profane and destroy it : even that temple wherein you placed your glory, and thought your greatest protection. The desire of your eyes, and that which your soul pitieth—As much your desire, as my wife was mine ; most dear to you, the destruction of which will affect you with a most poignant grief. Your sons and your daughters whom ye have left shall fall by the sword—Whom you left behind you when you were made captives ; for this was ad-

A. M. 3414. and your shoes upon your feet : ⁷ ye
B. C. 590. shall not mourn nor weep ; but ² ye shall pine away for your iniquities, and mourn one toward another.

24 Thus ^a Ezekiel is unto you a sign : according to all that he hath done shall ye do :
^b and when this cometh, ^c ye shall know that I am the Lord God.

25 ¶ Also, thou son of man, shall it not be in the day when I take from them ^d their strength, the joy of their glory, the desire of their eyes, and ⁶ that whereupon they A. M. 3414. set their minds, their sons and their B. C. 590.

daughters,

26 That ^e he that escapeth in that day shall come unto thee, to cause thee to hear it with thine ears ?

27 ^f In that day shall thy mouth be opened to him which is escaped, and thou shalt speak, and be no more dumb : and ^g thou shalt be a sign unto them ; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

⁷ Job xxvii. 15 ; Psa. lxxviii. 64. — ² Lev. xxvi. 39 ; Chap.
xxxiii. 10. — ^a Isaiah xx. 3 ; Chap. iv. 3 ; xii. 6, 11. — ^b Jer.
xvii. 15 ; John xiii. 19 ; xiv. 29.

^c Chap. vi. 7 ; xxv. 5. — ^d Verse 21. — ^e Heb. the lifting up of their soul. — ^f Chapter xxxiii. 21, 22. — ^g Chap. iii. 26, 27 ;
xxix. 21 ; xxxiii. 22. — ^h Verse 24.

dressed to those who were at this time captives in Babylonia, having been carried thither with Jehoiachin. Or the meaning may be, Your sons, &c., who are left to you, from the famine and the pestilence.
Ye shall not mourn nor weep—These terrible judgments shall strike you with astonishment, and produce in you such distress as is too great to be expressed by words or actions ; but ye shall pine away for your iniquities, &c.—You shall be absorbed in silent sorrow, and shall waste away by lingering grief, and secret lamentation over each other's calamities, as the punishment of your iniquities, which have made your land, city, temple, and families desolate, and yourselves miserable. Thus Ezekiel is a sign unto you—His actions foreshow you what your conditions shall be. The sacred writers, in several places, speak of themselves in the third person. And when this cometh, ye shall know that I am the Lord —Comparing the prediction with the event will convince the most obstinate that the immediate hand of God is in the judgments which are come upon
you.

Verses 25-27. Also thou son of man, shall it not be,
&c.—This question is to be resolved affirmatively ;
it shall be ; in the day when I take from them their strength—Their walls, fortifications, and defences, with all that is dear and valuable to them ; the joy of their glory, the desire of their eyes—Their kingdom, city, and temple, the emblem of my special presence among them, and protection over them, whose beauty and magnificence were their peculiar glory, and the most grateful object of their sight ; together with their sons and daughters, whereon they placed their affections ; he that escapeth in that day—Namely, when the city shall be taken, and both it and the temple burned ; shall come unto thee, to cause thee to hear it, &c.—To acquaint thee, that what thou didst prophesy is come to pass. See the fulfilling of this recorded chap. xxxiii. 21, 22. In that day shall thy mouth be opened to him that is escaped—This implied, that the prophet was to prophesy no more about the affairs of Jerusalem and Judah till after the destruction of the city and temple ; when the fulfilling of this part of his predictions, so contrary to the expectations of those who despised his prophecies, would give him more credit with them, and make them pay a higher regard to what other things he should prophesy of. According to this we find, that the spirit of prophecy, in regard to the affairs of Judea, did not come on him again till the news of the taking of Jerusalem was brought to him.

See chap. xxxiii. 21-23.

CHAPTER XXV.

Having finished his denunciations of wrath against the wicked Jews, Ezekiel threatens their heathen enemies with desolating judgments. We have here, (1.) A prophecy against the Ammonites, 1-7. (2.) The Moabites, 8-11. (3.) The Edomites, 12-14. (4.) The Philistines, 15-17.

A. M. 3414. THE word of the LORD came
B. C. 590. again unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, ^a set thy face ^b against the Am-monites, and prophesy against them ;

^a Chapter vi. 2 ; xxxv. 2. — ^b Jer. xlix. 1 ; Chap. xxi. 28 ;

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXV.

Verses 1, 2. The word of the Lord came again unto me—Though Ezekiel had finished his testimo-

3 And say unto the Ammonites, A. M. 3414.
Hear the word of the Lord God ; B. C. 590.

Thus saith the Lord God ; ^c Because thou saidst, Aha, against my sanctuary, when it

Amos i. 13 ; Zeph. ii. 9. — ^c Prov. xvii. 5 ; Chap. xxvi. 2.

ny with respect to the destruction of Jerusalem, he must not be silent ; there were divers nations bordering upon the land of Israel which he must prophesy

A. M. 3414. was profaned; and against the land B. C. 590. of Israel, when it was desolate; and against the house of Judah, when they went into captivity;

4 Behold, therefore I will deliver thee to the men of the east for a possession, and they shall set their palaces in thee, and make their dwellings in thee: they shall eat thy fruit, and they shall drink thy milk.

5 And I will make ^dRabbah ^ea stable for ^a Heb. children.—^d Chap. xxi. 20.—^e Isa. xvii. 2; xxxii. 14, 15.—^f Chap. xxiv. 24; xxvi. 6; xxxv. 9.—^g Job xxvii. 23; Lam. ii. 15; Zeph. ii. 15.

against, as Isaiah and Jeremiah had done before him; and must proclaim God's controversy with them, chiefly because of the injuries and indignities which they had done to the people of God in the day of their calamity. God's resenting thus the injurious conduct of these nations toward his Israel, was an encouragement to Israel to believe, that though he had dealt thus severely with them, yet he had not cast them finally off, but would hereafter own them and plead their cause. The chronological order of these prophecies is after chap. xxxiii. 21, &c., at a time when, not only the taking of Jerusalem was known, but also the conduct which the surrounding nations pursued, in consequence of that event. Son of man, set thy face against the Ammonites—"Look thou toward the coast of the Ammonites, and in this posture prophesy against them."—Bishop Hall. Ezekiel was now a captive in Chaldea, and had been so many years, and knew little, except by supernatural revelation, even of the state of his own nation, and much less of the nations around it; but God tells him both what they were doing, and what he was about to do with them. And thus, by the spirit of prophecy, he is enabled to speak as pertinently to their case as if he had been among them.

Verse 3. Say unto the Ammonites, Hear the word of the Lord God—Not the word of your god Chemosh, for, indeed, he is dumb, and utters no word; but the word of Jehovah, the God of Israel, who is also the God of the whole earth; because thou saidst, Aha, against my sanctuary—Because, when thou shouldst have pitied, thou didst proudly insult over my people, and show thyself glad at the calamities that had befallen them; rejoicing that the temple was profaned and burned by the victorious Chaldeans, the cities destroyed, the country wasted and depopulated, and the nation ruined. "The Ammonites, Moabites, and Edomites, though related in blood to the Jews, yet bore a constant hatred toward them, which they took all opportunities of showing, when the Jews were under any distress, and particularly at the time of their general captivity, and the destruction of their city and temple. For this they are often reproved by the prophets, and threatened with the like or severer judgments, and particularly the Ammonites." See Lowth, and note on chap. xxi. 28. This hostile spirit and conduct of these camels, and the Ammonites a couch-ing-place for flocks: ^fand ye shall know that I am the LORD.

6 For thus saith the Lord God; Because thou ^ghast clapped thy ^hhands, and stamped with the ³feet, and ^hrejoiced in ⁴heart with all thy despite against the land of Israel;

7 Behold, therefore I will ⁱstretch out my hand upon thee, and will deliver thee for ⁵a spoil to the heathen; and I will cut thee off neighbouring nations toward God's ancient people, seem to have arisen partly from their envy at the wealth, and the good land which they enjoyed; partly from their fear of the growing power of the Jews, and partly from their hatred to the religion and the divine oracles with which they were favoured.

² Hebrew, hand.—³ Hebrew, foot.—^h Chapter xxxvi. 5; Zeph. ii. 8, 10.—⁴ Hebrew, soul.—ⁱ Chap. xxxv. 3.—⁵ Or, meat.

Verses 4–7. Behold, I will deliver thee to the men of the east—That is, to the Chaldeans, whose country lay east of the Ammonites. This people was accordingly conquered and subdued by the Chaldeans, about five years after the destruction of Jerusalem. And they shall drink thy milk—Milk was the principal sustenance of those people, whose riches consisted chiefly in their stocks of cattle. The Hebrew word חלב, however, here rendered milk, signifies also the fattest or choicest parts of any flesh or fruits. So it is used Gen. xlv. 18, Ye shall eat the fat of the land; and Ps. lxxxi. 16, where our translation reads, The finest of the wheat, in the Hebrew it is, The fat of the wheat. And this clause is rendered by the LXX., Καὶ αὐτοὶ πίνουν τὸν πικτήρα σου, And they shall drink, or swallow down, thy fatness. And I will make Rabbah a stable for camels—Rabbah was the chief city of the Ammonites. What is said of it here, that it should be made a stable for camels, implies, that instead of being a city inhabited by men, it should be a place for cattle, and particularly for camels, to feed and lie down in, of which that and the neighbouring countries had great store. It is a proverbial expression for utter destruction, to say that grass grows where a town stood. Because thou hast clapped thy hands, &c.—Showed expressions of joy and satisfaction in the most insolent manner, with all thy despite against the land of Israel—With the utmost hatred and contempt of my people; I will stretch out my hand upon thee—Namely, my hand of wrath. And will deliver thee for a spoil to the heathen—Or, for meat, as the word in the Hebrew text, לֶבַן, properly means, though the marginal reading of the Masorites is, לֶבַי, for a prey. The greedy, covetous soldiers shall make thy wealth their prey; the hungry enemies shall eat thee up. And I will cut thee off from the people—Thou shalt no more be reckoned among the nations, but shalt cease from being a people. And thou shalt know that I am the Lord—In these words the threaten-

A. M. 3414. from the people, and I will cause thee
B. C. 590. to perish out of the countries: I will destroy thee; and thou shalt know that I am
the LORD.

8 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God; Because that Moab and Seir do say, Behold, the house of Judah is like unto all the heathen;

9 Therefore, behold, I will open the side of Moab from the cities, from his cities which are on his frontiers, the glory of the country, Beth-jeshimoth, Baal-meon, and Kiriathaim,

10 ^m Unto the men of the east ⁷ with the Am-monites, and will give them in possession, that the Ammonites ^a may not be remembered among the nations.

11 And I will execute judgments upon Moab;
and they shall know that I am the LORD.

12 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God; ^o Because that Edom hath dealt against the house of Judah ⁸ by taking vengeance, and hath greatly offended, and revenged himself upon them;

13 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; I will also stretch out my hand upon A. M. 3414.

Edom, and will cut off man and B. C. 590.
beast from it; and I will make it desolate from Teman; and ⁹ they of Dedan shall fall by the sword.

14 And ^p I will lay my vengeance upon Edom by the hand of my people Israel: and they shall do in Edom according to mine anger and according to my fury; and they shall know my vengeance, saith the Lord God.

15 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God; ^a Because ^r the Philistines have dealt by revenge, and have taken vengeance with a despiteful heart, to destroy it ¹⁰ for the old hatred;

16 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Behold, ^s I will stretch out my hand upon the Philistines, and I will cut off the ^t Cherethims, ^u and destroy the remnant of the ¹¹ sea-coasts.

17 And I will ^z execute great ¹² vengeance upon them with furious rebukes; ^y and they shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall lay my vengeance upon them.

^k Isa. xv. i; xvi; Jer. xlviii. 1; Amos ii. 1.—¹ Ch. xxxv. 2, 5.
12.—⁶ Heb. shoulder of Moab.—^m Verse 4.—⁷ Or, against the children of Ammon.—^a Chap. xxi. 32.—² 2 Chron. xxviii.
17; Psalm cxxxvii. 7; Jer. xlix. 7, 8; Chap. xxxv. 2; Amos i.
11; Obad. 10.—⁸ Heb. by revenging revengement.

⁹ Or, they shall fall by the sword unto Dedan.—^p Isa. xi. 14;
Jer. xlix. 2.—^q Jer. xxv. 20; xlvii. 1; Joel iii. 4; Amos i. 6.
^r 2 Chron. xxviii. 18.—¹⁰ Or, with perpetual hatred.—^s Zeph.
ii. 4.—^t 1 Sam. xxx. 14.—^u Jer. xlvii. 4.—¹¹ Or, haven of the sea.—^x Ch. v. 15.—¹² Heb. vengeances.—^y Psal. ix. 16.

ings, both in verse 5 and in this verse, conclude.
For thus, 1st, God would maintain his own honour, and make it appear that he was the God of Israel, though he suffered them for a time to be captives in Babylon. And, 2d, He would bring those that were strangers to him into an acquaintance with him, and it would be a blessed effect of their calamities. How much better is it to be poor and know God, than to be rich and ignorant of him!

Verses 8-10. Because that Moab and Seir, &c.—
By Seir the Idumeans are intended. The prophet joins them together as guilty of the same crime, and then denounces particular judgments against each of them. Behold, the house of Judah is like unto all the heathen—Hebrew ככל הגוים, like all the na- tions; subdued by Nebuchadnezzar indiscriminately with them; they are not distinguished from their neighbours by the protection of the God whom they worship, and they find no advantage in worshipping of him, over those who worship other gods. It appears from hence, that the Jews had boasted, and the Gentiles till then acknowledged, that the Jews were under an extraordinary providence. The LXX.
here read, the house of Israel and Judah. There- fore will I open the side of Moab from the cities—I will expose Moab to be invaded, and open a passage for his enemies to enter his frontier cities, and from thence to possess themselves of the best part of his country. Unto the men of the east—See verse 4.
That the Ammonites may not be remembered, &c.—

May make no figure among their neighbours, their strength being entirely broken.

Verses 12-14. Because that Edom, &c.—“The Idumeans, being the posterity of Esau, bore an ancient grudge against the Jews, upon the account of their ancestor’s losing his right of primogeniture, and the subduing of Edom by David afterward, 2 Sam. viii.
14. Upon both of these accounts they took hold of all opportunities of venting their spite against the Jewish nation: see particularly 2 Chron. xxviii. 17.
For this their behaviour they were in former times reproved by Amos, chap. i. 11, and afterward by Obadiah, verse 10, and by Ezekiel, here and chap.
xxxv. 5. The ill will that they showed toward them at the time of their captivity was very remarkable, as appears by those pathological words of Psal. cxxxvii.
7, Remember the children of Edom, O Lord, in the day of Jerusalem, when they said, Down with it, down with it, even to the ground.” I will lay my vengeance upon Edom, by Israel—My people Israel themselves, whom the Edomites have so often in-sulted, shall be the instruments of my vengeance upon Edom, and shall requite the wrongs they have received by subduing Idumea; this they did under the conduct of Judas Maccabæus. And afterward the high-priest Hyrcanus made an entire conquest of this country: see Prideaux, part ii. p. 307.

Verses 15-17. Because the Philistines have dealt by revenge—The Philistines being borderers upon the Jews, were their ancient enemies, from the very time of the judges downward, more particularly in the time of Ahaz: see 2 Chron. xxviii. 18. Therefore I will stretch out my hand upon the Philistines—I will bring calamities upon them, and enemies who shall subdue them. They were accordingly subdued by Nebuchadnezzar: see Jer. xxv. 20, and xlvii. 1. The Cherethims, or Cherethites, are the same with the Philistines, or a tribe of that people: see the margin. And destroy the remnant of the sea-coast—The same who are called the remnant of the Philistines, Amos. i. 8; the remnant of Ashdod, Jer. xxv. 20; and the remnant of the country of Caphthor, chap. xlvii. 4: on which two places see the notes. It is called the remnant, or remains, because the sea-coast of the Philistines, namely, about Ashdod, had been before much wasted and spoiled by the invasion of Psammetichus, king of Egypt.

CHAPTER XXVI.

The comparatively despicable nations of the Ammonites and Moabites on the south-east, Edomites on the south, and Philistines on the south-west, of Judaea, received a short doom. Now Tyre, at that time the most famous city for trade in the world, receives a large one in this and the two subsequent chapters. Here, after the date of the prediction, is, (1.) One cause of the Tyrians' ruin; namely, their rejoicing in Jerusalem's fall, in hopes of increasing their trade by it, 2, 3. (2.) Their destruction, how terrible and complete! 4-6, 12-14; and to be effected by a prodigious and furious army of Chaldeans, 3, 7-11. (3.) What surprise and alarm their desolations should give to the nations around, 15-21.

A. M. 3416.
B. C. 588.

AND it came to pass in the eleventh year, in the first day of the month, that the word of the Lord came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, ^abecause that Tyrus hath said against Jerusalem, ^bAha, she is broken that was the gates of the people: she is turned unto me: I shall be replenished, now she is laid waste:

3 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I am against thee, O Tyrus, and will cause many nations to come up against thee, as the sea causeth his waves to come up. A. M. 3416.

B. C. 588.

4 And they shall destroy the walls of Tyrus, and break down her towers: I will also scrape her dust from her, and ^cmake her like the top of a rock.

5 If shall be a place for the spreading of nets ^din the midst of the sea: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God: and it shall become a spoil to the nations.

^a Isa. xxiii.; Jer. xxv. 22; xlvii. 4; Amos i. 9; Zech. ix. 2.

^b Chap. xxv. 3; xxxvi. 2.—^c Verse 14.—^d Chap. xxvii. 32.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXVI.

Verse 1. In the eleventh year, in the first day of the month—By the eleventh year seems to be intended the eleventh of Jehoiachin's captivity; for Ezekiel seems to reckon this time chiefly from that period. What month it was is not mentioned: some think the first month of the year is meant; others the first month after the taking of Jerusalem.

Verses 2, 3. Because that Tyrus hath said, Aha, she is broken, &c.—The meaning seems to be, the city is broken, at whose gates the people entered in; that is, the place is demolished where there used to be a confluence of people from all parts, especially at the solemn festivals. She is turned unto me, I shall be replenished—Tyre rejoiced at the fall of Jerusalem, because she expected her trade would be increased by it in becoming the mart for the commodities which, while Jerusalem stood, were bought and sold there. To which may be added, that when Jerusalem was taken, the spoil of the city was carried thither for sale, and several of the inhabitants who were made captives, were there sold as slaves. Therefore, behold, I am against thee, O Tyrus—The providence of God had greatly favoured Tyre: 1 was a pleasant and wealthy city, and might have continued so if its inhabitants had sympathized with Jerusalem in her calamities; but when, instead of that, they took pleasure in those calamities, and rejoiced at the fall of that neighbouring city, because of the gain which they thought would thereby accrue to them, they provoked the wrath of God against themselves, for he cannot but abhor the conduct of all such as take pleasure in the calamities of others. I will cause many nations to come up against thee, &c.—The Chaldeans with their confederates might be very properly called many nations, as, without doubt, the army of Nebuchadnezzar, whose dominions were very extensive, was made up of the people of various nations. As the sea causeth his waves to come up—“They shall be as loud, as numerous, as irresistible, as the waves of the sea. This is one of the beautiful and expressive images which occur in the magnificent prophecy here recorded.”—Bishop Newcome. Great and victorious armies are described in other places of Scripture under the figure of an inundation carrying all before it.

Verses 4-6. They shall destroy the walls of Tyrus, &c.—The expressions of these verses signify that Tyre should be entirely demolished, and that the place where the city stood should be made

A. M. 3416. 6 And her daughters which are in
B. C. 588. the field shall be slain by the sword ;

* and they shall know that I am the LORD.

7 ¶ For thus saith the Lord GOD ; Behold, I will bring upon Tyrus Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, [†] a king of kings, from the north, with horses, and with chariots, and with horsemen, and companies, and much people.

8 He shall slay with the sword thy daughters in the field : and he shall [‡] make a fort against thee, and [§] cast a mount against thee, and lift up the buckler against thee.

9 And he shall set engines of war against thy walls, and with his axes he shall break down thy towers.

10 By reason of the abundance of his horses,

* Chap. xxv. 5.—[†] Ezra vii. 12 ; Dan. ii. 37.—[‡] Chap. xxi. 22.—[§] Or, pour out the engine of shot.—^{||} Heb. according to the enterings of a city broken up.

as bare as the top of a rock, and that it should be employed to no other use but that of a desolate shore, the drying of the fishermen's nets. Nebuchadnezzar quite demolished old Tyre, and the stones and rubbish of it were afterward made use of by Alexander, to carry on a causeway from the continent to the island where new Tyre stood, by which means he took that. This latter city is since so decayed, that there are no remains of it left but a few huts belonging to fishermen, who are in the habit of hanging out their nets to dry upon the rocks, as is related by travellers that have been upon the place. "The present inhabitants of Tyre," says Maundrell, page 49, "are only a few poor wretches, harbouring themselves in the vaults, and subsisting chiefly upon fishing." The Jesuit Hadrianus Parvillerius resided ten years in Syria ; and the famous Huetius heard him say, that when he approached the ruins of Tyre, and beheld the rocks stretched forth to the sea, and the great stones scattered up and down on the shore, made clean and smooth by the sun, waves, and winds, and useful only for the drying of fishermen's nets, many of which happened at the time to be spread on them, it brought to his memory this prophecy : see Newton on the prophecies, Diss. xi. ; and note on Isaiah xxiii. 1, &c. And her daughters shall be slain with the sword—By the daughters of Tyre here are meant the lesser towns, which were under her jurisdiction as the mother city, or metropolis of the kingdom : the inhabitants of these would be slain with the sword.

Verses 7-11. Behold, I will bring upon Tyrus Nebuchadrezzar—Josephus asserts, upon the authority of the Phenician Annals, translated by Menander, the Ephesian, into Greek, "that Nebuchadnezzar besieged Tyre thirteen years, when Ithobal was king there, and began the siege in the seventh year of Ithobal's reign, and that he subdued Syria and all Phenicia. It further appears from the Phenician their dust shall cover thee : thy walls shall shake at the noise of the horsemen, and of the wheels, and of the chariots, when he shall enter into thy gates, [‡] as men enter into a city wherein is made a breach.

11 With the hoofs of his horses shall he tread down all thy streets : he shall slay thy people by the sword, and thy strong garrisons shall go down to the ground.

12 And they shall make a spoil of thy riches, and make a prey of thy merchandise : and they shall break down thy walls, and destroy [§] thy pleasant houses : and they shall lay thy stones, and thy timber, and thy dust, in the midst of the water.

13 ^{||} And I will cause the noise of [†] thy songs

[‡] Heb. houses of thy desire.—[§] Isaiah xiv. 14 ; xxiv. 8 ; Jer. vii. 34 ; xvi. 9 ; xxv. 10.—^{||} Isa. xxiii. 16 ; Chap. xxviii. 13 ; Rev. xviii. 22.

Annals, quoted by the same historian, that the Tyrians received their kings afterward from Babylon. These Annals too, as Dr. Prideaux hath clearly shown, agree exactly with Ezekiel's account of the time and year wherein the city was taken."—Bishop Newton. Nebuchadnezzar is here called king of kings, because he had several other kings under him as his vassals and tributaries. With horses and with chariots, &c.—With a vast army, but all land forces ; for we do not find that he had any naval force, or any means of attacking the place by sea, which made his undertaking the more difficult. He shall make a fort against thee, &c.—The various operations and actions of a siege are here set forth, all which it is said Nebuchadnezzar should employ against Tyre. And in a siege of so long continuance as thirteen years, undoubtedly every method and art of annoying and injuring the city was made use of. By reason of the abundance of horses, &c.—This is a lively description of the tumult and desolation that attend a conquering army making themselves masters of a great city. When he shall enter into thy gates, as men enter, &c.—Shalmaneser, king of Assyria, had besieged Tyre, but without success : the Tyrians with a few ships had beaten his large fleet ; (Josephus's Antiq.;) but yet, it is here foretold, Nebuchadnezzar should prevail. Thy strong garrisons—Or, thy strong fortresses, or, the fortresses of thy strength, as כִּצְבוֹת עֵץ rather signifies ; shall go down to the ground—Shall be entirely demolished. The LXX., however, render the clause, Την προῳασιν της ισχυρος σου επι της γης κατασει, He shall bring down the station of thy strength, or, thy strong (that is, military) station to the ground. The Vulgate understands the expression of their images, or tutelary gods, rendering the words, Et statuas nobiles in terram corruent, Thy famous statues shall fall to the ground.

Verses 12-14. And they shall make a spoil of thy

A. M. 3416. to cease ; and the sound of thy harps
B. C. 588. shall be no more heard.

14 And ^k I will make thee like the top of a rock : thou shalt be a place to spread nets upon ; thou shalt be built no more : for I the LORD have spoken it, saith the Lord God.

15 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God to Tyrus ; Shall not the isles ^l shake at the sound of thy fall, when the wounded cry, when the slaughter is made in the midst of thee ?

16 Then all the ^mprinces of the sea shall ⁿcome down from their thrones, and lay away their robes, and put off their broidered gar-

^k Verses 4, 5.—^l Jer. xlix. 21 ; Verse 18 ; Chapter xxvii. 28 ; xxiii. 16.—^m Isaiah xxiii. 8.—ⁿ Jonah iii. 6.—^o Heb. tremblings.

riches—The Chaldean army shall hinder thy trade during the war, and plunder thee in the end of it. And make a prey of thy merchandise—Of the fruit, or gains, of thy merchandise. And destroy thy pleasant houses—The houses of thy desire, as the margin reads it, or, Thy desirable houses. And shall lay thy stones, &c., in the midst of the water—Shall cast thy ruins into the midst of the sea. And I will cause the noise of thy songs to cease—All signs or indications of mirth shall cease from the midst of thee. Great cities are full of all kinds of gayety and luxury : this had been the case with Tyre, but it is here foretold that all this should be turned into a melancholy silence. I will make thee like the top of a rock—See note on verse 4. Thou shalt be built no more—This was fulfilled ; for though the inhabitants built a new city, and called it New Tyre, yet it was situated in a quite different place, namely, on an island, at some distance from the continent on which the former city stood : see note on Isa. xxiii. 1. It was also fulfilled with respect to the new city, which “received a great blow from Alexander, not only by his taking and burning it, but much more by his building of Alexandria in Egypt, which in time deprived it of much of its trade, and thereby contributed more effectually to its ruin. It had the misfortune afterward of changing its masters often, being sometimes in the hands of the Ptolemies, kings of Egypt, and sometimes of the Seleucidæ, kings of Syria, till at length it fell under the dominion of the Romans. It was taken by the Saracens about the year of Christ 639, in the reign of Omar, their third emperor. It was retaken by the Christians, during the time of the holy war, in the year 1124 : Baldwin, the second of that name, being then king of Jerusalem, and assisted by a fleet of the Venetians. From the Christians it was taken again, in the year 1289, by the Mamelukes of Egypt, under their sultan, Alphonse, who sacked and razed this, and Zidon, and other strong towns, that they might not ever again afford any harbour or shelter to the Christians. From the Mamelukes it was again taken, in the year 1516, by Selim, the ninth emperor ments : they shall clothe themselves with ^o trembling ; ^p they shall sit upon the ground, and ^q shall tremble at every moment, and ^r be astonished at thee.

17 And they shall take up a ^s lamentation for thee, and say to thee, How art thou destroyed, that wast inhabited ^t of seafaring men, the renowned city, which wast ^u strong in the sea, she and her inhabitants, which cause their terror to be on all that haunt it !

18 Now, shall ^v the isles tremble in the day of thy fall ; yea, the isles that are in the sea shall be troubled at thy departure.

^o Job ii. 13.—^p Chapter xxxii. 10.—^q Chapter xxvii. 35. ^r Chap. xxvii. 32 ; Rev. xviii. 9.—^s Heb. of the seas.—^t Isa. xxiii. 4.—^u Verse 15.

of the Turks, and under their dominion it continues at present. But, alas ! how fallen ! how changed from what it was formerly ! for, from being the centre of trade, frequented by all the merchant ships of the east and west, it is now become a heap of ruins, visited only by the boats of a few poor fishermen : see note on verse 4. So that as to this New Tyre, or this part of Tyre, the prophecy hath likewise been literally fulfilled : I will make thee like the top of a rock ; thou shalt be a place to spread nets upon.—Bishop Newton.

Verses 15-18. Shall not the isles shake at the sound of thy fall ?—All those that dwell upon the sea-coast near thee shall be thrown into a consternation at the news of thy being taken and destroyed. All the princes of the sea shall come down from their thrones—All the princes and rich merchants (or the merchants who are as princes, as Isaiah speaks) of Zidon, Carthage, and other maritime cities that maintained a trade with Tyre, and got great wealth by that means, shall express a deep grief and concern for the fall of it. They shall clothe themselves with trembling—With fear productive of trembling ; or, they shall be afraid on every side, and full of fear and trembling. And they shall take up a lamentation for thee—Shall bitterly bewail thy fall. Compare Rev. xviii. 9. And say, How art thou destroyed—How totally and irrecoverably, thou who wast such a great, rich, splendid, and well-fortified city ! The renowned city, which was strong in the sea—Tyre is called the strength of the sea, (Isa. xxiii. 4,) being strong at sea, both by its situation and its great naval forces, upon which account it was formidable to all that had trading upon the sea. Now shall the isles tremble—The Vulgate reads, Nunc stupebunt naves, Now shall the ships tremble, &c., that is, all seafaring men. Yea, the isles that are in the sea shall be troubled, &c.—The description given here, and in the foregoing verses, of the lamentation of the neighbouring places, and of the merchants and seafaring people, at the fall of Tyre, is extremely pathetic. By thy departure here, the Chaldee

A. M. 3416. 19 For thus saith the Lord God;
B. C. 588.

When I shall make thee a desolate city, like the cities that are not inhabited; when I shall bring up the deep upon thee, and great waters shall cover thee;

20 When I shall bring thee down ^u with them that descend into the pit, with the people of old time, and shall set thee in the low parts understands the removal of the inhabitants of Tyre into captivity. But Houbigant and others explain it of their forsaking the city, and fleeing away in ships to Carthage, and other distant places.

^u Chap. xxxii. 18, 24.—^x Chap. xxxii. 33, 26, 27, 32.—^y Chap.

Verses 19-21. Thus saith the Lord, When I shall make thee a desolate city—When I shall fulfil these predictions, and make thee what I now threaten to make thee; like the cities that are not inhabited—Whose walls are broken down, and whose streets are all solitary. When I shall bring up the deep upon thee—This may be understood either figuratively of Nebuchadnezzar's army, or literally of the sea overflowing and covering a great part of the ancient seat of the city, in consequence of the walls and outworks thereof being demolished. And great waters shall cover thee—Either, literally, the waters of the sea, or, metaphorically, great afflictions. When I shall bring thee down with them that descend into the pit—When thou shalt be brought to utter desolation, like the cities which have been long buried in ruin and oblivion. The phrase of going down into the pit, (by which term is often signified the grave,) is frequently made use of in Scripture, to express the destruction of a person or place. Thus our Saviour says of Capernaum, (Luke x. 15,) Thou shalt be thrust down to hell, or, rather, as it of the earth, in places desolate of old, ^{A. M. 3416.} with them that go down to the pit, ^{B. C. 588.} that thou be not inhabited; and I shall set glory ^x in the land of the living;

21 ^y I will make thee ^a a terror, and thou shalt be no more: ^z though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou never be found again, saith the Lord God.

xxvii. 36; xxviii. 19.—^a Heb. terrors.—^y Psalm xxxvii. 36.

ought to be translated, into the state of the dead; that is, thou shalt become desolate, or be no longer a city. With the people of old time—With those who are now in entire oblivion, as those who lived in the first ages of the world now are. And shall set thee in the low parts of the earth—Another description of the grave, from the situation and solitude of it; in places desolate of old—Desolate from the beginning. And I shall set glory in the land of the living—That is, when I shall reinstate Judea in glory again. Judea is called the land of the living, (which signifies, according to the genius of the Hebrew language, the land of happy men,) because that the inhabitants were assured of all blessings so long as they served God faithfully. The prophet here foretells that the city of Jerusalem, at whose destruction the inhabitants of Tyre had so greatly exulted, should be again rebuilt in the same place, and even attain to a height of reputation and glory, while the city of Tyre should remain a desolation. I will make thee a terror, and thou shalt be no more—Thou shalt be left in the ruins of desolation, a terrible example of my vengeance. Though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou never be found again—A mode of expression this, which denotes an entire destruction: see notes on verses 4, 5, 14.

CHAPTER XXVII.

This chapter contains a prophetic lamentation over the ruin of Tyre; in which we have, (1.) A large account of the dignity, wealth, splendour, and power of that city, while in its glory, the vast trade which it carried on with the nations around, in the west of Asia, north of Africa, south of Europe, and the isles of the Mediterranean sea, 1-25: which is designed to make its overthrow appear the more dreadful. (2.) A prediction of its fall and ruin, to the terror and wonder of all around, 26-36.

A. M. 3416. THE word of the LORD came again
B. C. 588. unto me, saying,

2 Now, thou son of man, ^a take up a lamentation for Tyrus;

^a Chap. xix. 1; xxvi. 17; xxviii. 12; xxxii. 2.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXVII.

Verses 2-4. Take up a lamentation for Tyrus—This alludes to the mournful lamentations used at funerals, wherein the mourning women recounted every thing that was valuable or praiseworthy be-

3 And say unto Tyrus, ^b O thou ^{A. M. 3416.} that art situate at the entry of the ^{B. C. 588.} sea, which art ^c a merchant of the people for many isles, Thus saith the Lord God; O

^b Chap. xxviii. 2.—^c Isa. xxiii. 3.

longing to the deceased, and then lamented the loss of him; and say, O thou that art situate at the entry of the sea—That art a sea-port, fitted by situation for carrying on trade with many countries: see Isaiah xxiii. 1. Thou hast said, I am of perfect

A. M. 3416. Tyrus, thou hast said, ⁴ I am ¹ of perfect beauty.
B. C. 589.

4 Thy borders are in the ² midst of the seas, thy builders have perfected thy beauty.

5 They have made all thy ship-boards of fir-trees of ³ Senir: they have taken cedars from Lebanon to make masts for thee.

6 Of the oaks of Bashan have they made thine oars; ³ the ⁴ company of the Ashurites have made thy benches of ivory, brought out of ⁵ the isles of Chittim.

7 Fine linen with brodered work from Egypt was that which thou spreadest forth to be thy sail; ⁶ blue and purple from the isles of Elishah was that which covered thee.

⁴ Chapter xxviii. 12.—¹ Heb. perfect of beauty.—² Heb. heart.—³ Deut. iii. 9.—³ Or, they have made thy hatches of ivory well trodden.—⁵ Heb. the daughter.—⁶ Jer. ii. 10.

beauty—Thou hast boasted that thou hast every thing to render thee complete, and that there is nothing wanting to thee. Thy borders are in the midst of the seas—Thy dominions are not confined to the land, but extend far into the sea; where thou commandest without control, and sailest from place to place without interruption, to bring home thy riches. Thy builders have perfected thy beauty—Undoubtedly such a city as Tyre, which had store of riches, was built with great magnificence and beauty; but the following verses seem to show, that these words are chiefly to be understood of the builders of their ships, wherein the chief strength and glory of the Tyrians were placed.

Verses 5-7. They have made thy ship-boards—The decks of thy ships; of fir-trees of Senir—By these are meant, the fir-trees which grew upon mount Hermon, which was anciently called Shenir, or Senir. They have taken cedars to make masts for thee—Though cedars have a thick, and not a lofty trunk, masts consisting of different parts may be made of different cedars duly sized, or properly shaped if of too large a size. Of the oaks of Bashan have they made thine oars—That they might be strong. The company of the Ashurites—That is, the Assyrians; have made thy benches of ivory—“Perhaps the seats in the cabins of the royal galleys.” Instead of the company of the Ashurites, &c., Bishop Newcome (with R. Salomo, Bochart, Houbigant, and some others, using a different pointing of the Hebrew word so rendered) reads the latter part of the verse thus: Thy benches have they made of ivory, inlaid in box from the isles of Chittim—That is, the islands and coasts of the Mediterranean. In this sense the Chaldee understands the clause. Corsica, with which no doubt the Tyrians traded, was famous for the box-tree; and we may easily allow that the benches of some of the Tyrian ships were adorned with streaks of ivory inlaid in that kind of wood, which certainly would appear very beautiful.

8 The inhabitants of Zidon and Arvad were thy mariners: thy wise men, O Tyrus, that were in thee, were thy pilots.

9 The ancients of ⁵ Gebol and the wise men thereof were in thee thy ⁶ calkers: ⁷ all the ships of the sea with their mariners were in thee to occupy thy merchandise.

10 They of Persia, and of Lud, and of ^b Phut, were in thine army, thy men of war: they hanged the shield and helmet in thee; they set forth thy comeliness.

11 The men of Arvad with thine army were upon thy walls round about, and the Gammadims were in thy towers: they hanged their

⁵ Or, purple and scarlet.—⁶ 1 Kings v. 18; Psa. lxxxiii. 7.
⁶ Or, stoppers of chinks.—⁷ Heb. strengtheners.—^b Jer. xlii 9; Chap. xxx. 5; xxxviii. 5.

So Virgil would have thought, who uses such an emblem to set forth the beauty of young Ascanius:

“———Quale per artem

Inclusum buxo, aut Oricia terebintho

Lucet ebur.” ÆN. x. 135.

“Distinguish’d from the crowd he shines a gem

Enchased in gold, or polish’d ivory set

Amidst the meaner foil of sable jet.”—DRYDEN.

Fine linen with brodered work, &c., from Egypt—“Fine linen was one of the principal commodities of Egypt, and was a habit used for persons of the best quality; which shows to what an excess of vanity the Tyrians were come, to use such costly manufactures for sails to their ships. Suetonius, in his Life of Caligula, cap. 37, reckons this among several instances of that emperor’s extravagance, that he furnished his pleasure-boats with costly sails, and other expensive ornaments.” Blue and purple from the isles of Elishah was that which covered thee—“Blue and purple are elsewhere reckoned among those colours which set off the richest attire. The common clothing of the Tyrians was of these kinds, which were brought from the islands of the Ægean sea, particularly Coos, famed for purple among heathen authors. Elishah denotes the countries upon the coast of Greece: a part of Peloponnesus retains the name of Elis among the Greek writers.”—Lowth.

Verses 8-11. The inhabitants of Zidon and Arvad were thy mariners—So great was the opulence and pride of the Tyrians, that they hired foreigners to do the more laborious and menial employments, and would do nothing else themselves than steer the vessels, priding themselves on being the most able pilots. Of Zidon, see note on Isaiah xxiii. 4, and of Arvad, on Jer. xlix. 23. The ancients of Gebal, &c., were thy calkers—Thou employedst the inhabitants of Gebal for calking thy ships, as being remarkably skilful in that trade. Concerning Gebal, which

A. M. 3416. shields upon thy walls round about ;
B. C. 588. they have made ⁱ thy beauty perfect.

12 ^k Tarshish was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of all kind of riches ; with silver, iron, tin, and lead, they traded in thy fairs.

13 ^l Javan, Tubal, and Meshech, they were thy merchants : they traded ^m the persons of men and vessels of brass in thy ⁸ market.

14 They of the house of ⁿ Togarmah traded in thy fairs with horses, and horsemen, and mules.

15 The men of ^o Dedan were thy merchants ;

ⁱ Verse 3.—^k Gen. x. 4 ; 2 Chron. xx. 36.—^l Gen. x. 2.
^m Rev. xviii. 13.—ⁿ Or, merchandise.—^o Gen. x. 3 ; Chap. xxxviii. 6.—^p Gen. x. 7.

was a province of Phenicia, see note on Psa. lxxxiii. 7. All the ships of the sea were in thee—Ships from all parts came to trade with thee. They of Persia, &c., were in thine army—Thy citizens being all given to trading, thou madest use of foreign soldiers for thine army, when thy city was besieged. Bochart thinks that Lud denotes African Ethiopia ; but Michaelis places this people westward in Africa. Both think Lud an Egyptian colony. The former, by Phut, understands the African Nomades : see Nah. iii. 9. They hanged the shield and helmet in thee—In thy garrisons, which were kept in time of peace. The men of Arvad, &c., were upon thy walls—They defended thy walls, when they were assaulted by the king of Babylon's army. And the Gammadims were in thy towers—It is very uncertain what people are here meant by this name. Mr. Fuller and Bishop Newcome think it probable they were a people of Phenicia. The Hebrew word is derived from one which signifies to be contracted, narrowed, &c., and Parkhurst is of opinion that these people were the inhabitants of the country about Tripoli in Syria, formerly called the Αγκών, or Elbow, of Phenicia, from its being narrowed, and projecting into the sea in that form. Ludolphus conjectures they were Africans ; the Chaldee paraphrase takes them to be Cappadocians. Dr. Spencer denominates them, “Parvula simulacra, plerumque cubitalia, in domibus aut turribus ethnicorum in earum tutelam, aut præsidium, collocata,” Little images, generally a cubit in length, placed upon the houses, or towers of the heathen, for their protection, or defence.

Verses 12–15. Tarshish was thy merchant—Trafficked with thee. Of Tarshish, see note on Isaiah ii. 16, and xxiii. 1. Javan, Tubal, and Meshech—By Javan is to be understood Greece, in which sense Alexander is styled king of Javan, or Greece, Dan. viii. 21. So the LXX. translate it here, and in that place of Daniel. And all Greece, except Peloponnesus, was anciently called Ionia. Tubal and Meshech are names usually joined together in Scripture. Two of Japhet's sons are so called, Gen. x. 2. Bochart and Bishop Newcome, with others, suppose many isles were the merchandise of A. M. 3416.

thy hand : they brought thee for a B. C. 588.
present, horns of ivory and ebony.

16 Syria was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of ⁹ the wares of thy making : they occupied in thy fairs with emeralds, purple, and brodered work, and fine linen, and coral, and ¹⁰ agate.

17 Judah, and the land of Israel, they were thy merchants : they traded in thy market ^p wheat of ^q Minneth and Pannag, and honey, and oil, and ^r balm.¹¹

18 Damascus was thy merchant in the mul-

⁹ Heb. thy works.—¹⁰ Heb. chrysoprase.—^p 1 Kings v. 9, 11 ; Ezra iii. 7 ; Acts xii. 20.—^q Judg. xi. 33.—^r Jer. viii. 22.—¹¹ Or, rosin.

them to be the people afterward called Tibareni and Moschi, who are generally mentioned together, and were situated near the Euxine sea. They traded the persons of men—In buying and selling slaves in the markets. Bochart observes, that Pontus, to which the Tibareni extended themselves, was remarkable for slaves, and that the Grecian slaves were the most valuable of any. And vessels of brass in thy market—The Hebrew word נְחֹשֶׁת here, generally translated brass, likewise signifies steel, and is so rendered by our interpreters, Psa. xviii. 34. And we may very well understand it so here ; for the Chalybes, a people so called from their steel manufactures, lived in the neighbourhood of the Tibareni and Moschi, for which reason steel is called the northern iron, Jer. xv. 12. By Togarmah, Bochart supposes Cappadocia is meant. Michaelis, however, prefers Armenia, which abounded in horses, and among the inhabitants of which a tradition prevailed, that they were descended from Thorgom. By Dedan, the above-mentioned critics, with Bishop Newcome, understand a city in the Persian gulf, now called Daden. To this place the inhabitants of the eastern isles, or sea-coasts, brought their wares. Many isles were, or rather, had, the merchandise of thy hand—That is, many isles took thy manufactures, or bought commodities of thee ; and, by way of return for them, brought thee in ivory, and other rarities from India, whither they traded. They brought these by way of present, says our translation ; but it was rather by way of price, or return, for the commodities exported, and so it is rendered in some versions.

Verses 16–20. Syria was thy merchant, &c.—From what is said here, we may conclude that the inhabitants of Tyre were exceedingly industrious, skilful in arts, and politic ; for here almost all nations are described as bringing their respective commodities to Tyre, to give in exchange for the wares or manufactures of that place ; which shows to what a vast height they carried their manufactures, and what immense profits they must have gained, since, it seems, they were able to purchase all kinds of precious stones, and the richest commodities of the

A. M. 3416. titude of the wares of thy making, B. C. 588. for the multitude of all riches; in the wine of Helbon, and white wool.

19 Dan also and Javan, ¹² going to and fro, occupied in thy fairs: bright iron, cassia, and calamus, were in thy market.

20 * Dedan was thy merchant in ¹³ precious clothes for chariots.

21 Arabia, and all the princes of * Kedar, ¹⁴ they occupied with thee in lambs, and rams, and goats: in these were they thy merchants.

22 The merchants of * Sheba and Raamah, they were thy merchants: they occupied in thy fairs with chief of all spices, and with all precious stones, and gold.

¹² Or, Meuzal. — * Gen. xxv. 3. — ¹³ Heb. clothes of freedom. — * Gen. xxv. 13; Isaiah lx. 7. — ¹⁴ Heb. they were the merchants of thy hand. — * Gen. x. 7; 1 Kings x. 1, 2; Psa. lxxii. 10, 15;

world, with their own manufactures. Judah and Israel were thy merchants—Both the kingdom of the two tribes, and that of the ten. They traded in thy market wheat of Minnith—Minnith was a place belonging to the Ammonites, Judg. xi. 33, and was noted for excellent wheat, great quantities of which the Jews brought to Tyre, the Tyrians having none of their own growth, but being supplied therewith by the Jews and Israelites, from the growth of their own or the neighbouring countries: see 1 Kings v. 9–11; Ezra iii. 7; Acts xii. 20. And Pannag—This is a word not elsewhere to be found, supposed by some to be the name of a place; by others, more probably, taken for some rich ointment, or gum. The Vulgate translates it balsam. In the vine of Helbon—Helbon is supposed to be that part of Syria which is called Chalybonitis by Ptolemy; and white wool—Bochart understands this to be wool of a bright purple colour. The LXX. and Chaldee render it, wool from Miletus, a place famous for that commodity. Dan also, &c.—Grotius thinks that Dan in the kingdom of Israel can scarcely be meant here; and finds that a city called Dana is placed by Ptolemy in the island of Ceylon. Dedan, &c., in precious clothes for chariots—Either these were rich coverings which were flung over the horses when harnessed to chariots, or else coverings for the seats of the chariots.

Verses 21–24. Arabia, &c., occupied with thee—Hebrew, ידן כחור, were the merchants of thy hand; that is, they took off thy manufactures (see verse 15) in exchange for cattle, in which their substance chiefly consisted. Of Kedar and its flocks, see notes on Isa. xxi. 16, 17, and lx. 7. The merchants of Sheba and Raamah—These were people of Arabia Felix, dwelling near the Persian gulf. They traded in the rich products of their own country, namely, spices, precious stones, and gold, in which it abounded: see note on 1 Kings x. 1, 10. Haran, and Canneh, and Eden—By Haran here, it seems, the place is meant where Abraham dwelt when he

23 * Haran, and Canneh, and Eden, A. M. 3416. the merchants of * Sheba, Asshur, B. C. 588. and Chilmad, were thy merchants.

24 These were thy merchants in ¹⁵ all sorts of things, in blue ¹⁶ clothes, and brodered work, and in chests of rich apparel, bound with cords, and made of cedar, among thy merchandise.

25 * The ships of Tarshish did sing of thee in thy market; and thou wast replenished, and made very glorious * in the midst of the seas.

26 ¶ Thy rowers have brought thee into great waters: ^b the east wind hath broken thee in the ¹⁷ midst of the seas.

Isa. lx. 6. — * Gen. xi. 31; 2 Kings xix. 12. — * Gen. xxv. 3. — ¹⁵ Or, excellent things. — ¹⁶ Heb. foldings. — * Psa. xlviii. 7; Isa. ii. 16; xxiii. 14. — * Ver. 4. — ^b Psa. xlviii. 7. — ¹⁷ Heb. heart.

came out of Ur of the Chaldees, (see Gen. xi. 31,) called Charra by the Romans, and noted for the defeat of Crassus. Canneh some suppose to be the same place that is called Calneh, Amos vi. 2, or Calno, Isa. x. 9, a city near the Euphrates. Others take it for Ctesiphon, a noted city situate upon the river Tigris. Eden is joined with Haran, 2 Kings xix. 12, as it is here. The merchants of Sheba—There were two Shebas, as there were two Dedans; one descended from Raamah, (Gen. x. 7,) the other from Jokshan, Abraham's son, Gen. xxv. 3. As the 22d verse is explained of the former, so the latter may be understood here: they were both in Arabia. And Chilmad—Both the Chaldee and LXX. explain this by Carmania. In chests of rich apparel, &c.—The rich apparel here spoken of was carefully packed up in chests of cedar, to give these clothes a fine scent, and preserve them from putrefaction.

Verse 25. The ships of Tarshish did sing of thee, &c.—Ships of Tarshish signify sometimes in Scripture any trading or merchant ships; and in this general sense the expression seems to be used here: the prophet, having already reckoned up the principal countries which traded with Tyre, now adds, in comprehensive terms, that all merchants, or traders, sung or spake great things of her riches: see note on Isa. ii. 16. In the midst of the seas—Through all the islands of the sea, the sea-coasts, and from one part to another.

Verse 26. Thy rowers have brought thee into great waters—The prophet here begins to change the subject, and now, in metaphorical language, speaks of the danger into which the rulers and statesmen of Tyre had brought her by their pride and ill-concerted measures. He compares her to a ship, impelled by its own rowers into a very tempestuous sea, by which is meant their war with the Chaldeans. See a similar comparison Isa. xxxiii. 23. Great troubles are frequently signified by great waters. The east wind hath broken thee—By this is signified the Chaldean army coming from the east:

A. M. 3416. 27 Thy ° riches, and thy fairs, thy B. C. 588. merchandise, thy mariners, and thy pilots, thy calkers, and the occupiers of thy merchandise, and all thy men of war, that are in thee, ¹⁸ and in all thy company which is in the midst of thee, shall fall into the ¹⁹ midst of the seas, in the day of thy ruin.

28 The ²⁰ suburbs ^a shall shake at the sound of the cry of thy pilots.

29 And ° all that handle the oar, the mariners, and all the pilots of the sea, shall come down from their ships, they shall stand upon the land ;

30 And shall cause their voice to be heard against thee, and shall cry bitterly, and shall ^c cast up dust upon their heads, they ^e shall wallow themselves in the ashes :

31 And they shall ^b make themselves utterly bald for thee, and gird them with sackcloth, and they shall weep for thee with bitterness of heart and bitter wailing.

^c Prov. xi. 4 ; Verse 34 ; Rev. xviii. 9. — ¹⁸ Or, even with all. ¹⁹ Heb. heart. — ²⁰ Or, waves. — ^a Chap. xxvi. 15, 18. — ^e Rev. xviii. 17. — ^f Job ii. 12 ; Rev. xviii. 19. — ^g Esther iv. 1, 3 ; Jer. vi. 26. — ^h Jer. xvi. 6 ; xlvii. 5 ; Mic. i. 16.

as if he had said, As the violence of the east wind occasions many shipwrecks in the sea, so the army of thy enemies, coming upon thee, shall ruin thy strength and glory, and leave thee like a wreck cast upon the shore. "This is a proper allegory," says Bishop Warburton, "with only one real sense; and it is managed by the prophet with that brevity and expedition which a proper allegory demands, when used in the place of a metaphor." Grotius refers to Horace, lib. i. ode 14, as an allegory very similar to this of the prophet.

Verses 27-32. Thy riches, &c., and all thy company, shall fall into the midst of the seas—Shall be as utterly ruined and destroyed as if they were sunk in the sea by a shipwreck. Or, this may signify their falling in a sea-fight. The suburbs shall shake, &c.—The cry of thy wounded seamen shall make the inhabitants of the suburbs shake for fear: See chap. xxvi. 15. The mariners, &c., shall come down from their ships—Seafaring men, finding no encouragement to follow their employment, now thy traffic is destroyed, shall lay aside their trade, and mourn over thee. They shall stand upon the land—Bishop Newcome reads, upon the shore, understanding it of "the shore of the adjoining island, from which they viewed the conflagration of their city." St. Jerome tells us, from the ancient histories of the Assyrians, that when the safety of the city was despaired of, great numbers of Tyrians secured themselves and their riches in their ships. See notes on Isa. xxiii. 1, 12. And shall cause their voice to be heard against thee—Or rather, over thee, as the LXX. and Vulgate translate it. And shall cry bitterly—For the common ruin, and their own

32 And in their wailing they shall A. M. 3416. take up a lamentation for thee, and B. C. 588. lament over thee, saying, ^k What city is like Tyrus, like the destroyed in the midst of the sea ?

33 ¹ When thy wares went forth out of the seas, thou filledst many people; thou didst enrich the kings of the earth with the multitude of thy riches and of thy merchandise.

34 In the time when ^m thou shalt be broken by the seas in the depths of the waters, ⁿ thy merchandise and all thy company in the midst of thee shall fall.

35 ° All the inhabitants of the isles shall be astonished at thee, and their kings shall be sore afraid, they shall be troubled in their countenance.

36 The merchants among the people ^p shall hiss at thee; ^q thou shalt be ²¹ a terror, and ²² never shalt be any more.

¹ Chapter xxvi. 17 ; Verse 2. — ^k Rev. xviii. 18. — ^l Rev. xviii. 19. — ^m Chap. xxvi. 19. — ⁿ Verse 27. — ^o Chap. xxvi. 15, 16. — ^p Jer. xviii. 16. — ^q Chap. xxvi. 21. — ²¹ Heb. terrors. — ²² Heb. shall not be for ever.

share in it. And shall cast up dust upon their heads—Shall use expressions of the deepest mourning and lamentation. They shall wallow themselves in ashes—As having bid a final farewell to all ease and comfort. They shall make themselves utterly bald for thee—Another expression of public sorrow. And—They, who used to wear fine linen; shall gird them with sackcloth—According to the custom of great mourners. And shall weep for bitterness of heart—Instead of singing, as formerly, their merry songs. And in their wailing they shall take up a lamentation for thee—The words allude to the public lamentations made at funerals. See note on Jer. ix. 17, 18. Saying, What city is like Tyrus—Did ever any city come down from such a height of prosperity to such depth of adversity? Like the destroyed in the midst of the sea—Alas! what was once her safeguard, and the source of her wealth, is now her grave.

Verses 33-36. When thy wares, &c.—When thy wares or manufactures were transported through the seas to every part, thou filledst many people—Didst supply the wants, or minister to the luxuries and pleasures, of many nations. Time was when thy wares, those of thy own making, and those that passed through thy hands, were exported to all parts of the world; then thou filledst many people, and didst enrich the kings of the earth and their kingdoms. But in the time when thou shalt be broken—As a ship that is wrecked at sea; thy merchandise and all thy company shall fall—They that used to be enriched by thee, shall be ruined with thee, as is usual in trade. All the inhabitants of the isles shall be astonished—Wondering greatly that ever such a change should be effected, that Tyre should fall. And their kings shall be sore afraid—Sensible how much less able they are to resist the conqueror and defend themselves than thou wast, and not knowing whom he will next attack. They shall be troubled in their countenance—They shall not be able to conceal the discomposure of their minds, but will show it evidently in their countenances. The merchants among the people shall hiss at thee—By way of insult and derision; as men are apt to despise those in adversity, whom they courted and respected in prosperity. The Chaldee Paraphrase renders it, They shall be astonished; and this sense agrees better with the lamentations of the seafaring men, mentioned in the foregoing verses.

The following reflections by Bishop Newton, on the fall of Tyre, are peculiarly worthy of the reader's attention: "Such hath been the fate of this city, once the most famous in the world for trade and commerce. But trade is a fluctuating thing: it passed from Tyre to Alexandria, from Alexandria to Venice, from Venice to Antwerp, from Antwerp to Amsterdam and London, the English rivalling the Dutch, as the French are now rivalling both. It behooves those who are in possession of it, to take the greatest care that they do not lose it. Liberty is a friend to that, as that is a friend to liberty. But the greatest enemy to both is licentiousness, which tramples upon all law and lawful authority, encourages riots and tumults, promotes drunkenness and debauchery, sticks at nothing to supply its extravagance, practises every art of illicit gain, ruins credit, ruins trade, and will in the end ruin liberty itself. Neither kingdoms nor commonwealths, neither public companies nor private persons, can long carry on a beneficial, flourishing trade without virtue, and what virtue teacheth, sobriety, industry, frugality, modesty, honesty, punctuality, humanity, charity, the love of our country, and the fear of God. The prophets will inform us how the Tyrians lost it; and the like causes will always produce the like effects."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

In this chapter we have, (1.) A prediction of singular disgrace and ruin to the king of Tyrus, by the Chaldeans, to punish his singular pride and high conceit of his own wisdom, dignity, and wealth, 1-10. (2.) A lamentation over him, thus astonishingly fallen from his grandeur, 11-19. (3.) A prediction of ruin to Zidon, a neighbouring city of Tyrus, and from which she had originated, 20-23. (4.) A promise of the restoration and safety of Israel, after the captivity in Babylon and present dispersion, notwithstanding the insults and abuse which they had suffered from their neighbours in the day of their distress, 24-26.

A. M. 3416. B. C. 588. THE word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, say unto the prince of Tyrus, Thus saith the Lord God; Because thy heart is lifted up, and ^a thou hast said, I am a God, I sit in the seat of God, ^b in the ¹ midst of the seas; ^c yet thou art a man, and not God, though thou set thy heart as the heart of God:

^a Verse 9.—^b Chap. xxvii. 3, 4.—¹ Heb. heart.—^c Isaiah xxxi. 3.—^d Zech. ix. 2.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXVIII.

Verse 2. Say to the prince of Tyrus—The name of this prince was Ithobalus, according to the Phenician annals. Because thy heart is lifted up—In pride and self-conceit; and thou hast said—Namely, in thy heart; I am a god—I am like a god. I sit in the seat of God—Inaccessible by mortals. In the midst of the seas—As God is safe from all injury in his throne in heaven, so am I as safe; for the sea secures me. These words express an insolent boast of self-sufficiency, as if he had said, I fear no man, nor stand in need of any: I am seated in a place of impregnable strength: the sea defends me, so that no enemy can assault me. And they represent the excessive pride and carnal security of this prince, 3 Behold, ^d thou art wiser than Daniel; there is no secret that they can hide from thee: A. M. 3416 B. C. 588.

4 With thy wisdom and with thine understanding thou hast gotten thee riches, and hast gotten gold and silver into thy treasures:

5 ² By ^e thy great wisdom and by thy traffic hast thou increased thy riches, and thy heart is lifted up because of thy riches:

^a Hebrew, by the greatness of thy wisdom.—^e Psalm lxii. 10; Zech. ix. 3.

who trusted in his own strength, and forgot his dependence upon God. The same crime was in like manner punished in the king of Egypt, chap. xxix. 3, and afterward in Nebuchadnezzar himself, Dan. iv. 30, 31. Yet thou art man, and not God—Subject to all the infirmities, casualties, sorrows, and distresses that attend human nature, and to all the changes of human affairs, and hast not any of that innate, invincible power, and of that immutability of condition, which is in God. Though thou hast set thy heart as the heart of God—Hast entertained thoughts which become none but God.

Verses 3-8. Behold, thou art wiser than Daniel—In thy own conceit. The fame of Daniel's wisdom was quickly spread over Chaldea, upon his

A. M. 3416. 6 Therefore thus saith the Lord
B. C. 588. GOD; Because thou hast set thy heart as the heart of God;

7 Behold, therefore I will bring strangers upon thee, ^fthe terrible of the nations: and they shall draw their swords against the beauty of thy wisdom, and they shall defile thy brightness.

8 They shall bring thee down to the pit, and thou shalt die the deaths of them that are slain in the midst of the seas.

9 Wilt thou yet ^gsay before him that slayeth thee, I am God? but thou shalt be a man, being advanced to several posts of honour and dignity by Nebuchadnezzar. See Dan. ii. 8. So here the prophet in an ironical manner upbraids the vain boasts which the prince of Tyre made of his wisdom, and the policy of those about him, as if it exceeded the endowments of Daniel. The Phenicians, of whom the Tyrians were a colony, (see note on Isa. xxiii. 12,) valued themselves for their wisdom and ingenuity, as being inventors of navigation, letters, and sciences. Compare Zech. ix. 2. With thy wisdom, &c., thou hast gotten thee riches—Thy skill in navigation and trade has increased thy wealth. Behold, I will bring upon thee the terrible of the nations—The Babylonians, who by their conquests have made themselves terrible to all the nations round about them. They shall draw their swords against the beauty of thy wisdom—They shall deface and destroy all the beautiful edifices which thou hast erected with admirable art, and every thing which thou valuest as ornamental or useful, beauteous or magnificent, even all the glory of thy kingdom. They shall defile thy brightness—They shall render thy kingdom, which is now flourishing and glorious, weak and contemptible. Thou shalt die the deaths, &c.—Thou shalt die the death of those who perished in the flood. The expression deaths, in the plural, intimates a still further punishment, even after the death of the body; such as that impious race experienced, and such as this haughty prince had well deserved by his mad pride and blasphemous impiety. And therefore with the same emphasis the prophet tells us, verse 10, Thou shalt die the deaths, the double death, of the uncircumcised; that is, of unbelievers and enemies to God. For circumcision being the rite which distinguished God's chosen people from the heathen, uncircumcised is equivalent in sense to wicked or profane. So the Chaldee Paraphrase renders it here. "This is not the only place in this prophecy where the destruction by the deluge is alluded to: for this, and the fall of angels, being two of the greatest events that ever happened, and the most remarkable of God's judgments, it was very natural for the prophets to recur to them, when they would raise their style in the description of the fall of

^f Chapter xxx. 11; xxxi. 12; xxxii. 12.—^g Verse 2.—^h Or, woundeth.

and no God, in the hand of him A. M. 3416.
that ³slayeth thee. B. C. 588.

10 Thou shalt die the deaths of ^bthe uncircumcised by the hand of strangers: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God.

11 ¶ Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

12 Son of man, ⁱtake up a lamentation upon the king of Tyrus, and say unto him, Thus saith the Lord God; ^kThou sealest up the sum, full of wisdom, and perfect in beauty.

^b Chapter xxxi. 18; xxxii. 19, 21, 25, 27.—ⁱ Chapter xxvii. 2.
^k Chap. xxvii. 3; Verse 3.

empires and tyrants. See chap. xxvi. 19, 20, and xxvii. 26, 32, 34. As the style of this prophet is wonderfully adapted to the subject whereof he treats, so he compares the destruction of this famous maritime city to a vessel shipwrecked in the sea, and so sends its inhabitants to the people of old times, as he calls them, who were swallowed up in the universal deluge. Their prince he compares to the prince of the rebel angels, whose pride had given him such a dreadful fall." See Peters on Job, p. 373, and notes on verse 14.

Verse 9. Wilt thou yet say—Or, Wilt thou then say, before him that slayeth thee, I am God—Nothing can be more finely expressed than this: the prince of Tyrus thought himself, as a god, as invincible, as secure from all harm; God therefore, by his prophet, asks him here if he would have these proud thoughts, if he would think of himself as a god, when he found himself in his enemy's power, just going to be slain. The question is most sharp and cutting: it sets the folly of his insolent pride in the strongest light; for surely he could not boast of being a god, when he was to fall by the sword of a man; and whatever proud thoughts he now entertained of himself, they certainly would be changed when he saw the sword of his enemy lifted up to slay him. So Plutarch tells us of Alexander, that "he vainly affected to be thought Jupiter's son, and next in honour to Bacchus and Hercules: yet when he saw the blood run out of a wound he had received, which at the same time gave him much pain, he confessed that was not such blood as Homer said issued from the immortal gods."—Lib. 2, De Alexandri fortuna. This whole chapter, as well as the foregoing one, is exceedingly fine, both as to the style and composition.

Verses 12, 13. Take up a lamentation upon the king of Tyrus—See chap. xxvii. 32. Thou sealest up the sum, full of wisdom, &c.—In thine own opinion thou art the perfect pattern of wisdom and all other excellences; thou possessest them in full measure, they are thine by an unalienable tenure, sealed up safely among thy treasures. The LXX. render this, Συ αποσφραγισμα ομοιωσεις, και στεφανος καλως, Thou art the seal of likeness, and crown of

A. M. 3416.
B. C. 598.

13 Thou hast been in ¹Eden the garden of God: every precious stone was thy covering, the ⁴sardius, topaz, and the diamond, the ⁵beryl, the onyx, and the jasper, the sapphire, the ⁶emerald, and the carbuncle, and gold: the workmanship of ^mthy tabrets and of thy pipes, was prepared in thee in the day that thou wast created.

¹ Chapter xxxi. 8, 9.—⁴ Or, ruby.—⁵ Or, chrysolite.—⁶ Or, chrysoprase.

beauty. To the same purpose the Vulgate, Tu signaculum similitudinis, plenus sapientia, perfectus decore: that is, says Lowth, "Thou art the image of God, an exact impression taken from that great copy. For the following verse shows that the expression alludes to Adam, when he was first created, and came pure out of the hands of his Maker; full of wisdom, and perfect in beauty." Thou hast been in Eden—"As thy situation was pleasant, so wast thou plentifully supplied with every thing which could contribute to make thy life pleasant and happy. The state of paradise, in common speech, denotes a condition every way complete and happy. See Isa. li. 3. The expression, as well as the whole context, alludes to the complete happiness which Adam enjoyed in paradise, before his apostasy and fall." Every precious stone was thy covering—Not only was thy crown adorned with the choicest jewels, but thou wast arrayed with royal robes, enriched with gold and precious stones of all sorts. There is probably an allusion here to the precious stones which were placed in the high-priest's breast-plate, as the next verse alludes to the cherubim over the mercy-seat. Accordingly the LXX. enlarge the number of the stones here mentioned from nine to twelve, and place them in the same order in which they are ranked Exod. xxviii. 17, &c. The workmanship of thy tabrets, &c., was prepared in thee—Or, for thee, in the day thou wast created—The highest expressions of joy, such as are the sounding of all sorts of musical instruments, ushered thee into the world, according to the usual practice at the birth of great princes; and ever since thou hast been brought up in the choicest delicacies which a royal palace or a luxurious city could furnish.

Verses 14, 15. Thou art the anointed cherub that covereth—The prophet here alludes to the cherubim in the temple of Solomon, which were a part of the ark, being made of beaten gold, and therefore were with it anointed, and were very large, and covered the mercy-seat with their wings. The prince of Tyrus is here compared to one of these, on account of the high power which he bore among men, and his covering or protecting his people by that power. St. Jerome translates the expression, The extended cherub that covereth: that is, whose wings are stretched out to cover, &c., reading כרשך, extended, instead of כרשך, anointed. And I have set thee so —It was I myself that determined that thou shouldst

A. M. 3416.
B. C. 588.

14 Thou art the anointed ⁿcherub that covereth; and I have set thee ^oso: thou wast upon ^othe holy mountain of God; thou hast walked up and down in the midst of the stones of fire.

15 Thou wast perfect in thy ways from the day that thou wast created, till iniquity was found in thee.

^m Chap. xxvi. 13.—ⁿ Exod. xxv. 20; Verse 16.—^o Chapter xx. 40.

be so great a king, and have a vast power to defend and protect thy people. But this prince, like too many of mankind, was insensible of the hand which raised him, and did not consider to whom he owed his power and glory. Thou wast upon the holy mountain of God—The image of the cherub is pursued. "Such was thy eminent distinction, that thou wast, as it were, placed in the temple of God on his holy mountain." Or, thou wast placed in as secure a situation as if thou hadst been fixed on the holy mountain where the temple of God stands. Thou hast walked, &c., in the midst of the stones of fire—Thou hast, as it were, been placed among the twelve precious stones on the breast-plate of the high-priest. Or this obscure sentence may signify that this prince's palace and his attendants were very richly adorned with precious stones, which shone with a burning brightness, like fire. Lowth thinks "the words allude to the high advancement of Satan in heaven before his fall, where he was placed in one of the highest orders of angels, such as were nearest in attending upon the Divine Majesty." Thou wast perfect in thy ways, till iniquity was found in thee—"An exact description of the evangelical purity in which the devil was created, and in which he continued till, being lifted up with pride, he fell from his first estate." "Whoever compares this place in Ezekiel with the parallel place in Isa. xiv. 12, &c., where the downfall of the king of Babylon is foretold in the same prophetic language, will soon perceive that they throw a reciprocal light upon each other, and that the fall of angels is alluded to in both. The beauty and propriety of these allusions of the prophets will appear with greater lustre when it is considered that the host of heaven were the objects of the heathen idolatry; both the visible and invisible host, as well the angels as the lights of heaven; for the superstition seems to have been originally the same, as the worship of the heavenly bodies terminated in the worship of those angels, or intelligences, who were believed to animate and conduct them: and hence we see a reason why the angels were called stars, and morning-stars, in Scripture: as in Job xxxviii. 7, and so here, the covering cherub is the same with Lucifer, the son of the morning, in Isaiah. Thus, while the prophets describe the overthrow of an idolatrous prince or state by a fallen angel, or a falling star, they only make their gods to tumble with them: see Dissertation on Job, p. 374.

A. M. 3416. 16 By the multitude of thy mer-
B. C. 588. chandise they have filled the midst of thee with violence, and thou hast sinned:
therefore I will cast thee as profane out of the mountain of God: and I will destroy thee, ^p O covering cherub, from the midst of the stones of fire.

17 ^a Thy heart was lifted up because of thy beauty, thou hast corrupted thy wisdom by reason of thy brightness: I will cast thee to the ground, I will lay thee before kings, that they may behold thee.

18 Thou hast defiled thy sanctuaries by the multitude of thine iniquities, by the iniquity of thy traffic; therefore will I bring forth a fire from the midst of thee, it shall devour thee, and I will bring thee to ashes upon the earth in the sight of all them that behold thee.

^p Verse 14.—^a Verses 2, 5.—^r Chap. xxvi. 21; xxvii. 36.
⁷ Heb. terrors.—^r Chapter vi. 2; xxv. 2; xxix. 2.—^r Isaiah xxiii. 4, 12; Jer. xxv. 22; xxvii. 3; Chap. xxxii. 30.

Verses 16, 17. By the multitude of thy merchandise, &c.—The riches which thy great trade has produced have but increased thy love of gain more and more, and induced thee to commit acts of violence, fraud, and extortion, to make further additions to thy power and riches; therefore I will cast thee out of the mountain of God—I will cast thee down to contempt from that supereminent degree of power and glory to which I had raised thee, and from the exalted station of governing others, and being able to afford them protection, and from all thy great pomp and magnificence. Thy heart was lifted up because of thy beauty—Thou becamest vain and insolent on account of thy power, riches, and magnificence. Here the root of this prince's ruin is pointed out to us. His power and riches produced pride and insolence in him, and those every evil way. His grandeur blinded him, so that he did not see his true happiness, nor the right way of pursuing it, but wandered in ways which led to ruin. I will lay thee before kings, that they may behold thee—I will make thee a spectacle to other princes, expose thee as a miserable object before their eyes, that thou mayest be an example to them to deter them from the like pride and practices.

Verses 18, 19. Thou hast defiled thy sanctuaries—Thy throne, palace, judgment-seats. The word מקדש, generally rendered sanctuary, sometimes signifies a palace, in which sense it probably ought to be taken Amos vii. 13, where our translation renders it the king's chapel. Thus Bishop Patrick understands it, Exod. xxv. 8, where our version reads, Let them make me a sanctuary; God commanding that he should be served and attended upon in the tabernacle, as a king in his court or palace. The cherubim were his throne, the ark his footstool, the

19 All they that know thee among ^{A. M. 3416.}
the people shall be astonished at thee: ^{B. C. 588.} ^r thou shalt be ⁷ a terror, and never shalt thou be any more.

20 ¶ Again the word of the LORD came unto
me, saying,

21 Son of man, ^a set thy face ^t against Zidon, and prophesy against it.

22 And say, Thus saith the Lord God; ^a Behold, I am against thee, O Zidon; and I will be glorified in the midst of thee: and ^a they shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall have executed judgments in her, and shall be ^r sanctified in her.

23 ^a For I will send into her pestilence, and blood into her streets; and the wounded shall be judged in the midst of her by the sword upon her on every side; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

^a Exodus xiv. 4, 17; Chapter xxxix. 13.—^r Psalm ix.
16.—^r Chapter xx. 41; xxxvi. 23; Verse 25.—^r Chapter
xxxviii. 22.

altar his table, (and therefore called by that name, chap. xli. 22; Mal. i. 7,) the priests his attendants, and the show-bread and sacrifices his provisions. The king of Tyre had filled his palace and courts of judicature, and the Tyrians their stately buildings, with iniquity and injustice, and therefore God was determined utterly to destroy them by the Chaldeans. I will bring fire from the midst of thee—Punishment shall follow thy crimes, and thy own ways shall bring it upon thee: thy destruction shall proceed from thyself. I will bring thee to ashes upon the earth—I will bring thee to dust. Thou shalt be made no more account of than ashes spread on the ground. All that know thee shall be astonished—So low a fall from such a height of glory will astonish all who ever saw thy former magnificence.

Verses 21–23. Set thy face against Zidon—Direct thy face and thy speech toward Zidon, and foretel its destruction by the king of Babylon. Tyre and Zidon were neighbouring cities, and generally partakers of the same prosperity or adversity. We have, indeed, no history that informs us of the particulars of what befell Zidon; but it is likely that it sent help to the Tyrians, and so (Nebuchadnezzar proving victorious) suffered with them, and was reduced first under the power of the Chaldeans, and afterward of the Persians. Say, Behold, I am against thee, O Zidon—Provoked by thy sins, I am an adversary to thee, and am determined to punish thee. I will be glorified in the midst of thee—I will make my power and justice known by the judgments I will execute upon thee. In the same sense God saith, Exod. xiv. 17, I will get me honour upon Pharaoh. And will be sanctified in her—And will get myself reverence, fear, and praise, by the punishment I will bring upon her. God is said to be sanctified in those

A. M. 3416. 24 ¶ And there shall be no more
B. C. 588. ^a a pricking brier unto the house of Israel, nor any grieving thorn of all that are round about them that despised them; and they shall know that I am the Lord God.

25 Thus saith the Lord God; When I shall have ^b gathered the house of Israel from the people among whom they are scattered, and shall be ^c sanctified in them in the sight of the ^a Num. xxxiii. 55; Josh. xxiii. 13.—^b Isaiah xi. 12; Chap.

xi. 17; xx. 41; xxxiv. 13; xxxvii. 21.—^c Verse 22.

for whose preservation or destruction he exerts his power in a remarkable manner, so as to get glory to himself. For I will send her pestilence and blood
—The pestilence, which often accompanies long sieges, shall destroy her inhabitants. And the wounded shall be judged, &c., by the sword—That is, the wounded shall fall in the midst of her by the sword, and meet with their deserved punishment
from it.

Verses 24-26. There shall be no more a pricking brier—There shall no more be any nation that shall injure, and be a vexation to the house of Israel; for all their troublesome neighbours, who had been as so many thorns in their sides, shall be destroyed or repressed, and in consequence thereof they shall dwell quietly and securely in their own land. This promise was in part fulfilled after their return from their captivity in Babylon; but the following verse shows that it chiefly relates to the general restoration of the Jews, when all the enemies of God's church and truth shall be vanquished and subdued, often denoted in the prophetic writings by the name of Edom, Moab, and other neighbouring nations, who, upon heathen, then shall they dwell in A. M. 3416 their land that I have given to my B. C. 588. servant Jacob.

26 And they shall ^d dwell ^e safe therein, and shall ^f build houses, and ^g plant vineyards; yea, they shall dwell with confidence, when I have executed judgments upon all those that ^h despise them round about them; and they shall know that I am the LORD their God.

^d Jer. xxxiii. 6; Ch. xxxvi. 28.—^e Or, with confidence.—^f Isa.
lxv. 21; Amos ix. 14.—^g Jer. xxxi. 5.—^h Or, spoil.

all occasions, were wont to show their spite and ill-will against God's ancient people. When I shall have gathered the house of Israel, &c.—This seems to be a plain prophecy of the restoration of the Jews to their own land, as will appear to any one who will compare the words with the parallel texts referred to in the margin; and the rules laid down concerning the division of the land among the twelve tribes (chap. xlvii., xlviii.) do very much favour this interpretation: see note on Isa. xi. 12. And shall be sanctified in them—See on verse 22. And they shall dwell safely therein—In comparison of what they have done formerly: they shall have peace, and freedom from the annoyance of enemies. And shall build houses, and plant vineyards—Building and planting are commonly joined together. When I shall have executed judgments—The prophets commonly conclude their threatenings against infidels with gracious promises to God's people, implying that he will not make an utter destruction of them, as of other people, but preserve a remnant, to whom he may fulfil his promises made to their fathers.

CHAPTER XXIX.

In this and the three following chapters is foretold the conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar. This was a denunciation of the same judgment upon Egypt which was foretold by Jeremiah, chap. xli. 13, &c. In this chapter we have, (1.) A prediction of the destruction of Pharaoh, for his treacherous dealing with Israel, 1-7. (2.) A prediction of the desolation of Egypt, 8-12. (3.) A promise of the restoration thereof in part, 13-16. (4.) A prediction of Nebuchadnezzar's possessing it, 17-20. (5.) A promise of mercy to Israel, 21.

A. M. 3416. IN the tenth year, in the tenth month,
B. C. 588. in the twelfth day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, A. M. 3416. saying, B. C. 588.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXIX.

Verse 1. In the tenth year, &c.—The prophecies of Ezekiel, in regard to foreign nations, are not placed according to the order of time in which they were delivered, but according to the respective distances of the nations from Judea, beginning with those which lay nearest to it. And with respect to the prophecies against Egypt, it is justly remarked

by Dathius, that this and the three following chapters are joined together, because they treat of the same subject, though they consist of prophecies uttered at very different periods of time. The period assigned in the present text, in this verse, for the prophecy first recorded here, is during the siege of Jerusalem; and, agreeably to verses 6, 7, might be immediately after Pharaoh's retreat, foretold by Jeremiah, chap. xxxvii. 7.

A. M. 3416. 2 Son of man, ^aset thy face against B. C. 588. Pharaoh, king of Egypt, and prophesy against him, and ^bagainst all Egypt:

3 Speak and say, Thus saith the Lord God; ^cBehold, I am against thee, Pharaoh king of Egypt, the great ^ddragon that lieth in the midst of his rivers, ^ewhich hath said, My river is mine own, and I have made it for myself.

4 But ^fI will put hooks in thy jaws, and I will cause the fish of thy rivers to stick unto thy scales, and I will bring thee up out of the midst of thy rivers, and all the fish of thy rivers shall stick unto thy scales.

^a Chapter xxviii. 21.—^b Isaiah xix. 1; Jeremiah xxv. 19; xlv. 2, 25.—^c Jeremiah xlv. 30; Chapter xxviii. 22; Verse 10.—^d Psa. lxxiv. 13, 14; Isa. xxvii. 1; li. 9; Chap. xxxii. 2. ^e Chap. xxviii. 2.

Verses 2, 3. Set thy face against Pharaoh—Pharaoh being a common name to all the kings of Egypt, this prince was called Pharaoh-hophra, by way of distinction, by Jeremiah, chap. xlv. 30, and Apries by Herodotus. The word תנין, tannim, signifies any great fish, but seems to be here used to signify the crocodile, a fish in a manner peculiar to the river Nile, to which the king of Egypt is compared, on account of his dominions lying upon that river, which he boasted himself of, on account of the prodigious fertility which the overflowing of the Nile caused. It is spoken of here as rivers, on account of its many mouths, or channels. The word Pharaoh signifies a crocodile in the Arabic tongue. Among the ancients, Michaelis tells us, the crocodile was a symbol of Egypt, and appears so on the Roman coins. Milton seems to have had this sublime passage in view, when he said, Par. Lost, xii. 190—

— Thus with ten wounds

The river-dragon, tamed, at length submits.

My river is my own—That is, the kingdom of Egypt, watered by the Nile, is mine. I have made it for myself—It is my own indefeasible right and property, which I cannot be dispossessed of. This king was, indeed, exceeding prosperous, and reigned uninterrupted for twenty-five years; by which he was so elated, as we learn from Herodotus, that he was wont to boast, that not even any god could dispossess him of his kingdom.

Verses 4, 5. But I will put hooks in thy jaws—The king of Egypt being spoken of as a great fish, or a crocodile, God here, in pursuance of the same metaphor, tells him that he will put hooks in his jaws, or stop his vain-glorious designs and boastings, by raising up enemies that should gain the mastery over him, as the fisherman has the fish in his power, when he has struck the hook into its jaws. This hook to the king of Egypt was Amasis, one of his officers, who set up himself as king, by the favour of the people, and dethroned his master. I will cause the fish of thy rivers to stick unto thy scales—I will cause even thy own people to press thee hard, and

A. M. 3416. 5 And I will leave thee thrown into B. C. 588. the wilderness, thee and all the fish of thy rivers: thou shalt fall upon the ¹open fields; ²thou shalt not be brought together, nor gathered: ³I have given thee for meat to the beasts of the field, and to the fowls of the heaven.

6 And all the inhabitants of Egypt shall know that I am the LORD, because they have been a ⁴staff of reed to the house of Israel.

7 ⁵When they took hold of thee by thy hand, thou didst break, and rend all their shoulder: and when they leaned upon thee, to be a torment to thee. And I will bring thee up out of thy rivers—By this is metaphorically expressed his being induced to undertake a foreign expedition. The expression alludes to the nature of a crocodile, which is not confined to the water, but uses to come upon the land, where he is frequently taken. And I will leave thee thrown into the wilderness, and all the fish of thy rivers—Thy army shall be discomfited, and fall in the deserts of Lybia and Cyrene; for there seems to be here an allusion to the heavy loss which Apries and the Egyptian army sustained in his expedition against the Cyrenians, toward whom they must have marched over the desert. Herod. ii. § 161. Apries himself did not fall in battle, but was taken prisoner by Amasis, and strangled by the Egyptians. Herod. ii. § 169. See note on Jer. xlv. 30. Thou shalt fall upon the open fields—A king is said to be defeated, or victorious, when his armies are so. Thou shalt not be brought together, nor gathered—The bones, or carcasses, of thy army shall not be collected in order to their burial, nor gathered to the dead in the sepulchres allotted for them. I have given thee for meat to the beasts of the field, &c.—See Rev. xix. 17, 18. Some think the expression here is metaphorical, and signifies that the power of depriving him of his kingdom, power, liberty, riches, and at last life itself, should be given to cruel and rapacious men.

^f Isaiah xxxvii. 29; Chapter xxxviii. 4.—¹ Heb. face of the field.—² Jer. viii. 2; xvi. 4; xxv. 33.—³ Jer. vii. 33; xxxiv. 20.—⁴ 2 Kings xviii. 21; Isa. xxxv. 6.—⁵ Jer. xxxvii. 5, 7, 11; Chap. xvii. 17.

Verses 6, 7. Because they have been a staff of reed to the house of Israel—This expression, a staff of reed, is very emphatical, to signify a confidence which has failed those that depended upon it, or has done them more hurt than good; for if a reed is leaned upon as a staff, it most certainly bends under the weight and breaks, and the splinters sometimes run into the hand of him who leaned upon it. Though the Jews were greatly blamed by God for entering into alliance with the Egyptians, yet we find God here declaring that he would punish the Egyptians for not having performed their engagements to the Israelites; for though God forbade the Israelites to seek the alliance of the Egyptians, this nevertheless did not excuse the Egyptians in their breach of

A. M. 3416. thou brakest, and madest all their
B. C. 588. loins to be at a stand.

8 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will bring ¹a sword upon thee, and cut off man and beast out of thee.

9 And the land of Egypt shall be desolate and waste; and they shall know that I am the LORD: because he hath said, The river is mine, and I have made it.

10 Behold, therefore, I am against thee, and against thy rivers, ^mand I will make the land of Egypt ²utterly waste and desolate, ³from ⁿthe tower of ⁴Syene even unto the border of Ethiopia.

11 ° No foot of man shall pass through it,

¹ Chap. xiv. 17; xxxii. 11, 12, 13.—^m Ch. xxx. 12.—² Heb. wastes of waste.—³ Or, from Migdol to Syene, Exodus xiv. 2;

faith. When they took hold of thee by thy hand—When they relied on thee for help; thou didst break—Or, thou wast crushed, as Newcome renders it; and rend all their shoulder—Or, their arm. The sense is, that the Egyptians proved a destruction to the Jewish people, who expected to be helped by them: see Jer. xxxvii. 5, 7; 2 Kings xxiv. 7. This king of Egypt came with a great army to raise the siege of Jerusalem, but would not venture a battle with the Chaldeans, and marched back again, leaving Jerusalem to be taken by them.

Verses 8, 9. Behold, I will bring a sword upon thee—This was fulfilled, first by the civil wars which broke out in Egypt, and next by the invasion of it by Nebuchadnezzar, who carried his victorious arms through the whole country, destroying wherever he came; and will cut off man and beast—That is, destroy a vast number both of men and beasts. And the land of Egypt shall be desolate—A great part of Egypt was, without doubt, laid waste and made desolate by the ravages of war. Because he hath said, The river is mine—Arrogance and self-confidence are always spoken of in Scripture as highly displeasing to God. Whenever any one thinks, speaks, or acts as if he were self-dependant, and had safety, prosperity, and happiness in his own power, then do the Scriptures represent God as giving up such a one to calamity, to convince him how little reason he had to think highly of, or to trust in himself.

Verses 10–12. Behold, I am against thee and thy rivers—Since thou hast opposed me, I will set myself against thee, and bring down the strength and glory of thy kingdom, wherein thou magnifiest thyself so much. From the tower of Syene, even unto the border of Ethiopia—If we follow this translation, we must understand the word Cush, rendered here Ethiopia, of Arabia, as it is often taken: see note on Jer. xiii. 23. For Syene was to the south of Egypt, under the tropic of Cancer, and bordering on African Ethiopia: see Pliny's Nat. Hist., l. v. c. 9. But the words may be properly translated thus: From Migdol to Syene, even to the borders of Ethionor foot of beast shall pass through it, neither shall it be inhabited forty years.

12 ^p And I will make the land of Egypt desolate in the midst of the countries that are desolate, and her cities among the cities that are laid waste shall be desolate forty years: and I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and will disperse them through the countries.

13 Yet thus saith the Lord God; At the ^q end of forty years will I gather the Egyptians from the people whither they were scattered:

14 And I will bring again the captivity of Egypt, and will cause them to return into the

Jer. xlv. 1.—ⁿ Chap. xxx. 6.—⁴ Heb. Seventh.—^o Chap. xxxii. 13.—^p Chap. xxx. 7, 26.—^q Isa. xix. 23; Jer. xlv. 26.

pia: compare chap. xxx. 5, 9. Migdol was a town near the Red sea, mentioned Exod. xiv. 2; Jer. xlv. 1; xlv. 14, (where see the notes,) at the entrance of Egypt from Palestine; whereas Syene was at the other end of the country. What is said here of the devastation of Egypt, appears from this to be spoken only of a part of it, and not the whole. No foot of man shall pass through it, &c.—The intestine wars of the Egyptians, and the invasion of Nebuchadnezzar, made some provinces of Egypt, which were most the scenes of action, quite desolate; out of which state they did not wholly recover for the space of forty years. And her cities shall be desolate forty years—"We cannot prove, indeed, from heathen authors, that this desolation of the country continued exactly forty years, though it is likely enough that this, as well as the other conquered countries, did not shake off the Babylonish yoke till the time of Cyrus, which was about forty years after the conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar: but we are assured by Berosus, that Nebuchadnezzar took several captives in Egypt, and carried them to Babylon; and from Megasthenes we learn, that he transplanted and settled others in Pontus. So true it is that they were scattered among the nations, and dispersed through the countries, and might, upon the dissolution of the Babylonian empire, return to their native country."—Bishop Newton.

Verses 14, 15. And I will bring again the captivity of Egypt—This captivity of the Egyptians, though not taken notice of by Herodotus, is mentioned by Berosus, in one of the fragments of his history, quoted by Josephus, Antiq., l. x. chap. 11, and published with notes by Scaliger, at the end of his books, De Emendatione Temporum, whose remark upon the place is very observable, namely, "The calamities that befell the Egyptians are passed over by Herodotus, because the Egyptian priests would not inform him of any thing that tended to the disgrace of their nation." And I will cause them to return into the land of Pathros—That part of Egypt which is called Thebais, as Bochart proves by several argu-

A. M. 3416. land of Pathros, into the land of their
B. C. 588. ^a habitation; and they shall be there a ^a base ^r kingdom.

15 It shall be the basest of the kingdoms; neither shall it exalt itself any more above the nations: for I will diminish them, that they shall no more rule over the nations.

16 And it shall be no more ^a the confidence of the house of Israel, which bringeth their iniquity to remembrance, when they shall look after them: but they shall know that I am the Lord God.

^a Or, birth. — ^b Heb. low. — ^r Chap. xvii. 6, 14.

ments. And they shall be there a base kingdom, the basest of kingdoms—"By base kingdom is meant, that it should be tributary and subject to strangers, for the much greatest part of the time. This is the purport and meaning of the prophecy; and the truth will appear by a short deduction of the history of Egypt from that time to this. It was first of all tributary to the Babylonians under Amasis; upon the ruin of the Babylonish empire, it was subject to the Persians; upon the failure of the Persian empire, it came into the hands of the Macedonians; after the Macedonians, it fell under the dominion of the Romans; after the division of the Roman empire, it was subdued by the Saracens, in the reign of Omar, their third emperor; about the year of Christ 1250, it was in the possession of the Mamelukes, a word which signifies a slave bought with money, but is appropriated to those Turkish or Circassian slaves, whom the sultans of Egypt bought young, and taught military exercises. These slaves usurped the royal authority, and by that means Egypt became their prey. But, A. D. 1517, Selim, the ninth emperor of the Turks, conquered the Mamelukes, and annexed Egypt to the Ottoman empire, of which it continues to be a province to this day. By this deduction it appears, that the truth of Ezekiel's prediction is fully attested by the whole series of the history of Egypt, from that time to the present. And who could pretend to say, upon human conjecture, that so great a kingdom, so rich and fertile a country, should ever afterward become tributary and subject to strangers? It is now a great deal above two thousand years since this prophecy was first delivered; and what likelihood or appearance was there, that the Egyptians should, for so many ages, bow under a foreign yoke, and never, in all that time, be able to recover their liberties, and have a prince of their own to reign over them? But as is the prophecy, so is the event."—Bishop Newton.

Verse 16. It shall be no more the confidence of the house of Israel—At the same time that the Jews put confidence in Egypt they distrusted the promises and assistance of God, and forsook him to comply with the idolatries of their allies. Which bringeth—Or, as Newcome translates it, Calling their iniquity to remembrance—That is, as he interprets it,

17 ¶ And it came to pass in the A. M. 3432 seven and twentieth year, in the first B. C. 572.
month, in the first day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

18 Son of man, ^t Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon caused his army to serve a great service against Tyrus: every head was made bald, and every shoulder was peeled: yet had he no wages, nor his army, for Tyrus, for the service that he had served against it:

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will give the land of Egypt unto Nebu-

^a Isa. xxx. 2, 3; xxxvi. 4, 6. — ^t Jer. xxvii. 6; Chap. xxvi. 7, 8.

causing God to remember and punish the iniquity of his people. Or the sense of the verse may be, that the Israelites should no more look to Egypt for help; but, by the deplorable state it should be reduced to, be put in mind of the judgments which wickedness brings down from God; and of their own folly and iniquity in distrusting his assistance, and seeking to Egypt for help, contrary to his commands, and even complying with the Egyptian idolatries, in order to engage them in their favour.

Verses 17, 18. And it came to pass, &c.—The new prophecy, which begins here, is connected with the foregoing, on account of its relating to the same subject, and not on account of its being the next revelation in time which Ezekiel had; for there is nearly seventeen years distance between the date of the foregoing prophecy and this; during which Egypt was torn to pieces by sedition and civil wars, which seems to be signified by the foregoing prophecy; and, the time then approaching that Nebuchadnezzar was to invade and conquer Egypt, God thought proper to declare it to the prophet more openly and expressly than he had done before. Nebuchadnezzar caused his army to serve a great service against Tyrus—The siege lasted thirteen years, till the heads of the soldiers became bald with continual wearing their helmets, and the skin was worn off their shoulders with carrying earth to raise mounts and fortifications against it: see note on chap. xxvi. 8. Yet had he no wages, nor his army, for Tyrus—Before the town came to be closely besieged, the inhabitants had removed their effects into an island, about half a mile distant from the shore, to which they afterward removed themselves, and where they built a new city; so that there was no inhabitant nor booty left there when Nebuchadnezzar's army took the city. Thus St. Jerome, "When the Tyrians saw that the works for carrying on the siege were perfected, and the foundations of the walls were shaken, by the battering of the rams, whatsoever precious things in gold, silver, clothes, and various kinds of furniture, the nobility had, they put them on board their ships, and carried them to the islands; so that, the city being taken, Nebuchadnezzar found nothing worthy of his labour."

Verses 19, 20. He shall take her multitude, and

A. M. 3432. chadrezzar king of Babylon; and he
B. C. 572. shall take her multitude, and ⁷take her spoil, and take her prey; and it shall be the wages for his army.

20 I have given him the land of Egypt ⁸for his labour wherewith he ^userved against it,

⁷ Heb. spoil her spoil, and prey her prey.—⁸ Or, for his hire.

take her spoil—Nebuchadnezzar and his army shall have the captives and spoil of Egypt, which they shall utterly pillage and lay waste. Because they wrought for me, saith the Lord—The destruction of cities and countries is a work of God's providence, for the effecting of which he makes use of kings and princes as his instruments. Upon this account he calls Nebuchadnezzar his servant, Jer. xxv. 9, because he wrought for him, as it is here expressed, that is, executed his judgments upon Tyre, and the other cities and countries which God had delivered into his hands. Though Nebuchadnezzar was actuated by his own ambition to make the conquest of Tyre, yet, because in doing it he had executed God's purposes, and that which was pleasing to him, in humbling the Tyrians, therefore God here declares that he should not go without a reward; for that he would give him the spoil of Egypt, which nation was ripe for punishment. If God is so gracious as to reward those who do but execute his designs accidentally, not intentionally, how much reason have because they wrought for me, saith A. M. 3432.

the Lord God. B. C. 572.

21 ¶ In that day ²will I cause the horn of the house of Israel to bud forth, and I will give thee ⁷the opening of the mouth in the midst of them; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

^u Jer. xxv. 9.—² Psa. cxxii. 17.—⁷ Chap. xxiv. 27.

we to expect that he will most amply reward those who intentionally obey his will!

Verse 21. In that day—The phrase frequently denotes, in the prophets, not the same time which was last mentioned, but an extraordinary season, remarkable for some signal events of providence: in this sense it is to be understood here. I will cause the horn of the house of Israel to bud forth—The horns being the token of strength in beasts, and that in which their power chiefly consists; therefore the word is put to signify strength, or dominion, or a flourishing condition; and therefore to say, that the horn of Israel should bud forth, was as much as to say, that the Jewish nation should grow prosperous, and come to a flourishing condition again. This seems to be spoken of the return of the Jews from their captivity, and settling again in Judea. I will give thee the opening of the mouth in the midst of them—When thy prophecies are made good by the event, this shall add a new authority to what thou speakest: see chap. xxiv. 27.

CHAPTER XXX.

In this chapter we have, (1.) A continuation of the prophecy against Egypt, in which is foretold the destruction of all her allies and confederates, all her interests and concerns, and the several steps which the king of Babylon should take in effecting that destruction, 1–19. (2.) A repetition of a former prophecy against Egypt, delivered while the Egyptians, who had come to assist Zedekiah, were returning home, not having accomplished their purpose, 20–26.

A. M. 3432. THE word of the LORD came again
B. C. 572. unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, prophesy and say, Thus saith the Lord God; ^aHowl ye, Wo worth the day!

3 For ^bthe day is near, even the day of the LORD is near, a cloudy day; it shall be the time of the heathen.

^a Isaiah xiii. 6.—^b Chapter vii. 7, 12; Joel ii. 1; Zeph. i. 7.
¹ Or, fear.—^c Chap. xxix. 19.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXX.

Verses 2–4. Thus saith the Lord, Howl ye, &c.—The prophet addresses the inhabitants of Egypt. Wo worth the day—Ah! the day: alas! what sad times are approaching. Even the day of the Lord—The time of God's vengeance, wherein he will manifest his sore displeasure against Egypt and its allies; a cloudy day—A day that shall be dismal with calamities. Times of trouble have often this appellation. It shall be the time of the heathen—

4 And the sword shall come upon A. M. 3432.
Egypt, and great ¹pain shall be in B. C. 572.

Ethiopia, when the slain shall fall in Egypt, and they ^cshall take away her multitude, and ^dher foundation shall be broken down.

5 Ethiopia, and ²Libya, and Lydia, and ^eall the mingled people, and Chub, and the ³men

^d Jer. l. 15.—² Heb. Phut, Chap. xxvii. 10.—^e Jer. xxv. 20, 24.—³ Heb. children.

Wherein they shall be punished. Great pain shall be upon Ethiopia—Great trouble and distress; when the slain shall fall in Egypt—By the sword of the Chaldeans; and they shall take away her multitude—Shall carry multitudes of them captive to Babylon; and her foundations shall be broken down—Her strong forts and citadels; or her government, laws, and all the supports and defences of her commonwealth.

Verse 5. Ethiopia, and Libya, and Lydia—The

A. M. 3432. of the land that is in league, shall fall
B. C. 572. with them by the sword.

6 Thus saith the LORD; They also that uphold Egypt shall fall; and the pride of her power shall come down: ⁴from ^fthe tower of Syene shall they fall in it by the sword, saith the Lord God.

7 ^gAnd they shall be desolate in the midst of the countries that are desolate, and her cities shall be in the midst of the cities that are wasted.

8 And they shall know that I am the LORD, when I have set a fire in Egypt, and when all her helpers shall be ^hdestroyed.

9 In that day ^hshall messengers go forth from me in ships to make the careless Ethiopians afraid, and great pain shall come upon names in Hebrew are Cush, Phut, and Lud, which are mentioned together as the Egyptian allies, Jer. xlv. 9. Cush probably signifies Ethiopia here, being joined with Phut and Lud, which were nations of Africa. And all the mingled people—All their mercenary soldiers, consisting of various nations. If we distinguish these from the men of the land, mentioned afterward, they may mean that mixture of Carians, Ionians, and other nations lying upon the Mediterranean sea, which Apries got together to encounter Amasis, who, together with him, were destroyed. And Chub—The Cubii are mentioned by Ptolemy as a people of Mareotis, a province of Egypt. There is no mention of this people anywhere else in the Scriptures. According to Michaelis, the ancient geographers have a mercantile town, Kubee, on the Indian sea, under the eighth degree of north latitude.

⁴ Or, from Migdol to Syene.—^f Chap. xxix. 10.—^g Chap. xxix. 12.—^h Heb. broken.—^h Isaiah xviii. 1, 2.—ⁱ Chap. xxix. 19.—^k Chap. xxviii. 7.

Verses 6–9. They also that uphold Egypt shall fall—By this seems to be meant the governors of the several provinces, those who are called the stay of the tribes thereof, Isa. xix. 13; that is, of the several Nomi, or districts of Egypt. From the tower of Syene shall they fall—This should rather be rendered, from Migdol to Syene. See note on chap. xxix. 10. When I have set a fire in Egypt—When I shall have kindled up the flame of war in Egypt. God's judgments are often compared to fire: see the margin. And when all her helpers shall be destroyed—All her allies and auxiliaries. In that day shall messengers, &c.—Houbigant translates this verse, In that day shall swift messengers go forth from me, who shall terrify the secure Ethiopian; and he shall have great fears concerning the day of Egypt, because it shall be nigh. He observes, that as the messengers are said to be “sent to Cush, or Ethiopia, if the Arabians be meant, they were not to be gone by ships: if the Ethiopians, them, as in the day of Egypt: for, A. M. 3432.

B. C. 572. lo, it cometh.

10 Thus saith the Lord God; ⁱI will also make the multitude of Egypt to cease by the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon.

11 He and his people with him, ^kthe terrible of the nations, shall be brought to destroy the land: and they shall draw their swords against Egypt, and fill the land with the slain.

12 And ^lI will make the rivers ^odry, and ^msell the land into the hand of the wicked: and I will make the land waste, and ⁿall that is therein, by the hand of strangers: I the LORD have spoken it.

13 Thus saith the Lord God; I will also ⁿdestroy the idols, and I will cause their images to cease out of Noph; ^oand there shall be no

¹ Isa. xix. 5, 6.—⁶ Heb. drought.—^m Isa. xix. 4.—⁷ Heb. the fulness thereof.—ⁿ Isaiah xix. 1; Jer. xliii. 12; xlv. 25; Zech. xiii. 2.—^o Zech. x. 11.

properly so called, to the south of Egypt, it was not proper for messengers to be sent to them in ships, because the navigation was against the stream, and could not be so quick as it ought upon an approaching calamity.” Bishop Newcome, however, adopts our translation of the first clause, observing, that to send messengers up the Nile in ships was, if not so swift, yet a more secure way of communicating intelligence in a time of general commotion, than to send them by land. The Egyptians and Ethiopians being confederates, the ill news of the conquest of Egypt could not but greatly affect the Ethiopians.

Verses 10–12. I will make the multitude of Egypt to cease—I will diminish the number of its inhabitants. I will make the rivers dry—The fertility of Egypt depending on the rise and overflowing of the Nile, the meaning of the metaphor is, I will destroy the plenty, prosperity, and strength of Egypt. And sell the land into the hand of the wicked—Namely, the haughty and cruel Babylonians. To sell, signifies here to deliver up, as men do goods which they sell. Compare Deut. xxxii. 30; Judg. ii. 14; and iv. 9.

Versé 13. I will also destroy the idols—Idolatry being one of the principal things for which God visits the infidel nations, he would take particular vengeance upon the idols, thereby showing how much he is superior to them in power. Cambysis, the successor of Cyrus, destroyed the idols of Egypt. I will cause their images to cease out of Noph—Noph, or Memphis, was one of the principal cities of Egypt, a seat of their kings, where their sepulchres stood, one of which is still remaining. It is often mentioned in Scripture. In Hosea it is called Moph, and by many at this day Menoph. This place was famous for the worship of Apis and Osiris, whereupon the prophet, in a particular manner, denounces destruction to the idolatry of that place.

A. M. 3432. more a prince of the land of Egypt: B. C. 572. ^aand I will put a fear in the land of Egypt.

14 And I will make ^aPathros desolate, and will set fire in ^rZoan,⁸ ^aand will execute judgments in No.

15 And I will pour my fury upon ⁹Sin, the strength of Egypt; and ⁱI will cut off the multitude of No.

16 And I will ^uset fire in Egypt: Sin shall have great pain, and No shall be rent asunder, and Noph shall have distresses daily.

17 The young men of ¹⁰Aven and of ¹¹Pibeseth shall fall by the sword: and these cities shall go into captivity.

18 ^zAt Tehaphnehes also the day shall be ¹²darkened, when I shall break there the yokes of Egypt: and the pomp of her strength shall cease in her: as for her, a cloud shall cover her, and her daughters shall go into captivity.

19 Thus will I execute judgments in Egypt: and they shall know that I am the LORD.

B. C. 588. 20 ¶ And it came to pass in the eleventh^a year, in the first month, in the seventh day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

21 Son of man, I have ^rbroken the arm of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and lo, ^zit A. M. 3416. shall not be bound up to be healed, B. C. 588. to put a roller to bind it, to make it strong to hold the sword.

22 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I am against Pharaoh king of Egypt, and will ^abreak his arms, the strong, and that which was broken; and I will cause the sword to fall out of his hand.

23 ^bAnd I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and will disperse them through the countries.

24 And I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and put my sword in his hand: but I will break Pharaoh's arms, and he shall groan before him with the groanings of a deadly-wounded man.

25 But I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and the arms of Pharaoh shall fall down; and ^cthey shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall put my sword into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall stretch it out upon the land of Egypt.

26 ^dAnd I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and disperse them among the countries; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

^r Isaiah xix. 16.—^a Chap. xxix. 14.—^r Psa. lxxviii. 12, 43. ⁸ Or, Tanis.—⁹ Neh. iii. 8, 9, 10.—⁹ Or, Pelusiam.—^t Jer. xlv. 25.—^u Verse 8.—¹⁰ Or, Heliopolis.—¹¹ Or, Pubastum.

^z Jer. ii. 16.—¹² Or, restrained.—^r Jer. xlviii. 25.—^z Jer. xlv. 11.—^a Psalm xxxvii. 17.—^b Verse 26; Chap. xxix. 12. ^c Psalm ix. 16.—^d Verse 23; Chap. xxix. 12.

And there shall be no more a prince of the land of Egypt—This undoubtedly refers to the future government of Egypt by foreigners, or to the general destruction of the Egyptian princes by Nebuchadnezzar and Amasis. All men know, says Josephus against Appion, l. ii. sec. 11, Οτι Περσων και μετ' εκεινους, ηγημενων της Ασιας Μακεδονων, Αιγυπτιοι μεν εδουλευον, ανδραποδων εδεν διαφεροντες, "That the Egyptians were subject to the Persians, differing nothing from slaves, and after them to the Macedonians, who ruled over Asia." See the note on chap. xxix. 15. And I will put a fear in Egypt—I will make the Egyptians faint-hearted, and not able to defend themselves.

Verses 14, 15. I will make Pathros desolate—That is, Thebais; and will set fire in Zoan—Or, Tanis, one of the ancient cities in Egypt, and the metropolis of the kingdom in Moses's time: see Psa. lxxviii. 12, 43. I will execute judgments in No—Called the multitude of No, or Hamon-no, in the next verse, and probably the same with the city Thebes, famous for its hundred gates: see the note on Jer. xlv. 25. I will pour my fury upon Sin, the strength of Egypt—It is generally agreed that Sin is the same with Pelusium, one of the seven mouths of the Nile, which was commonly called the key of Egypt, as Suidas observes, and therefore was strongly fortified, that no enemy might gain admittance.

Verses 17, 18. The young men of Aven, &c.—Aven is the same with On, mentioned Gen. xli. 45, in aftertimes called Heliopolis, as the margin here explains it, because of a temple or image there dedicated to the sun: see notes on Isa. xix. 18; Jer. xlviii. 13. The word is so translated both here and Gen. xli. 45, by the LXX., who were very well acquainted with Egypt and all the principal places of it. And they translate Phibeseth, Bubastum. At Tehaphnehes—Elsewhere written Tahpanhes, supposed to be the same place which was afterward called Daphnæ Pelusiaceæ; the day shall be darkened—By this expression is signified its being involved in great calamity; for the day, or light, in the Scripture language, is put for prosperity: therefore the day being darkened signifies a state of adversity.

Verses 20–26. It came to pass in the eleventh year, &c.—It seems this prophecy was delivered soon after the Egyptian army had marched out of Egypt to relieve Jerusalem when besieged by Nebuchadnezzar, but had returned without effecting any thing, (see notes on Jer. xxxvii. 5, 7,) and some months before that city was taken, that is, more than sixteen years before the preceding prophecies. I have broken the arm of Pharaoh—I have begun to break, or will break, Pharaoh's strength, so that he shall not be able to recover his former power. Calmet's interpretation is, "I will break Pharaoh by the revolt of his subjects, by the war which Amasis shall bring upon him, and afterward by that of Nebuchadnezzar; and this in the space of fourteen or fifteen years." It is usual for the prophets to speak of a thing future as if it was already accomplished. It shall not be bound up to be healed—His calamity shall be so far from being lessened, that it shall increase more and more every day. And will break his arms, the strong, and that which was broken—Or, rather, the firm one, as well as the broken, or infirm one. The king of Babylon had before dispossessed the king of Egypt of all his new conquests, from the river of Egypt to the river Euphrates, 2 Kings xxiv. 7. So that this part of his strength was already taken away, and never to be recovered; and now God threatens to destroy the remainder of his power, namely, the kingdom of Egypt itself. And I will cause the sword to fall out of his hand—He shall have no more strength to defend himself than a man hath to use his sword when his arm is broken. And he shall groan with the groanings of a deadly-wounded man—His strength and power shall fail, and he shall groan with anguish as a man who is dying of his wounds. I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations—See note on chap. xxix. 12, 13.

CHAPTER XXXI.

In this chapter the prophet is directed to put Pharaoh in mind of the dreadful fall of the king of Assyria, whose capital city was Nineveh, and who was much superior to him in power and greatness. The prosperity and grandeur of the Assyrian monarch, his vast empire and mighty sway, are set forth under the metaphor of a lofty, spreading cedar, fair and flourishing, and overtopping all the trees of the field, 1-9. He shows Pharaoh how much he resembled him in pride, carnal confidence, and security, and then reminds him how the mighty tree of that monarchy was cut down and destroyed, what a noise it made among the nations by its fall, and what a warning it gave to all potent princes, to beware of pride and confidence in themselves and their own power, 10-17. He leaves it to the king of Egypt to apply all this to himself, and in the destruction of the Assyrian empire to foresee the ruin of his own kingdom, 18.

A. M. 3416.
B. C. 588. AND it came to pass in the eleventh year, in the third month, in the first day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, speak unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, and to his multitude; ^a Whom art thou like in thy greatness?

3 ^b Behold, the Assyrian was a cedar in Lebanon ¹ with fair branches, and with a shadowing shroud, and of a high stature; and his top was among the thick boughs.

^a Verse 18.—^b Daniel iv. 10.—¹ Hebrew, fair of branches.
^c Jer. li. 36.—² Or, nourished.—³ Or, brought him up.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXI.

Verses 1, 2. In the eleventh year, in the third month, &c.—This was another revelation upon the subject of the destruction of Egypt, imparted two months after that which is mentioned in the conclusion of the foregoing chapter. Whom art thou like in thy greatness?—Thou pridest thyself, as if there never was any prince or king that could compare with thee. The prophet here asks a question, not to receive an answer from Pharaoh, but to answer it himself, as he does in the next and following verses, wherein he acquaints the king of Egypt that the king of Assyria was equally as powerful as he, and yet came to a miserable end; from whence he might learn, that he had no security for the continuance of his grandeur, but might be soon cast down as the king of Assyria had been.

4 ^c The waters ² made him great, A. M. 3416.
the deep ³ set him up on high with B. C. 588.
her rivers running round about his plants, and sent out her ⁴ little rivers unto all the trees of the field.

5 Therefore, ^d his height was exalted above all the trees of the field, and his boughs were multiplied, and his branches became long because of the multitude of waters, ^e when he shot forth.

6 All the ^e fowls of heaven made their nests

^a Or, conduits.—^d Dan. iv. 11.—^e Or, when it sent them forth.
^c Chap. xviii. 23; Dan. iv. 12.

Verses 3-9. Behold the Assyrian—This, says Archbishop Secker, seems an admonitory comparison of Pharaoh to the late Assyrian monarch, applied to Pharaoh, verse 18. By the Assyrian, compared here to a tall and fair cedar, such as grew in mount Lebanon, Archbishop Usher and Dr. Prideaux understand that king of Assyria whom some call Chyniladanus, others Saracus, of whom it seems the words of the Prophet Nahum (chap. iii. 18) are to be understood. In like manner Zephaniah joins the destruction of Assyria and the desolation of Nineveh together, chap. ii. 13. Nabopolassar, the king of Babylon, and Cyaxares, the king of Media, called by the names of Nebuchadonozor and Assuerus in Tobit, (chap. xiv. 15,) joining their forces together against him, besieged Nineveh, took it, and, after having slain the king, utterly destroyed that

A. M. 3416. in his boughs, and under his branches
B. C. 588. did all the beasts of the field bring forth their young, and under his shadow dwelt all great nations.

7 Thus was he fair in his greatness, in the length of his branches: for his root was by great waters.

8 The cedars in the ^f garden of God could not hide him: the fir-trees were not like his boughs, and the chestnut-trees were not like his branches;
nor any tree in the garden of God was like unto him in his beauty.

9 I have made him fair by the multitude of his branches: so that all the trees of Eden, that were in the garden of God, envied him.

10 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because thou hast lifted up thyself in height, and he hath shot up his top among the thick boughs, and ^g his heart is lifted up in his height;

11 I have therefore delivered him into the ^f Genesis ii. 8; xiii. 10; Chapter xxviii. 13.—^g Daniel v.

20.—^h Hebrew, in doing he shall do unto him.—ⁱ Chapter xxviii. 7.

great and famous city, and put an end to that part of the Assyrian empire, Nabopolassar having before possessed himself of the other part, which was properly called the Babylonian empire. See Dr.
Prideaux, p. 45. In this remarkable catastrophe the prophecies of Jonah, Nahum, and Zephaniah, foretelling the destruction of Nineveh, were fulfilled.
His top was among the thick boughs.—He overtopped all the other flourishing trees. The waters made him great.—"As trees flourish by a river side, so the traffic of the several branches of the river Tigris, upon which Nineveh was situate, made that city and kingdom rich and populous, and she imparted her wealth and stores among the neighbouring provinces."—Lowth. Therefore his height was exalted, &c.—He became greater than all the kings about him. The greatness of Nebuchadnezzar's power and kingdom is set forth under the same emblem, Dan. iv. 10, &c. All the fowls made their nests in his boughs.—Several nations applied to him for protection, and thought themselves and all their concerns safe under his government. Under his branches did all the beasts of the field bring forth, &c.—Under the protection of his extensive empire did the people increase, and the countries become more populous. The cedars in the garden of God could not hide him, &c.—He overtopped the goodly cedars, called in the Hebrew the cedars of God, Psa. lxxx. 9; such fair ones as might be supposed to have grown in paradise. The expressions are all allegorical, signifying the supereminent greatness of the king of Assyria, and how much more powerful he was than any other of the kings of that time.

hand of the mighty one of the hea- A. M. 3416.
then; ⁶ he shall surely deal with him: B. C. 588.

I have driven him out for his wickedness.

12 And strangers, ^h the terrible of the nations, have cut him off, and have left him: ⁱ upon the mountains and in all the valleys his branches are fallen, and his boughs are broken by all the rivers of the land; and all the people of the earth are gone down from his shadow, and have left him.

13 ^k Upon his ruin shall all the fowls of the heaven remain, and all the beasts of the field shall be upon his branches:

14 To the end that none of all the trees by the waters exalt themselves for their height, neither shoot up their top among the thick boughs, neither their trees ⁷ stand up in their height, all that drink water: for ^l they are all delivered unto death, ^m to the nether parts of the earth, in the midst of the children of men, with them that go down to the pit.

ⁱ Chap. xxxii. 5; xxxv. 8.—^k Isa. xviii. 6; Chap. xxxii. 4.
⁷ Or, stand upon themselves for their height.—^l Psa. lxxxii. 7.
^m Chap. xxxii. 18.

All the trees of Eden, &c.—All the kings of the East envied him, and his greatness. So the Chaldee paraphrast.

Verses 10–14. Because thou hast lifted up thyself.—Because thy pride hath still increased with thy prosperity. I have delivered him into the hand of the mighty one of the heathen.—Or, the mighty one of the nations, as the word גִּבּוֹר is rendered in the next verse. The word אֵל, eel, here rendered mighty one, though generally spoken of God, yet is sometimes applied to heroes, (see chap. xxxii. 21,) sometimes to angels, as excelling in strength, as Psalm lxxxix. 6. So God here says, he delivered the Assyrian into the hand of Nabopolassar, king of Babylon, who, joining his forces with those of the king of Media, made himself master of Nineveh, and of the king of Assyria, whose seat it was. And the terrible of the nations have cut him off.—The armies of the kings of Babylon and Media shall utterly destroy him and his empire, and leave him without life or power. Upon the mountains, &c., his branches are fallen.—As the limbs of a tree are broken by the fall, and those that rested under its shadow are frighted away and forsake the place, so the As-syrian's power was overthrown in all the places of his dominion. Upon his ruin shall all the fowls of the heaven remain, &c.—As the birds sit upon the boughs of a tree cut down, and the beasts browse upon its branches, so his dominions shall be a prey to the conquerors: or, his armies that are slain shall become meat to the birds and beasts. To the end that none of all the trees exalt themselves.—That his destruction may be a warning to other kings and

A. M. 3416. 15 Thus saith the Lord God; In
B. C. 588. the day when he went down to the grave I caused a mourning: I covered the deep for him, and I restrained the floods thereof, and the great waters were stayed: and I caused Lebanon^a to mourn for him, and all the trees of the field fainted for him.

16 I made the nations to^b shake at the sound of his fall, when I^c cast him down to hell with them that descend into the pit: and^d all the trees of Eden, the choice and best of Lebanon, all that drink water,^e shall be comforted in the nether parts of the earth.

^a Heb. to be black.—^b Chapter xxvi. 15.—^c Isaiah xiv. 15.
^d Isa. xiv. 8.—^e Chap. xxxii. 31.—^f Lam. iv. 20.

potentates, to deter them from priding themselves in the time of their prosperity. For they are all delivered unto death—The mighty men of the Assyrians were delivered to death as well as those of the meaner sort. The fall of the Assyrian was thus largely spoken of to convince the king of Egypt, if he would be instructed, that no human power, however great, was able to secure its possessor from the wrath of God and his judgments, or to maintain itself against his attacks.

Verse 15. In the day when he went down to the grave—This, and the following verses, are an elegant description of that consternation that seized the king of Assyria's allies, at the suddenness of his downfall; the same metaphor being still pursued. I caused a mourning: I covered the deep for him—The deep, that is said to have raised up this fair tree, verse 4, is now described as mourning at his downfall. I restrained the floods, and the great waters were stayed—As if the streams had stopped their usual course on purpose to lament his fate. The meaning seems to be, that the great nations and numerous people under his dominions, or his confederates and allies, were all struck with astonishment at his fall. I caused Lebanon to mourn for him—By Lebanon is probably signified Syria, which was in alliance with the king of Assyria. All the trees of the field fainted for him—All the neighbouring princes lamented his ruin, and were disheartened at having lost their protector.

Verses 16, 17. I made the nations to shake at the sound of his fall—Through fear and terror. When I cast him down to hell—Rather, to the grave; with them that descend into the pit—That die and are buried. All the trees of Eden, &c.—The greatest kings on earth. All that drink water—That partake

17 They also went down into hell A. M. 3416 with him, unto them that be slain B. C. 588.
with the sword; and they that were his arm, that dwelt under his shadow in the midst of
the heathen.

18 ¶^a To whom art thou thus like in glory and in greatness among the trees of Eden?
yet shalt thou be brought down with the trees
of Eden unto the nether parts of the earth:
thou shalt lie in the midst of the uncircumcised with them that be slain by the sword.
This is Pharaoh and all his multitude, saith the Lord God.

^a Verse 2; Chapter xxxii. 19.—^b Chapter xxviii. 10; xxxii.
19, 21, 24, &c.

of wealth and other worldly enjoyments; shall be comforted in the nether parts of the earth—The deceased princes, confederates to the Assyrians, described here as so many stately trees and cedars, shall feel some mitigation of their calamities, when they see thee brought down as low as themselves: compare chap. xxxii. 31, and see notes on Isaiah xiv. 8–16, a passage exactly parallel to this. They also went down into hell—Or, the grave; with him—His allies underwent the same fate with himself, and were cut off in the common destruction. And they that were his arm—His auxiliaries; that dwelt under his shadow—Who lived under his protection; in the midst of the heathen—Or, the nations: see on verse 11^b; namely, in several countries and provinces: see Lam. iv. 20. When the Assyrian power was overthrown, it was easy for the Chaldeans to subdue all its allies.

Verse 18. To whom art thou thus like in glory? &c.—To whom, among the great princes of the world, canst thou, O king of Egypt, be so fitly compared, with all thy glory and greatness, as to this king of Assyria, since, like him, thou shalt be thrown down from all thy pomp and grandeur to the lowest state of humiliation and ruin. Thou shalt lie in the midst of the uncircumcised—Thou shalt be put among those of whom God makes no account. “Nations that admitted circumcision, held the uncircumcised in the utmost contempt. The Egyptians, at least the priests and the learned among them, were circumcised; but now they shall lie among the uncircumcised.”—Michaelis. This is Pharaoh and all his multitude, saith the Lord God—In this verse the latter part of verse 2 is resumed, and the allegory, under which the Assyrian is represented, is applied to Pharaoh.

CHAPTER XXXII.

We have in this chapter a further description of the lamentable destruction of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar, which is set forth under two similitudes. (1.) The killing of a mischievous lion, and a whale, crocodile, or some such devouring creature, 1–16. (2.) The funeral of a great commander, or captain-general, brought down to the grave with the nations of the uncircumcised, 17–32.

A. M. 3417. B. C. 587. AND it came to pass in the twelfth year, in the twelfth month, in the first day of the month, that the word of the Lord came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, ^atake up a lamentation for Pharaoh king of Egypt, and say unto him, ^bThou art like a young lion of the nations, ^cand thou art as a ¹whale in the seas: and thou camest forth with thy rivers, and troubledst the waters with thy feet, and ^dfouledst their rivers.

3 Thus saith the Lord God; I will therefore ^espread out my net over thee with a company of many people; and they shall bring thee up in my net.

4 Then ^fwill I leave thee upon the land, I will cast thee forth upon the open field, and ^gwill cause all the fowls of the heaven to remain upon thee, and I will fill the beasts of the whole earth with thee. A. M. 3417. B. C. 587.

5 And I will lay thy flesh ^hupon the mountains, and fill the valleys with thy height.

6 I will also water with thy blood ²the land wherein thou swimmest, even to the mountains; and the rivers shall be full of thee.

7 And when I shall ³put thee out, ⁴I will cover the heaven, and make the stars thereof dark; I will cover the sun with a cloud, and the moon shall not give her light.

8 All the ⁴bright lights of heaven will I make ⁵dark over thee, and set darkness upon thy land, saith the Lord God.

9 I will also ⁶vex the hearts of many people, when I shall bring thy destruction among the nations, into the countries which thou hast not known.

^a Chapter xxvii. 2; Verse 16.—^b Chap. xix. 3, 6; xxxviii. 13.—^c Chap. xxix. 3.—¹ Or, dragon.—^d Chap. xxxiv. 18. ^e Chapter xii. 13; xvii. 20; Hosea vii. 12.—^f Chapter xxix. 5. ^g Chap. xxxi. 13.—^h Chap. xxxi. 12.

NOTES ON PSALM XXXII.

Verses 1, 2. In the twelfth year—Namely, of Jehoiachin's captivity, about which time Amasis began to set up himself against the king of Egypt, concerning whom this prophecy is. Son of man, take up a lamentation for Pharaoh—"To the preceding funeral panegyric over Assyria, the fate of which was past, Ezekiel prophetically subjoins a similar panegyric over Egypt, though its fate was still future; making plainly here a happy variation in the oratorical figure, by which past events are brought down and represented as now present before our eyes; whereas, on the contrary, by this prophetic figure future events are anticipated, and represented as already past."—Obs. on Books, ii. 188. Thou art like a young lion of the nations—Thou art like a beast of prey, devouring far and near. Thou art as a whale in the seas—By the word tannim we may fitly understand a crocodile, as has been observed upon chap. xxix. 3, and the description that follows agrees very well to a crocodile, but cannot be applied to a whale. And thou camest forth with thy rivers, &c.—Or rather, Thou rushedst forth through thy streams, and didst trouble the waters, &c.; that is, thou wentest beyond the bounds of thine own kingdom, and didst trouble and tread down, or subdue, the neighbouring cities and nations.

Verses 3-6. I will spread out my net over thee, &c.—I will bring thine enemies upon thee, who shall encompass thee on every side, and master thee as a wild beast or monstrous fish is taken in a net. Then will I leave thee upon the land—That is, leave thee to certain destruction, or take away from thee all means of recovery. For Pharaoh being here spoken of as a water animal, leaving him upon the land, signified leaving him to certain death, without the means of escaping it; for a fish left upon the land must needs die, let it struggle as it will, water being absolutely necessary to its life. This was literally fulfilled when, making war upon the Cyrenians, he was vanquished, and his army cut in pieces, and left a prey to the fowls and beasts in the deserts of Libya and Cyrene: see note on chap. xxix. 4, 5. And I will fill the beasts of the whole earth with thee—With the flesh of thy vast armies. Or rather, understanding the words figuratively, I will enrich all nations with thy spoils. And I will lay thy flesh upon the mountains, &c.—Thy people shall be slain, both upon the mountains and in the valleys, and their carcasses lie unburied there. I will also water with thy blood the land wherein thou swimmest—The land of Egypt, wherein thou bearest rule; even to the mountains—The mountains shall be wet with it, as well as the lower grounds: compare Isaiah xxxiv. 3. And the rivers shall be full of thee—All places, both high and low, both land and water. All the expressions in these verses are hyperbolical, signifying the vast slaughter that should be made of the Egyptians, and the immense booty that should be obtained by their enemies.

² Or, the land of thy swimming.—³ Or, extinguish.—⁴ Isa. xlii. 10; Joel ii. 31; iii. 15; Amos viii. 9; Rev. vi. 12, 13; Matt. xxiv. 29.—⁵ Heb. light of the light in heaven.—⁶ Heb. them dark.—^h Heb. provoke to anger, or, grief.

Verses 7-10. And when I shall put thee out—When I shall cast thee down from thy power, and extinguish all thy glory. I will cover the heaven, and make the stars thereof dark—It is well known that the downfall of states and kingdoms, kings and princes, is often expressed in the Scriptures by these or such like metaphors: see notes on Isaiah xlii. 10; xxiv. 23; xxx. 26. But here the expressions may mean, I will make every thing look sad and dismal, or will cause a universal sorrow; for to men amidst great calamities and afflictions every thing appears dark and gloomy, and even the light itself seems little different from darkness; and therefore it is usual to express a state of great sorrow by the

A. M. 3417. 10 Yea, I will make many people
B. C. 587. ^aamazed at thee, and their kings shall be horribly afraid for thee, when I shall brandish my sword before them; and ¹they shall tremble at every moment, every man for his own life, in the day of thy fall.

11 ¶ ^mFor thus saith the Lord God; The sword of the king of Babylon shall come upon thee.

12 By the swords of the mighty will I cause thy multitude to fall, ⁿthe terrible of the nations, all of them: and ^othey shall spoil the pomp of Egypt, and all the multitude thereof shall be destroyed.

13 I will destroy also all the beasts thereof from beside the great waters; ^pneither shall the foot of man trouble them any more, nor the hoofs of beasts trouble them.

14 Then will I make their waters deep, and heavens being covered, and the stars darkened. *All the bright lights of heaven will I make dark over thee—I will involve thy whole land in trouble and distress, making every thing in it look dismal. I will vex the hearts, &c., when I shall bring thy destruction among the nations—*When thy exiles shall be dispersed into foreign countries, (see chap. xxix. 12,) and relate the miserable circumstances of thy destruction, it shall cause grief and consternation in all that hear it. Yea, I will make many people amazed at thee, and their kings, &c.—The kings and princes of Africa, who lay near to Egypt, seem here to be spoken of; for the destruction of Egypt could not but fill them with fear for themselves, lest the victor should make them suffer the same fate.

^{*} Chap. xxvii. 35.—¹ Chapter xxvi. 16.—^m Jer. xlv. 26; Chapter xxx. 4.—ⁿ Chapter xxviii. 7.—^o Chapter xxix. 19. ^p Chap. xxix. 11.—⁷ Heb. desolate from the fulness thereof.

Verses 13, 14. I will also destroy the beasts thereof—Their horses, in which they trusted so much, Isa. xxxi. 3, and other cattle, feeding in their rich pastures by the river sides. Neither shall the foot of man, nor the hoofs of beasts, &c.—The country shall be so deserted that the waters of the river shall not be fouled by man or beast. But we may understand the prophet here as speaking metaphorically, and by the beasts of Egypt, intending its armies, which had frequently troubled the neighbouring nations, but which, it is here said, should trouble them no more; for when Egypt should be made desolate, and the number both of men and beasts should be diminished by their wars and confusions, then they should neither have the will nor the power to give their neighbours any further molestation; but the nations around them should enjoy quietness, like that of a river which smoothly glides along, and never has its streams fouled or disturbed: see verse 2. Then will I make their waters deep, &c.—The nations which used to be harassed and troubled by cause their rivers to run like oil, saith A. M. 3417.

the Lord God. B. C. 587.

15 When I shall make the land of Egypt desolate, and the country shall be ⁷desitute of that whereof it was full, when I shall smite all them that dwell therein, ^athen shall they know that I am the LORD.

16 This is the ^rlamentation wherewith they shall lament her: the daughters of the nations shall lament her: they shall lament for her, even for Egypt, and for all her multitude, saith the Lord God.

17 ¶ It came to pass also in the twelfth year, in the fifteenth day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

18 Son of man, wail for the multitude of Egypt, and ^bcast them down, even her, and the daughters of the famous nations, unto the nether parts of the earth, with them that go down into the pit.

^q Exodus vii. 5; xiv. 4, 18; Psalm ix. 16; Chapter vi. 7. ^r Verse 2; 2 Samuel i. 17; 2 Chron. xxxv. 25; Chap. xxvi. 17. ^a Chap. xxvi. 20; xxxi. 14.

the Egyptians, shall then enjoy great peace and quietness.

Verse 15. When I shall make the land of Egypt desolate, &c.—When I shall bring the fore-mentioned dreadful calamities upon it. Then shall they know that I am the Lord—The awful and destructive visitation shall be sanctified to those that survive: it shall yield them important instruction, and they shall give glory to my power and justice, while a sensible conviction of the vanity of the world, and of the fading and perishing nature of all things in it, shall draw their affections from it, and from all that it contains, and induce them to seek an acquaintance with me as their portion and happiness.

Verse 16. This is the lamentation wherewith they shall lament her—This is the substance of the lamentation, which may be properly used to bewail the calamities which Egypt shall suffer: see note on verse 2. The daughters of the nations shall lament her—That is, the people of the neighbouring countries shall use such like words as these when they hear of Egypt's calamities: thus the daughter of Zion and of Babylon signifies the inhabitants of those cities. This verse alludes to the mourning women, whose office it was to lament at funerals.

Verses 17, 18. It came to pass, in the fifteenth day of the month—Namely, of the month before mentioned, which was a few days after the time of the preceding revelation. The word of the Lord came unto me—Giving me further directions how to improve the fall of Egypt. Son of man, wail for the multitude of Egypt—Prepare the funeral ceremonies at the burial of Egypt, and compose an elegy suitable to the sad occasion. Bishop Lowth observes, that "this prophetic ode is a master-piece in that species of writing which is appropriated to the ex-

A. M. 3417. 19 * Whom dost thou pass in beauty? ^a go down, and be thou laid with the uncircumcised.

20 They shall fall in the midst of them that are slain by the sword: ^b she is delivered to the sword: draw her and all her multitudes.

21 * The strong among the mighty shall speak to him out of the midst of hell with them that help him: they are ^c gone down, they lie uncircumcised, slain by the sword:

^a Chapter xxxi. 2, 18.—^a Verses 21, 24; Chapter xxviii. 10.
^b Or, the sword is laid.—Isaiah i. 31; xiv. 9, 10; Verse 27.
^c Verses 19, 25.

citing terror." And cast them down, even her, &c.—Houbigant renders this clause, And thrust them down with the daughters of the nations; thrust them down to the lower parts of the earth, to those who are gone down to the lake. And he observes, that "the prophet is commanded to thrust the Egyptians down to the shades below; that is, to exhibit, by an hypotyposis, familiar with the prophets, the ruin of the Egyptians, similar to the ruin of the people who have been destroyed and gone down to the regions of the dead." The reader will observe that this figure of speech is a representation of things painted in such strong and bright colours as may cause the imagination of the hearers to conceive of them rather as present to their view than described in words. Such is the representation which the prophet here gives of the calamities of the Egyptians. The expressions, Unto the nether parts of the earth, with them that go down into the pit, denote utter destruction, and are parallel to those elsewhere used, of being brought down to hell, to the grave, or into silence. The Egyptians affected to be buried in their pyramids, and their kings, princes, and nobles would be laid by themselves, but Ezekiel provides them their graves among common people, to lie just where they fell.

Verses 19, 20. Whom dost thou pass in beauty?—What reason hast thou to prefer thyself before others? Art thou better than they, that thou shouldest not die and be laid in the dust as well as they? Go down—Namely, to the regions of the dead; and be laid with the uncircumcised—Among profane and loathed carcasses, such as the bodies of the uncircumcised were in the opinion of the circumcised: see notes on chap. xxviii. 8–10, and xxxi. 18. The circumcised, in Scripture, being put for those for whom God had a peculiar regard, and this being one of the distinguishing characteristics of his peculiar people, therefore the term uncircumcised seems to be used for those whom God had rejected, that is, for the wicked and profane. They shall fall in the midst of them that are slain by the sword—Thy people shall not die the common death of all men, but shall be cut off by an extraordinary judgment from the hand of God himself: they shall be slain by the sword. Draw her and all her multitude—Carry her and her people away to the grave,

22 * Asshur is there and all her company: his graves are about him: all of them slain, fallen by the sword:

23 * Whose graves are set in the sides of the pit, and her company is round about her grave: all of them slain, fallen by the sword, which ^b caused ^c terror in the land of the living.

24 There is ^d Elam and all her multitude round about her grave, all of them slain, fallen by the sword, which are ^d gone down uncircum-

* Verses 24, 26, 29, 30.—^a Isa. xiv. 15.—^b Chap. xxvi. 17, 20; Verses 24, 25, 26, 27, 32.—^c Or, dismaying.—^d Jer. xlix. 34, &c.—^d Verse 21.

like so many carcasses, which are buried without any solemnity. The words seem to be spoken to the Babylonians, the executioners of God's judgments upon Egypt.

Verse 21. The strong among the mighty shall speak to him—Namely, to the king of Egypt; out of the midst of hell—Or, the pit, as Bishop Newcome renders the word: see verse 23. The passage is "a poetical description of the regions of the dead; where the ghosts of deceased tyrants, with their subjects, are represented as coming to meet the king of Egypt and his auxiliaries, upon their arrival at the same place. Hell signifies here the state of the dead."—Lowth. See note on Isa. xiv. 9. They are gone down—The warriors, famous in their time for their exploits, have undergone the same fate with other men of blood, and are gone down to the grave by violent deaths.

Verses 22, 23. Asshur is there and all her company—The Assyrians, both king and people, whose destruction is represented in the foregoing chapter: though famous, warlike, and victorious, that mighty monarch fell. His graves are about him—The graves of his soldiers slain in the war. This expression, and that in the next verse, her company is round about her grave, seem to signify no more than a universal destruction of high and low, and that death had made them all equal. The masculine and feminine genders are promiscuously used in the following verses. The masculine referring to the prince, whose subjects the deceased were; the feminine to the nation or country to which they belonged. Whose graves are set in the sides of the pit—Here is supposed a spacious vault, in the midst whereof the king of Asshur lies, and round the vault, in receptacles hewn about its sides, his famous captains and commanders. And her company is round about her grave—Like lesser graves placed round the monument of some person of great quality. All of them slain, which caused terror, &c.—Who were a terror while they were alive to their neighbours.

Verses 24, 25. There is Elam and all her multitude—Which was conquered by Nebuchadnezzar: see note on Jer. xlix. 36. The nations mentioned in this and the following verse were probably confederates with the Assyrians, and fell when they did. Which caused terror—yet have they borne their

A. M. 3417. cised into the nether parts of the earth, ° which caused their terror in the land of the living; yet have they borne their shame with them that go down to the pit.
B. C. 587.

25 They have set her a bed in the midst of the slain with all her multitude: her graves are round about him: all of them uncircumcised, slain by the sword: though their terror was caused in the land of the living, yet have they borne their shame with them that go down to the pit: he is put in the midst of them that be slain.

26 There is ^f Meshech, Tubal, and all her multitude: her graves are round about him: all of them ^g uncircumcised, slain by the sword, though they caused their terror in the land of the living.

27 ^h And they shall not lie with the mighty that are fallen of the uncircumcised, which are gone down to hell ¹⁰ with their weapons of war: and they have laid their swords under their heads, but their iniquities shall be upon their bones, though they were the terror of the mighty in the land of the living.

^c Verse 23.—^f Genesis x. 2: Chapter xxvii. 13; xxxviii. 2.
^g Verses 19, 20.—^h Verse 21; Isa. xiv. 18, 19.—¹⁰ Heb. with weapons of their war.

shame—They have been shamefully subdued, and have lost their lives and glory together, as Asshur did before them. They have set her a bed in the midst of the slain, &c.—Elam and her people have gone down to the state of the dead, among those who have fallen by the sword. The word bed is used for the grave, Isa. lvii. 2, and may, in both places, allude to the costly monuments, or sepulchres, which used to be erected for persons of great quality. Her graves are round about him—The king and people are involved in the same common destruction.

Verses 26–28. There is Meshech, Tubal, &c.—These are some other of the Assyrian allies; some think the Cappadocians, and other nations neighbouring to them, are here meant. The Scythians also, who anciently governed Asia, may be comprehended, and their expulsion from Media by Cyaxares may here be referred to: see Obs. on Books, i. 192. And they shall not lie with the mighty, &c.—They shall not lie among those heathen heroes, men of courage and fortitude, who were laid in distinct graves, with pomp and magnificence, but shall all be tumbled together into one common pit, as their actions have not made them worthy of any distinction.

Which are gone down to hell—Or, the state of the dead, as the word which we translate hell ought often to be rendered. With their weapons of war—Brave men, who had gained signal victories, used, by way

28 Yea, thou shalt be broken in the A. M. 3417.
midst of the uncircumcised, and shalt B. C. 587.
lie with them that are slain with the sword.

29 There is ¹ Edom, her kings, and all her princes, which with their might are ¹¹ laid by them that were slain by the sword: they shall lie with the uncircumcised, and with them that go down to the pit.

30 ^k There be the princes of the north, all of them, and all the ¹ Zidonians, which are gone down with the slain; with their terror they are ashamed of their might; and they lie uncircumcised with them that be slain by the sword, and bear their shame with them that go down to the pit.

31 Pharaoh shall see them, and shall be ^m comforted over all his multitude, even Pharaoh and all his army slain by the sword, saith the Lord God.

32 For I have caused my terror in the land of the living: and he shall be laid in the midst of the uncircumcised with them that are slain with the sword, even Pharaoh and all his multitude, saith the Lord God.

ⁱ Chapter xxv. 12.—¹¹ Hebrew, given, or, put.—^k Chap. xxxviii. 6, 15; xxxix. 2.—^l Chapter xxviii. 21.—^m Chap. xxxi. 16.

of honour, to have their arms buried with them, or hung upon their sepulchres. Thus was the grave of Misenus honoured by Æneas.

“———— Ingenti mole sepulchrum Imponit, suaque arma viro.” ÆN. vi. 232.

“It was usual,” says Kirchman, De Funer. Roman., l. iii. c. 18, “in former times, in some places, to put swords, shields, and other armour in the graves of military men, as they did in the grave of Theseus, and on the bier of Alexander the Great.” But the meaning of the prophet here is, that those, of whom he speaks, should be without these usual martial solemnities, with which people formerly often honoured their dead. Instead of which he says their iniquities shall be upon their bones—Their death shall carry in it plain tokens of their sins, and of God’s vengeance pursuing them on account of them. Yea, thou shalt be broken in the midst of the uncircumcised—Thou, O king of Egypt, shalt have no honorary distinctions paid thee at thy death, or be laid in a magnificent tomb, as those great conquerors have been, but shalt lie in a common pit, or grave, promiscuously with those who are overcome and slain in battle.

Verses 29–32. There is Edom, her kings, &c.—Of whose destruction Ezekiel prophesied, chap. xxv. 12; laid by them that were slain by the sword—Laid among the conquered. With them that go down to the pit—Among those of no renown, who are thrown into one common grave without any honour or distinction paid to them. There be the princes of the north—By these, it seems, are meant the Tyrians, who lay north of Judea, and were overcome in many battles by the Chaldeans. Pharaoh shall see them, and shall be comforted, &c.—Here, by a poetical figure, sense is given to Pharaoh among the dead, and he feels a consolation in that state to see so many other kings and nations brought into the same condition as himself and his people were in. Even Pharaoh and all his army slain by the sword—Herodotus affirms, that Apries, or Pharaoh-hophra, was strangled: οι δε μιν απενευσαν, l. ii. p. 154. But the enemies of Apries may have used the sword against him before he expired. For I have caused my terror in the land of the living—In the Hebrew text it is, חסי, his terror, that is, I have permitted the king of Egypt to be a vexation and terror to many while he was alive in the world. And he shall be laid in the midst of the uncircumcised—That is, with the basest sort, or those of no distinction. Or, if we read with the Masorites, whom our translators follow, my terror, the meaning of the verse may be, As these kings and nations have been a terror to the world while they were in it, verse 24, &c., so will I be now a terror to them, and especially to Pharaoh and his people, in making them a remarkable example of my vengeance. Observe, reader, the calamitous state of human life! See what a dying world this is! The strong die, the mighty die; Asshur, Elam, Meshech, Tubal, Edom, the princes of the north, the Zidonians, Pharaoh, and all his multitude! But here is likewise an allusion to the final and everlasting death of impenitent sinners. Those that are uncircumcised in heart are slain by the sword of divine justice. Their iniquity is upon them, and they bear their shame for ever!

CHAPTER XXXIII.

In this chapter we have, (1.) The duty of a spiritual watchman, 1-9. (2.) A declaration of the safety of penitents, and the destruction of apostates, 10-20. (3.) A message to those who flattered themselves with hopes of safety, though they repented not, 21-29. (4.) A reproof of those who approved the word of God, but did not practise it, 30-33.

A. M. 3417. AGAIN the word of the LORD
B. C. 587. came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, speak to ^a the children of thy people, and say unto them, ^b When ¹ I bring the sword upon a land, if the people of the land take a man of their coasts, and set him for their ^c watchman:

3 If when he seeth the sword come upon the land, he blow the trumpet, and warn the people;

4 Then, ² whosoever heareth the sound of the trumpet, and taketh not warning; if the sword come and take him away, ^d his blood A. M. 3417.

shall be upon his own head. B. C. 587.

5 He heard the sound of the trumpet, and took not warning; his blood shall be upon him. But he that taketh warning shall deliver his soul.

6 But if the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned; if the sword come, and take any person from among them, ^e he is taken away in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand.

^a Chap. iii. 11.—^b Chap. xiv. 17.—¹ Heb. a land when I bring a sword upon her.—^c 2 Samuel xviii. 24, 25; 2 Kings ix.

17; Isa. xxi. 8; Verse 7; Hos. ix. 8.—² Heb. he that hearing heareth.—^d Chap. xviii. 13.—^e Verse 8.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXIII.

Verses 1-6. Again the word of the Lord came unto me—"It is plain that Ezekiel uttered what is contained in this chapter to verse 20, before Jerusalem was taken by the Babylonians; but how long before is uncertain."—Bishop Newcome. Son of man, speak to the children of thy people—To the Jews, to whom he had not spoken since he declared what is contained in chap. xxiv. The reader will find in chap. iii., from verses 17 to 22, the substance of what is repeated in the first ten verses of this chapter. The instruction is the same in both passages; but the subject is here more fully and explicitly illustrated. "When the prophet had confirmed his predictions of evil, both to the Jews and heathen, by exemplifications of the like predictions already fulfilled among the latter, he proceeds to apply home the conclusion arising hence by an expostulation and pathetic address to the hearts and consciences of the Jews. But to what Jews is this addressed? To the Jews who were already in captivity. In order, then, that this address might make the stronger impression on them, and produce its wished-for effect, he immediately subjoins an information, which he here presents, as having been just then received, of the actual capture and destruction of the city of Jerusalem, agreeably to his foregoing prophecies against it: the accomplishment of which prediction against the Jews themselves, joined to his historic narrations before, of the accomplishment of many others against the heathen, both completes his arguments in favour of the credit and veracity of his predictions against

A. M. 3417. 7 ^f So thou, O son of man, I have
B. C. 587.

set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me.

8 When I say unto the wicked, O wicked man, thou shalt surely die; if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thy hand.

9 Nevertheless, if thou warn the wicked of his way to turn from it; if he do not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul.

^f Chapter iii. 17.—^g Chapter xxiv. 23.—^h So Isa. xlix. 14; Chap. xxxvii. 11.

Egypt, or other nations, and also proves, by a conspicuous example, the truth of that maxim with which he had concluded his late address to the captive Jews, That God will judge every one after his ways, both Jews and heathen.—Obs. on Books, ii. 196.

When I bring the sword upon a land—When an enemy approaches to any land, which never happens without my appointment or permission; if the people of the land take a man of their coast—Or, from among them, to which sense the word כִּנְזֵר, here used, is translated, Gen. xlvii. 2; and set him for their watchman—Such watchmen were placed upon the turrets of their city-walls, or upon high mountains near, to give notice of the enemy's approach: see the margin. If when he seeth the sword come upon the land—If, when he spies the enemy marching against it, he blow the trumpet, sound the alarm; and warn the people—The sound of the trumpet is a warning, yet it is sometimes necessary to add a warning by word of mouth, and tell the people brought together by the trumpet what he sees. Whosoever heareth, &c., and taketh not warning—Considers not, minds not what he hears, nor will be made sensible of the danger, so as to provide for resisting or fleeing from the sword; if the sword come and take him away—Destroy him; his blood shall be upon his own head—His destruction is owing to himself. He heard the sound of the trumpet—He heard as well as others who escaped, and he might have delivered himself as they did who took warning. His blood shall be upon him—The guilt and blame of his death cannot be charged on any but himself. But he that taketh warning shall save his soul—Shall save his life from the danger that threatens it. In like manner, he that takes warning by the prophet's admonition shall preserve himself from the judgments threatened against sinners. But if the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet—If he neglect his charge, which is to give the alarm; and the people be not warned—But are surprised by the enemy; if the sword take any person from among them—Cut any one off unexpectedly; he is taken away in his iniquity—Punished and cut off by the Lord for his sins for-

10 ¶ Therefore, O thou son of man, A. M. 3417.
B. C. 587.
speak unto the house of Israel; Thus

ye speak, saying, If our transgressions and our sins be upon us, and we ^g pine away in them, ^h how should we then live?

11 Say unto them, As I live, saith the Lord God, ⁱ I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live: turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for ^k why will ye die, O house of Israel?

12 Therefore, thou son of man, say unto the children of thy people, The ^l righteousness of the righteous shall not deliver him in the day

ⁱ 2 Sam. xiv. 14; Chap. xviii. 23, 32; 2 Peter iii. 9.—^k Chap. xviii. 31.—^l Chap. iii. 20; xviii. 24, 26, 27.

merly committed, and in consequence of the present fault of not watching, a great fault in every one that is guilty of it in time of war. But his blood will I require at the watchman's hands—The guilt of that blood will I charge upon the watchman, and punish him for it, for he sinned in not giving the necessary warning.

Verses 7-9. So thou, O son of man—The Lord here applies the preceding account of the watchman's office to the prophet, and shows that his duty is illustrated thereby. As if he had said, If a watchman, appointed by his fellow-citizens, is so highly guilty, if he do not give warning to the city, and shall receive such punishment from my hands; what must not thou expect, who art appointed by me to give warning to thy countrymen of the terrible evils which their sins will bring upon them, if thou neglect to do it? God has never left his people without sufficient means of instruction, but has vouchsafed it to them more or less in every age, from the beginning of the world to this day. He has, from time to time, and at all times, set watchmen over them, raised up good and holy men to instruct, admonish, warn, and reprove. "I have even sent unto you all my servants the prophets daily, rising up early and sending them, but you have not hearkened unto me, nor inclined your ear," Jer. vii. 25. When I say unto the wicked, &c.—See notes on chap. iii. 18, 19.

Verses 10, 11. If our transgressions be upon us, &c.—If the unpardoned guilt of our sins lie upon us, and we be punished for them in the wasting of our country, the burning of our city, the abolishing the public worship of God, &c.; and we pine away in them—Experience their bitter consequences in famine and disease, and in a variety of other calamities; how shall we live?—How then can the promises of life belong to us? How can such assurances be true as were given us chap. xviii. 17-32? What ground can we have to hope for a recovery of our former condition? Or, how canst thou promise the continuance or restoration of any mercy to us? How can it be better with us than it is? If thy threatenings be true, it will be worse with us, and not better;

A. M. 3417. of his transgression: as for the wicked, B. C. 587. edness of the wicked, ^mhe shall not fall thereby in the day that he turneth from his wickedness; neither shall the righteous be able to live for his righteousness in the day that he sinneth.

13 When I shall say to the righteous, that he shall surely live; ⁿif he trust to his own righteousness, and commit iniquity, all his righteousnesses shall not be remembered; but for his iniquity that he hath committed, he shall die for it.

14 Again, ^owhen I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; if he turn from his sin, and do ³that which is lawful and right;

15 If the wicked ^prestore the pledge, ^qgive again that he had robbed, walk in ^rthe statutes of life, without committing iniquity; he shall surely live, he shall not die.

16 ^sNone of his sins that he hath committed

^m 2 Chron. vii. 14.—ⁿ Chap. iii. 20; xviii. 24.—^o Chap. iii. 18, 19; xviii. 27.—^p Heb. judgment and justice.—^q Chap. xviii. 7.—^r Exod. xxii. 1, 4; Lev. vi. 2, 4, 5; Num. v. 6, 7; Luke xix. 8.

and if they be not true, how can we trust thy promises of recovery? These are supposed to be the words of impious persons, who, pretending to despair of God's mercies, take encouragement from thence to continue in their sins. Say, As I live, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked—For an elucidation of this and the following verses to the 20th, compare chap. xviii.; and see the notes there.

Verse 13. When I shall say to the righteous, that he shall surely live—When I make him a promise of life, peace, and every blessing which he stands in need of; if he trust to his own righteousness—Formerly performed, but now abandoned; or, if he rely upon the good works he hath done, and think the worth of them will overbalance the guilt of his evil deeds; which seems to have been the opinion of the later Jews, who lay it down for a rule in their Mishna, That all Israel shall have a share in the world to come. All his righteousness shall not be remembered, &c.—He shall come again under the guilt of all his past sins, and shall be exposed to condemnation and wrath: see notes on chap. xviii. 24–29. It is evidently signified here, that to trust in our own righteousness, whether internal or external, whether graces or virtues, past or present, or to entertain high thoughts of our own attainments in religion, and to put confidence therein, is one step toward a fall, and generally issues in apostacy.

Verse 15. If the wicked restore the pledge, give again that he had robbed—It is a necessary condition of obtaining pardon, that men make restitution of what they have unjustly gotten from others. The law is express to this purpose, Lev. vi. 5, where the offender is required to add a fifth part to the princishall be mentioned unto him: he hath A. M. 3417. done that which is lawful and right; B. C. 587. he shall surely live.

17 ¶ Yet the children of thy people say, The way of the LORD is not equal: but as for them, their way is not equal.

18 When the righteous turneth from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, he shall even die thereby.

19 But if the wicked turn from his wickedness, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall live thereby.

20 Yet ye say, ^xThe way of the LORD is not equal. O ye house of Israel, I will judge you every one after his ways.

21 ¶ And it came to pass in the twelfth year ^yof our captivity, in the tenth month, in the fifth day of the month, ^zthat one that had escaped out of Jerusalem came unto me, saying, ^aThe city is smitten.

^r Leviticus xviii. 5; Chapter xx. 11, 13, 21.—^s Chap. xviii. 22.—^t Verse 20; Chap. xviii. 25, 29.—^u Chap. xviii. 26, 27. ^x Verse 17; Chap. xviii. 25, 29.—^y Chap. i. 2.—^z Chapter xxiv. 26.—^a 2 Kings xxv. 4.

pal, and give it to him to whom it appertaineth; see the note there. To the same purpose is that received rule among the Christian casuists, taken from St. Augustin, Epistle liv., Non dimittitur peccatum, nisi restituatur ablatum. The sin is not forgiven, unless what is taken away be restored. Lord Clarendon's observations on this subject are peculiarly excellent: "Robbery and violence would be too gainful a trade, if a man might quit all scores by repentance, and detain all he hath gotten; or if the father's repentance might serve the turn, and the benefit of the transgression be transmitted as an inheritance to the son. If the pledge remained it must be restored; the retaining it is committing a new iniquity, and forfeits any benefit of the promise. If he hath it not, nor is able to procure it, his hearty repentance is enough without reparation: but to enjoy the spoil, and yet to profess repentance, is an affront to God Almighty, and a greater sin than the first act of violence, when he did not pretend to think of God, and so did not think of displeasing him. Whereas now he pretends to reconcile himself to God, and mocks him with repentance, while he retains the fruit of his wickedness. He who is truly penitent restores what he hath left to the person who was deprived of it, and pays the rest in devout sorrow for his trespass."

Verse 21. In the twelfth year of our captivity, &c.—According to this reading, the news of the taking and burning of Jerusalem was brought to that part of the Babylonish dominions where the Jewish captives were placed in a year, five months, and twenty-six days after the calamity happened: see Jer. lii. 12. But eight MSS. having תשנ"ו instead of

A. M. 3417. 22 Now ^bthe hand of the LORD
B. C. 587. was upon me in the evening, afore he that was escaped came; and had opened my mouth, until he came to me in the morning; ^cand my mouth was opened, and I was no more dumb.

23 Then the word of the LORD came unto
me, saying,

24 Son of man, ^dthey that inhabit those ^ewastes of the land of Israel speak, saying,

^b Chapter i. 3.—^c Chapter xxiv. 27.—^d Chapter xxxiv. 2.
^e Verse 27; Chapter xxxvi. 4.—^f Isaiah li. 2; Acts vii. 5.
^g Mic. iii. 11; Matt. iii. 9; John viii. 39.

וְנִרְאָה, Bishop Newcome, and some others, think the preferable reading is, the eleventh year. If this be adopted, only about six months passed between the taking of Jerusalem and the communication of that event to Ezekiel. One that had escaped out of Jerusalem came unto me—According to what God had foretold to him should be the case, as is mentioned chap. xxiv. 26, and which was to be as a new commission unto him to speak unto the people; from doing which, by the command of God, he had ceased for near three years before; the prophetic influence, or impulse, not coming upon him during that time.

Verse 22. Now the hand of the Lord was upon me in the evening.—I felt a sensible impulse of the prophetic spirit: see chap. i. 3. And had opened my mouth, until he came to me in the morning.—Had so influenced my mind, that I found myself disposed and prepared to speak freely and with authority. Not that he had been utterly dumb before: for he had probably “been able to converse with the Jews concerning the predictions formerly delivered to them, and perhaps spake, or delivered in writing to them, the prophecies which he uttered concerning other nations; but he had received no further revelation from God respecting their affairs: in this sense he had been dumb.”—Scott. But now the Spirit moved him to speak, and continued so to do till the messenger came, whose information concerning the taking and burning of Jerusalem, which had been repeatedly and clearly foretold by the prophet, would give an indisputable authority and credit to all his predictions, and prepare the people’s minds to receive, with faith and a due regard, every future message which he was commissioned to deliver to them.

Verse 24. They that inhabit those wastes of the land of Israel.—They that are left behind in the land, that is now wasted with fire and sword: see the margin. Speak, saying, Abraham was one, and inherited the land.—Had the privilege of dwelling and feeding his flocks in it; as if he had said, “If Abraham, being only a single person, had the whole country of Judea given him, there is much greater reason to conclude, that God will preserve the possession of it to us, who are a numerous part of Abraham’s posterity. These men speak after the

^f Abraham was one, and he inherited ^{A. M. 3417.} the land: ^{B. C. 587.} but we are many; the land is given us for inheritance.

25 Wherefore say unto them, Thus saith the LORD GOD; ^hYe eat with the blood, and ⁱlift up your eyes toward your idols, and ^kshed blood: and shall ye possess the land?

26 Ye stand upon your sword, ye work abomination, and ye ^mdefile every one his neighbour’s wife: and shall ye possess the land?

^h Genesis ix. 4; Lev. iii. 17; vii. 26; xvii. 10; xix. 26; Deut.
xii. 16.—ⁱ Chap. xviii. 6.—^k Chapter xxii. 6, 9.—^m Chap.
xviii. 6; xxii. 11.

vain manner of the Jews, who fondly presume that they have a right to all the promises made to Abraham, without considering the vast difference between them and Abraham, both in faith and practice. The appellation of one is given to Abraham in other parts of Scripture, because he was singled out from the rest of his family, to be the original, or head, of the Jewish nation.”—Lowth.

Verses 25, 26. Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord—Remove from them this destructive carnal confidence, and show them what they do, and how far they are from being Abraham’s genuine seed. Ye eat with the blood.—Which was expressly forbidden in the Jewish law, as appears from Lev. vii. 26, as well as that more ancient law ordained to all mankind, Gen. ix. 4; and lift up your eyes toward your idols.—Offer up your prayers unto your fictitious gods; and shed blood.—That is, commit murders; and shall ye possess the land?.—When you do not perform the conditions on which the land was given, namely, that of being a holy people, can you think that you shall continue to enjoy it? Ye stand upon your sword.—You make your strength the law of justice, and, confiding in that, you do whatsoever your inclinations lead you to, whether right or wrong; according to the character given of ungodly men, Wisd. ii. 11, who say, “Let our strength be the law of justice, for that which is feeble is found to be nothing worth,” &c. Houbigant translates the clause, You stand in your high way, or the corners of your streets, and commit your abominations, considering the words as referring to their public and open profession of idolatry. Dr. Spencer (De Legib. Hebrew., lib. ii. cap. 11) thinks that the expression alludes to a custom of the heathen, “who put the blood of their sacrifices into a vessel, or pit, in order to call up and consult evil spirits, and then stood with their swords drawn, to keep the demons off from doing them any harm.” Ye defile every one his neighbour’s wife.—Ye universally commit adultery; and shall ye possess the land?.—The question implies a peremptory denial. Thus the prophet shows how vain and ill-grounded their expectations were of being continued in the possession of Judea, since they did those things which were contrary to the divine law, and which consequently excluded them from any right to the land.

A. M. 3417. 27 Say thou thus unto them, Thus
B. C. 587.

saith the Lord God; As I live, surely they that are in the wastes, shall fall by the sword, and him that is in the open field, ° will I give to the beasts ⁴ to be devoured, and they that be in the forts and ² in the caves, shall die of the pestilence.

28 ^a For I will lay the land ⁵ most desolate, and the ^r pomp of her strength shall cease; and ² the mountains of Israel shall be desolate, that none shall pass through.

29 Then shall they know that I am the LORD, when I have laid the land most desolate, because of all their abominations which they have committed.

^a Verse 24.—^c Chapter xxxix. 4.—⁴ Heb. to devour him.
^p Judges vi. 2; 1 Sam. xiii. 6.—^q Jer. xlv. 2, 6, 22; Chapter xxxvi. 34, 35.—² Heb. desolation and desolation.—^r Chapter
vii. 24; xxiv. 21; xxx. 6, 7.—Chapter vi. 2, 3, 6.—⁵ Or,
of thee.

Verse 27. Surely they that are in the wastes—
They who continue to dwell among the desolations of Jerusalem and Judea; shall fall by the sword— This they accordingly did, both through the civil dissensions among them, in the conspiracy formed against Gedaliah, and likewise by the Chaldeans revenging his death. And him that is in the open field will I give to the beasts—He shall be a prey to lions and other ravenous beasts, that will multiply in the ruined country. And they that be in the forts and caves—Out of the reach of men and beasts; shall die of the pestilence—My hand shall reach them, and send among them those destructive disorders which shall sweep them away. These three judgments here mentioned, the sword, destructive beasts, and the pestilence, together with famine, are often threatened as the last and finishing strokes of divine vengeance upon the Jewish nation: see chap. v. 12, 17, and vi. 12, and xiv. 21; Jer. xv. 3. By the forts and caves here spoken of, are meant the strong holds formed by nature in the rocks, or cut out in the sides of the mountains. Many of them were so large that men might secure themselves, their families, and their goods in them. So David is said, 1 Sam.
xxiii. 14, to abide in strong holds, and remain in a mountain in the wilderness of Ziph. Such was the cave of Adullam, where David had his residence for some time, and was there resorted to by his relations, (1 Sam. xxii. 1,) and at another time by his principal officers, 2 Sam. xxiii. 15.

Verses 28, 29. For I will lay the land most deso- late—I will make the land destitute of inhabitants, by the destruction which shall be made of them by the sword, by wild beasts, and the pestilence, and by their being carried into captivity. And the pomp of her strength shall cease—All that wealth and magnificence wherein they pleased themselves, as that which gave them strength and reputation in the eyes of the world, are taken away: see chap. vii. 24. Or 30 ¶ Also, thou son of man, the children of thy people still are talking

A. M. 3417.
B. C. 587.

⁶ against thee by the walls and in the doors of the houses, and ¹ speak one to another, every one to his brother, saying, Come, I pray you, and hear what is the word that cometh forth from the LORD.

31 And ^u they come unto thee ⁷ as the people cometh, and ⁸ they ^x sit before thee as my people, and they hear thy words, but they will not do them: ⁷ for with their mouth ⁹ they show much love, but ² their heart goeth after their covetousness.

32 And lo, thou art unto them as ¹⁰ a very lovely song of one that hath a pleasant voice,

^t Isa. xxix. 13.—^u Chap. xiv. 1; xx. 1.—⁷ Heb. according to the coming of the people.—⁸ Or, my people sit before thee.
^x Chapter viii. 1.—⁷ Psalm lxxviii. 26, 37; Isaiah xxix. 13.
⁹ Heb. they make loves, or, jests.—² Matt. xiii. 22.—¹⁰ Heb.
a song of loves.

the phrase may denote the beauty and glory of the temple, which they looked upon as their chief strength and protection; none shall pass through— None shall choose even so much as to pass through the country, on account of its being infested with wild beasts through its desolateness, and because the air of it shall be rendered unwholesome, by means of the effluvia arising from dead and dying bodies, and the pestilential diseases which rage in the country, and sweep away its inhabitants. Then shall they know that I am the Lord—That I am their Lord, their righteous governor, and just judge.
When I have laid the land most desolate, &c.—
When I have brought these destructive calamities upon it, because of the sins and abominations of its inhabitants. Observe, reader, those are untractable and unteachable indeed, that are not made to know their dependance upon God when all their creature comforts fail them, and they are made desolate.

Verses 30–32. The children of thy people—Those of the captivity; still are talking against thee—Or rather, of thee, as the LXX. rightly render it; for with their mouths they showed much love, as it follows in the next verse. By the walls and in the doors of their houses—Both in their public places of concourse, and in their private meetings. And speak one to another, saying, Come, &c.—These were such as drew nigh to God with their mouths, but their hearts were far from him, as Isaiah describes their hypoerisy, chap. xxix. 13; and they come unto thee as the people cometh—Or, as disciples flock to their teachers: so the Chaldee paraphrase explains it.
They make a profession of great regard to piety and virtue, and express a great esteem for thee, but at the same time they indulge themselves in sin and wickedness. And lo! thou art unto them as a very lovely song, &c.—They come to hear thee for their entertainment, not for their edification, in the spirit

A. M. 3417. and can play well on an instrument :
B. C. 587. for they hear thy words, but they do them not.

* 1 Sam. iii. 20.

in which many go to hear noted and eloquent preachers. St. Austin tells us, that he himself was such an auditor of St. Ambrose before he was converted, Confess., l. v. c. 12; "I heard him diligently when he discoursed in the congregation, but not with that application of mind which I ought to have done; but I came rather out of curiosity, to know whether his eloquence was answerable to the opinion which the world had of him. I was very attentive to his style, and charmed with the sweetness of his delivery, but had little value or concern for the subjects he treated of."

33 ^a And when this cometh to pass, A. M. 3417.
(lo, it will come,) then ^b shall they B. C. 587.
know that a prophet hath been among them.

^b Chap. ii. 5.

Verse 33. And when this cometh to pass, (lo, it will come)—Or, rather, lo, it is come; for so the same phrase is translated chap. vi. 2, 6, 10, the verb being in the present tense; when they shall see thy prophecies concerning the destruction of Jerusalem actually fulfilled, and all the events predicted by thee exactly brought to pass; then shall they know that a prophet hath been among them—Then shall they be convinced of the truth of thy mission, and of their own inexcusable crime in despising thy prophecies. The words of this verse are evidently spoken by the Lord to his prophet.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

In this chapter the shepherds of Israel, that is, their rulers, both in church and state, are called to an account, as having been very much accessory to the sin and ruin of Israel, by their neglect of the duties of their station. We have here, (1.) A high charge exhibited against them for their negligence, their unskilfulness, and unfaithfulness, in the management of public affairs, 1-6, 8. (2.) Their discharge from their trust, for their insufficiency and treachery, 7-10. (3.) A gracious promise that God would take care of his flock, though they did not, and that it should not always suffer as it had done, by their maladministrations, 11-16. (4.) Another charge is exhibited against those of the flock that were fat and strong, for the injuries they did to those who were weak and feeble, 17-22. (5.) Another promise that God would, in the fulness of time, send the Messiah to be the great and good Shepherd of the sheep, who should redress all grievances, and set every thing to rights with the flock, 23-31.

A. M. 3417. AND the word of the LORD came
B. C. 587. unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, prophesy against the ^ashepherds of Israel, prophesy, and say unto them,

* Chap. xxxiii. 24.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXIV.

Verse 1. The word of the Lord came unto me, saying—It is probable that this prophecy immediately followed the preceding; and that at, or immediately after, the arrival of the news that Jerusalem was conquered, the prophet was commissioned to speak of the tyranny and carelessness of the governors and teachers, and to point out their negligence as a principal cause of the incredulity and wickedness of the people. Thus the transition appears to be natural, and the connection close, between this prophecy and the foregoing one, as also between the beginning of this prophecy and its conclusion. For considering that, in parts at least, the people suffered for the faults of the shepherds, mercy now urged the prophet to declare, from God, that he would judge between them, save the flock, and set up one shepherd over them, who should feed them, even his servant David.

Verse 2. Prophesy against the shepherds of Israel—The word shepherd, in the prophetic writing, Thus saith the Lord God unto the A. M. 3417. shepherds; ^b Wo be to the shepherds B. C. 587.

of Israel that do feed themselves! should not the shepherds feed the flocks?

^b Jer. xxiii. 4; Zech. xi. 17.

tings, comprehends both civil and ecclesiastical governors. See notes on Isa. lvi. 11; Jer. ii. 8. Other writers also use the same expression; princes being called shepherds of their people, as well as those who have the immediate care of their souls: see Psa. lxxviii. 71, 72. Thus Homer calls Agamemnon, Ποιμεναλῶν, the shepherd of the people. And as the threatenings here denounced extend to all sorts of governors, so the several sins of the princes, priests, and prophets are reproved, chap. xxii. 25, &c. Wo to the shepherds of Israel that feed themselves—That regard their own profit and advantage, not the good of the people committed to their charge. The beauty of the original, רעו אשר היו רעים אותם, may be expressed in Latin or Greek, though not in English:—pastoribus qui pascunt semet ipsos: τοις ποιμεσιν οι ποιμαινουσινσαντους. Plato, in the first book of his Commonwealth, describing the office of a magistrate, saith, "He should look upon himself as sustaining the office of a shepherd, that makes it his chief business to take care of his flock; not as if he

A. M. 3417. 3 ° Ye eat the fat, and ye clothe B. C. 587. you with the wool, ^d ye kill them that are fed: but ye feed not the flock.

4 ° The diseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick, neither have ye bound up that which was broken, neither have ye brought again that which was driven away, neither have ye ^f sought that which was lost; but with ^g force and with cruelty have ye ruled them.

5 ^h And they were ⁱ scattered, ¹ because there is no shepherd: ^k and they became meat to all the beasts of the field, when they were scattered.

6 My sheep wandered through all the moun-

^c Isa. lvi. 11; Zech. xi. 16.—^d Chap. xxxiii. 25, 26; Micah
iii. 1, 2, 3; Zechariah xi. 5.—^e Verse 16; Zechariah xi. 16.
^f Luke xv. 4.—^g 1 Pet. v. 3.

were going to a feast to fill himself and satiate his appetite, or to a market to make what gain he can to himself." Eusebius, in his twelfth book De Præ- paratione Evangelica, chap. xlv., hath transcribed the whole passage, as an exact parallel to this place of Ezekiel. See Lowth.

Verses 3, 4. Ye eat the fat—Or, the milk, as the LXX. render it. The Hebrew words chalab, milk, and cheleb, fat, differ only in their points, so that the ancient versions take them promiscuously one for the other. These shepherds of the Lord's flock, these civil and ecclesiastical rulers of the people, used their power over them, and exercised their offices, merely for their temporal advantage and emolument. "They exacted their tribute and taxes, their tithes and perquisites, with great earnestness;
and they oppressed, and even destroyed the people, to enrich themselves: but they bestowed no pains to provide for the welfare of the state, or of the souls of those intrusted to them."—Scott. Ye kill them that are fed—Ye take away the lives of the wealthy and substantial by unjust means, in order to enrich yourselves with their estates. But ye feed not the flock—Ye take no care for their benefit, temporal or spiritual. Ye are so ignorant that ye know not how to feed them, and ye are so indolent that ye will not take any pains to do it, and ye are so treacherous and unfaithful that ye never desired or designed it.
The diseased—The weak and languishing; have ye not strengthened—With your help, counsel, or countenance. Ye have not applied proper remedies to the wants and necessities of those committed to your charge. The magistrates have not taken care to relieve the needy and defend the oppressed. The priests and the prophets have not been diligent in giving the people proper instructions, in rectifying the mistakes of those that were in error, in warning the unruly, or comforting the disconsolate. Neither have ye bound up that which was broken—Ye have not given relief to the afflicted and miserable: a metaphor taken from surgeons binding up wounds and upon every high hill: yea, A. M. 3417.

B. C. 587. my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search or seek after them.

7 ¶ Therefore, ye shepherds, hear the word of the Lord;

8 As I live, saith the Lord God, surely because my flock became a prey, and my flock ¹ became meat to every beast of the field, because there was no shepherd, neither did my shepherds search for my flock, ^m but the shepherds fed themselves, and fed not my flock;

9 Therefore, O ye shepherds, hear the word of the Lord;

10 Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I am

^h Chap. xxxiii. 21, 28.—ⁱ 1 Kings xxii. 17; Matthew ix. 36.
¹ Or, without a shepherd; and so Verse 8.—^k Isa. lvi. 9; Jer.
xii. 9; Verse 8.—^l Verses 5, 6.—^m Verses 2, 10.

in order to cure them. Neither have ye brought again that which was driven away, &c.—Or, which was gone astray, as the word נִרְחָק is translated, Deut. xxii. 1. Ye have not, by your instructions and exhortations, endeavoured to reduce those who had wandered from the way of truth, or to reclaim those who were ready to perish in their sins; but with force and cruelty have ye ruled them—Have endeavoured to reduce and govern them by the rough methods of compulsion and cruelty, and not by the gentle way of reason and argument, long-suffering, meekness, and love; and your government over them has been exercised by tyranny and oppression, instead of justice, kindness, and beneficence.

Verses 5, 6. And they were scattered, &c.—Driven into other parts of the land, or into other countries, by the severity, exactions, and oppressions of their rulers. Because there is no shepherd—No one worthy of the name of a shepherd; none that cared for or properly watched over and fed the flock.
And they became meat to all the beasts of the field
—They were made a prey to, and were spoiled by, their enemies, temporal and spiritual. My sheep wandered through all the mountains—As silly sheep, when there is no one to look after them, wander from one mountain and hill to another; so my thoughtless and infatuated people, disregarded and neglected, or treated with cruelty by those that should have protected and guided them, have manifested their ignorance and folly in following various species of idolatry, and in forming to themselves religions after their own imaginations, full of superstition and impiety. And none did search or seek after them—Their priests and princes were so far from calling them back from these wanderings, that they were the first to follow them; nay, and even to go before, and set them the example.

Verse 10. Thus saith the Lord, Behold, I am against the shepherds—They have made me their enemy by their negligence and abuse of their pow-

A. M. 3417. against the shepherds; and ^a I will
B. C. 587.

require my flock at their hand, and cause them to cease from feeding the flock; neither shall the shepherds ^o feed themselves any more; for I will deliver my flock from their mouth, that they may not be meat for them.

11 ¶ For thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I, even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out.

12 ² As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered; so will I seek out my sheep, and will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in ^p the cloudy and dark day.

13 And ^q I will bring them out from the people, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the mountains of Israel by the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country. A. M. 3417.

B. C. 587.

14 ^r I will feed them in a good pasture, and upon the high mountains of Israel shall their fold be: ^s there shall they lie in a good fold, and in a fat pasture shall they feed upon the mountains of Israel.

15 I will feed my flock, and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord God.

16 ^t I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick: but I will destroy ^u the fat and the strong; I will feed them ^x with judgment.

17 And as for you, O my flock, thus saith the Lord God; ^y Behold, I judge between ³ cattle and cattle, between the rams and the ⁴ he-goats.

^a Chapter iii. 18; Heb. xiii. 17.—^o Verses 2, 8.—^q Heb. According to the seeking.—^p Chap. xxx. 3; Joel ii. 2.—^r Isa. lxx. 9, 10; Jer. xxiii. 3; Chap. xxviii. 25; xxxvi. 24; xlvii. 21, 22.—^s Psa. xxiii. 2.—^t Jer. xxxiii. 12.—^u Verse 4; Isaiah xl. 11; Micah iv. 6; Matt. xviii. 11; Mark ii. 17; Luke v. 32. ^u Isaiah x. 16; Amos iv. 1.—^y Jer. x. 24.—³ Chap. xx. 37, 38; Verses 20, 22; Zech. x. 3; Matt. xxv. 32, 33.—⁴ Heb. small cattle of lambs and kids.—⁴ Heb. great he-goats.

er, and I will appear and act as such. They have been enemies to my sheep, though pretending to be their shepherds; I will be an open enemy to them; and will require my flock at their hands—I will require a severe account from their kings and princes, their priests and prophets, of the damage my people have sustained through their ill management; and I will deprive them of the honour, pre-eminence, and advantage of which they have made such an ill use.

Verses 11–16. Behold, I, even I, will search my sheep—I myself will recall them from their wanderings into the right way; and will seek them out—Hebrew, בקרתי, I will seek them early, or, seek them in the morning. As a shepherd seeketh out his flock—With the greatest care and diligence; as he gathers them together, counts them, brings them to the fold, observes what they have suffered, and, if lame or torn, binds up and heals them, and provides pasture for them; so will I seek out my sheep, &c.—Though magistrates and ministers fail in doing their part for the good of the church, yet God will not fail in doing his; he will take his flock into his own hands, rather than it should be deprived of any kindness he had designed for it. The under shepherds may prove careless, but the chief Shepherd neither slumbers nor sleeps. They may be false, but he abides faithful. And deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered—Will bring them home from their several dispersions, whither they have been driven; in the cloudy and dark day—Hebrew, ביום ענן וצל, in the day of clouds and darkness; in the dark and dismal time of the destruction of their country. And will bring them out from the people—This prophecy primarily respected their restoration from captivity in Babylon, and was in part at least fulfilled when so many thousands of them returned to their own land under the conduct of Zerubbabel, Ezra, and others. It seems, however, to look still further, even to the general restoration of the whole Jewish nation from their present wide dispersion over the whole world, which restoration most of the prophets foretel shall be effected in the latter days. But there is no need to confine this promise wholly to the Jews; when those, in any age or nation, that have gone astray from God into the paths of sin are brought back by repentance; when those that erred come to the acknowledgment of the truth; when God's outcasts are gathered and restored, and religious assemblies that were dispersed are again collected and united upon the ceasing of persecution; and when the churches have rest and liberty, then this prediction has a true accomplishment. I will feed them in a good pasture—I will supply all their wants, and make ample provision for the support both of their natural and spiritual life. Upon the high mountains of Israel shall their fold be—There shall they have fixed habitations upon their return, and there shall they rest in safety. There shall they lie in a good fold, &c.—These expressions denote both plenty and security. But I will destroy the fat and the strong—Those who oppress and tyrannise over the weak. I will feed them with judgment—I will judge, chastise, and punish them.

Ver. 17, 19. As for you, O my flock—The prophet, having finished what he had to say to the shepherds, now delivers God's message to the flock. God had

A. M. 3417. 18 Seemeth it a small thing unto
B. C. 587.

you to have eaten up the good pasture, but ye must tread down with your feet the residue of your pastures? and to have drunk of the deep waters, but ye must foul the residue with your feet?

19 And as for my flock, they eat that which ye have trodden with your feet; and they drink that which ye have fouled with your feet.

20 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord God unto them; ^z Behold, I, even I, will judge between the fat cattle and between the lean cattle.

21 Because ye have thrust with side and with shoulder, and pushed all the diseased with your horns, till ye have scattered them abroad; A. M. 3417.

B. C. 587.

22 Therefore will I save my flock, and they shall no more be a prey; and ^a I will judge between cattle and cattle.

23 And I will set up one ^b Shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, ^c even my servant David; he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd.

24 And ^d I the Lord will be their God, and my servant David ^e a prince among them; I the Lord have spoken it.

25 And ^f I will make with them a covenant of peace, and ^g will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land: and they ^h shall dwell

^z Verse 17.—^a Verse 17.—^b Isa. xl. 11; Jer. xxxiii. 4, 5; John x. 11; Heb. xiii. 20; 1 Pet. ii. 25; v. 4.—^c Jer. xxx. 9; Chap. xxxvii. 24, 25; Hos. iii. 5.

^d Verse 30; Exodus xxix. 45; Chap. xxxvii. 27.—^e Chap. xxxvii. 22; Luke i. 32, 33.—^f Ch. xxxvii. 26.—^g Lev. xxvi. 6; Isa. xi. 6-9; xxxv. 9; Hos. ii. 18.—^h Ver. 28; Jer. xxxiii. 6.

before ordered him to speak tenderly to them, and to assure them of the mercy which he had in store for them. But now he is ordered to make a difference between some and others of them, to separate between the precious and the vile, and then to give them a promise of the Messiah, by whom this distinction would be effectually made; partly at his first coming, when for judgment he should come into this world, John ix. 39; but completely at his second coming, when he shall, as it is here said, judge between cattle as a shepherd divides between the sheep and the goats, and shall set the sheep on his right hand and the goats on his left, Matt. xxv. 32, 33. Between the rams and the he-goats—The Hebrew, it seems, may be better rendered, Between the small cattle, and the cattle of rams and of he-goats, between the weak and the strong cattle; that is, between the rich and the poor, as the Chaldee Paraphrase explains the sense upon verse 20. Seemeth it a small thing unto you to have eaten up the good pasture? &c.—This reproof may be fitly applied to those of the rich and great, who take no care that the poor may enjoy the benefit of their superfluities, but will rather let them be thrown away and lost, than they will take the trouble of seeing them disposed of for the relief of those that stand in need. As for my flock, they eat that which ye have trodden, &c.—They are compelled to live upon the relics of what you have spoiled and destroyed.

Verses 21, 22. Because ye have thrust with side and shoulder, &c.—Have molested and vexed the poor and weak by your unjust and violent dealings; therefore will I save my flock—I will interpose, and rescue the poor of my people from violence and oppression. The reader will easily observe that the metaphors used in these verses are taken from two sorts of cattle, the one of the larger and stronger kind, the other of the smaller and weaker sort, which the larger ones are wont to thrust aside and push at with their horns.

Verses 23-25. And I will set up one Shepherd—That is, the Messiah, “the true Shepherd, who hath given himself this name both in the prophets and in the gospel, and who hath perfectly fulfilled all the duties, the characters whereof have been before described. He is called David, because he sprung from David according to the flesh; because he possessed eminently and really all those qualities which the Scriptures give to David as the type of the Messiah; and because he was the person in whom all the promises made to David were fulfilled. Though this prophecy was in a great measure completed when Christ, by the preaching of the gospel, gathered into one the children of God, among whom were many of the lost sheep of Israel, yet it will receive a further completion at the general conversion of the Jews.”—Calmet. I the Lord will be their God—I will renew my covenant with them, and receive them again into my protection. I will be a God all-sufficient for them, and they shall not, as formerly, have recourse to any other. And my servant David a prince among them—To reduce them to their allegiance, to receive their homage, and to reign over them, in them, and for them. Observe, reader, those, and those only, that have the Lord Jesus for their Prince, have the Lord Jehovah for their God. And I will make with them a covenant of peace—The covenant of grace is this covenant of peace; in it God is at peace with penitent and obedient believers, speaks peace to them, and assures them of peace with him, and of all good, even all the good they need to make them happy. This peace is through Jesus Christ, who hath procured it for us by his merits, and imparts it to us by his Spirit. He is the peace predicted by Micah, chap. v. 5. Peace to men was announced at his birth; his gospel is the gospel of peace, and he himself is the God and King of peace: in short, he it is who pacifieth all things, and reconciles and unites in one Jews and Gentiles, God and man, heaven and earth. And I will cause

A. M. 3417. safely in the wilderness, and sleep in
B. C. 587. the woods.

26 And I will make them and the places round about ¹ my hill ² a blessing; and I will ¹ cause the shower to come down in his season; there shall be ² showers of blessing.

27 And ² the tree of the field shall yield her fruit, and the earth shall yield her increase, and they shall be safe in their land, and shall know that I am the LORD, when I have ³ broken the bands of their yoke, and delivered them out of the hand of those that ² served themselves of them.

28 And they shall no more ² be a prey to the

¹ Isaiah lvi. 7; Chap. xx. 40.—² Gen. xii. 2; Isa. xix. 24; Zech. viii. 13.—³ Lev. xxvi. 4.—⁴ Psa. lxxviii. 9; Mal. iii. 10.—⁵ Lev. xxvi. 4; Psalm lxxxv. 12; Isa. iv. 2.—⁶ Lev. xxvi. 13; Jer. ii. 20.—⁷ Jer. xxv. 14.

the evil beasts to cease out of the land—Persecutors shall no more distress my church, nor infidels seduce them. They shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods—They shall be perfectly safe, by night as well as by day, under my protection. He alludes to the circumstance of the eastern shepherds frequently lying abroad in the fields with their flocks during the night, without a tent to shelter them.

Verses 26-28. I will make them and the places round about my hill a blessing—I will there give remarkable instances of my favour, and of the happiness which flows from it. God's hill is the same with his holy mountain, mentioned chap. xx. 40, where see the note. There shall be showers of blessings—Blessings in great abundance, and of all sorts, temporal and spiritual, earthly and heavenly. The tree of the field shall yield her fruit—There shall be great fertility and plenty in every part of the land. The spiritual blessings of the gospel are often described under the emblems of fruitfulness and abundance. And they shall be safe in their land—In no danger of being invaded and enslaved, though their great plenty might be supposed to be a temptation to their neighbours to desire their land. And they shall know that I am the Lord—They shall indeed know that I, and I only, am the living and true God, and their God and Saviour; when I have broken the bands of their yoke—Those bands by which they had been brought down, and long held under oppression; had been made slaves, and used as such. The same expression is used of the deliverance of Israel out of Egypt, (Lev. xxvi. 13; Jer. ii. 20,) their final restoration being represented as the greater deliverance of the two. And none shall make them afraid—The experience of my particular care over them, shall inspire them with that confidence in me which shall preserve them from all disquieting fears and anxieties.

Verses 29, 30. And I will raise up for them a plant of renown—The Messiah, the branch from the heathen, neither shall the beasts of the land devour them; but ² they shall dwell safely, and none shall make them afraid.

29 And I will raise up for them a ² plant ³ of renown, and they shall be no more ⁴ consumed with hunger in the land, ⁵ neither bear the shame of the heathen any more.

30 Thus shall they know that ² I the LORD their God am with them, and that they, even the house of Israel, are my people, saith the LORD God.

31 And ye my ² flock, the flock of my pasture, are men, and I am your God, saith the LORD God.

¹ Verse 8; Chap. xxxvi. 4.—² Verse 25; Jer. xxx. 10; xlv. 27.—³ Isa. xi. 1; Jer. xxiii. 5.—⁴ Or, for renown.—⁵ Heb. taken away.—⁶ Chap. xxxvi. 3, 6, 15.—⁷ Verse 24; Chapter xxxvii. 27.—⁸ Psa. c. 3; John x. 11.

root of David, so frequently foretold by the prophet. And they shall be no more consumed with hunger—But shall be blessed with plenty of all things. Spiritual blessings, the blessings peculiar to the Messiah's kingdom, are chiefly intended. These his subjects shall possess in abundance, and shall be satisfied therewith, whatever their lot may be as to the things of this life. Neither shall they bear the shame of the heathen any more—By whom they were formerly reproached, as if their God had cast them off. Then shall they know—The very heathen shall be convinced by these many and great blessings bestowed upon my people; that I the Lord—I, Jehovah, who can perform what I promise; am with them—Am reconciled to them, and do bless and save them; and that they—Whom these heathen despised and injured, and formerly made slaves; even the house of Israel, are my people—My peculiar people, above all people in the world, and as such shall be taken care of by me.

Verse 31. And ye my flock, &c., are men—These words at the conclusion of the chapter, explain the metaphor which runs through the whole of it; namely, that what was said of a flock and its shepherds, is to be understood of men and their governors, and especially of God's people, whom their civil and ecclesiastical governors neglected, or misled and oppressed, but whom God regards, watches over, provides for, and takes care of, as a shepherd does his flock. It is justly observed here by Mr. Ostervald, that "this is a chapter which both magistrates and rulers of the church ought to meditate upon very seriously. The complaints that God here makes of false shepherds, and the curses he denounces against them, show that it is the duty of pastors, with their utmost diligence, to watch over the sheep with which they are intrusted, and to provide with care and readiness for all their wants; and that if they fail herein, they must give a severe account to God for it. This too lays an obligation upon princes and magistrates, to govern faithfully and justly the people."

committed to their trust. What befell the Jews, who, for the unfaithfulness of their prophets and magistrates, were utterly destroyed, shows that it is the greatest misfortune to a nation to have wicked rulers; and that all who are concerned for the glory of God, and the happiness and edification of the church, have great reason to pray to God, that he would always raise up to his people faithful and good pastors."

CHAPTER XXXV.

In this chapter the prophet renews his former denunciations of judgments upon the Edomites, (see chap. xxv. 12,) as a just punishment for their insulting over the calamities of the Jews. We have, (1,) A charge drawn up against them for their spite and malice, 5, 6, 10-13, 15. (2,) A denunciation of ruin on account thereof: that God will be their enemy, 3: and their country shall be laid waste, and made most desolate, 4, 6-9: and shall be left so when other countries that had been wasted should recover themselves, and be restored to their former prosperity, 14, 15.

A. M. 3417. MOREOVER the word of the
B. C. 587. LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, ^a set thy face against ^b mount Seir, and ^c prophesy against it.

3 And say unto it, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, O mount Seir, I am against thee, and ^d I will stretch out my hand against thee, and I will make thee ^e most desolate.

4 ^f I will lay thy cities waste, and thou shalt be desolate, and thou shalt know that I am the LORD.

5 ^g Because thou hast had a ^h perpetual hatred, and hast ⁱ shed the blood of the children of Israel by the ^j force of the sword in the time of their calamity, ^k in the time ^l that their iniquity had an end: A. M. 3417.

B. C. 587.

6 Therefore, as I live, saith the Lord God, I will prepare thee unto blood, and blood shall pursue thee: ^m since thou hast not hated blood, even blood shall pursue thee.

7 Thus will I make mount Seir ⁿ most desolate, and cut off from it ^o him that passeth out and him that returneth.

8 ^p And I will fill his mountains with his slain men: in thy hills, and in thy valleys, and in all thy rivers, shall they fall that are slain with the sword.

9 ^q I will make thee perpetual desolations,

^a Chapter vi. 2.—^b Deut. ii. 5.—^c Jer. xlix. 7, 8; Chapter xxv. 12; Amos i. 11; Obadiah 10, &c.—^d Chapter vi. 14.
^e Hebrew, desolation and desolation, So verse 7.—^f Verse 9.
^g Chap. xxv. 12; Obadiah 10.—^h Or, hatred of old, Chap. xxv. 15.—ⁱ Heb. poured out the children.

^k Heb. hands.—^l Psa. cxxxvii. 7; Chap. xxi. 25, 29; Dan. ix. 24; Obad. 11.—^m Psalm cix. 17.—ⁿ Heb. desolation and desolation, verse 3.—^o Judg. v. 6; Chap. xxix. 11.—^p Chap. xxxi. 12; xxxii. 5.—^q Jer. xlix. 17, 18; Verse 4; Chap. xxv. 13; Mal. i. 3, 4.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXV.

Verses 1-6. Moreover, the word of the Lord, &c.—"The prophet goes on to show, that the same reason which would operate in favour of the Jews, would not operate in favour of the heathen; especially not in favour of the Jews' relations, the Edomites: for they showed no mercy, and therefore deserved to receive none; and, because they had perpetual hatred, they were to be made a perpetual desolation."—Obs. on Books. Set thy face against mount Seir—Mount Seir is the same with Idumea: see Deut. ii. 5. I will lay thy cities waste, &c.—To the same effect Jeremiah prophesied against them, chap. xlix. 7, &c., where see the notes. Because thou hast had a perpetual hatred, &c.—See note on chap. xxv. 12. In the time that their iniquity had an end—That is, either at the time when God exercised against them the last chastisement of their iniquity; or at the time of their extreme affliction, when the anger of God was most inflamed against them. It is the greatest of all cruelties to insult the afflicted, and to add new sorrows to the unhappy: see Calmet. Therefore I will prepare thee unto blood—I will expose thee to great slaughter. Since thou hast not hated blood, &c.—Since thou hast loved cruelty, and taken delight in shedding blood, vengeance and slaughter shall pursue thee, and thou shalt fall into the hands of those that will be as eager to shed thine.

Verses 7-12. Thus will I make mount Seir most desolate—Hebrew, לשממה ושמה, a desolation and a desolation, or, a desolation and an astonishment, as Bishop Newton renders it, following the reading of several MSS. And, cut off from it him that passeth out, &c.—No travellers shall go forward or backward in it with safety: see the margin. And thy cities shall not return—Thy cities shall not be restored to thee again. This was exactly fulfilled; for the Nabatheans having driven the Edomites out of their ancient habitations, in the time of the Babylonish captivity, they settled themselves in the southern part of Judea, where they were afterward conquered by Hyrcanus, and obliged to embrace the Jewish religion, and so became at length incorporated with that nation.—Dr. Prideaux. Because thou hast said, These two nations, &c., shall be mine—The two nations and countries here spoken of mean the two kingdoms of Israel and Judah. The Edomites had settled themselves in part of Judea, and hoped to have got possession both of the land of

A. M. 3417. and thy cities shall not return: ^m and B. C. 587. ye shall know that I am the LORD.

10 Because thou hast said, These two nations and these two countries shall be mine, and we will ⁿ possess it; ^o whereas ^o the LORD was there:

11 Therefore, as I live, saith the Lord God, I will even do ^p according to thine anger, and according to thine envy which thou hast used out of thy hatred against them; and I will make myself known among them, when I have judged thee.

12 ^q And thou shalt know that I am the LORD, and that I have heard all thy blasphemies which thou hast spoken against the mountains of Israel, saying, They ^{A. M. 3417.} are laid desolate, they are given us ^{B. C. 587.} ^r to consume.

13 Thus ^r with your mouth ye have ^s boasted against me, and have multiplied your words against me: I have heard them.

14 Thus saith the Lord God; ^s When the whole earth rejoiceth, I will make thee desolate.

15 ^t As thou didst rejoice at the inheritance of the house of Israel, because it was desolate, so will I do unto thee; ^u thou shalt be desolate, O mount Seir, and all Idumea, even all of it: and they shall know that I am the LORD.

^m Chap. vi. 7; vii. 4, 9; xxxvi. 11.—ⁿ Psalm lxxxiii. 4, 12; Chap. xxxvi. 5; Obad. 13.—^o Or, though the LORD was there.
^p Psa. xlviii. 1, 3; cxxxii. 13, 14; Chap. xlviii. 35.

^r Matt. vii. 2; James ii. 13.—^s Chap. vi. 7; Psalm ix. 16.
^t Heb. to devour.—^u 1 Sam. ii. 3; Rev. xiii. 6.—^v Heb. magnified.—^w Isa. lxxv. 13, 14.—^x Obad. 12, 15.—^y Verses 3, 4.

Judah and the land of Israel in time. The Ammonites had the same design, as appears from Jer. xlix. 1. Whereas, or although, the Lord was there—Was still with his ancient people, and had not yet entirely abandoned them, or withdrawn his protection from their country, and given it up to be laid waste. These Edomites, it seems, did not believe that God had placed his name in Judea, had chosen it for the place of his peculiar residence, and would never quite relinquish his property in it. Therefore I will even do according to thine anger—As thou out of anger and envy didst hurt them, so will I hurt thee. I will make myself known among them—I will make my people see that I have not quite cast them off, by the punishments I will bring upon thee on account of the evil thou hast done to them. And thou shalt know that I am the Lord—Thou shalt then be convinced that I am the sovereign Lord of all things.

Verses 13–15. With your mouth ye have boasted against me—As if I were not able to make good my promises toward my people, or to assert my right in Judea. When the whole earth rejoiceth, I will make thee desolate—When I shall restore other countries, conquered by the king of Babylon, to their former prosperity, thou shalt still lie waste and desolate. The Edomites never recovered their country after the Nabatheans had expelled them out of it. Thou shalt be desolate, all Idumea—The expression is like that of Isaiah, whole Palestina, Isa. xiv. 29; that is, all the several tribes and divisions of it. We learn from Psa. cxxxvii. 7, that the Edomites exulted greatly at the fall of Jerusalem, and gave all the encouragement they could to its destroyers. The punishments inflicted on them may teach us that God is displeased with and punishes those who have no pity on the miserable, and who take pleasure in doing evil to others.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

This and the following chapter contain a prediction of the general restoration both of Israel and Judah, a subject often spoken of by this prophet, of which the return of the two tribes from Babylon may be considered as an earnest. In this chapter we have two distinct prophecies, (1.) One that seems chiefly to relate to the temporal state of the Jews, wherein their present deplorable condition, and the triumphs of their enemies therein are described: but it is promised that their grievances should all be redressed, and that in due time they should be settled again in their own land, in the midst of peace and plenty, 1–15. (2.) Here is another promise that seems chiefly to concern their spiritual estate, wherein they are put in remembrance of their former sins, and God's judgments upon them to humble them, 16–20; but it is promised that God would glorify himself in showing mercy to them, 21–24. That he would sanctify them by giving them his grace, and fitting them for his service, and this for his own name's sake, and in answer to their prayers, 25–38.

A. M. 3417.
B. C. 587.

ALSO, thou son of man, prophesy unto the ^a mountains of Israel, and say, Ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the LORD:

2 Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because ^b the enemy hath said against you, Aha, ^c even the ancient high places ^d are ours in possession:

3 Therefore prophesy and say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; ¹ Because they have made you desolate, and swallowed you up on every side, that ye might be a possession unto the residue of the heathen, ^e and ² ye are taken up in the lips of talkers, and are an infamy of the people:

4 Therefore, ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord GOD; Thus saith the Lord GOD to the mountains, and to the hills, to the ³ rivers, and to the valleys, to the desolate wastes, and to the cities that are forsaken, which ^f became a prey and ^g derision to the residue of the heathen that are round about;

^a Chap. vi. 2, 3.—^b Chap. xxv. 3; xxvi. 2.—^c Deuter. xxxii. 13.—^d Chap. xxxv. 10.—^e Heb. Because for because.
^f Deut. xxviii. 37; 1 Kings ix. 7; Lam. ii. 15; Daniel ix. 16.
^g Or, ye are made to come upon the lip of the tongue.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXVI.

Verse 1. Son of man, prophesy unto the mountains of Israel—The prophet had been ordered, chap. vi. 2, to set his face toward the mountains of Israel, and to prophesy against them. Then God was coming forth to contend with his people; but now he is returning in mercy to them, and his prophet must speak good and comfortable words to these mountains; and what he saith to them, he saith to the hills, to the valleys, to the desolate wastes in the country, and to the cities that were forsaken, verse 4, and again, verse 6. The people were gone, some one way and some another; nothing remained there to be spoken to but the places, the mountains and valleys: these the Chaldeans could not carry away with them. Now to show the mercy God had in reserve for the people, the prophet is to speak of him as having a regard for the country, which if the Lord had been pleased for ever to abandon, he would not have called upon it to hear his word, nor would he have showed it such things as these.

Verses 2-7. Because the enemy hath said, &c.—This prophecy appears to be a continuation of the preceding. "The Idumeans have made their boasts (see verse 5, and chap. xxxv. 10) that they should become masters of the mountainous parts of Judea, where the ancient fortresses were placed which commanded all the rest of the country."—Lowth. And ye are taken up in the lips of talkers, &c.—Your calamities have made you become a proverb, a by-word, and a reproach among the heathen round about you, according to the threatenings of the prophets denounced against you: see the mar-

A. M. 3417.
B. C. 587.

5 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; ^h Surely in the fire of my jealousy have I spoken against the residue of the heathen, and against all Idumea, ⁱ which have appointed my land into their possession with the joy of all their heart, with despightful minds, to cast it out for a prey.

6 Prophesy therefore concerning the land of Israel, and say unto the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the valleys, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I have spoken in my jealousy and in my fury, because ye have ^k borne the shame of the heathen.

7 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; I have ^l lifted up my hand: Surely the heathen that are about you, they shall bear their shame.

8 But ye, O mountains of Israel, ye shall shoot forth your branches, and yield your fruit to my people of Israel; for they are at hand to come.

^h Or, bottoms, or, dales.—ⁱ Chapter xxxiv. 28.—^j Psalm lxxix. 4.—^k Deut. iv. 24; Chap. xxxviii. 19.—^l Chap. xxxv. 10, 12.—^m Psalm cxxiii. 3, 4; Chapter xxxiv. 29; Verse 15.
ⁿ Chapter xx. 5.

gin. Thus saith the Lord to the mountains, &c., which became a prey to the residue of the heathen—To those heathen that were left after the general desolations threatened to the neighbouring countries, Moab, Edom, Ammon, &c. Surely in the fire of my jealousy—In that fervent zeal and concern that I have for my own honour, which is blasphemed among the heathen; have I spoken against the residue of the heathen—Against all the nations that are and have been enemies to Israel; against all Idumea, which have appointed my land into their possession—Who have fully expected to get the dominion of my land, and be the sole possessors of it. Because ye have borne the shame of the heathen—Because the heathen nations have made a scoff of you; therefore I have lifted up my hand—I have sworn, or absolutely determined: see Gen. xiv. 22. Surely the heathen that are about you shall bear their shame—The heathen nations around, that have made a mock of you, shall be mocked themselves, and be as much held in contempt as they have held you.

Verses 8-12. But ye, O mountains of Israel, shall yield your fruit, &c.—Here the land of Judea is ordered to provide for the sustenance of the people of Israel, who were about to return out of captivity to dwell there again: for, says the prophet, they are at hand to come—That is, the deliverance of my people shall be effected in a short time. This prophecy seems to have an immediate reference to the return of the Jews from Babylon; but there can be no doubt, as Calmet justly observes, that it has also a further reference, even to the general return of the Israelites, and to the kingdom of the Messiah; the

A. M. 3417. 9 For behold, I am for you, and I
B. C. 587. will turn unto you, and ye shall be tilled and sown :

10 And I will multiply men upon you, all the house of Israel, even all of it : and the cities shall be inhabited, and ^mthe wastes shall be builded :

11 And ⁿI will multiply upon you man and beast ; and they shall increase and bring fruit :
and I will settle you after your old estates, and will do better unto you than at your beginnings : ^oand ye shall know that I am the LORD.

12 Yea, I will cause men to walk upon you, even my people Israel ; ^pand they shall possess thee, and thou shalt be their inheritance, and thou shalt no more henceforth ^qbereave them of men.

13 Thus saith the Lord God ; Because they say unto you, ^rThou land devourest up men, and hast bereaved thy nations ;

^m Verse 33 ; Isaiah lviii. 12 ; lxi. 4 ; Amos ix. 14. — ⁿ Jeremiah xxxi. 27 ; xxxiii. 12. — ^o Chapter xxxv. 9 ; xxxvii. 6, 13.
^p Obadiah 17, &c. — ^q Jeremiah xv. 7.

longest distance of time that the things of this world can extend to being but a moment in respect of eternity. For I am for you, and will return unto you, &c.—I will send down again my blessing upon you, and favourable seasons ; and cause you to be inhabited, so that you shall again be cultivated and fruitful. This is also addressed, as it were, to the land of Judea. And the cities shall be inhabited—The cities and towns that lie in ruins shall be built again.
And I will multiply upon you man and beast—As God, in his judgments, threatened to cut off man and beast from the land, (chap. xiv. 17,) so here he promises to replenish it with both. And will do better unto you than at your beginning—In bestowing upon you the blessings of the gospel, the promises of which were first made to the Jews and to their children, Acts ii. 39. The words may likewise imply, that God would give them a more lasting and secure possession of their land than ever they had before :
see the following verses. Yea, I will cause men to walk upon you—O mountains, or land of Israel, verse
8. And thou shalt no more henceforth bereave them of men—That is, thou shalt no more be remarkable for thy inhabitants dying in uncommon numbers, by pestilence, the sword, and famine.

Verses 13–15. Because they say, Thou land de-vourest men—Or, thy people. The country of Judea (as appears from what is here said) was spoken of by the neighbouring nations with disgrace, as a country—particularly fatal to its inhabitants, where more died by famine, pestilence, and the sword, than in any other place : and therefore God here says, that there should be no more any occasion to give 14 Therefore, thou shalt devour men A. M. 3417.

no more, neither ⁴bereave thy nations B. C. 587.
any more, saith the Lord God.

15 ^aNeither will I cause men to hear in thee the shame of the heathen any more, neither shalt thou bear the reproach of the people any more, neither shalt thou cause thy nations to fall any more, saith the Lord God.

16 ¶ Moreover the word of the LORD came
unto me, saying,

17 Son of man, when the house of Israel dwelt in their own land, ^tthey defiled it by their own way and by their doings : their way was before me as ^uthe uncleanness of a removed woman.

18 Wherefore I poured my fury upon them ^{*}for the blood that they had shed upon the land, and for their idols wherewith they had polluted it :

19 And I ^vscattered them among the heathen, and they were dispersed through the countries :

^a Num. xiii. 32. — ⁴ Or, cause to fall. — ^{*} Chap. xxxiv. 29.
^t Lev. xviii. 25, 27, 28 ; Jer. ii. 7. — ^u Lev. xv. 19. — ^x Chap.
xvi. 36, 38 ; xxiii. 7. — ^v Chap. xxii. 15.

this character of Judea, for that these judgments and frequent calamities should cease in it. Therefore thou shalt devour men no more—Thou shalt be free from such destructive judgments as have, in past ages, consumed thy people. Neither will I cause men to hear in thee the shame of the heathen—Neither shall thy inhabitants hear any more the scoffs of the heathen nations round, reproaching them on account of their grievous calamities, as if they were an accursed people, forsaken by their God, and abandoned to destruction. Neither shalt thou cause thy nations to fall, &c.—Or, as the Chaldee and some other ancient versions translate the words, Neither shalt thou bereave thy people any more, an interpretation adopted by Bishop Newcome. The Vulgate renders the clause, Et gentem tuam non amittes amplius—And thou shalt not lose thy na- tion (or people) any more, that is, by these remarkable calamities. Those who think these promises were fulfilled in the restoration of the Jews from the captivity of Babylon, and their re-establishment in their own land, take the expressions no more, and not any more, in a limited sense, and understand thereby only a long period of time : but it seems more reasonable to suppose that these and such like prophecies, of which there are many in the Scriptures, remain yet to be accomplished, and that they respect the future restoration of the Jews to their own land, after their conversion to Christianity.

Verses 17–19. When the house of Israel dwelt in their own land—In fulness of bread, ease, and security, as they did in days past ; they defiled it— Rendered it abominable before God, and uncomfort-

A. M. 3417. ^a according to their way and accord-
B. C. 587. ing to their doings I judged them.

20 And when they entered unto the heathen, whither they went, they ^a profaned my holy name, when they said to them, These are the people of the LORD, and are gone forth out of his land.

21 But I had pity ^b for my holy name, which the house of Israel had profaned among the heathen, whither they went.

22 Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD; I do not this for your sakes, O house of Israel, ^c but for my holy

^a Chap. vii. 3; xviii. 30; xxxix. 24. — ^a Isa. lii. 5; Rom. ii. 24.
^b Chap. xx. 9, 14. — ^c Psa. cvi. 8.

able to themselves; by their own way and by their doings—By the way of their own choice, their wicked way, forsaking my law, despising my counsel, deserting my worship and temple; and by their unholy conversation and unrighteous practices. Their way was before me as the uncleanness of a removed woman—As a woman under a legal pollution was forbidden to come within the courts of the temple, or to attend upon God's worship there; so the defilements which the Jews had contracted by their idolatries, adulteries, murders, and other heinous sins, rendered them unfit to be acknowledged as God's people, or to offer up any religious service to him. Wherefore I poured my fury upon them—These and their other sins were the true causes of the desolation of their country; and of all the miseries which they underwent, and not any thing in the land itself, as the heathen said, verse 13. According to their doings I judged them—God frequently repeats that his judgments upon the Jews were no more than what their own ways or doings obliged him to inflict. There was in his dealings with them no arbitrary exercise of sovereignty, but they were dealt with according to their own conduct. And thus God deals with mankind in general: his actions, in regard to them, are not founded in an arbitrary exercise of his absolute sovereignty over them, but in impartial justice, wisdom, and goodness, and he judges them according to their own ways, and not according to the dictates of an arbitrary will.

Verse 20. When they entered unto the heathen, they profaned my holy name—1st, By their evil practices they brought a scandal on God's name, and gave occasion to the heathen to say, See what profligate wretches these are, who call themselves Jehovah's peculiar people; judge what sort of a God he is who has such worshippers. The Jews were no credit to their profession wherever they went; but, on the contrary, a reproach to it, and the name of God and his holy religion was blasphemed through them, Rom. ii. 24. Observe, reader, when those that pretend to stand related to God, as his servants and children, and to be in covenant and communion with him, are nevertheless found corrupt in their morals, slaves to their appetites and passions, dishonest in name's sake, which ye have profaned among the heathen, whither ye went.

23 And I will sanctify my great name, which was profaned among the heathen, which ye have profaned in the midst of them; and the heathen shall know that I am the LORD, saith the Lord GOD, when I shall be ^d sanctified in you before ^e their eyes.

24 For ^f I will take you from among the heathen, and gather you out of all countries, and will bring you into your own land.

25 ^f Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: ^g from all your their dealings, and false to their words, and the trusts reposed in them, the enemies of the Lord have thereby great cause given them to blaspheme both him and his religion. 2d, God's name was profaned by the sufferings of Israel; for from them the enemies of God took occasion to reproach God, as unable to protect his own worshippers, and to make good his own grants. They said in scorn, These are the people of the Lord; these wicked people! you see he could not keep them in their obedience to his precepts; these miserable people! he could not keep them in the enjoyment of his favours. These are the people that came out of Jehovah's land; they are the very scum of the nations!

^d Chap. xx. 41; xxviii. 22. — ^e Or, your. — ^f Chap. xxxiv. 13; xxxvii. 21. — ^g Isa. lii. 15; Heb. x. 22. — ^h Jer. xxxiii. 8.

Verses 21-23. But I had pity for my holy name—That is, as it is expressed chap. xx. 9, I wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted, or brought into disgrace, among the heathen: I preserved, reformed, brought back my people from captivity, and re-established them in their own land, for the honour of my mercy, truth, and power. Say, I do not do this for your sakes, &c.—The promises I make in your favour are not owing to any desert of yours, but purely to vindicate my own honour. And I will sanctify my great name, &c.—I will give illustrious proofs of my power and goodness, and vindicate my honour from the reproaches with which it hath been blasphemed among the heathen, upon the occasion of your evil doings and your sufferings. And the heathen shall know that I am the Lord—The return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity was taken notice of by the heathen as a signal instance of God's providence toward them, as appears from Psa. cxxvi. 2. And their general conversion, and future restoration to their own land, will be a much more remarkable proof of God's fulfilling the promises made to their fathers; so that the heathen themselves will be compelled to observe and acknowledge it: see chap. xxxvii. 28. When I shall be sanctified in you before your eyes—When, by means of the wonderful power and goodness which I shall manifest in your restoration, they shall be convinced that I am indeed the living and true God.

Verse 25. I will sprinkle clean water upon you—

A. M. 3417. filthiness, and from all your idols, will
B. C. 587. I cleanse you.

26 ^A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you a heart of flesh.

27 And I will put my ¹ Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them.

28 ^k And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; ¹ and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God.

29 I will also ^m save you from all your uncleanness: and ⁿ I will call for the corn, and will increase it, and ^o lay no famine upon you.

30 ^p And I will multiply the fruit of the tree, and the increase of the field, that ye shall receive no more reproach of famine among the heathen.

^h Jer. xxxii. 39; Chap. xi. 19.—ⁱ Chap. xi. 19; xxxvii. 14.
^k Chapter xxviii. 25; xxxvii. 25.—¹ Jer. xxx. 22; Chap. xi. 20;

xxxvii. 27.—^m Matt. i. 21; Rom. xi. 26.—ⁿ Psalm cv. 16.
^o Chap. xxxiv. 29.—^p Chap. xxxiv. 27.

The expression here alludes to those legal purifications which were made by sprinkling water upon the unclean persons: see Num. viii. 7, and xix. 13. But the cleansing intended is plainly that of the soul, by the blood of Christ sprinkled upon men's consciences to take away their guilt, (see Heb. ix. 14, and xii. 24,) and by the grace of the Holy Spirit sprinkled on the whole soul, to purify it from all corrupt inclinations and dispositions; both which blessings are received by faith in Christ, and in the promises of God made through him: see Gal. ii. 16, and iii. 14; Acts xv. 9. From all your filthiness—Filthiness, as the apostle expresses it, of flesh and spirit; from all unhallowed appetites, passions, and dispositions; from all impurity of heart and life; from every thing contrary to the mind of Christ, the image of God, or the divine nature; and from all your idols will I cleanse you—From all internal as well as external idolatry; from putting that trust in the work of your own hands, or in any creature, which you ought to put only in your Creator; or from setting your affections on any person or thing in preference to him, who is your Redeemer and Saviour, your Friend and Father, your portion and treasure, your God, and your all. Observe, reader, sin is of a defiling nature; idolatry particularly is so; it renders sinners odious to God, and unhappy in themselves; but when our guilt is pardoned, and our corrupt nature sanctified, then we are cleansed from this filthiness; and there is no other way of being saved from it. This God promises to his people here, in order to his being sanctified in them, verse 23. We cannot sanctify God's name, unless he sanctify our hearts, nor live to his glory, but by his grace.

Verses 26, 27. A new heart also will I give you—A new disposition of mind, excellent in itself, and vastly different from what it was before; a frame of soul changed from sinful to holy, from carnal to spiritual; a heart in which the law of God is written, Jer. xxxi. 33; a sanctified spirit, in which the almighty grace of God is victorious, and turns it from the world to God, and from all sin to all holiness; a state of mind which is the supernatural gift of God, and not wrought in any man by his own power. And I will take away the stony heart—The hard, senseless, unfeeling, inflexible heart; the heart unapt and averse to receive any divine impressions, and to return any devout affections. Out of your flesh—That is, out of you. And I will give you a heart of flesh—A soft and tender heart, that has spiritual senses exercised, and is conscious to itself of spiritual pains and pleasures; a heart of quite another temper, hearkening to God's law, trembling at his threats, moulded into a compliance with his whole will; disposed to do, to be, or to suffer what God wills; receiving the divine impress as soft wax receives the impress of the seal. I will put my Spirit within you—My enlightening, regenerating, and sanctifying Spirit; that Holy Spirit which is given to and dwells in all true believers; and cause you—Sweetly and powerfully, yet without compulsion; to walk in my statutes—In all my ordinances and commandments, and that from judgment, choice, and affection. For our spirits, when renewed by God's Spirit to a disposition conformed to his holiness, readily comply with his will in all things, concur with his designs, and become workers together with him. And ye shall keep my judgments, and do them—Ye shall be willing and able to perform all acceptable obedience, and to live a life of universal holiness and righteousness.

Verses 28–30. And ye shall dwell in the land—Spiritual blessings, promised in the last three verses, are now followed with temporal blessings. Thus does earth often follow heaven, and godliness hath the promise of the life that now is, as well as of that which is to come. When the Israelites are thus prepared for mercy, then shall they return to their possessions, and be settled again in them. And there God will acknowledge them for his people, and will protect and bless them as such, bestowing liberally upon them all good things. I will also save you—Will continue to save you; from all your uncleanness—I will take away the guilt of them, deliver you from the power and pollution of them, and preserve you from the punishments due to them. Salvation from all uncleanness includes justification, entire sanctification, and meekness for glory. And I will call for the corn, &c.—All necessities are here comprised in one. And lay no famine upon you—This was one of the judgments which they had laboured under; and it had been as much as any other a reproach to them, that they should be starved in a land so famed for fruitfulness. But it is here promised, that now this calamity should afflict them no

A. M. 3417. 31 Then ^ashall ye remember your
B. C. 587. own evil ways, and your doings that were not good, and ^rshall loathe yourselves in your own sight for your iniquities, and for your abominations.

32 ^sNot for your sakes do I this, saith the Lord GOD, be it known unto you; be ashamed and confounded for your own ways, O house
of Israel.

33 Thus saith the Lord GOD; In the day that I shall have cleansed you from all your iniquities I will also cause you to dwell in the cities, ^eand the wastes shall be builded.

34 And the desolate land shall be tilled, whereas it lay desolate in the sight of all that passed by.

35 And they shall say, This land that was ^a Chap. xvi. 61, 63. — ^r Lev. xxvi. 39; Chap. vi. 9; xx. 43.

^e Deut. ix. 5; Verse 22. — ^t Verse 10. — ^s Isa. li. 3; Chap.

more, nor should they any more bear the reproach of it, but should have the credit of possessing abundance; the fruit of the tree, and the increase of the field, being multiplied to them.

Verses 31, 32. Then shall ye remember your own evil ways—Reflect seriously upon your former sins.
And shall loathe yourselves in your own sight—
With holy shame and confusion of face, seeing how loathsome you have made yourselves in the sight of God; for your iniquities and for your abominations—Being convinced that they were without all excuse. Here we see what is the most powerful inducement to an evangelical repentance, namely, a just sense of the mercy and grace of God toward us. The more we see of his readiness to receive us into favour upon our repentance, the more reason we shall see we have to be ashamed of ourselves that we should ever sin against so much love. That heart is hard indeed that will not be thus melted:
see notes on chap. vi. 9, and xvi. 61. Not for your sakes do I this, be it known to you—Here is repeated what is said verse 22, on purpose to check all vain presumption in the Jews, and confidence of their own merit; a fault they have been very prone to in every age.

Verses 37, 38. I will yet be inquired of by the house of Israel—The house of Israel must, 1st, Pray for these blessings; for by prayer God is sought unto and inquired after. What is the matter of God's promises, must be the matter of our prayers. By asking for the mercy promised, we give glory to the donor, express our value of the gift, our own dedesolate is become like the garden A. M. 3417.

of ^u Eden; and the waste, and deso- B. C. 587.
late, and ruined cities are become fenced, and are inhabited.

36 Then the heathen that are left round about you shall know that I the LORD build the ruined places, and plant that that was desolate: ^xI the LORD have spoken it, and I will do it.

37 Thus saith the Lord GOD; ^yI will yet for this be inquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them; I will ^zincrease them with men like a flock.

38 As the ⁶holy flock, as the flock of Jerusalem in her solemn feasts, so shall the waste cities be filled with flocks of men; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

xxviii. 13; Joel ii. 3. — ^x Chap. xvii. 24; xxii. 14; xxxvii. 14.
^y Ch. xiv. 3; xx. 3, 31. — ^z Ver. 10. — ⁶ Heb. flock of holy things.

pendance upon God, and put honour upon prayer, upon which he has put honour. Christ himself must ask, and then God will give him the heathen for his inheritance; must pray the Father, and then he will send the Comforter; much more must we ask that we may receive. 2d, They must consult the oracles of God, for thus also God is sought unto and inquired after: the mercy must not be an act of providence only, but a child of promise; and therefore the promise must be looked at, and prayer made for it, with an eye of faith fixed upon it, which must be both the guide and the ground of our expectations.
In both these ways we find Daniel inquiring of God, in the name of the house of Israel: then when God was about to do these great things for them, he consulted the oracles of God, for he understood by books namely, the book of the Prophet Jeremiah, both what was to be expected, and when; and then he set his face to seek God by prayer, Dan. ix. 2, 3. As the holy flock, &c.—Flocks designed for holy uses, as sacrifices, and therefore further described by the place where they were presented, namely, Jerusalem; in her solemn feasts—The three great annual feasts. These flocks were for quality the best of all, and for numbers very great on these solemn occasions: see 2 Chron. xxxv. 7; and 1 Kings viii. 63.
Thus shall men multiply, and fill the cities of replanted Judah. And the increase of the numbers of a people is then honourable, when they are all dedicated to God as a holy flock, to be presented to him as living sacrifices. Crowds are a lovely sight in God's temple.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

In this chapter, (1.) By the vision of dry bones, quickened by prophecy, is represented that, however dispersed among enemies, destitute of human help, and dispirited in their own minds, the Jews were in their captivity, God would, by Cyrus's proclamation, and his own influences, animate, help, and gather them to their own land, 1-14. (2.) By the uniting of two sticks in Ezekiel's hand is represented, that notwithstanding the old enmity between them, the Jews and ten tribes would, after the captivity, and especially after the dispersion, happily unite, and renounce their idolatries, and under the Messiah enjoy the most comfortable relation to God, abundant peace and prosperity, and holy fellowship with him, 15-28. But this shall have its more excellent fulfilment in the quickening influences of the Holy Spirit, in the erection of the gospel church, and entrance into the millennial blessedness; in the making of Jews and Gentiles one mystical body of Christ, and in the glorious resurrection and heavenly blessedness.

A. M. 3417.
B. C. 587.

THE ^a hand of the LORD was upon me, and carried me out ^b in the Spirit of the LORD, and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones,

2 And caused me to pass by them round about: and behold, there were very many in the open ¹ valley; and lo, they were very dry.

^a Chapter i. 3.—^b Chapter iii. 14; viii. 3; xi. 24; Luke iv. 1.
¹ Or, champaign.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXVII.

Verse 1. The hand of the Lord was upon me—I was actuated by a divine power; and carried me out in the Spirit of the Lord—Or, by the Spirit of the Lord. It is highly probable that all this passed in vision. And set me down in the midst of the valley full of bones—The first and great object of this prophecy seems evidently to be the restoration of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity. A nation carried into captivity ceases to be a nation, and therefore may be fitly compared to bones, or dead bodies; so that by the valley of bones was first signified, the Babylonish dominions filled with captive Jews. Bishop Warburton observes, “that the messengers of God, prophesying for the people’s consolation in disastrous times, frequently promise a restoration to the former days of felicity; and, to obviate all distrust from unpromising appearances, they put the case even at the worst, and assure the people, in metaphorical expressions, that though the community were as entirely dissolved as a dead body reduced to dust, yet God would raise that community again to life.” But besides the deliverance of the Jews from Babylon, this vision is a lively representation of a three-fold resurrection: 1st, Of the resurrection of souls, from the death of sin to the life of righteousness, to a holy, heavenly, spiritual, and divine life, by the power of divine grace accompanying the word of Christ, John v. 24, 25. 2d, The resurrection of the gospel church, or of any part of it, from an afflicted state to liberty and peace. 3d, The resurrection of the body at the great day, especially the bodies of believers, to life eternal. This last seems to be one thing particularly designed. “Though the generality of commentators,” says Mr. Peters, “regard this vision and prophecy as no other than a figurative representation and prediction of a return of the Jews from the captivity of Babylon, or some other of their captivities and dispersions, yet, perhaps, we shall find, upon a more attentive consideration, that whatever hopes it might give them of a temporal and national deliverance or prosperity, yet there was evidently something further designed; and that to comfort them in their distressed situation, with the prospect of a future re-

3 And he said unto me, Son of man, ^{A. M. 3417.} can these bones live? and I answer—^{B. C. 587.} ed, O Lord God, ^c thou knowest.

4 Again he said unto me, Prophecy upon these bones, and say unto them, O ye dry bones, hear the word of the LORD.

5 Thus saith the Lord God unto these bones;

^c Deut. xxxii. 39; 1 Samuel ii. 6; John v. 21; Romans iv. 17; 2 Cor. i. 9.

surection in a proper sense, was as much intended by the Spirit of God, or rather more so, than the other.

Verses 2, 3. He caused me to pass by them round about—To take an exact view of them; and behold, there were very many in the open valley—As if it had been a place where a great battle had been fought, and a vast multitude slain, who had been left unburied till the flesh was all consumed, and the bones were divided and scattered about. And lo, they were very dry—Having been long exposed to the sun and wind in the open valley, and the marrow within, as well as the flesh without, being utterly wasted. This circumstance was intended to show how unlikely it was, humanly speaking, that the Jews should ever be delivered from their dispersions and restored; should ever be brought together again, and formed into a body politic, or even into the skeleton of one. Still more unlikely it is that the dead in sin should be quickened, and raised up into living Christians; and most unlikely of all, that the dead bodies of men, after they have been turned into dust, and scattered to the four winds of heaven, should live again, and become bodies of light and glory. And he said, Son of man, can these bones live?—Namely, immediately, and in your sight? Or, as Houbigant renders it, Shall these bones live? The question, as he justly observes, is not concerning the possibility of the fact, for the prophet well knew that God could do all things; but the Lord, introductory to what follows, asks him whether these bones should now revive or not. And though this be the right interpretation of the place, yet a resurrection from the dead is very justly collected from it: for “a simile of the resurrection,” says St. Jerome, “would never have been used to signify the restoration of the people of Israel, unless such a future resurrection had been believed and known; because nobody ever confirms uncertain things by things which have no existence.” And I answered, O Lord, thou knowest—Raising the dead can only be an act of thy power and good pleasure. The prophet replies in a doubting manner, because he knew not the scope of the vision.

Verses 4-6. Again he said, Prophecy upon these bones—Here sense and understanding are attributed

A. M. 3417. Behold, I will ^d cause breath to enter
B. C. 587. into you, and ye shall live:

6 And I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live; ^e and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

7 So I prophesied as I was commanded: and as I prophesied, there was a noise, and behold a shaking, and the bones came together, bone to his bone.

8 And when I beheld, lo, the sinews and the flesh came up upon them, and the skin covered them above: but there was no breath in them.

9 Then said he unto me, Prophecy unto the ² wind, prophecy, son of man, and say to the wind, Thus saith the Lord God; ^f Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live.

^d Psa. civ. 30; Verse 9.—^e Chap. vi. 7; xxxv. 12; Joel ii. 27; iii. 17.—^f Or, breath.—^g Psa. civ. 30; Verse 5.

to the dry bones; and as these bones signified the captive Jews, they are with strict propriety called upon to hear the word of the Lord. But this is also to be considered, as has been intimated on verse 1, a prophetic representation of that voice of the Son of God which quickens and raises to spiritual life such as are dead in sin; and which all that are in their graves shall hear at the last day, and shall come forth out of them. Thus saith the Lord, I will cause breath to enter into you, &c.—The breath of life, as it is expressed Gen. ii. 7. And I will lay sinews upon you, &c.—All the expressions made use of here are such as describe the resurrection of a dead body.

Verses 7–10. So I prophesied as I was commanded.—I declared these promises or gracious purposes of God concerning these bones. And as I prophesied there was a noise, &c.—Such a noise as we may suppose would arise from the motion of the bones. And behold a shaking—A trembling, or commotion among the bones, enough to manifest a divine presence working among them. And the bones came together, &c.—Glided nearer and nearer, till each bone met the bone to which it was to be joined. Of all the bones of those numerous slain not one was wanting, not one missed its way, not one missed its place, but each knew and found its fellow. Thus, in the resurrection of the dead, the scattered atoms shall be ranged in their proper place and order, and every bone come to its bone—By the same wisdom and power by which they were first formed in the womb of her that was with child. And lo, the sinews and the flesh came up upon them—Gradually spreading themselves. And the skin covered them above—Enveloped the bones, sinews, and flesh of each body; but there was no breath in them—Or spirit, rather; no souls animated the bodies. Then said he, Pro-

10 So I prophesied as he commanded me, ^g and the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood up upon their feet, an exceeding great army.

11 Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold, they say, ^h Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost: we are cut off for our parts.

12 Therefore prophecy and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, ⁱ O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and ^k bring you into the land of Israel.

13 And ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves,

14 And ^l shall put my Spirit in you, and ye shall live, and I shall place you in your own land: then shall ye know that I the LORD

^g Rev. xi. 11.—^h Psa. cxli. 7; Isa. xlix. 14.—ⁱ Isa. xxvi. 19; Hos. xiii. 14.—^k Ch. xxxvi. 24; Ver. 25.—^l Chap. xxxvi. 27.

phesy unto the wind—Or rather, unto the spirit, namely, the quickening spirit of God, or principle of life, issuing from him, and imparting life to every creature that possesses it. Come from the four winds, O breath, O spirit—This signified the gathering of the Jewish people from the different quarters of the world where they were scattered; and breathe on the slain—Animate these dead bodies; that they may live—May awake into living men. So I prophesied, and the breath—The spirit; came into them—A soul animated each body; and they lived, &c., an exceeding great army—Not only living men, but effective men, fit for service in war, and formidable to all that should give them any opposition. Applied to the Jews, released and returning from captivity, the words signify that they should amount to a great multitude, when they should be gathered from their several dispersions, and should be united in one body. Observe, reader, with God nothing is impossible: he can, out of stones, raise up children to Abraham, and out of dead and dry bones an exceeding great army, to fight his battles and plead his cause.

Verses 11, 12. These bones are the whole house of Israel—These bones represent the forlorn and desperate condition to which the whole nation of Israel is reduced; they say, Our bones are dried, &c.—Our affairs are in the most desperate condition; there is not so much as any hope left of their being retrieved. We are cut off for our parts—We are separated and cut off from one another, like a limb that is cut off from the body. Therefore prophecy, &c.—Inform these poor, dejected, desponding Israelites of their mistake, and revive their hope by a new promise and declaration of my purposes of mercy toward them. O my people, I will open your graves—Though your captivity be as death; your prisons and

A. M. 3417. have spoken it, and performed it,
B. C. 587. saith the LORD.

15 ¶ The word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

16 Moreover, thou son of man, ^m take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah, and for ⁿ the children of Israel his companions: then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions:

17 And ^o join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thy hand.

18 And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, ^p Wilt thou not show us what thou meanest by these?

19 ^q Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take ^r the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and places of confinement close as graves, yet will I open those graves. And cause you to come up out of your graves—I will bring you out of your state of captivity, in which you are little better than dead persons, having no power or privileges of your own, nor enjoying any thing which can properly be called life. The Jewish nation, in their state of dispersion and captivity, are called the dead Israelites, by Baruch, chap. iii. 4: and their restoration is described as a resurrection by Isaiah, chap. xxvi. 19. In like manner St. Paul expresses their conversion, and the general restoration which shall accompany it, by life from the dead, Rom. xi. 15. And the foregoing similitude showed, in a strong and beautiful manner, that God, who could even raise the dead, had power to convert and restore them.

^m Num. xvii. 2.—ⁿ 2 Chron. xi. 12, 13, 16; xv. 9; xxx. 11, 18.—^o Verses 22, 24.—^p Chap. xii. 9; xxiv. 19.—^q Zech. x. 6.—^r Verses 16, 17.—^s Chap. xii. 3.

Verses 16, 17. Take thee one stick—That is, one rod. The expression seems to allude to Num. xvii. 2; where Moses was commanded to take twelve rods, one for each tribe, and to write the name of the tribe upon the rod; for Judah, and the children of Israel his companions—That is, the tribe of Benjamin, and a part of that of Levi, who adhered to the tribe of Judah. Then take another stick—A second, such as the first was; and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim—Upon Reuben's forfeiting his birthright, that privilege was conferred upon the sons of Joseph, of whom Ephraim had the precedence: see 1 Chron. v. 1; Gen. xlviii. 20; which made him to be reckoned the head of the ten tribes; Samaria, the seat of that kingdom, being likewise situate in the tribe of Ephraim. Upon these accounts the name of Ephraim, in the prophets, often signifies the whole kingdom of Israel, as distinct from that of Judah. All the rest of the tribes were the make them one stick, and they shall ^{A. M. 3417.} be one in my hand. ^{B. C. 587.}

20 And the sticks whereon thou writest shall be in thy hand ^s before their eyes.

21 ¶ And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, ^t I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land:

22 And ^u I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and ^v one king shall be king to them all: and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all:

23 ^y Neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with their detestable things, nor with any of their transgressions: but ^z I will save them out of all their dwelling-places, wherein they have sinned, and will companions of Ephraim, as the tribes of Benjamin and Levi were the companions of Judah. And join them into one stick—A rod was an emblem of power, (see Psa. cx. 2,) so joining these two rods, or sticks, together, denoted uniting the two kingdoms under one prince, or governor.

^t Chap. xxxvi. 24.—^u Isa. xi. 13; Jer. iii. 18; 1. 4; Hos. i. 11.—^v Chap. xxxiv. 23, 24; John x. 16.—^y Chap. xxxvi. 24. ^z Chap. xxxv. 28, 29.

Verses 18–20. Wilt thou not show us what thou meanest—Ezekiel foretold many things by signs; and the Jews were very inquisitive into the meaning of them: but sometimes their curiosity proceeded rather from a secret contempt of the prophet and his predictions, than a real desire of information. Say, I will take the stick of Joseph—On which Joseph's name was written, and which represents Joseph, that is, the kingdom of the ten tribes; which is in the hand of Ephraim—Of which Ephraim is the head. They shall be one in my hand—I will make them one nation, and appoint one king to rule over them, namely, Christ the Messiah. And the sticks, &c., shall be before their eyes—Thou shalt place the sticks, or rods, thus joined together, before their eyes, as a visible token or pledge of the truth of what I enjoin thee to speak to them in the following words.

Verses 21–25. Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen—See the margin. I will make them one nation—They shall not be divided any more into separate kingdoms; the consequence of which was, their setting up separate ways of worship, and espousing separate interests: compare Isa. xi. 13. This promise was in a great degree fulfilled in the restoration of the Jews to their own land from their captivity in Babylon; for then many of the house of Israel returned with the house of Judah, and were united in one body with them, and

A. M. 3417. cleanse them: so shall they be my
B. C. 587. people, and I will be their God.

24 And ^a David my servant shall be king over them; and ^b they all shall have one shepherd: ^c they shall also walk in my judgments, and observe my statutes, and do them.

25 ^d And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt, and they shall dwell therein, even they, and their children, and their children's children ^e for ever: and ^f my servant David shall be their prince for ever.

^a Isa. xl. 11; Jer. xxiii. 5; xxx. 9; Chap. xxiv. 23, 24; Hos. iii. 5; Luke i. 32.—^b Verse 22; John x. 16.—^c Chapter xxxvi. 27.—^d Chap. xxxvi. 28.—^e Isa. lx. 21; Joel iii. 29; Amos ix. 15.—^f Verse 24; John xii. 34.

were under one and the same governor, Zerubbabel; who, though he did not (lest it should give umbrage to the Persian kings) assume the title of king, yet executed the authority, and was looked upon as a king by the Jewish people: but the expressions here made use of seem to imply something further, and to refer, in their full sense, to the final restoration of the Jews, after their conversion to Christianity, when Christ, in a peculiar sense, shall be their king. The Messiah is described as King of the Jews in most of the prophecies in the Old Testament, beginning with that of Gen. xlix. 10, concerning Shiloh. From David's time he is commonly spoken of as the person in whom the promises relating to the perpetuity of David's kingdom were to be accomplished. This was a truth unanimously owned by the Jews: see John i. 49, to which our Saviour bore testimony before Pontius Pilate, when the question being put to him, Art thou a king? he made answer, Thou sayest [the truth] for I am a king: thus these words should be translated, for St. Paul, alluding to them, calls them a good confession, 1 Tim. vi. 13. The same truth Pontius Pilate himself asserted, in that inscription which he providentially ordered to be written upon the cross; (see John xix. 19–22;) so that the chief priests impiously renounced their own avowed principles, when they told Pilate that they had no king but Cesar, verse 15. Neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols—Or, abominations, as the word שְׂקִיצִים is elsewhere translated, and generally signifies idols: see the margin. But I will save them out of all their dwelling-places—I will bring them safe out of them; and will cleanse them—Both justify and sanctify them. And David my servant—That is, the son of David, who was also David's Lord; shall be king over them—Shall reign over their hearts and lives; and they shall all have one shepherd—This king shall be their one chief shepherd; others that shall feed and rule the flock shall be shepherds by commission from him. And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob—A promise often repeated in this prophecy: see verses 12, 21, and the note on chap. xxviii. 25. Even they and their children for ever

26 Moreover I will make a ^g covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them: and I will place them, and ^h multiply them, and will set my ⁱ sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore.

27 ^k My tabernacle also shall be with them: yea, I will be ^l their God, and they shall be my people.

28 ^m And the heathen shall know that I the LORD do ⁿ sanctify Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for evermore.

^g Psa. lxxxix. 3; Isa. lv. 3; Jer. xxxii. 40; Chap. xxxiv. 25. ^h Chap. xxxvi. 10, 37.—ⁱ 2 Cor. vi. 16.—^k Lev. xxvi. 11, 12; Chap. xliii. 7; John i. 14.—^l Chap. xi. 20; xiv. 11; xxxvi. 28. ^m Chap. xxxv. 23.—ⁿ Chap. xx. 12.

—The Jews, converted to Christ, shall inherit Canaan till Christ come to judgment at the end of the world.

Verses 26–28. I will make a covenant of peace with them—I will grant them the blessing of peace and prosperity. Or rather, the words are to be understood in a spiritual sense, that God will be reconciled to them through Christ, and admit them into that covenant of peace of which Christ is the Mediator, and therefore is called our peace, Eph. ii. 14; and then the following words, It shall be an everlasting covenant with them, may fitly be explained of the gospel, being such a covenant as shall never be abolished, or give way to any new dispensation. It is certain that the expression, a covenant of peace, could not at all agree with the ancient covenant, for when was there an age, half an age, twenty years peace in Israel? The whole history of the Jewish nation is nothing more than a recital of wars and continual divisions. And if we understand it of peace between God and his people, where shall we find this people faithfully attached to the Lord during one century only? We have only to open the books of the prophets, and the other sacred records, to remark their infidelities and perpetual rebellions against God. This expression, therefore, can only respect the new covenant, whereof Jesus Christ, the Prince of peace, is the mediator, and who gives us that true peace which surpasses all conceptions: see Calmet. And I will set my sanctuary in the midst of them—I will set up a spiritual, glorious temple and worship among them; for evermore—Never to be altered or abolished on earth, but to be consummated in heaven. My tabernacle also shall be with them—The tabernacle wherein I will show my presence among them, and my protection over them. God's placing first his tabernacle, and then his temple among the Jews, was a pledge and token both of his presence and protection. And we may understand him as promising here new and more valuable tokens of his presence among them, by the graces of his Holy Spirit, and the efficacy of his word and ordinances, if not also some extraordinary appearances of the divine majesty. I will be their God, and they shall be my people—By my grace I will make them holy, as the people of a holy God; and I will make them happy, as the people of the ever-blessed God. And the heathen shall know that I do sanctify Israel—The conversion of the Jewish nation, and their being restored to a state of favour and acceptance with God, will be a work of providence, taken notice of by the heathen themselves, who shall join themselves to the Jews, as the church of God and temple of truth: see note on chap. xxxvi. 23.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

The prophecy contained in this and the following chapter, concerning Israel's victory over Gog and Magog, without question, relates to the latter ages of the world, when the whole house of Israel shall return into their own land, chap. xxxix. 25–29. And the expressions we meet with in this chapter, verses 8 and 16, that this should come to pass in the latter days, and after many days, are a proof that the event was to happen a great while after the several predictions of the prophets concerning it. So that this must be looked upon as one of those obscure prophecies of Scripture, the fulfilling whereof will best explain the meaning. In this chapter we have, (1.) The attempt of Gog and Magog on the land of Israel, 1–13. (2.) The terror occasioned thereby, 14–20. (3.) Their defeat by the immediate hand of God, 21–23.

A. M. 3417.
B. C. 587.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 ^a Son of man, ^b set thy face against ^c Gog, the land of Magog, ¹ the chief prince of ^d Meshech and Tubal, and prophesy against him,

* Chap. xxxix. 1.—^b Chap. xxxv. 2, 3.—^c Revelation xx. 8.
¹ Or, prince of the chief.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Verses 2, 3. Set thy face against Gog, the land of Magog—We find, Gen. x. 2, that the second son of Japhet was called Magog, but Ezekiel uses the word here as the name of the country of which Gog was prince: and Michaelis thinks that it denotes those vast regions to the north of India and China, which the Greeks called Scythia, and which we term Tartary. Houbigant also thinks that the prophet here means the Scythians, who are the descendants of Magog, the son of Japhet, and whose neighbours were the people of Rosh, Meshech, and Tubal; that is, the Russians, Muscovites, and Tibareni, or Cappadocians; and thus Theodoret and Josephus understand it. The Turks are generally allowed to be of Scythian origin. Scythopolis and Hierapolis, which cities the Scythians took when they overcame Syria, were ever after by the Syrians called Magog: see Plin., l. v. c. 23. The Arabs call the Chinese wall Sud Yagog et Magog, that is, the mud wall, or rampart of Gog and Magog. Gog and Magog are mentioned in Rev. xx. 8; and these, says Bishop Newton, “seem to have been formerly the general name of the northern nations of Europe and Asia, as the Scythians have been since, and the Tartars are at present. The prophecy in the Revelation alludes to this of Ezekiel in many particulars; both the one and the other remain yet to be fulfilled, and therefore we cannot be absolutely certain that they may not both relate to the same event. But it seems more probable that they relate to different events: the one is expected to take effect before, but the other will not take effect till after the Millennium. Gog and Magog in Ezekiel are said expressly, verses 6, 15, and chap. xxxix. 2, 3 And say, Thus saith the Lord A. M. 3417.

God; Behold, I am against thee, O B. C. 587.

Gog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal:

4 And ^e I will turn thee back, and put hooks into thy jaws, and I will bring thee forth, and to come from the north quarters, and the north parts; but in St. John they come from the four quarters, or corners of the earth. Gog and Magog in Ezekiel bend their forces against the Jews resettled in their own land; but in St. John they march up against the saints and church of God in general. Gog and Magog in Ezekiel are, with very good reason, supposed to be the Turks, but the Turks are the authors of the second wo; and the second wo, Rev. xi. 14, is past before the third wo; and the third wo long precedes the time here treated of. It may therefore be concluded that Gog and Magog, as well as Sodom, and Egypt, and Babylon, are mystic names in the book of Revelation; and the last enemies of the Christian Church are so denominated, because Gog and Magog appear to be the last enemies of the Jewish nation. Who they shall be, we cannot pretend to say with the least degree of certainty.” The chief prince of Meshech and Tubal—The king or head of all those northern nations which lie upon the Euxine sea: see note on chap. xxvii. 13. The LXX. take the word Rosh, here translated chief, for a proper name, and render the clause, The prince of Rosh, Meshech, &c. So taken it may signify those inhabitants of Scythia from whom the Russians derive their name and original.

* Chapter xxxii. 26.—^e 2 Kings xix. 28; Chapter xxix. 4; xxxix. 2.

Verses 4–6. I will turn thee back, and put hooks into thy jaws—I will disappoint all thy designs, and turn thee about as easily as a fisherman masters a great fish, when he hath once fastened the hook into its jaws: see chap. xxix. 4. And I will bring thee forth—Or, after I have brought thee forth; that is, after I have so disposed matters that thou hast been induced to come forth out of thine own country, to

A. M. 3417. all thine army, horses and horsemen, B. C. 587. ^f all of them clothed with all sorts of armour, even a great company with bucklers and shields, all of them handling swords:

5 Persia, Ethiopia, and ²Libya with them;
all of them with shields and helmet:

6 ^g Gomer, and all his bands; the house of ^h Togarmah of the north quarters, and all his bands: and many people with thee.

7 ⁱ Be thou prepared, and prepare for thyself, thou, and all thy company that are assembled unto thee, and be thou a guard unto them.

8 ¶ ^k After many days, ¹ thou shalt be visited:

^f Chapter xxiii. 12.—² Or, Phut, Chapter xxvii. 10; xxx. 5.
^g Gen. x. 2.—^h Chap. xxvii. 14.—ⁱ Isa. viii. 9, 10; Jer. xlv.
3, 4, 14; li. 12.—^k Gen. xlix. 1; Deut. iv. 30; Verse 16.

invade, spoil, and destroy other countries. Persia, Ethiopia, and Libya with them—As their allies. Ethiopia and Libya are called Cush and Phut in the Hebrew, and are joined together as allies, chap. xxx. 5, where see the note. The Persians are in like manner joined with Africans, chap. xxvii. 10. All of them with shield and helmet—So the Libyans, or people of Phut, are described, Jer. xlv. 9, as handling the shield, that is, being remarkable for their great and large shields, as Xenophon relates of them, Cyropæd., lib. vi. Gomer and all his bands—Gomer is joined with Magog, Gen. x. 2, and probably here signifies Galatia, Phrygia, and Bithynia, which, with Cappadocia, denoted by Togarmah, comprehend all the northern parts of Asia Minor, which border upon the Euxine sea. Concerning Togarmah, see note on chap. xxvii. 14. And many people with thee—Those of Cilicia, Pamphylia, and other nations inhabiting Asia Minor.

Verse 7. Be thou prepared—The prophet, speaking ironically, encourages Gog and his allies to make all warlike preparations, and muster all their forces together, that God might gain the greater honour by their signal defeat: see verse 16. And be thou a guard unto them—Let them rely upon thy prowess and conduct as their leader.

Verses 8, 9. After many days thou shalt be visited—In the latter days of the Messiah's kingdom among men, or after a succession of many generations, shall the judgment here mentioned be inflicted by God upon thee. In the latter years—Or days, as in the former clause, and verse 16; that is, toward the end of the world: compare Dan. viii. 26. Thou—Gog, with all thy numbers; shalt come into the land that is brought back from the sword—The land of the Jews, a people recovered from the countries into which they had been dispersed by the sword of their enemies. The land, it must be observed, is here put for the people of the land, who are said to be brought back from the sword, in the same sense in which they are elsewhere styled a remnant; those being intended that should remain after the various judgments that had fallen upon the nation, and the hardin the latter years thou shalt come A. M. 3417.

into the land that is brought back B. C. 587.
from the sword, ^m and is gathered out of many people, against ⁿ the mountains of Israel, which have been always waste: but it is brought forth out of the nations, and they shall ^o dwell safely all of them.

9 Thou shalt ascend and come ^p like a storm, thou shalt be ^q like a cloud to cover the land, thou and all thy bands, and many people with thee.

10 Thus saith the Lord God; It shall also come to pass, that at the same time shall things

¹ Isaiah xxix. 6.—^m Verse 12; Chap. xxxiv. 13.—ⁿ Chap.
xxxvi. 1, 4, 8.—^o Jer. xxiii. 6; Chap. xxviii. 26; xxxiv. 25, 28; Verse 11.—^p Isa. xxviii. 2.—^q Jer. iv. 13; Verse 16.

ships they had suffered in their several dispersions. And is gathered out of many people—Among whom they had been scattered: see note on chap. xxxiv. 13. Against the mountains of Israel, which have been always waste—It is already two thousand five hundred years since the ten tribes were carried away out of their own land by Shalmaneser. Certainly the expression, always, or perpetually waste, denotes a much longer desolation of the country than that which it suffered during the Babylonish captivity. It seems, all the various desolations of Judea are here included, namely, those by the Assyrians, Babylonians, Antiochus Epiphanes, the Romans, and lastly, as at this time, by the Turks. But it—The land of Canaan, that is, the people of it, is brought forth out of the nations—This is a repetition of what was said just before, namely, that Israel had been wonderfully preserved, and restored to their own land, through the particular providence of God; to which is added, And they shall dwell safely all of them—That is, the same divine power that has delivered and restored them will still continue to protect them. Thou shalt ascend and come like a storm—Thou shalt come suddenly, and with a mighty and destructive force. Thou shalt be like a cloud to cover the land—Thy forces shall be so very numerous as to overspread the land like a dark cloud, which makes every thing look melancholy and dismal: see chap. xxx. 3. The sense of the passage is, that after the return of the Jews and Israelites into their own country, and their having lived there for some time in peace and safety, this enemy will think to take advantage of their security, and fall upon them unexpectedly. "It seems to me," says Bishop Newcome, "that the prophecy remains to be fulfilled after the future re-establishment of the converted Jews in their own land, when the Mahomedans and pagans will invade them. On this supposition, the subject matter of this and the following chapter is well connected with the promises of distant blessings made toward the close of chap. xxxvii."

Verses 10-13. It shall come to pass at the same time—The time when my people are gathered to-

A. M. 3417. come into thy mind, and thou shalt
B. C. 587. ³ think an evil thought :

11 And thou shalt say, I will go up to the land of unwall'd villages; I will ² go to them that are at rest, ³ that dwell ⁴ safely, all of them dwelling without walls, and having neither bars nor gates,

12 ⁵ To take a spoil, and to take a prey; to turn thy hand upon ⁶ the desolate places that are now inhabited, ⁷ and upon the people that are gathered out of the nations, which have gotten cattle and goods, that dwell in the ⁸ midst of the land.

13 ⁹ Sheba, and ¹⁰ Dedan, and the merchants ¹¹ of Tarshish, with all ¹² the young lions thereof, shall say unto thee, Art thou come to take a spoil? hast thou gathered thy company to take a prey? to carry away silver and gold, to gether, settled in peace in their own land, and think themselves secure; shall things come into thy mind—Mischievous things; and thou shalt think an evil thought—Shalt entertain a malicious design for the destruction of my people. And thou shalt say—Wilt resolve in thyself; I will go up—I will invade with all my forces; the land of unwall'd villages—A people weak, and destitute of any considerable defences. To them that are at rest—Who would willingly be quiet, and suspect as little evil from others as they intend against others, and who trust in the protection of their God, who hath promised they shall dwell safely. Dwelling without walls, &c.—That is, having no sufficient fortifications to defend them against the force of an enemy. To take a spoil, &c.—With the thoughts of taking a large spoil without any difficulty. To turn thy hand upon the desolate places—To go against, or fall upon, a country which had lain a long time desolate, but which has been peopled again, and come into a flourishing condition. Judea is very plainly marked out by this land, which Gog is here represented as designing to attack, because it lay open to be invaded. That dwell in the midst of the land—Hebrew, in the navel of the land, that is, in Jerusalem, which stood nearly in the middle of Judea, and was situate upon a rising ground, which the Hebrew metaphorically expresses by the navel. Sheba and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarshish—These were people that traded much, the two former dwelling in the east, and the merchants of Tarshish often sailing from the Spanish coasts into the eastern parts, as having commerce with Tyre, which bordered upon Judea. “These merchants, as soon as they heard of this intended invasion, came into Gog’s camp as to a market, to buy both persons and goods which should come into the conqueror’s power.” With all take away cattle and goods, to take ^{A. M. 3417.} a great spoil? ^{B. C. 587.}

³ Or, conceive a mischievous purpose.—² Jeremiah xlix. 31. ⁵ Verse 8.—⁴ Or, confidently.—⁶ Heb. to spoil the spoil, and to prey the prey, Chapter xxix. 19.—¹ Chapter xxxvi. 34, 35. ⁷ Ver. 8.—⁸ Heb. navel, Judg. ix. 37.—⁹ Chap. xxvii. 22, 23.

14 ¶ Therefore, son of man, prophesy and say unto Gog, Thus saith the Lord God; ^b In that day when my people of Israel ^c dwelleth safely, shalt thou not know it?

15 ^d And thou shalt come from thy place out of the north parts, thou, ^e and many people with thee, all of them riding upon horses, a great company, and a mighty army :

16 ^f And thou shalt come up against my people of Israel, as a cloud to cover the land; ^g it shall be in the latter days, and I will bring thee against my land, ^h that the heathen may know me, when I shall be sanctified in thee, O Gog, before their eyes.

17 Thus saith the Lord God; Art thou he of whom I have spoken in old time ⁷ by my

⁷ Chapter xxvii. 15, 20.—² Chapter xxvii. 12.—³ Chapter xix. 3, 5.—^b Isaiah iv. 1.—^c Verse 8.—^d Chap. xxxix. 2. ^e Verse 6.—^f Verse 9.—^g Verse 8.—^h Exod. xiv. 4; Chap. xxxvi. 23; xxxix. 21.—⁷ Heb. by the hands.

the young lions thereof—Their kings and princes, as the Targum understands it; or their chief merchants, who are described as so many princes, (Isa. xxiii. 8,) and are called lions because of the injustice and oppression they too commonly practised in their commerce.

Verses 14–16. In that day, &c.—At that remarkable time, when I shall gather my people from their dispersions and bring them again to their own land, and they shall be established therein and dwell safely, without apprehension of danger from any enemy, and without any defence to prevent their being attacked; shalt thou not know it?—Will they not be pointed out to thee as a people thou mayest easily conquer, and with whose spoils thou mayest without difficulty enrich thyself? And thou shalt come from thy place out of the north parts—See on verse 6; thou and many people with thee, all of them riding upon horses, &c.—The character here given of this people may properly be applied to the Turks or Tartars, the strength of whose armies consists principally in their cavalry. As a cloud to cover the land—See on verse 9. It shall be in the latter days—This is repeated to prevent the application of the prophecy to any event that should take place before the days of the Messiah: see on verse 8. And I will bring thee against my land—I will permit thee to come; that the heathen may know me, when I shall be sanctified in thee—Shall be confessed to be a great God over all, a gracious and faithful God to my people, and a dreadful enemy and avenger against the wicked. Before their eyes—In the sight of all the heathen that are with Gog, and much more in the sight of God’s own people. This signal victory over Gog and his associates shall be a means of bringing infidels to give glory to God.

Verse 17. Art thou he?—This would be better

A. M. 3417. servants the prophets of Israel, which
B. C. 587. prophesied in those days many years, that I would bring thee against them?

18 And it shall come to pass at the same time when Gog shall come against the land of Israel, saith the Lord God, that my fury shall come up in my face.

19 For ⁱin my jealousy ^kand in the fire of my wrath have I spoken, ^lSurely in that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel;

20 So that ^mthe fishes of the sea, and the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the field, and all creeping things that creep upon the earth, and all the men that are upon the face of the earth, shall shake at my presence, ⁿand

ⁱ Chap. xxxvi. 5, 6; xxxix. 25.—^k Psa. lxxxix. 46.—^l Hag. ii. 6, 7; Rev. xvi. 18.—^m Hos. iv. 3.—ⁿ Jer. iv. 24; Nah. i. 5, 6.—^o Or, towers, or, stairs.—^p Psa. cv. 16.—^q Chapter xiv. 17.—^r Judg. vii. 22; 1 Sam. xiv. 20; 2 Chron. xx. 23.

translated, Art thou not he? a sense which the Hebrew particle of interrogation often imports; of whom I have spoken in old time by my servants the prophets—"It is doubtful by what prophets God foretold the irruption of Gog; but though nothing of this kind be found in the prophets that remain, it is enough that Ezekiel did not first foretell these things. Many of the sacred pages are lost, which might probably be extant when Ezekiel delivered this prophecy."—Houbigant. The expressions here used, of old time, and which prophesied in those days, many years, plainly imply that there was to be a succession of many ages between the publishing of these prophecies, and this event foretold by them.

Verses 18–20. My fury shall come up in my face—An expression taken from human passions, which cause the blood to fly up into the face. So Isaiah describes Almighty God as burning with anger, his lips being full of indignation, and his tongue as a consuming fire, chap. xxx. 27, where see the note. For in my jealousy—My zeal for the salvation and happiness of my people, and for my own glory; have I spoken—Against my enemy Gog, and his herd. Surely in that day there shall be a great shaking—A great commotion, as Dr. Waterland renders the expression; or a great disturbance, tumult, and confusion. Great changes and alterations in kingdoms and governments are often expressed in Scripture by shaking of heaven and earth, the sea and dry land: see the margin. So that the fishes of the sea, &c., shall shake at my presence—Every part of the creation shall bear its share of this calamity, as if there were a convulsion of the whole frame of nature. The prophets often describe God's judgments upon particular countries or persons, as if a dissolution of the whole world took the mountains shall be thrown down, A. M. 3417.

and the ^osteep places shall fall, and B. C. 587.
every wall shall fall to the ground.

21 And I will ^pcall for ^qa sword against him throughout all my mountains, saith the Lord God: ^revery man's sword shall be against his brother.

22 And I will ^rplead against him with ^spestilence and with blood; and ^tI will rain upon him, and upon his bands, and upon the many people that are with him, an overflowing rain, and ^ugreat hailstones, fire, and brimstone.

23 Thus will I magnify myself, and ^xsanctify myself; ^yand I will be known in the eyes of many nations, and they shall know that I am the LORD.

^r Isaiah lxvi. 16; Jer. xxv. 31.—^s Chap. v. 17.—^t Psalm xi. 6; Isa. xxix. 6; xxx. 30.—^u Chap. xiii. 11; Rev. xvi. 21.
^x Chap. xxxvi. 23.—^y Psa. ix. 16; Chap. xxxvii. 28; xxxix. 7; Verse 16.

place, because his particular judgments are an earnest of the general judgment: see note on Isa. xiii. 10. And the mountains shall be thrown down—The strong holds situate on the mountains, and the walls, towers, and other fortifications, shall be beat down and demolished.

Verses 21, 22. And I will call—Rather, But I will call, for a sword against him—That is, when he has carried all before him for some time, I will at length raise up those who shall withstand him. God's doing a thing is often expressed in Scripture by his speaking the word, and giving out his command. Thus he is said Psa. (cv. 16) to call for a dearth upon the land of Canaan. Throughout all my mountains—Throughout all the land of Judea; for, as has been observed before, Judea being very mountainous, it is often in Scripture denominated the mountains of Israel, or, the mountains of the Lord. Every man's sword shall be against his brother—God often destroys his enemies by intestine quarrels among themselves, and making them executioners of his judgments upon each other: see the margin. And I will plead against him with pestilence and with blood—Or, I will plead with him. God pleads with men by his judgments, which are a manifest token of the vengeance due to their sins. And I will rain upon him, &c., an overflowing rain, &c.—I will as plainly show myself in the destruction of these my enemies, as when I discomfited the armies of the Canaanites and Philistines by tempests of thunder and hail, or when I consumed Sodom and Gomorrah by fire and brimstone from heaven. "It is plain that the extraordinary circumstances mentioned in these verses remain to be accomplished on the future enemies of the Jews, when God's people are reinstated in his favour."—Bishop Newcome.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

In this chapter we have a continuation of the prophecy against Gog and Magog. This contains, (1.) An express and more large prediction of the utter destruction of Gog and Magog, 1-7. (2.) An illustration of the vastness of that destruction in three consequences of it: the burning of their weapons, 8-10; the burying of their slain, 11-16; and the feasting of the fowls and wild beasts on the carcasses unburied, 17-23. (3.) A declaration of God's gracious purposes concerning Israel, in this and his other providences respecting them, and a promise of the further mercy he had in store for them, 23-29.

A. M. 3417. B. C. 587. THEREFORE, ^a thou son of man, prophesy against Gog, and say, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I am against thee, O Gog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal:

2 And I will turn thee back, and ¹ leave but the sixth part of thee, ^b and will cause thee to come up from ² the north parts, and will bring thee upon the mountains of Israel:

3 And I will smite thy bow out of thy left hand, and will cause thine arrows to fall out of thy right hand.

4 ^c Thou shalt fall upon the mountains of Israel, thou, and all thy bands, and the people that ^d is with thee: ^e I will give thee unto the ravenous birds of every ³ sort, and to the beasts of the field, ⁴ to be devoured.

A. M. 3417. B. C. 587. 5 Thou shalt fall upon ^e the open field: for I have spoken ^f it, saith the Lord God.

6 ^g And I will send a fire on Magog, and among them that dwell ^h carelessly in ⁱ the isles: and they shall know that I am the Lord.

7 ^j So will I make my holy name known in the midst of my people Israel; and I will not let them ^k pollute my holy name any more: ^l and the heathen shall know that I am the Lord, the Holy One in Israel.

8 ¶ ^m Behold, it is come, and it is done, saith the Lord God; this ⁿ is the day ¹ whereof I have spoken.

9 And they that dwell in the cities of Israel shall go forth, and shall set on fire and burn the

^a Chapter xxxviii. 2, 3.—¹ Or, strike thee with six plagues, or, draw thee back with a hook of six teeth, as chapter xxxviii. 4. ^b Chap. xxxviii. 15.—² Heb. the sides of the north.—^c Chap. xxxviii. 21; Verse 17.—^d Chap. xxxiii. 27.—³ Heb. wing.

⁴ Heb. to devour.—⁵ Heb. the face of the field.—⁶ Chapter xxxviii. 22; Amos i. 4.—⁷ Or, confidently.—⁸ Psa. lxxii. 10. ⁹ Ver. 22.—^h Lev. xviii. 21; Chap. xx. 39.—ⁱ Chap. xxxviii. 16, 23.—^j Rev. xvi. 17; xxi. 6.—^k Chap. xxxviii. 17.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXIX.

Verses 1, 2. Therefore, thou son of man, prophesy—Continue to prophesy; against Gog—That all these things concerning him may be remembered. The chief prince of Meshech, &c.—See note on chap. xxxviii. 2. And I will turn thee back—See ibid. verse 4. I will lead thee and turn thee whosoever I please: thou shalt not proceed any further than I shall permit thee, but shalt be driven back. And leave but a sixth part of thee—Or, as others render it, I will strike thee with six plagues, those mentioned chap. xxxviii. 22. And I will cause thee to come up, &c.—The words may be better rendered, After I have caused thee to come up from the north parts, and have brought thee upon the mountains of Israel—See a like construction chap. xxxviii. 4.

Verses 3-7. I will smite thy bow out of thy left hand—There shall be no might in thy hand, as Moses threatens the Israelites, Deut. xxviii. 32; thou shalt not be able to use thy weapons to any purpose. I will give thee unto the ravenous birds, &c.—See verse 17, and chap. xxxiii. 27. And I will send a fire on Magog—That is, into the country of Gog. This fire seems to signify that the land, after the army of Gog had left it, should be laid waste by the neighbouring people. Fire frequently signifies God's fierce judgments. And among them that dwell carelessly in the isles—That is, among the inhabitants of the sea-coast, who dwell securely, and think no harm can come upon them. All countries lying upon the sea-coast are called islands in the Hebrew language. So will I make my holy name known in the midst of my people—I will give evident displays of my power and goodness among them; and I will not let them pollute, &c.—In the Hebrew it is, I will not pollute my holy name any more; that is, I will not suffer it to be polluted: verbs active often signifying only permission. The sense is, I will not suffer my name to be dishonoured any more, nor let it be said among the heathen that I was not able to rescue my people out of the hand of their enemies.

Verses 8-10. Behold, it is come, it is done, saith the Lord—The time appointed for this great destruction is come, and it is the last and finishing stroke of God's justice upon the enemies of his church and truth. The prophet here speaks in the rapture of prophecy of this event, determined and fixed in the counsels of God, as already completed: see the margin. They that dwell in the city shall set on fire and burn the weapons—In token of an entire conquest, and that such a lasting peace should ensue that there should be no more need of warlike preparations. Weapons here include all the instruments of war, engines, carriages, wagons, &c. Bishop Lowth observes, on Isa. ix. 4, that some heathen nations burned heaps of arms to the supposed god of victory, and that among the Romans this act was an emblem of peace. Among God's people it

A. M. 3417. weapons, both the shields and the
B. C. 587. bucklers, the bows and the arrows, and the ⁷ hand-staves, and the spears, and they shall ⁸ burn them with fire seven years :

10 So that they shall take no wood out of the field, neither cut down any out of the forests ; for they shall burn the weapons with fire : ^m and they shall spoil those that spoiled them, and rob those that robbed them, saith the Lord God.

11 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will give unto Gog a place there of graves in Israel, the valley of the passengers on the east of the sea : and it shall stop the ⁹ noses of the passengers : and there shall they bury Gog and all his multitude : and they shall call it The valley of ¹⁰ Hamon-gog.

12 And seven months shall the house of Israel be burying of them, ⁿ that they may cleanse the land.

⁷ Or, javelins.—⁸ Or, make a fire of them.—^m Isaiah xiv. 2 ; Rev. xiii. 10.—⁹ Or, mouths.—¹⁰ That is, The multitude of Gog.—ⁿ Deut. xxi. 23 ; Verses 14, 16.—^o Chap. xxviii. 22.

might show their trust in him as their defender. And they shall burn them with fire seven years.—The victory shall be so great, that, during this period of time, they shall suffice for fires on the mountains and in the open fields, where the slain shall fall, and whither the inhabitants of the adjoining cities shall occasionally go forth. Or by seven years we may understand a long time, a certain number being put for an uncertain one. And the meaning may be, There shall be in the country so great a quantity of military weapons, that they shall serve the people a long time for fuel. We should remember that they do not make very large fires in those hot countries. Mariana, in his Spanish History, b. ii. c. 24, relates, that after the victory which the Spaniards gained over the Saracens in 1212, they found so many spears and other warlike weapons of wood, as served them four years for fuel : see Calmet. They shall spoil those that spoiled them—See the margin.

Ver. 11–16. I will give unto Gog a place there of graves—Houbigant translates this passage, An illustrious place for sepulture, the valley of passengers opposite to the sea ; through which the travellers shall pass, stopping their noses—According to the Chaldee, the scene here spoken of was the lake of Gennesareth. In the Hebrew language, all lakes are called by the name of seas. The same is called the eastern sea, (chap. xlvii. 18,) to distinguish it from the Mediterranean, called the great sea westward, Josh. xxiii. 4. The valley near this sea is called the valley of the passengers, because it was the great road by which the merchants and traders from Syria, and other eastern countries, went into Egypt : see Gen. xxxvii. 17, 25. And seven months shall the house of Israel be burying of them—For a long

13 Yea, all the people of the land A. M. 3417 shall bury them : and it shall be to B. C. 587.
them a renown the day that ^o I shall be glorified, saith the Lord God.

14 And they shall sever out ¹¹ men of continual employment, passing through the land to bury with the passengers those that remain upon the face of the earth, ^p to cleanse it : after the end of seven months shall they search.

15 And the passengers that pass through the land, when any seeth a man's bone, then shall he ¹² set up a sign by it, till the buriers have buried it in the valley of Hamon-gog.

16 And also the name of the city shall be ¹³ Hamonah. Thus shall they ^q cleanse the land.

17 ¶ And, thou son of man, thus saith the Lord God ; ^r Speak ¹⁴ unto every feathered ¹¹ Heb. men of continuance.—^p Verse 12.—¹² Heb. build.

¹³ That is, The multitude.—^q Verse 12.—^r Rev. xix. 17.
¹⁴ Heb. to the fowl of every wing.

time after the battle, the inhabitants shall be employed in burying the bones of the slain, that the land might not be polluted by them. Yea, all the people of the land shall bury them—See the note on the following verse. And it shall be to them a renown, &c.—Or, The day that I shall be glorified shall be to them a day of renown, or a remarkable day of joy and gladness. And they shall sever out men, &c.—To cleanse the land thoroughly men shall be set apart, and be constantly employed in picking up the bones of the slain that are scattered about, and burying them with the dead bodies of travellers who had happened to die on the roads ; and they shall continue to do this, and be in daily search after the bones, for the space of seven months. The length of time assigned to this employment denotes the vast number of the slain, and the great care taken to cleanse the land from pollution. And when any seeth a man's bone, then shall he set up a sign—A stone, or some other mark, that men may avoid passing over the bones, and that the persons appointed to bury them may take them from thence, and carry them to the proper burying-place. Also the name of the city shall be called Hamonah—Some render this verse, Also the name of the city, assigned to them who shall cleanse the land, shall be called Hamonah, that is, a multitude. The meaning seems to be, that the city where these appointed buriers should reside during the time they were employed in this office, and near which they should bury the dead, should afterward, in memory thereof, be called Hamonah ; which, signifying a multitude, thereby denoted the greatness of the victory.

Verses 17–22. Thou son of man, speak unto every feathered fowl, &c.—It was the custom o

A. M. 3417. fowl, and to every beast of the field, B. C. 587.

^a Assemble yourselves, and come; gather yourselves on every side to my ¹⁵ sacrifice that I do sacrifice for you, even a great sacrifice ^t upon the mountains of Israel, that ye may eat flesh, and drink blood.

18 ^u Ye shall eat the flesh of the mighty, and drink the blood of the princes of the earth, of rams, of lambs, and of ¹⁶ goats, of bullocks, all of them ^x fatlings of Bashan.

19 And ye shall eat fat till ye be full, and drink blood till ye be drunken, of my sacrifice which I have sacrificed for you.

20 ^y Thus ye shall be filled at my table with horses and chariots, ^z with mighty men, and with all men of war, saith the Lord God.

21 ¶ ^a And I will set my glory among the heathen, and all the heathen shall see my judgment that I have executed, and ^b my hand that I have laid upon them.

^a Isaiah xviii. 6; xxxiv. 6; Jer. xii. 9; Zeph. i. 7.—¹⁵ Or, slaughter.—^t Ver. 4.—^u Rev. xix. 18.—¹⁶ Heb. great goats. ^x Deut. xxxii. 14; Psalm xxii. 12.—^y Psalm lxxvi. 6; Chap. xxxviii. 4.—^z Rev. xix. 18.—^a Chap. xxxviii. 16, 23.

persons that offered sacrifice, to invite their friends to the feast that was made of the remainder: see Gen. xxxiv. 54; 1 Sam. ix. 13. So here the prophet, by God's command, invites the beasts and fowls to partake of the sacrifice of his enemies slain. The slaughter of God's enemies is called a sacrifice, because it is offered up as an atonement to the divine justice: see the margin. A great sacrifice upon the mountains of Israel—Where this great army was to be destroyed. Ye shall eat the flesh of the mighty, and drink the blood of the princes—Rather, of the chief ones, of the earth, of rams, &c.—By the names of these several animals, all wont to be used in sacrifices, are here signified men of all orders and ranks, as princes, generals, captains, and common soldiers. All of them fatlings of Bashan—All of them in the prime of life and strength, like young fatted beasts. And drink blood till ye be drunken—Or, be satiated. Ye shall be filled at my table—At the table which is, as it were, spread by me. The allegory is continued. "The table of God is the field covered with dead bodies, the place of the slaughter of Magog. It is impossible to conceive how unbelievers could quote this verse to prove that the Jews of old times ate the flesh of horses, and even of men. Voltaire, though cautioned that not the Jews, nor men, but wild beasts and birds, were invited to this feast of slaughter, that is, to the consumption of the slain, yet insisted to the last on his strange accusation."—Michaelis. And all the heathen shall see my judgments—Shall see the punishments which I have executed on those who despise my name. So the house of Israel shall know that I am the Lord their God—Both by my acts of 22 ^a So the house of Israel shall know that I am the LORD their God from that day and forward.

23 ^d And the heathen shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity: because they trespassed against me, therefore ^e hid I my face from them, and ^f gave them into the hand of their enemies: so fell they all by the sword.

24 ^g According to their uncleanness and according to their transgressions have I done unto them, and hid my face from them.

25 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord God; ^h Now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob, and have mercy upon the ⁱ whole house of Israel, and will be jealous for my holy name;

26 ^k After that they have borne their shame, and all their trespasses whereby they have trespassed against me, when they ^l dwelt safely in their land, and none made them afraid.

^b Exod. vii. 4.—^c Verses 7, 28.—^d Chapter xxxvi. 18, 19, 20, 23.—^e Deut. xxxi. 17; Isaiah lix. 2.—^f Levit. xxvi. 25. ^g Ch. xxxvi. 19.—^h Jer. xxx. 3, 18; Ch. xxxiv. 13; xxxvi. 21. ⁱ Chap. xx. 40; Hos. i. 11.—^k Dan. ix. 16.—^l Lev. xxvi. 5, 6.

mercy, in bringing them out of their captivity, and gathering them from their dispersions, and by my judgments executed upon their enemies.

Verse 23. And the heathen shall know, &c.—The heathen nations shall be made sensible that my people were not carried away by their enemies because I wanted power to save them, but as a just punishment of their sins. Because they trespassed against me—Committed sin with a high hand. Therefore hid I my face from them—Withdrew my favour and protection; and gave them into the hand of their enemies—Who could not have hurt them if they had not first forsaken me their God, and exposed themselves to my displeasure. So fell they all by the sword—My defence being withdrawn, they fell under the sword of the enemy.

Verses 25, 26. Therefore now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob—See note on chap. xxxiv. 13, and xxxvi. 24. And have mercy upon the whole house of Israel—On the ten tribes with the two. This bringing back the captive Jews and Israelites, and gathering them from their dispersions, will be an act of mere mercy. By sin, indeed, they deserved to be made captives; but no righteousness of theirs did or could deserve deliverance from captivity. It was not extremity of justice that so punished them, but it will be the riches of mercy that thus pardons and redeems them. After they have borne their shame—The shame and reproach due to their sins; and all their trespasses—That is, the punishment of those trespasses, committed when they dwelt safely in their land, and none made them afraid—When they were in a state of peace, prosperity, and safety, which should have obliged them to love

A. M. 3417. 27 ^m When I have brought them
B. C. 587. again from the people, and gathered them out of their enemies' lands, and ⁿ am sanctified in them in the sight of many nations;

28 ^o Then shall they know that I am the LORD their God, ¹⁷ which caused them to be led into

^m Chapter xxviii. 25, 26. — ⁿ Chap. xxxvi. 23, 24; xxxviii. 16.
^o Chap. xxiv. 30; Verse 22.

and obedience; but even then they sinned, as if dangers and calamities would never overtake them. Strange ingratitude! to cast off the fear of God, and all regard to his law, when he had set them free from the fear of all enemies.

Ver. 27, 28. When I have brought them again from the people—According to my promises; and gathered them out of their enemies' lands—Wherever they were scattered; and am sanctified in them—By their patiently accepting punishment, repenting of sin, loathing their former ways, and themselves on account of them, acknowledging me to be holy, just, and good, and dedicating themselves unreservedly to my service; when I am thus sanctified among them, and in the sight of the nations who shall see that the furnace has purified them; then shall they know—On the fullest experience and clearest evidence; that I am the Lord their God—And that I have never ceased to exercise a paternal care over them; and in all my chastisements of them, as well as my benefits conferred on them, have had their good in view: see notes on verse 22, and chap. xxxiv. 30. Observe, reader, by the variety of events through which God brings us in the course of his providence, if we look up to him in them all, we shall become better acquainted, both with his divine captivity among the heathen: but I ^{A. M. 3417} have gathered them unto their own ^{B. C. 587.} land, and have left none of them any more there.

29 ^p Neither will I hide my face any more from them: for I have ^q poured out my Spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord God.

¹⁷ Heb. by my causing of them, &c.—^p Isa. liv. 8.—^q Joel ii. 28; Zech. xii. 10; Acts ii. 17.

perfections, and his various designs in all his dispensations toward us.

Verse 29. Neither will I hide my face any more from them—I will never again withdraw my favour or protection from them, or turn from them in displeasure. For I have poured out—In abundant mercy; my Spirit upon the house of Israel—Which, as a Spirit of truth, shall enlighten their minds, and make them wise unto salvation; as a Spirit of grace, shall regenerate and create them anew; as a Spirit of power, shall strengthen them for every duty, and enable them to withstand and conquer every temptation; as a Spirit of holiness, shall cleanse them from sin, sanctify their souls, and stamp them with mine image; and, as a Spirit of adoption and consolation, shall inspire them with confidence and hope, and render every branch of obedience, and every exercise of piety and virtue, sweet and delightful to them. It appears by this promise, that there will be a new and plentiful effusion of God's Spirit on the Jews and Israelites in the latter days, in order to their conversion, their establishment in grace, and their restoration to their own land: see Isa. lix. 20, 21, a passage applied by St. Paul to this very purpose, Rom. xi. 26, 27. Compare likewise Zech. xii. 10, and chap. xi. 19, and xxxvi. 27, of this prophecy.

PRELIMINARY OBSERVATIONS ON CHAPTERS XL.-XLVIII.

WE are now entering upon a portion of the Holy Scriptures which is justly looked upon to be one of the most difficult in all the book of God. The Jews will not allow any to read it till they are thirty years of age, and they tell those who do read it, that though they cannot understand every thing in it, yet when Elias comes he will explain it. Many commentators, both ancient and modern, have acknowledged themselves to be at a loss how to interpret it. But because it is hard to be understood, we must not therefore throw it aside as useless, but must humbly search into its meaning, and advance as far as we can in the knowledge thereof; and when we despair of finding satisfaction in every difficulty we meet with, we must bless God that our salvation does not depend upon it, but that things necessary are sufficiently plain; and we must wait till God shall reveal even this unto us. These chapters are the more to be regarded because the two last chapters of the Revelation seem to have a plain allusion to them, as Rev. xx. has to the foregoing prophecy of Gog and Magog.

The contents of this prophecy are as follows: In this and the two following chapters we have the vision of a glorious temple. In chap. xliii. God is represented as taking possession of it. In chap. xliv. orders are given concerning the priests that are to minister in this temple. Chap. xlv. directs concerning the division of the land, what portion should be allotted for the sanctuary, what for the city, and what for the prince, both with respect to his government of the people, and his worship of God. Chap. xlv. contains further instructions for him and the people. And after the vision of the holy waters, we have the borders of the holy land, the portions assigned to the tribes, and the dimensions and gates of the holy city, in chap. xlvii. xlviii.

Some suppose that the following description of the temple was intended to show how glorious Solomon's temple had been, during the flourishing state of the Jewish Church, in order that the captives might see what they had lost by sin, and might be the more humbled. Others consider it as intended for a model according to which the new colonists were to erect a temple on their return to their own land; observing, at the same time, the customs and usages which Ezekiel here orders, and dividing the country as he directs. Perhaps the general scope of the vision might be two-fold: 1st, To assure the captives that they should not only return to their own land and be settled there, which had been often promised in the foregoing chapters, but that they should have, and therefore ought to be encouraged to build another temple which God would own, and where he would meet and bless them: that the ordinances of their worship should be revived, and the sacred priesthood should there attend; and, though they should not have a king to live in such splendour as formerly, yet they should have a prince, or ruler, (who is often spoken of in this vision,) that should countenance the worship of God among them, and should himself be an example of a diligent attendance upon it: and that prince, priests, and people should have a very comfortable settlement in their own land. 2d, To direct them to look further than all this, and to expect the coming of the Messiah, who had before been prophesied of, under the name David, (the man that projected the building of the first temple,) and who should set up a spiritual temple, even the gospel church, the glory of which should far exceed that of Solomon's temple, and which should continue to the end of time. And the gospel temple, erected by Christ and his apostles, was so closely connected with the second material temple, and was erected so carefully just at the time when that temple fell into decay, being designed to receive its glories when it resigned them, that it was proper enough they should both be referred to in one and the same vision; which vision, under the type and figure of a temple and altar, priest and sacrifices, foreshowed the spiritual worship that should be performed in gospel times, as being more agreeable to the nature both of God and man, and that worship perfected at last in the kingdom of glory, in which, doubtless, these visions will have their full accomplishment; if not, as some think, in a glorious and happy state of the gospel church, to take place on earth in the latter days.

The grand outlines of the description here given, as Mr. Scott observes, might be taken from Solomon's temple, with the additions made to its courts and out-buildings in after ages; and Zerubbabel, Joshua, and the other Jews, who returned from Babylon, might have respect to it in rebuilding the temple after the captivity; but "there are several circumstances which evidently show that something vastly superior to either the first or second temple was intended; and that the external description must be considered as a figure and emblem of spiritual blessings. This will appear, in many particulars, as we proceed; but especially the dimensions of the temple, city, and land; and the division of the land to the prince, priests, and tribes; and the river of water springing from the threshold of the temple, enlarging till it reached the Dead sea, and sweetening its waters; with the trees growing on the banks of the river, bearing fruit every month, cannot be literally interpreted, or made to accord with any thing which has yet taken place."

A late writer gives the following character of this part of Ezekiel's prophecy: "From the fortieth chapter a new elevated scene commences. Before, there was nothing but oracles full of misfortunes, of punishments, of death and ruin; visions concerning the destruction of the government, and concerning the flight and state of the last king; and pictures of the universal corruption, idolatry, and superstition of Israel. From the fortieth chapter a new temple rises before the eyes of the holy seer, he walks round about it in Palestine, he measures the city and country for their new inhabitants, he orders sacrifices, feasts, and customs. In short, a Magna Charta is planned for priests, kings, and people, in future ages and latter times. Lastly, from hence prosaic expression predominates: at least, the prophet elevates himself by poetical colouring much more rarely than before."

CHAPTER XL.

In this chapter we have, (1.) A general account of this vision of the temple and city, 1-4. (2.) A particular account of the east gate, north gate, and south gate, 5-31. (3.) Of the inner court, 32-38. (4.) Of the tables, 39-43. (5.) Of the lodgings for the singers and priests, 44-47. (6.) Of the porch of the house, 48, 49.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. IN the five and twentieth year of our captivity, in the beginning of the year, in the tenth day of the month, in the fourteenth year after that ^a the city was smitten, in the self-same day ^b the hand of the LORD was upon me, and brought me thither. A. M. 3430. B. C. 574.

2 ^c In the visions of God brought he me into ^a Chap. xxxiii. 21. — ^b Chap. i. 3.

^c Chap. viii. 3.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XL.

Verses 1, 2. In the five and twentieth year of our captivity—Of the captivity of those that were carried away with Jehoiachin, eleven years before Jerusalem was taken. In the beginning of the year—In the month Nisan; in the tenth day of the month

A. M. 3430. the land of Israel, ^d and set me upon B. C. 574. a very high mountain, ¹ by which was as the frame of a city on the south.

3 And he brought me thither, and behold, there was a man, whose appearance was ^e like the appearance of brass, ^f with a line of flax in his hand, ^g and a measuring-reed; and he stood in the gate.

4 And the man said unto me, ^h Son of man, behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears, and set thy heart upon all that I shall show thee; for to the intent that I might show them unto thee art thou brought hither: ⁱ declare all that thou seest to the house of Israel.

^d Rev. xxi. 10.—¹ Or, upon which.—^e Chap. i. 7; Dan. x. 6.
^f Chap. xlv. 1; xlvii. 3.—^g Rev. xi. 1; xxi. 15.

—The day that the paschal lamb was to be taken up in order to the feast on the fourteenth day; in the fourteenth year after that the city was smitten—Zedekiah's reign commenced from Jehoiachin's captivity, in the eleventh year of whose reign the city was destroyed, Jer. lii. 5, 6. So the fourteenth year after its destruction must be coincident with the twenty-fifth of Jehoiachin's captivity. In the self-same day the hand of the Lord was upon me, &c.—I was actuated by a divine power, which brought me, in vision, from the land of my captivity to the place where Jerusalem had stood. In the visions of God brought he me—This plainly declares that the prophet was not transported to the land of Israel in body, but only that it appeared to him, in his vision, as if he were transported thither, and things were represented to his mind just the same as if he had been actually there. And set me upon a very high mountain—This expression is thought to point out mount Moriah, on which the temple was built. Or, if that mountain could not properly be so characterized, the prophet's station may be considered as merely represented in vision, without a corresponding real one. Michaelis thinks nothing more is signified by it "than that Jerusalem, and the true worship of God, should be very much exalted, and made known to all the world." Or is it not rather so denominated, as representing the seat of the Christian Church, foretold by the prophets to be established on the top of the mountains, Isa. ii. 1; Mic. iv. 1: compare Rev. xxi. 10. By which was the frame of a city—The portrait of a city. By this was signified the temple, on the south of the mountain where the prophet was set, which, with all its courts, buildings, and walls encompassing the courts, and the whole area, or holy mountain, resembled a city for largeness.

Verses 3-5. Behold, there was a man—The same no doubt that appeared to the prophet, chap. i. 20, (where see the note,) whose name is the Branch, and who builds the temple of the Lord, Zech. vi. 12, 13; whose appearance was like the appearance of

5 And behold ^k a wall on the out- A. M. 3430 side of the house round about, and B. C. 574.
in the man's hand a measuring-reed of six cubits long, by the cubit and a hand-breadth: so he measured the breadth of the building, one reed: and the height, one reed.

6 ¶ Then came he unto the gate ² which looketh toward the east, and went up the stairs thereof, and measured the threshold of the gate, which was one reed broad; and the other threshold of the gate, which was one reed broad.

7 And every little chamber was one reed long, and one reed broad; and between the little chambers were five cubits: and the threshold

^h Chapter xlv. 5.—ⁱ Chapter xliii. 10.—^k Chapter xlii. 20.
² Heb. whose face was the way toward the east.

brass—Bright and sparkling, Rev. i. 15. With a line of flax in his hand—The use of the line was to measure the land of Israel, and of the reed to take the dimensions of the buildings in and about the temple; as also to set out several portions of land belonging to the sanctuary and city, to the prince and people: see the margin. And he stood in the gate—Probably the north gate, being the first entrance the prophet may be supposed to have arrived at, as he came from Chaldea, which lay northward of Judea. Son of man, behold, &c., and hear—Take notice of what thou seest, so that thou mayest afterward tell it to thy people. And, behold, a wall on the outside—A wall went round the whole compass, or square, of the holy mountain, whereon the temple was situate, to separate the holy ground from that which was common: see chap. xlii. 20. And in the man's hand a measuring-reed of six cubits long, &c.—Here is explained what sort of a cubit is meant in the following delineation of the temple, namely, one that consisted of six hand-breadths, or one hand-breadth over the cubit used in Chaldea, where he now lived. This is the measure of a Scripture cubit, generally agreed to be equivalent to eighteen inches, or a foot and a half of our measure. See Bishop Cumberland, Of Scripture Weights and Measures, p. 36, &c. According to Michaelis, the Hebrew measures are, 1. The finger's-breadth: 2. Four fingers, or a hand-breadth: 3. The ell; the smaller of five hand-breadths, the larger of six: 4. The rod, of six ells. He also allows the rabbinical account, that a finger is equal to the length of six barley grains. So he measured the breadth of the building—That is, of the outward wall, which was three yards high, and three yards broad. This wall surrounded a part which corresponded to the court of the Gentiles, and served as a security against the precipices of the mount on which the temple stood.

Verses 6-8. Then came he unto the gate, &c.—After having passed the court of the Gentiles, he came to the eastern gate, or the court of Israel. For

A. M. 3430. of the gate by the porch of the gate
B. C. 574. within was one reed.

8 He measured also the porch of the gate within, one reed.

9 Then measured he the porch of the gate, eight cubits; and the posts thereof, two cubits; and the porch of the gate was inward.

10 And the little chambers of the gate eastward were three on this side, and three on that side; they three were of one measure: and the posts had one measure on this side and on that side.

11 And he measured the breadth of the entry of the gate, ten cubits; and the length of the gate, thirteen cubits.

12 The ³space also before the little chambers was one cubit on this side, and the space was one cubit on that side: and the little chambers were six cubits on this side, A. M. 3430.

and six cubits on that side. B. C. 574.

13 He measured then the gate from the roof of one little chamber to the roof of another; the breadth was five and twenty cubits, door against door.

14 He made also posts of threescore cubits, even unto the post of the court round about the gate.

15 And from the face of the gate of the entrance unto the face of the porch of the inner gate were fifty cubits.

16 And there were ¹narrow ⁴windows to the little chambers, and to their posts within the gate round about, and likewise to the ⁵arches: and windows were round about ⁶inward: and upon each post were palm-trees

³ Heb. limit, or, bound.—¹ 1 Kings vi. 4.—⁴ Heb. closed.

⁵ Or, galleries, or, porches.—⁶ Or, within.

the temple being placed toward the west part of the holy mountain, as the holy of holies was at the west end of the temple, this was the first gate that led to it, and it opened into the court of the people: see verse 19. It is called the king's gate, (1 Chron. ix. 18,) as being built by King Solomon. And went up the stairs thereof, &c.—He went up the stairs that he might more easily measure the upper lintel, as well as the lower threshold. The word קֶדֶשׁ, translated threshold, signifies the lintel, or upper part of the door-case, as well as the threshold properly so called, or the lower part of it. Some understand the word here of the two side-posts, in which sense it is used Amos ix. 1. And every little chamber, &c.—Along the wall of the porch were chambers, three on each side, verse 10; these the angel measured, and they were of equal dimensions, each one reed square, with a passage of five cubits breadth between them. And the threshold of the gate, &c., was one reed—The inward threshold at the further end of the porch, looking into the first court, was of the same size with the outward one, verse 6. He measured also—Or, he even measured; the porch of the gate within—The words seem to be a repetition of what was said in the latter part of verse 7.

Verses 9–12. Then measured he the porch of the gate, eight cubits, &c.—This was a portico beyond the little chambers which looked into the first court. It was eight cubits wide, and the two side-posts were two cubits thick, which made up the ten cubits mentioned verse 11. And the little chambers of the gate eastward were three, &c.—Or the little chambers of the eastern gate, which he has hitherto been describing, and the form of which is here repeated. These rooms were for the use of the porters that took care of the several gates that led to the temple. And the posts had one measure—The side-posts, or fronts of the doors, belonging to each row of chambers, were of the same size. And the length of the gate thirteen cubits—By the length of the gate, Villalpandus understands the height, which he supposes to have been two reeds, or twelve cubits and a half. The space also before the little chambers was one cubit, &c.—There was a border, or a rail, which enclosed a cubit's space before each chamber.

Verses 13, 14. He measured then the gate from the roof of one little chamber, &c.—Measuring the arch of the gate from north to south, it was in breadth twenty-five cubits, which is thus computed: the breadth of the gate ten cubits, the breadth of both the side walls thirteen cubits, and two cubits for the space or border on each side of the chambers, verse 12. Door against door—The door on each chamber exactly answered the door on the opposite side. He made also posts, &c.—He described, or made a delineation of the height of the columns or pillars which were to support the rooms or stories over the arch of the gate; and these were in height sixty cubits. Even unto the posts of the court round about the gate—It is supposed there is an ellipsis in these words, which may be thus supplied: And there was one measure to the pillars of the court, and of the gate round about; which makes the sense run plain and easy.

Verses 15, 16. And from the face of the gate, &c.—The whole length of the porch, from the outward front unto the inner side, which looked into the first court, was fifty cubits. There were narrow windows to the little chambers, &c.—Every one of these little chambers (verse 7) had a narrow window to it, toward the inside of the gate where the passage was; and so there was over the side-posts or fronts placed at the entrance of every chamber; and likewise to the arches—The word translated arches signifies also a porch, or entrance; and the word being so taken, the sense is, that there was a window over every door. And upon each post were palm-trees—A palm-tree was carved upon the chapter of each side-post, or front.

A. M. 3430. 17 Then brought he me into ^m the
B. C. 574. outward court, and lo, there were ⁿ chambers, and a pavement made for the court round about: ^o thirty chambers were upon the pavement.

18 And the pavement by the side of the gates over against the length of the gates was the lower pavement.

19 Then he measured the breadth from the forefront of the lower gate unto the forefront of the inner court ⁷ without, a hundred cubits eastward and northward.

20 ¶ And the gate of the outward court ⁸ that looked toward the north, he measured the length thereof, and the breadth thereof.

21 And the little chambers thereof were three on this side and three on that side; and the posts thereof and the ⁹ arches thereof were after the measure of the first gate: the length thereof was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits.

22 And their windows, and their arches, and their palm-trees, were after the measure of the gate that looketh toward the east: A. M. 3430 B. C. 574. and they went up unto it by seven steps; and the arches thereof were before them.

23 And the gate of the inner court was over against the gate toward the north, and toward the east: and he measured from gate to gate a hundred cubits.

24 ¶ After that he brought me toward the south, and behold a gate toward the south:
and he measured the posts thereof and the arches thereof according to these measures.

25 And there were windows in it and in the arches thereof round about, like those windows:
the length was fifty cubits, and the breadth
five and twenty cubits.

26 And there were seven steps to go up to it, and the arches thereof were before them: and it had palm-trees, one on this side, and another on that side, upon the posts thereof.

27 ¶ And there was a gate in the inner court toward the south: and he measured from gate to gate toward the south a hundred cubits.

^m Rev. xi. 2.—ⁿ 1 Kings vi. 5.—^o Chap. xlv. 5.—⁷ Or, from without.—⁸ Heb. whose face was.—⁹ Or, galleries, or, porches.

Verse 17. Then brought he me into the outward court—There were two courts belonging to Solomon's temple; the outward for the people, the inward for the priests. It is probable that Solomon built only the inner court: see 1 Kings vi. 36, compared with chap. viii. 64: and that the outer court was built after his time, whereupon it is called the new court, (2 Chron. xx. 5,) after which time there is particular mention of the two courts of the house of the Lord, 2 Kings xxi. 5. A third court, called the court of the Gentiles, was afterward added by Herod, when he rebuilt the temple. And lo, there were chambers—These chambers were over the cloister, and supported by it: see verse 14, and chap. xlii. 8. They might be for the use of the priests, and likewise store-houses for tithes and offerings: see 1 Chron. xxviii. 12. And a pavement made for the court round about—A beautiful floor made with checker-work. The whole floor of this court was thus paved. Thirty chambers were upon the pavement—That is, fifteen on the south side of the gate, and fifteen on the north side, built over the pavement.

Verse 19. Then he measured the breadth, &c., a hundred cubits eastward and northward—He measured the whole space of ground between the west front of the lower gate, (namely, the gate at the east end of the outer court,) and the east front of the upper gate, which led into the inner court, and found it a hundred cubits; the same was the space between the south front and the north front: so the court was exactly square. The expression is elliptical; as if he had said, There were a hundred cubits from west to east, and from north to south. It must be observed, the gate at the east end of the outer court is called the lower gate, for the same reason as the pavement is called the lower pavement, verse 18; because there was still an ascent, as a person went from one court to the other.

Verse 23. The gate of the inner court was over against the gate toward the north, &c.—The words may be translated more intelligibly thus: And the gate of the inner court was proportionable, or answerable, to the gate that was toward the north and toward the east. The expression is elliptical, like that of verse 19, and the full import of it is, that the north gate of the inner court did exactly answer this north gate of the outer court, described verses 20, 22. And in like manner the east gate of the inner court answered the east gate of the outward court.

Verses 24–26. After that he brought me to the south, &c.—The prophet having shown, by way of parenthesis, in the 23d verse, the exact correspondence between the gates of both courts, proceeds in these three verses to describe the south gate of the outer court, by the same dimensions he had before given of the east and north gate.

Verses 27–31. And there was a gate in the inner court toward the south—The south gate in the inner court was exactly parallel to the south gate in the outer court: see verse 23. And he brought me to the inner court by the south gate—Those who maintain that the outer court enclosed the inner on the east, north, and south sides, explain these words in

A. M. 3430. 28 And he brought me to the inner
B. C. 574. court by the south gate: and he measured the south gate according to these measures;

29 And the little chambers thereof, and the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, according to these measures: and there were windows in it and in the arches thereof round about: it was fifty cubits long, and five and twenty cubits broad.

30 And the arches round about were ^p five and twenty cubits long, and five cubits ¹⁰ broad.

31 And the arches thereof were toward the outer court; and palm-trees were upon the posts thereof: and the going up to it had eight steps.

32 ¶ And he brought me into the inner court toward the east: and he measured the gate according to these measures.

33 And the little chambers thereof, and the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, were according to these measures: and there were windows therein and in the arches thereof round about: it was fifty cubits long, and five and twenty cubits broad.

34 And the arches thereof were toward the outward court; and palm-trees were upon the posts thereof, on this side, and on that side: and the going up to it had eight steps.

¶ Verse 21; xxv.; xxxiii.; xxxvi.—¹⁰ Heb. breadth.—¹ Lev.

this sense, that the prophet was conducted from the south gate of the outer court, verse 24, to the south gate of the inner court, which was over against it, and so into the inner court itself. And he measured the south gate, &c.—After he had measured the inner court, he took the dimensions of the south gate itself, and the chambers thereto belonging, and found them of the same dimensions with the former. The arches five and twenty cubits long, &c.—Length is here taken for height, as before, verse 11. The words express the dimensions of those arches which were between the several little chambers, between each of which there was a space of five cubits, verse 7. The arches were toward the outer court—Or, were like [those of] the outer court.

Verse 38. And the chambers were by the gates where they washed the burnt-offerings—The chambers, mentioned verse 36, were near the entrance of the north gate; where they washed the legs and entrails of the burnt-offerings; and marble tables were placed there for that purpose. According to this exposition, the word gates in the plural stands for gate in the singular. But Dr. Lightfoot says, they washed the sacrifices on the south side, as well as on the north side of the court of the priests, when 35 ¶ And he brought me to the north gate, and measured it according to these measures; A. M. 3430 B. C. 574.

36 The little chambers thereof, the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, and the windows to it round about: the length was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits.

37 And the posts thereof were toward the outer court; and palm-trees were upon the posts thereof, on this side, and on that side: and the going up to it had eight steps.

38 And the chambers, and the entries thereof were by the posts of the gates, where they washed the burnt-offering.

39 ¶ And in the porch of the gate were two tables on this side, and two tables on that side, to slay thereon the burnt-offering, and ^a the sin-offering, and ^r the trespass-offering.

40 And at the side without, ¹¹ as one goeth up to the entry of the north gate, were two tables; and on the other side, which was at the porch of the gate, were two tables.

41 Four tables were on this side, and four tables on that side, by the side of the gate; eight tables, whereupon they slew their sacrifices.

42 And the four tables were of hewn stone for the burnt-offering, of a cubit and a half long, and a cubit and a half broad, and one cubit

iv. 2, 3.—^r Leviticus v. 6; vi. 6; vii. 1.—¹¹ Or, at the step.

the sacrifices were more numerous than the north side could well contain: he therefore understands the word gates as comprehending here both the north and south gate, and confirms this interpretation from the placing of the lavers which were designed for that use, and were set five on the right side of the house, and five on the left, 1 Kings vii. 39.

Verses 39, 40. In the porch of the gate were two tables, &c.—Those expositors who, by the word gates, in verse 38, understand both the north and south gates, render the sense of these two verses perspicuously thus: In the porch of one gate (namely, that on the south) were two tables on this side, and two tables on that side, &c. And at the outer side of the step of the entry of the north gate were two tables; which interpretation agrees very well with what follows, verse 41, Four tables were on this side, and four on that side. But they that understand these verses to be only a description of the north gate (on which side of the altar the sacrifices were commonly killed) suppose that two tables were on each side, as a person came into the porch of the gate, and two on each side of the inner part of the gate that looked toward the altar.

A. M. 3430. high: whereupon also they laid the B. C. 574. instruments wherewith they slew the burnt-offering and the sacrifice.

43 And within were ¹² hooks, a hand broad, fastened round about: and upon the tables was the flesh of the offering.

44 ¶ And without the inner gate were the chambers of ^athe singers in the inner court, which was at the side of the north gate; and their prospect was toward the south: one at the side of the east gate having the prospect toward the north.

45 And he said unto me, This chamber, whose prospect is toward the south, is for the priests, ^tthe keepers of the ¹³charge of the house.

46 And the chamber whose prospect is toward the north, is for the priests, ^vthe keepers of the ¹² Or, end irons, or, the two hearth-stones.—^a 1 Chron. vi. 31.

^t Lev. viii. 35; Num. iii. 27, 28, 32, 38; xviii. 5; 1 Chron. vi. 49; ix. 23; 2 Chron. xiii. 11; Psa. cxxxiv. 1.

Verse 43. Within were hooks, a hand broad, fastened round about—Within the gate, or entrance, on the north side of the inner court, were iron hooks, for the hanging up the beasts that were to be sacrificed, in order to the flaying off their skins. And upon the tables was the flesh, &c.—Or, they laid the flesh of the offering; upon the marble tables the priests laid the flesh of the slain beasts, which they cut in pieces, and fitted for the altar: see Lev. i. 6.

Verses 44–47. And without the inner gate, &c.—Houbigant, following the LXX., translates this verse thus: And he brought me to the inner gate, where there were two chambers in the inner court; one at the northern side of the gate which looked to the south; the other at the southern side of the gate which looked to the north. And he said, This chamber, whose prospect is toward the south, is for the priests—The word chamber may stand for chambers in the plural, (as side-chamber doth, chap. xli. 5–9,) and signify a row of buildings on the north side of the inner court, distinct from the chambers of the singers, verse 44, and designed for the use of the priests, who were in constant attendance, according to their courses, upon the service of the temple: see the margin. The keepers of the charge of the house—They took care of the holy vessels, and kept constant watch and ward about the temple. The word priests may include Levites under it, as Levites charge of the altar: these are the A. M. 3430.

sons of ^zZadok among the sons of B. C. 574.
Levi, which come near to the Lord to minister unto him.

47 So he measured the court, a hundred cubits long, and a hundred cubits broad, four-square; and the altar that was before the house.

48 ¶ And he brought me to the porch of the house, and measured each post of the porch, five cubits on this side, and five cubits on that side: and the breadth of the gate was three cubits on this side, and three cubits on that side.

49 ^yThe length of the porch was twenty cubits, and the breadth eleven cubits; and he brought me by the steps whereby they went up to it: and there were ^zpillars by the posts, one on this side, and another on that side.

¹³ Or, ward, or, ordinance; and so verse 46.—^a Num. xviii. 5; Chap. xlv. 15.—^x 1 Kings ii. 35; Chap. xliii. 19; xlv. 15, 16.—^y 1 Kings vi. 3.—^z 1 Kings vii. 21.

elsewhere comprehends priests. And the chamber whose prospect is toward the north, &c.—Another row of chambers on the south side of the inner court, is for the descendants of Aaron, whose office it is to attend upon the service of the altar, and keep the fire burning thereon perpetually. These are the sons of Zadok among the sons of Levi—The family of Zadok is only taken notice of in this vision; it may be for this reason, because they kept close to the worship of God, when the priests of Ithamar's line forsook it, and fell into idolatry. The altar that was before the house—Or rather, The altar was before the house; that is, stood in the inner court, just before the porch that opened into the temple. The altar was not now measured, the measure of it being described afterward.

Verses 48, 49. And measured each post of the porch—By the posts are meant the side-posts, or columns, on each side of the door of entrance: see verse 9; these were measured to be five cubits thick, both on the north and south sides. And the breadth of the gate was three cubits on this side, &c.—“Two doors, of three cubits wide, opening each way, formed the entrance; these, with five on each side, called the posts of the porch, amount to sixteen cubits; and the other four may be supposed to have been the distance from these posts to the outside of the walls of the temple.”—Scott.

CHAPTER XLI.

In this chapter we have, (1.) The dimensions of the temple itself, 1–13. (2.) An account of another building, 14, 15. (3.) The manner of the building of the house, 16, 17. (4.) The ornaments of the house, 18–20. (5.) The altar of incense and the table, 21, 22. (6.) The doors between the temple and the oracle, 23–26.

A. M. 3430.
B. C. 574.

AFTERWARD he brought me to the temple, and measured the posts, six cubits broad on the one side, and six cubits broad on the other side, which was the breadth of the tabernacle.

2 And the breadth of the ¹door was ten cubits; and the sides of the door were five cubits on the one side, and five cubits on the other side: and he measured the length thereof, forty cubits: and the breadth twenty cubits.

3 Then went he inward, and measured the posts of the door, two cubits; and the door, six cubits; and the breadth of the door, seven cubits.

4 So ^ahe measured the length thereof, twenty cubits; and the breadth, twenty cubits, before the temple: and he said unto me, This is the most holy place.

¹ Or, entrance.—^a 1 Kings vi. 20; 2 Chron. iii. 8.—^b 1 Kings vi. 5, 6.—² Heb. side-chamber over side-chamber.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLI.

Verses 1, 2. Afterward he brought me to the temple—“After having described the courts and the porch, the prophet enters into the temple, properly so called, whereof he gives the dimensions and description.” And he measured the posts—By the posts are meant the door-cases on each side of the entrance. These were six cubits thick on the north and south sides; which was the breadth of the tabernacle—These walls, in their thickness, took up as much space as the whole breadth of Moses’s tabernacle, as appears from Exod. xxvi. 16, 22, 23; where the west side of the tabernacle consists of eight boards, each a cubit and a half broad. The breadth of the door was ten cubits, &c.—The entrance itself being ten cubits broad, and the wall on each side five cubits, makes the breadth of the house to be just twenty cubits, as it is expressed in the latter part of the verse, which was the same in Solomon’s temple, 1 Kings vi. 2. And the length forty cubits—Namely, the length of the first sanctuary, or holy place, as distinct from the holy of holies, which was twenty cubits in length, verse 4, and made the whole structure sixty cubits long; wherein it agreed with Solomon’s temple.

Verses 3, 4. Then went he inward—From the outward sanctuary he went forward toward the holy of holies, and measured the thickness of the partition wall to be two cubits, the entrance itself six cubits, and breadth of the wall, on each side of the door, seven cubits: see chap. xl. 48; where the breadth of the gate is taken in the same sense. The breadth of the wall, thus computed, making up fourteen cubits, and being added to the breadth of the entrance itself, makes up twenty cubits; the breadth of the inner sanctuary, as it is set down in the next verse. So he measured the length thereof—Of the holy of holies twenty cubits, and the breadth

5 After, he measured the wall of the house, six cubits; and the breadth of every side-chamber, four cubits, round about the house on every side.

6 ^bAnd the side-chambers were three, ²one over another, and ³thirty in order; and they entered into the wall which was of the house for the side-chambers round about, that they might ⁴have hold, but they had not hold in the wall of the house.

7 And ⁵there ^cwas an enlarging, and a winding about still upward to the side-chambers: for the winding about of the house went still upward round about the house; therefore the breadth of the house was still upward, and so increased from the lowest chamber to the highest by the midst.

8 I saw also the height of the house round

³ Or, three and thirty times, or, foot.—⁴ Heb. be holden.—⁵ Heb. it was made broader, and went round.—^c 1 Kings vi. 8.

twenty cubits—It was an exact cube, of the same dimensions in length, breadth, and height: see 1 Kings vi. 20; before the temple—Or rather, as the words should be rendered, according to the temple; that is, the breadth of it.

